PREFACE.

THE HISTORY of ESSEX now appears entire; I will not ſay perfect and compleat, leaſt I ſhould ſeem guilty of Vanity, a Weakneſs which I would by all means avoid. I can with Truth affirm, that I have uſed my utmoſt endeavours to render it as compleat as I could. In ſuch a Variety of Names and Dates, between the Author and Printer, ſome Errors are not eaſily avoidable. However, they are as few as could be expected in a Work of ſuch length.

When I firſt ſet about this Work, I had thoughts of doing only thoſe Parts that remained unfiniſhed by N. Salmon, LL.D. But finding, beyond what I could expect, a continuance of Life and Strength; and obſerving what a poor Uſe He had made of the excellent Materials in his poſſeſſion, I reſolved to new-mould what he had publiſhed, or rather to compoſe it afreſh: and, how little Uſe I could make of what he had done before, appears upon inſpection. At length, through conſtant Application, I have brought the Work to a Concluſion.

The perſon who laid the firſt Foundation of this Hiſtory, was Thomas Jekyll Eſq; ſon and heir of John-Stocker Jekyll of Bocking Eſq; and grandſon of Bartholomew Jekyll of Newington in Middleſex Eſq; deſcended from an ancient Family of that name in Lincolnſhire. He was born in the pariſh of St. Helens in London, 12 January 1570, and lived to the great age of 82 years. His profeſſion was the Law, which he ſtudied in Cliffords-inn, and became Secondary of the King's Bench, and one of the Clerks of the Papers. The profeſſion of the Law was hereditary in his Family, being practiſed both by his father and ſon. By virtue of his profeſſion and office, he had uncommon opportunities of collecting Materials for this Hiſtory; which he duly improved, by getting Copies of the Inquiſitiones poſt mortem, from the reign of K. Henry III. to their ceaſing in the time of K. Charles I; as alſo the Pedigrees of the Eſſex Families, and other very valuable Materials.

The Rev. John Ouſley, Rector of Sprinkfeild-Boſvile, and Little Waltham; and the Rev. William Holman, of Halſted; built upon that foundation with great induſtry and ſucceſs. The latter eſpecially was indefatigable in the work, and viſited every pariſh: By comparing his extracts with the records in ſome of the Public Offices, I have found him quite exact and faithful. His neighbour Mr. Samuel Dale aſſiſted him very much, and made great Improvements. Mr. Humfrey Wanley furniſhed Materials out of the Harleian Library. The late Mr. John Booth, of Bernards-inn, not only collated the copy of Domeſday-book with the original in the Chapter-Houſe at Weſtminſter, but alſo greatly corrected and improved the other Materials, and viſited moſt Pariſhes. And proper Extracts have been taken from Mr. Richard Symonds's Collections in the Heralds-Office.

I have endeavoured to make this Hiſtory as conciſe, and yet as complete, as it is in my power. For the ſake of Conciſeneſs, I avoid repeating too frequently the titles of Sir— and Knight—concerning the ſame perſon, one being ſufficient till the Creation of the Baronets in 1611: All that bore the title of Sir being of courſe Knights, unleſs they were Knights Bannerets, or Knights of the Bath, which I carefully diſtinguiſh as far as they come to my knowledge. For the ſame reaſon, I avoid repeating too often ſome words, which occur almoſt at every line in our modern Accounts of Families.

Unleſs a Place hath been diſtinguiſhed by ſome remarkable Event, noted in our ancienteſt Hiſtorians, I can ſeldom begin my Accounts higher than Edward the Confeſſor, or William the Conqueror. The chief Materials I make uſe of, and moſtly depend upon, are Records. Amongſt them the moſt valuable is Domeſday-Book. But as it appears very uncouth in an Engliſh Dreſs, I have not ventured to give a full and literal Tranſlation of it, but only the ſubſtance of each article in few words; and inſert the Latin original at the bottom of the page, under the reſpective Pariſhes, from Mr. Booth's tranſcript. In the end of the Introduction to this Hiſtory of Eſſex I give a literal and exact copy of one of its articles, with the Abbreviations, and an Explanation of the words Bordar, Villan, Hide, Carucate, &c. ſo often occurring.

Other Records which I greatly depend upon, and preſerve almoſt entire, are the Inquiſitiones poſt mortem, above-mentioned. Mr. Holman had entered them under the reſpective Pariſhes: But a Gentleman in Colcheſter having Office-copies of them, kindly communicated them to me; from which I was enabled to correct ſeveral miſtakes.

What the College of Heralds, and other Repoſitories contain, relating to this County, had been ſearched long ago; tranſcripts of which are in my cuſtody, and have been properly made uſe of. So that I wanted no materials of any kind; but only the Art of Digeſting them. And how I have executed that part, is left to the Reader's Candor and Judgment.

In order to help the Eye as much as poſſible, every diſtinct Family, or Owners of an Eſtate, are compriſed in different Paragraphs; and their names printed in Italic characters.

I have choſen not to ſwell this Hiſtory with matters, or facts, relating to this County, that are little important or intereſting; or which occur in Books that are common, and of no great price.

The Liſts of Incumbents in Mr. Newcourt, I have brought down to the preſent times, but have found it impoſſible to make them quite complete.

If any Articles are not ſo perfect as could have been wiſhed, it is not for want of Application to the proper Perſons, but for want of an Anſwer, or a timely Information, from thoſe who could have given it, and were intereſted.

I return my heartieſt Thanks to thoſe Noblemen and Gentlemen who have been pleaſed to contribute Copper-plates of their Seats, or otherwiſe to favour me with their Aſſiſtance and Encouragement.

All that remains for me to do, is to expreſs my heartieſt Acknowledgments and Gratitude to the great Author of my Life and Happineſs, who hath enabled me to go through This and other laborious Employments. I can look back with inexpreſſible Satisfaction upon a Life not ſpent in Idleneſs, and Indolence, or in fruitleſs Amuſements; but in a conſtant Endeavour to do all the Good in my power.

I muſt beg leave to add, That if the World is benefited by my Labours, the chief Praiſe is due to my only Patron good Biſhop Gibson.

Colcheſter,
Janu. 2. 1768.

INTRODUCTION.

§ 1. THE COUNTY OF ESSEX is one of the beſt ſituated in this Kingdom, on account of its Nearneſs to the Capital, Conveniency of Water-carriage, good Roads in general, and other great Advantages. It is bounded on the South by the noble river Thames; on the Weſt by the rivers Stort and Ley, and part of Hertfordſhire; on the North by part of Cambridgeſhire, and the river Stour which divides it from Suffolk; and on the Eaſt by the German Ocean. Its Circumference, as near as we can meaſure or eſtimate, with all the windings, is 225 miles. The greateſt Length of the County from Weſt to Eaſt, namely from Roydon to the Naſe, is 61 miles; and the greateſt Width from North to South, that is from Bartlow to Tilbury-fort, is 50 miles.

The word Essex is derived from Eaꞅꞇ Seaxa, and Eaꞅꞇ-ꞅexꞅcipe, two names given to it by the Saxons, who ſettled and divided this diſtrict, and erected it into a Kingdom, as we ſhall ſhew a little lower.

This County is not fill'd with light Sands, apt to be blown about with every high Wind; nor is it covered with barren Rocks, or dreary Mountains; but the Surface of it is in general level. However it is not a dead Flat, but diverſified with agreeable Eminences and fruitful Dales, the latter watered in general with Brooks, or Rills of Water.

The higheſt Hills in it, are at Danbury; and the next higheſt, is the range from Langdon-hills to Burnt-wood; and South-weald (a). But in general the North-weſt part of the County is the higheſt, as appears by moſt of the Rivers riſing there, and running from thence every Way.

The Country being incloſed, makes it much more comfortable to live and travel in, than ſuch as is quite open, expoſed without the leaſt ſhelter to all the Inclemencies of Wind and Weather: And it alſo makes every man's Property, whether great or little, much ſecurer, and more his own, than where it is unfenced, and liable to the encroachments of every joint-commoner, or greedy neighbour. To which add, that the Trees in the Fences afford a great quantity of Fuel; a matter of no ſmall importance!

§ 2. The Soil is various, but in general good. Very little there is, but what is profitable more or leſs. Where the land is clay and loom, as about Fering, Coggeſhall, the Tays, the Rodings, and ſome of the northern Pariſhes, fine crops of excellent Corn are produced [A]. And moſt other places yield very tolerable ones.

There are ſtill many Commons, and Waſtes of Maners, which by Cultivation might be rendered as profitable as the other lands; but even theſe breed many ſheep, and black cattle, to the great benefit of the poor copyholders and leſſer tenants. The marſhes and parts adjoining to the Thames and Sea afford rich paſtures, from whence great ſtore of cattle are ſent up to the London markets.

In many places the Soil being fit for Hops, great quantities have been raiſed for ſeveral years, about Chelmsford, Halſted, the two Hedinghams, &c.

About the Thames the Soil is chalky, as at Weſt and Little Thurrock, Chadwell, &c.

§ 3. The nature of the Soil leads me to conſider the Roads of the County of Eſſex. They are, eſpecially the great Roads, as good as any in the Kingdom; excellent from London to Colcheſter, and beyond: As alſo in many other parts: And they are not interrupted by dangerous waters, or ſteep hills. For repairing and amending them, ſeveral Acts have paſſed from time to time, which may be ſeen in the Statute-books. [B].

[A] It is a well known ſaying,
That Country is beſt for th' abider
That is moſt cumberſom to the rider.

As to the Roman Roads;

In Antonine's Itinerary, two of the Itinera paſs through this County: And the Roman Colonies and Stations there mentioned, are,

What might be ſaid upon the Roman Roads, cannot be better expreſſed than in the following Diſſertation upon that Subject, by the late Smart Lethieullier, Eſq; kindly communicated to me by Mrs. Lethieullier, widow of his brother Charles Lethieullier, Eſq;

'The County of Eſſex, tho' inferior to few in England either in regard of its extent or variety of valuable products, yet has hitherto had its ancient State but ſlenderly conſidered, or little enquired into.

'That it was however fully inhabited in the Britiſh times, there is no reaſon to doubt: And Hiſtory informs us of many particulars.

'Its vaſt Foreſt was a proper Habitation for their Druids in the earlieſt Times, and a Retirement for their people in the latter period of their ſettlement here: Nor are there footſteps wanting in the very heart of it, to prove that it was thoroughly penetrated by them. The want of Quarries of Stone in this County, rendered it impoſſible for the Britans to leave ſuch Monuments of themſelves here, as they have at Stonehenge, Rollright, and elſewhere. But if I ſhould hereafter offer probable Conjectures, that many Earth-works ſtill remaining were made in thoſe Ages, I hope I ſhall be allowed to have performed all that can be reaſonably expected from me.

'Under the Roman Government it was very early and univerſally known. A very conſiderable Great Road ran the whole length of it; another ſkirted its northern borders. Many vicinal ones croſs it in different places. It was honour'd with the Firſt Colony ever eſtabliſh'd in Britain, and with ſeveral other Stations and Towns in different parts of it. The names of ſome of them are preſerv'd in the Itinerary; tho' many others, no doubt, are now totally buried in oblivion.

'Camden, and ſince him all Antiquaries acknowledge, that both the Roads and Stations throughout this county are more obliterated and difficult to ſettle than any other County in England.

''Tis no wonder that the Roman Roads near London are not eaſily to be diſcovered, conſidering how the Soil in that, like other great Cities, muſt in the compaſs of above 1000 years be raiſed. Dr. Gale ſpeaks of Pavements found 20 feet under ground after the fire: and Dr. Woodward mentions ſeveral Antiquities found near Biſhopſgate, 17 feet under the ſurface, as were many more upon the rebuilding Biſhopſgate Church.

'The Hermen-ſtreet is ſuppos'd to have iſſued from London about Cripple-gate, and gone due north thro' Enfield towards Royſton, &c.

'Dr. Stukely brings a Road from the Weſt croſs Hyde Park thro' Clerkenwell, Old-ſtreet, &c. and croſſing the Hermen-ſtreet almoſt at right angles, goes to Oldford. This muſt be a ſecondary Icening, or Via ad Icenos.

'There is a viſible ſtraight Direction from Old-ſtreet croſs Cambridge-heath, down a lane, between grounds to Old Ford. As London grew more noted, no doubt a line was drawn from the Milliary ſtone in London to this road which led croſs Old Ford into Eſſex: and accordingly it appears upon the Map, that it is a very ſtraight line from Aldgate croſs Spittlefields, &c. to Old Ford; whereas the new Road made by Queen Maud makes a conſiderable curve ſouthward in going to Stratford Langthorn.

'Edward the Confeſſor built a Royal Palace at Haver-ing, where he frequently reſided; and croſs Old Ford to Ilford, &c. appears to be the only road he could go thither.

'The Road therefore went from Old Ford through part of Wanſtead, where a Moſaic Pavement and other Roman-Antiquities have been diſcovered, and proceeded through or near Ilford to Romford [the Roman Ford]. The courſe of the preſent Road is the only proper line: for ſeveral Hills or deep Valleys muſt have been croſs'd, had it gone either to the North or South of Ilford, the only proper ſpot for paſſing the river Roden.

'The famous Battle between Suetonius and Boadicea was fought ſomewhere between Epping and Waltham; near which a fine Camp remains.

'The Romans, in making their Roads, always at firſt dug as deep in ſearch of a ſolid bottom, or, where they could find none, made as ſolid an artificial one, as if they had been to erect a fort or a palace upon the foundation.

'It is in vain to attempt ſettling the uncertain Stations abovementioned, without taking the Roman Road for our guide.

'This is ſo worn out in Eſſex, that very little remains, except one Great Bank viſible in many places, near Dunmow, Raine-hall, Coggeſhall, and other places, through the middle of the country, in a line from Biſhop Stortford to Colcheſter. It is certain that there was ſuch a Great Road, called Calcea que tendit de Sterteford verſus Colceſtr' (c).

'However, from the remains of theſe Banks, many have been induced to believe, That the only Roman Road from London to Colcheſter ‘went that way, and accordingly to look for all the Stations in the Itinerary on that ſide the country. Yet ſome very material reaſons may be produced to ſhew, That there went a Roman Road to Colonia-Camulodunum, not far from the preſent one uſed between London and Colcheſter. In the firſt place, it is viſible from Ham Frith to the pales of Aldersbrook-park. And the Bank is again viſible near Ingatſtone. As to any high agger, or bank, if there was ſuch an one, 'tis no wonder it ſhould be much obliterated now; ſince the whole Road was gravel entirely, there being very few or no ſtones near; and the great Trade that has for many centuries been carried on between Ipſwich, Colcheſter, &c. and London, hath occaſion'd this Road to be frequently raiſed and mended with gravel, in ſuch a manner, that any ſuch agger of a moderate height muſt now be covered ſome, or rather ſeveral, feet.

‘To which add; The Bounds of the Foreſt of Waltham are undoubtedly very ancient; and yet the preſent high road to Romford is evidently prior to them, ſince the preſent Boundary of the Foreſt is from the river Lea at Bowbridge to a Whale-Bone at a trivium within a mile of Romford.

‘This is an Argument againſt the general notion, that what is called the Green-lane, a lane leading from Ilford to Horn-church and running for ſome miles parallel with the preſent road, was the ancient Highway; ſince doubtleſs the Bounds of the Foreſt would have been carried thither, and not ſtop where they do now.

‘All writers agree, That Mauricius Bp. of London, in the beginning of K. Henry Iſt's reign built a Bridge at Chelmsford, and by that means brought the High Road through that Town, which before ran through Writtle. This is acknowledging that a great Road did go through Writtle before Henry the Iſt's time, which was many years before his Queen Maud made the Road before mention'd.

‘The general Opinion that prevails, ſeems to be, that here was no Great Road into Eſſex through Ilford, Romford, Brentwood, Ingatſtone, Chelmesford or Writtle, to Colcheſter, till that remarkable Accident happening to Maud wife of K. Henry I, as ſhe paſs'd at Old Ford, cauſed her to make the preſent Road between Aldgate and Stratford Langthorn, and to build Bow-bridge, of which I give an account below, at page 20. But here I will attempt to prove, that ſhe did not make a Great Road thro' a Country where none had gone before, but only altered the courſe of one part of it.

‘The earlieſt mention I have ſeen of this Road, is the Londoners bringing the Body of Erkenwald their Biſhop from the Abbey of Berking where he dyed, in order to interr him at London: but were ſtopp'd at their paſſage a-croſs the Meadows at Oldford, where, according to the ſtyle of that age, a Miracle is brought to their aſſiſtance. This was about the year 685, not 300 years after the Romans had left this Iſland.

‘The Abbey of Berking had long flouriſh'd through the Saxon Ages, and been frequently viſited, as well as govern'd, by the Saxon Monarchs. William the Conqueror, we are told, was there for ſome time. K. Stephen and his Queen were there in perſon, as is evident from Charters, &c. 'Tis hardly probable that they had not a ſtraight Road from London to this place.’

§ 4. As the Soil is various, ſo is alſo the Air of this County. Near the Sea plentiful Exhalations ariſe, and the Marſhes and ſtanding Waters ſend forth noiſom and ſtinking Vapours, not only here but every where elſe: And where the ſituation is ſuch, the Air muſt of courſe be more moiſt, and more unhealthy, than where it is otherwiſe. This is the caſe eſpecially in the low grounds near the Thames, and in the Hundreds of Rochford and Dengey. However, not ſo much as formerly when the land was leſs cultivated, and fuller of Woods.

Where the Air is bad, good ſpring Water is alſo ſcarce; and the Water either moſtly brackiſh, or thick, turbid, and unwholſom.

But in all other parts, where good Water is plentiful, where the Soil is not oozy or fenny, but gravelly, ſandy and dry; why the Air ſhould not be as ſweet and wholeſom here as in the adjoining Counties, no good reaſon can be given.

Of the Medicinal Waters an account is given towards the end of this Introduction.

§ 5. The rivers belonging to this County, are ſuch as either ſerve it of Boundaries, or ſuch as water its boſom.

Of the firſt ſort, are the Thames, the Stour, the Stort, and the Ley, already mentioned.

Of the ſecond ſort, are the Colne, the Pant or Blackwater, the Chelmer, the Crouch, the Rodon, and the Cam.

The Stour, ſo named from the Saxon Stur, ſometimes written Eſtur, riſes above Haverhill, and ſoon after forming a Mere, gives name to the pariſh of Stourmere: At Watſey-bridge it receives two other Streams. Running from thence eaſtward, and ſometimes ſouth-eaſt, it paſſes by the Towns of Clare, Sudbury, Neyland, Dedham, Maningtree, and diſcharges itſelf into the Sea at Harwich. It was made navigable as high as Sudbury, by Act of Parliament paſſed ſeveral years ago.

The Stort, bounding this County, in part of its weſtern Side, only from Haſley-end in Fernham to Graves-weare near Nether-hall in Roydon, loſes itſelf there into the Ley.

The Ley, in Britiſh Luh, gives name to Luton in Bedfordſhire, near which it riſes: after its junction with the Stort, it paſſes by Waltham-Abbey and Berking, and falls into the Thames near Blackwall.

The Colne riſes in the Pariſh of Redgwell, and taking its courſe eaſtward, paſſes by the Hedinghams, Halſted, the Colnes, and Colcheſter, or Colonia, from which the river takes its name; and receiving two large Brooks at Fingringhou and Brightlingſea, diſcharges itſelf into the Sea, between Merſey and St. Oſith, about eight Miles below Colcheſter.

The Pant, or Blackwater, hath its ſource in Depden, and receiving two or three ſtreams at Radwinter, runs, eaſt ſouth-eaſt, by Great Bardfeild, Bocking, Coggeſhall, Kelvedon, Wickham-mills, Maldon, where the Chelmer joins it, and thus united they fall into Blackwater-bay, and into the Sea between Merſey and Bradwell.

The Chelmer riſes in Chickney or Henham, and running South-eaſt by Thaxſted, Dunmow, Felſted, Great and Little Waltham, comes to Chelmesford, to which it gives name; and then turning eaſtward, after having received the Cam, unites with the Pant near Maldon.

The Crouch, flows from two ſprings in Little Burghſted and Langdon, and running eaſt, divides the Hundreds of Rochford and Dengey; and partly thoſe of Barſtable and Chelmsford; and falls into the Sea, between Foulneſe and the Salt Marſhes below Burnham.

The Rodon riſes in or near Little Eaſton, and running ſouth and ſouth-weſtward; after receiving ſeveral Brooks, and watering the Rodings, and the Towns of Cheping-Ongar, Gr. Ilford, and Berking; diſcharges itſelf into the Thames, a little below the laſt named Town. It is made navigable up to Ilford Bridge.

The Cam, or Granta, hath its ſource in Quendon, and running, directly north, by Newport, Audeley-end, Cheſterford, and Icaldun, haſtens to Cambridge.

The moſt conſiderable of theſe Rivers, the Stour, the Colne, the Pant, the Chelmer, the Rodon, riſe in the north-weſt part of this County; and flowing from thence, as from the higheſt ground, the firſt eaſterly, the three next eaſt and by ſouth, and the two others ſoutherly, diſcharge themſelves into the Sea, and the river Thames.

Ingreburn runs by Upminſter and Rainham.

Many other Rivulets and nameleſs Brooks there are, watering almoſt every Pariſh, and rendring the Country, not only fruitful, but alſo the more healthful and pleaſant.

§ 6. Antiently, the whole County was in a manner one continued Forest [C].

K. Stephen diſafforeſted Tendring Hundred, as is ſhewn in this Volume, p. 431.

And K. John diſafforeſted all that part which lies north of Stane-ſtreet, i. e. the Cauſeway, or great Roman road, leading from the Ramparts on Lexden heath to Stortford (d).

Perambulations were taken of the remaining Foreſt of Eſſex, in 12 Hen. III, 1228; and 26 and 28 Edw. I, 1298 and 1300.

And ſeveral Parcels were diſafforeſted at different times; by the procurement of Paul Viſcount Bayning, and others (e).

The Office of Foreſter was anciently in the Aucher family of Copped-hall. Henry Fitz-Aucher held it in 1304, by grand Serjeancy, viz. of being the King's Foreſter (f).

The Stewardſhip of the whole Foreſt of Eſſex was for many generations in the De Veres, Earls of Oxford. They were deprived of it by K. Edward IV. for their Adherence to the Houſe of Lancaſter, and the Office was granted to Richard Duke of York (g). They recovered it upon the acceſſion of K. Henry VII; who granted, 2 December 1489, to John Earl of Oxford, as Steward of the Foreſt, 9*l.* 2*s.* rent during pleaſure.

By virtue of their office, they had power to ſubſtitute a Lieutenant, and one Riding-Foreſter, alſo three yeomen Foreſters in the three Bayliwicks of the Foreſt.

The Warden and Steward had all Wayſs and Strays, and all deer-fallen wood, or browſing wood, within the Foreſt; and all amerciaments in the ſwainmotes, and wood-comptes, according to the Aſſiſe of the Foreſt; except the Amerciaments for veniſon: and the bodies of oaks. And of every covert and hedgerow to be ſold, of every ſhilling one penny; and of every wood to be ſold, the ſecond beſt oak; and of the buyer and ſeller of every ſuch wood, one bow, and one broad arrow; and one penny of every ſhilling of the ſeller and buyer of every ſuch wood, upon the ſale of it. He had alſo, as belonging to the ſaid Office, the cuſtody and keeping of the maner of Havering at Bower, and of the Houſe and Park there.

The thirteen Walks in Waltham Foreſt, are The Walk, of Chapel Henolt, or Hainault—of Weſt Henolt—of Woodford—Waltham-ſtow—Leyton—Loughton—Chigwell—Lambourn—Highwood—Epping—Waltham-Abbey—New Lodge—Chingford.

The whole Half-Hundred of Waltham is within the Foreſt.

In Becontree-Hundred, Leyton, Walthamſtow, Wanſted, and Woodford, are within the Foreſt.——Stratford, Weſt-Ham, Eaſt-Ham, Dagenham, Berking, and the two Ilfords, are partly in, and partly out.

In Ongar Hundred, Loughton, Chigwell, Lambourn, and Stapleford-Abbots, are within the Foreſt.——Naveſtock, and Theydon-Bois, are partly in, and partly out.

The Hundreds of Clavering, Utlesford, Dunmow, Froſhwell, Chelmsford, Hinckford, Witham, Lexden, Tendring, Chafford, Barſtable, Rochford, Thurſtable, and Winſtree, are out of the Foreſt (h).

In the reigns of K. Henry III. K. Edward I. II. and III. the Bailiwick of this Foreſt was in the Family De Clare, to whom it was granted by Richard de Montfichet (i).

Notwithſtanding the Charter of Foreſts, and the Statutes for perambulations and deafforeſtation, ſo ſlight a regard was paid to them; both by many of the Subjects who were daily encroaching; and by the officers of the Foreſts, who did not like to have their wings clipt, but continued to uſe as Foreſt what by law and right was not foreſt; that ſome remedy was often neceſſary.

In the 28th of Edward I, the Commons granted him a Fifteenth of all their Goods, that the Foreſts might be perambulated, according to the Charter of the Foreſt, and the bounds aſſigned by the perambulators might ſtand and be obſerved. A very curious Roll, containing the manner of aſſeſſing this Fifteenth, is in my poſſeſſion.

However, uneaſineſſes ſtill continued, as appears by Petitions to Parliament, in the Time of Edward II. and in the 22d and 45th Edward III. and 1, 2, 5 and 7 Ric. II. and 1 Henr. V.

In 1 Henry V. the Commons deſired the King, to grant and ordain, That the Woods and other Poſſeſſions, which were afforeſted by all the perambulations and ridings in the time of his great grandfather, againſt the form of the Charter of the Foreſt; and thoſe which were out of the bounds of Foreſts before the perambulations and ridings aforeſaid; be for ever diſafforeſted; notwithſtanding any ſtatute, &c. to the contrary. The King anſwered, It ſhall be lawful for thoſe who are grieved againſt the Charter of the Foreſt, to ſue to the King eſpecially, and the King will do them right.

The Right Hon. John Earl Waldegrave is now obtaining an Act, for dividing and incloſing Naveſtock Common and Heath, within the Manors of Naveſtock and Lofthall, in this County, containing about 671 acres and a half; which may be a prelude to more Incloſures of that kind.

§ 7. Under the Supreme Governor, the King of Great Britain, the CIVIL GOVERNMENT of this County, is in the Sheriff who holds County-Courts, and the Sheriff's Torn.

Anciently it was in the Earl, who held Courts and received the third penny of all amerciaments, with other perquiſites; and the Sheriff, Scype neve, or Vice-comes, was only his Deputy: But, ſince the Earl of Eſſex hath been merely Titular, he hath nothing to do in the Government of the County.

M. Dalton affirms, That 'the moſt eminent 'and ſupream dignity from the Conqueſt until 'the 11 year of Edward the Third, was the 'Earl or Counte, being anciently of the Blood 'Royal.' (k) But more certain it is, That the Earls, as Governors of Counties, exiſted before the Conqueſt; and I do not find that they ceaſed exactly the 11th of Edward the Third.

About the time of the Conqueſt, and ſome years after, the Sheriffs continued ſeveral years in office. But in 1340, 14 Edw. III. it was enacted, that 'no Sheriff ſhall tary in his Baili'wick over one year, and then another conve'nient ſhall be ordained in his place, that hath 'land ſufficient in his Balliwick, by the Chan'cellor, Treaſurer, and chief Baron of the Ex'chequer, taking to them the chief Juſtices of 'the one Bench and of the other, if they be 'preſent; and that ſhall be done yearly on the 'day after All-Souls day, i. e. November 3d, at 'the Exchequer.' (l)

The Sheriff's Officers, are, The Bailiffs of the Hundreds;—The High-Conſtables, 2 in each Hundred, 3 in Hinckford, 1 in Witham; Formerly this office was very honorable, and of much the ſame power as the preſent Juſtices of the Peace. (m)—The Petty Conſtables, one or two in each Pariſh, or more, according to the extent of the Pariſh, or the pleaſure of the Inhabitants.

The other conſiderable Perſons employed in the Government of Counties, are the Juſtices of the Peace. Some have fancied, that they were inſtituted in the reign of K. Henry III. after the agreement between the King and his Barons: And others have fixed their firſt Inſtitution at the 6th of Edward I. 1278. Conſervators of the Peace were indeed appointed from time to time in certain places, but not throughout England, till 1 Edw. III. 1327. when, 'for the 'better keeping and maintaining of the Peace, 'it was ordained, That in every County good 'men and lawful, which be no maintainers of 'evil, or barretors in the country, ſhall be aſ'ſigned to keep the peace.' And more fully in the following Statute, 'That in every County of 'England ſhall be aſſigned for the keeping of 'the Peace, one Lord, and with him three or 'four of the moſt worthy in the County, with 'ſome learned in the law.'—They are appointed by the King, by commiſſion under the great ſeal.—And hold Seſſions theſe four times in the year. In the firſt week after the feaſt of St. Michael: In the firſt week after the Epiphany: In the firſt week after the clauſe of Eaſter: and in the firſt week after the tranſlation of St. Thomas the Martyr [a Becket.] (n)

Other ancient Officers, are The Coroners, and The Clerk of the Market.

With reſpect to the firſt, the Statute directs, That 'through all Shires ſufficient men ſhall be 'choſen to be Coroners, of the moſt wiſe and 'diſcreet Knights, which know, will, and may 'beſt attend upon ſuch offices. (o)

§ 8. As to the ECCLESIASTICAL GOVERNMENT, the County of Eſſex is within the Biſhoprick of London; being the moſt extenſive Part of that Dioceſe.

The Pariſhes of Bocking, Styſted, Lachingdon with Lawling, and South Church, are Peculiars belonging to his Grace the Archbiſhop of Canterbury.

The Biſhop's Aſſiſtants, are the Archdeacons of Eſſex, Colcheſter, and Middleſex.

The Archdeaconry of Eſſex contains the Deanries of Barſtable, Berking, Chafford, Chelmsford, Dengey, Ongar, and Rochford. In which are 175 Churches and Chapels.

The Archdeaconry of Colcheſter comprehends the Deanries of Colcheſter, Lexden, Tendring, Newport, and Sandford. In which are 161 Churches and Chapels.

Within the Archdeaconry of Middleſex, which is only Part in this County, are the Deanries of Dunmow, Harlow, and Hedingham; containing 83 Churches and Chapels.

Rural Deans have not been appointed for ſome years.

§ 9. The MILITARY Government of the County is in the Lord-Lieutenant, who is alſo commonly Cuſtos Rotulorum, and often Vice-Admiral.

Elizabeth, as extraordinary Magiſtrates, conſtituted only in times of difficulty and danger (q). They were confirmed by Statute 13 and 14 Caro. II. c. 3.

§ 12. KNIGHTS or Repreſentatives in PARLIAMENT for this County.

The Origin of the Houſe of Commons in its preſent form, is a point that hath been agitated with great Earneſtneſs, if not Violence, by ſome intereſted Writers. For our part, having in the courſe of many Years, and by a diligent peruſal of our ancient Hiſtorians, and other Authors, examined the ſubject throughly, we ſhall make no difficulty of fixing the Beginning of the Houſe of Commons in its preſent form to the reign of K. Henry III.

Before that time, the conſtituent Members of the Great Council of the Nation, were, the Archbiſhops, Biſhops, Abbots and Priors, Earls, Barons; and All that held of the King, in capite, or chief; as Sir Henry Spelman, and Sir William Dugdale, two of our beſt Engliſh Antiquarians, have ſhewn (r) [E].

There is a clauſe in Magna Charta, which is quite deciſive upon this point. It is as follows. 'Et ad habendum Commune Conſilium regni de auxilio aſſidendo, aliter quam in tribus caſibus predictis, vel de ſcutagio aſſidendo, ſummoneri faciemus Archiepiſcopos, Epiſcopos, Abbates, Comites, & majores Barones ſigillatim per literas noſtras: et preterea faciemus ſummoneri in generali per Vicecomites & Ballivos noſtros, omnes illos qui de nobis tenent in capite, ad certum diem ſcilicet ad terminum quadraginta dierum ad minus, & ad certum locum; & in omnibus literis illius ſummonitionis cauſam ſummonitionis exprimemus. Et ſic facta ſummonitione negotium ad diem aſſignatum procedat, ſecundum conſilium illorum qui preſentes fuerint, quamvis non omnes ſummoniti venerint.' i. e. 'And, in order to have, or hold, a Common Council of the Kingdom for aſſeſſing an Aid, except in the three caſes aforeſaid (s), or for aſſeſſing a ſcutage, we ſhall cauſe to be ſummoned the Archbiſhops, Biſhops, Abbots, Earls, and greater Barons, ſeverally by our letters: And moreover we ſhall cauſe to be ſummoned in general by our Sheriffs and Bailiffs, all thoſe who hold of us in capite to a certain day, namely at the end of forty days at the leaſt from the ſummons, and to a certain place: and, in all the letters of ſummons, we ſhall expreſs the cauſe of the ſummons. And, after the ſummons, buſineſs ſhall be proceeded upon on the day appointed, according to the advice of thoſe preſent, though all that are ſummoned ſhould not come [F].'

Here being no mention of Knights of Shires, or Burgeſſes of Burghs, for ſo important an affair as the granting of money, we may very juſtly conclude, that there were then none ſuch as are now; the Tenants in capite being the Repreſentatives of the Commons. And indeed ſo are they in effect ſtill; for what are our preſent Electors of the Knights of Shires, but the remains of the Tenants in capite, minc'd into ſmall Freeholds?

If it ſhould be aſked, How were the Burghs then repreſented? I anſwer, They either belonged to the King; or the chief part of the Eſtates, and real property in them, belonged to the greater Barons, or to the Tenants in capite; and they were their Repreſentatives.

I have the Pleaſure of having my thoughts on this ſubject confirmed by the teſtimony of a very eminent Lawyer (t). His words are, 'It is generally agreed, that in the main the conſtitution of Parliament, as it now ſtands, was marked out ſo long ago as the 17th year of K. John A.D. 1215: in the Great Charter granted by that Prince; wherein he promiſes to ſummon all Archbiſhops, Biſhops, Abbots, Earls, and greater Barons, perſonally, and all other Tenants in chief under the Crown, by the Sheriff and bailiffs; to meet at a certain place, within 40 days notice, to aſſeſs aids and ſcutages when neceſſary. And this conſtitution has ſubſiſted in fact at leaſt from the year 1266, 49 Hen. III. [G].'

[E] Beſides the Clauſe in Magna Charta ſet down above, if the Reader will be pleaſed to give himſelf the trouble to look into our ancient Engliſh Hiſtorians, he will find who were the conſtituent Members of our Legiſlature. We ſhall only refer him to Matthew Paris, one of our beſt and exacteſt Hiſtorians, Lond. edit. 1640, p. 63. 71. 100, 101. 143. 191. 209. 316, 317. 321. 367. 372. 377. 389. 580, 581. and there it appears, that the Colloquia, as he calls the Parliaments, conſiſted of the Archbiſhops, Biſhops, Abbots, Priors, Earls, and Barons; which he calls ſometimes, in general words, Magnates Angliæ; Barones; Proceres regni; totius Angliæ Nobilitas; totius Regni tam cleri quam militæ generalis univerſitas; omnes Nobiles Angliæ, tam viri eccleſiaſtici quam ſæculares. He uſes the word Parlamentum in 1246 and 1257. And, in page 1002, the words electæ perſonæ are uſed; which is remarkable. I have by me very large Collections upon the ſubject.

[F] Here, as Sir Henry Spelman obſerves, is laid forth the Members, the Matter, and the Manner of ſummoning of a Common Council of the Kingdom; which, as it ſeemeth, was not yet in the records of State called a Parlament. Poſthumous Works, p. 63. It was ſo call'd firſt in Clauſ. 28 Hen. III. memb. 12 dorſo. —— The firſt time the word Parliamentum occurs in our ancient Hiſtorians, Bromton, col. 1058, and the reſt, is under the year 1164. —— Matt. Paris uſes it firſt in 1246. p. 696. edit. 1640.

[G] The County of Eſſex: and Colcheſter ſent from the year 1290. Chelmsford return'd once to a Council. Bradfeild, Rawleigh, and Thaxted, are alſo ſtyl'd Boroughs. Br. Willis, p. 31. 34.

§ 13. The ſeveral DIVISIONS of the COUNTY.

The largeſt DIVISION is into Twenty Parts, Fourteen of which are called Hundreds, Five Half-Hundreds, and a Royal Liberty, that of Havering.

The XIV HUNDREDS are,

Barſtable	32
Chafford	14
Chelmsford	30
Dengey	23
Dunmow	26
Hinckford	47
Lexden	30
Ongar	26
Rochford	24
Tendring	31
Thurſtable	10
Utleſford	26
Winſtree	12
Witham	14

The V Half-Hundreds, are

Becontree	9
Clavering	5
Froſhwell	9
Harlow	11
Waltham	4

To which add

Havering Liberty. 1 [H]

Theſe are ſubdivided into Pariſhes and Towns.

The PARISHES are in Number Four Hundred, including the Sixteen in Colcheſter [I].

The TOWNS are Berking, Billerca, Braintree, Burntwood, Chelmsford, Chipping-Ongar, Cogeſhall, Colcheſter, Dunmow, Epping, Greys-Thurrock, Halſted, Harlow, Harwich, Hatfeild-Broad-Oak, Ingatſtone, Maldon, Maningtree, Rayley, Rochford, Romford, Thaxted, Walden, Waltham-Abbey, and Witham.

They are all ſtyled Market-Towns; but ſome of the inland ones, particularly Harlow, Hatfeild, and Thaxted, hardly deſerve that name.

In the ancienteſt Diviſion of Britain mentioned by Hiſtorians, this Diſtrict was part of the Kingdom of the Trinobantes.

The Romans, after they had conquered and driven them into the weſtern and northern inacceſſible parts of the Iſland, divided their Acquiſitions into Britannia Prima, and Secunda; which was done by the Emperor Severus. Afterwards, Conſtantine the Great divided them into Four parts, ſubdividing Britannia Prima into Flavia Cæſarienſis, and Maxima Cæſarienſis. To which Theodoſius, General under the Emperor Valens, added a fifth Province, and called it Valencia (u).

(u) See Camden's Britan. in the Introduct. and Hiſtory of Colcheſter, p. 27. 33.

[H] The figures after them denote the number of Pariſhes in each.

[I] Br. Willis, in his Parochiale Anglicanum, p. 42, makes the Total of Churches and Chapels in this County to be 424; but, even according to his liſt, there are but 400 Pariſh-Churches, and 18 Chapels.

This Diſtrict was then within Flavia Cæſarienſis.

Upon the final departure of the Romans from this Iſland in the Year 434, the old Inhabitants returned again to their former Habitations. But it being their natural Temper to be always upon the extremes, and not to keep to that due Moderation, which is the foundation of all Virtue as well as Happineſs; they ſoon broke into furious Factions, and being grown ungovernable and lawleſs, the direful expedient was deviſed by their King Vortigern, to call in the Saxons to his protection and aſſiſtance, in the year 449.

But the Saxons, from Auxiliaries growing ſoon Maſters of the Country, they divided it among themſelves, on or about the year 477. And by degrees made ſo abſolute a Conqueſt, as hardly was ever known. For they did not only drive the old inhabitants into corners and the remoteſt parts, and planted themſelves into their ſeats; not by ſmall colonies, but as it were by whole ſwarms; a point in great conqueſts rarely done: But they aboliſhed the old names of Cities, Towns, and whole Countries, impoſing new ones of their own. Nay, the Language itſelf they not only altered, but utterly aboliſhed; and for a perfect conſummation of their Conqueſt, they did at laſt alſo change the name of the whole Iſland itſelf from Britain to England (w).

The preſent allotments and boundaries of the Pariſhes, with the Names of them, are therefore all in general Saxon, and were fixed by that people.

This leads me to give ſome Account and Explanation of the Names of the Pariſhes.

The Woods and the Rivers, according to Mr. Thoresby, retained their ancient Britiſh apellations (x); and therefore the names taken from them muſt conſequently be alſo Britiſh.

Theſe form ſometimes the firſt Part of the Names, which are alſo taken from ſome ancient owners or lords; but, upon the whole, they are not ſo eaſily diſcoverable as the latter part, or the Terminations. Theſe are uſually taken from, and denote, the Situation of the Place, or the nature of the Soil.

For inſtance, ſome end in Bridge, where there is or hath been one.

Burg, Burh, or Byrig, denoting a city, fortification, court, or houſe.

Burn, or Bourn, a brook.

Den, a valley.

Dun, or Don, a hill.

Ea, or Ey, water; or iſland, from ige.

Feild.

Ford, where there was a noted or well-known one.

Hall, a hall, or capital manſion.

Ham, a houſe, a village, a town, a farm; whence the word home.

Heath, a heath.

Hou, or Hoo, a hill, riſing ground.

Hyrſt, a wood.

Ing, a meadow, or low paſture.

Land.

Ley, upland paſture, untilled ground; ſtill called the Lays in many places.

Lowe, an artificial mount, or hill.

Mere, or More, a fen, or pool.

Minſter, a church, or monaſtery.

Oak.

Sted, and Stow, place.

Stock, ſtocks or trunks of trees.

Tun, or Ton, a town, village, fence, incloſure, farm, dwelling.

Weald, a wood.

Well, a well.

Wic, a caſtle, fortreſs, dairy-farm.

Wood.

Worth, from worthig, a village, a ſtreet, a croft.

In Ford, in Ham, in Ley, and Tun,
The moſt of Engliſh ſurnames run. (y)

§ 14. The Number of INHABITANTS could beſt be gueſs'd at, by having the exact Number of Houſes, or rather Families; which I have not been able to obtain.

According to Dr. Templeman's Survey, the number of Houſes in Eſſex, is 34,819; and the number of Souls, 208,800.

Others make the number of Houſes to amount to 40,545. Rather than decreaſing they have increaſed in ſome places, as near London, at the Thorn in Miſtley, &c.

According to the Militia Act, all that were able to bear Arms in this County, by the firſt Liſt, were 29,590. And by the ſecond Liſt, 23,751.

The Number of Freeholders that voted for Knights of the Shire in 1724, was 4683—in 1763, 5125.

The whole Number of Voters, in the Polls printed in 1711 and 1734, are not particularly ſpecified.

§ 15. This County is RATED high to the Land-tax, which bears very hard upon ſome decayed Towns and Places. In 1691, the Inhabitants having more Zeal than Foreſight, and being made to believe, That the Land-tax would be but of ſhort continuance, were induced thereby to give high Eſtimates of their Eſtates. But where the Lands have been much improved within theſe 50 years paſt, the Land-tax is very eaſy.

By a Liſt often printed, Eſſex pays 24 Parts, of the 513 Parts all the Counties in England are rated at.

The Sum the whole County pays, at 1 s. in the pound, is 22,358 l. 19 s. 10 d. ¾.

And the ſeveral Hundreds, as follows:

§ 16. The ANCIENTEST STATE of this County is very little known. All that can be ſaid concerning it muſt be deduced from the Manners and Cuſtoms of the firſt Planters.

This part of the Kingdom was peopled by Colonies of Celts and Gauls from the oppoſite Continent. In conformity to what we read of thoſe people, we may take it for granted, that this Country was divided into ſeveral States, or Principalities; governed by Magiſtrates, which in ſome places were annually choſen. But, in caſe of war, they elected a General, or Commander in chief. They had a Senate, or Public Council: naturally were infinitely fond of Liberty, and abhorred and deteſted Slavery. And Parties and Factions, the effect of Liberty, prevailed in all their communities, villages, and even houſes (z).

As they had no writers or hiſtorians of their own; therefore all we know concerning this Country, muſt be taken from their firſt Conquerors, the Romans; eſpecially from Julius Cæſar.

What occurs in him and the other Roman and Greek Hiſtorians concerning Britain, or this Diſtrict in particular, is collected together in the Hiſtory of Colcheſter (a); conſequently it would be ſuperfluous to repeat it here: Eſpecially as I propoſe to have that Hiſtory bound in the firſt Volume of this, after the Introduction.

The ROMAN Conqueſt was one of the four grand Revolutions in this Kingdom, and in this County among the reſt.

The three others were cauſed by the Saxons, the Danes, and the Normans.

§ 17. For a more particular account of the SAXON Revolution, I beg leave alſo to refer to the Hiſtory of Colcheſter.

I ſhall only here obſerve, That this Country having been extorted from Vortigern by Hengiſt, after the Maſſacre of the Britiſh Lords, was erected into a Kingdom by Erchenwin, the firſt King; who began his reign in 527, and dyed in 587. His ſucceſſors, were,

After him, there were a few other Kings, whoſe names are not recorded. For, of all the Kingdoms of the Saxon Heptarchy, there is none whoſe Hiſtory is ſo imperfect as that of the Kingdom of Eſſex.

After the Diſſolution of the Heptarchy, it ſubmitted to K. Ecbryht with the reſt, in 823: and continued under the dominion of his ſucceſſors, Ethelwulph; Ethelbald, and Ethelbert; Ethelred; Alfred; Edward, the elder; Athelſtan; Edmund; Edred; Edwi; Edgar; Edward, the younger; and Ethelred.

§ 18. From the year 787 to 1013, it was cruelly haraſſed by the frequent Deſcents and Depredations of the DANES; to whom they meanly ſubmitted to pay tribute [K]. At length they became Maſters of England, which from 1016 to 1042 was governed by four of their Kings, Swægn; Edmund Ironſide; Cnut; Harold; and Hardicnut.

But they do not appear to have made any conſiderable Alteration in the Saxon Government, or Policy.

Under Edward the Confeſſor, and Harold II. the Saxon line was reſtored in this Kingdom: But unhappily was of too ſhort a continuance.

§ 19. The greateſt Revolution, and the moſt ſenſible Alteration of Property in this Kingdom, was by the NORMAN Conqueſt of William the Baſtard, in 1066 [L].

Warm Diſputes there have been about the Point, Whether he really conquered this Kingdom [M].

He was not ſo impolitic indeed as to come here under the odious name of a Conqueror, but invented, or made uſe, of a pretended Nomination, or illegal Will, of that weak Prince, K. Edward the Confeſſor [N]. ‘ And, as other ‘ Compendious war! (on Britain's glory bent,

‘ So fate ordain'd) in that deciſive day,
‘ The haughty Norman ſeiz'd at once an iſle,
‘ For which, thro' many a century, in vain,
‘ The Roman, Saxon, Dane, had toil'd, and bled.
‘ Awhile my Spirit ſlept; the land awhile,
‘ Affrighted, droop'd beneath deſpotic rage.
‘ Inſtead of Edward's equal gentle laws,
‘ The furious victor's partial will prevail'd.
‘ All proſtrate lay; and in the ſecret ſhade,
‘ Deep-ſtung but fearful indignation gnaſh'd
‘ His teeth. Of Freedom, Property, deſpoil'd,
‘ And of their bulwark, Arms; with Caſtles cruſh'd,
‘ With Ruffians quarter'd o'er the bridled land;
‘ The ſhivering wretches, at the Curfew ſound,
‘ Dejected ſhrunk into their ſordid beds,
‘ And, thro' the mournful gloom, of antient times
‘ Mus'd ſad, or dreamt of better. Even to feed
‘ A tyrant's idle ſport the peaſant ſtarv'd:
‘ To the wild herd, the paſture of the tame,
‘ The chearful hamlet, ſpiry town, was given,
‘ And the brown foreſt roughen'd wide around!’

[N] That moſt elegant Writer, the Right Hon. Lord Lyttelton, rightly obſerves, that William the Conqueror's claim was grounded upon ſo weak or falſe a foundation, as the ſuppoſititious Promiſe or Nomination of that weak Prince Edward the Confeſſor, not even authenticated by his laſt will, and his will itſelf, had it been made in favour of William, without the ratification of the Great Council, would not have been obligatory to the people of England. It is therefore moſt evident, that the attempt of the Duke of Normandy was an unjuſt violation of the rights of the Engliſh.——So far was he from grounding his own title to the Crown upon a ſuppoſed Right of Conqueſt, that he uſed his utmoſt endea

‘ Uſurpers had done before him, helped out a ‘ bad Title, and hallowed an enterprize very ‘ unjuſt in itſelf, by the Papal benediction (b).’

However, That he really Conquered the Engliſh, is undeniable: for, if to land into a Kingdom with a numerous armed Force; if to kill and deſtroy all that oppoſe him, if to take poſſeſſion by thoſe violent Means of the Government, and ſeize the Poſſeſſions of the former Inhabitants, the rightful Owners, be not a Conqueſt, I know not what is.

But, as real Matter of Fact is the beſt Proof, I ſhall ſhew that all the Lords or Owners of the Lands in this County, except one or two, were diſpoſſeſſed of them by that uſurping Tyrant. And for this I ſhall appeal to an unqueſtionable Authority, that of Domeſday-book [O].

But how can it be pretended, that William made no Conqueſt, when there hath been ſuch a laſting Proof it in the Military Tenures he inſtituted; and ſtill remaining in the Copyholds; which, if there had been any Juſtice in the then Legiſlature, when the other Tenures were taken away, ought to have been thus far aboliſhed, as to have been made redeemable, and to be enfranchiſed at any time, upon a certain ſet and reaſonable Price tendered and paid?

Not only the Civil, but alſo the Eccleſiaſtical Conſtitution, underwent a great Alteration at the Norman Conqueſt [P]. His fawning Chaplain, William Pictavenſis, of Poictiers, or Poictou, indeed ſays, That nothing was given by him to any Frenchman, which was unjuſtly taken from the Engliſh [Q]. But to ſo intereſted a Writer we ſhall oppoſe the Authority of a number of more credible Witneſſes: Particularly that of Ingulph, his contemporary, who affirms, that he diſtributed all the Counties, Baronies, Biſhoprics, and Prelacies, among the Normans, and hardly permitted any Engliſhman to enjoy any place of honor or truſt [R].

The very name of Conqueſt was at certain times ſuch a Bug-bear, that it could not even be mentioned without the utmoſt danger. For Biſhop Burnet having aſſerted, in a Paſtoral Letter (c), That, ‘ upon the Prince of Orange's ‘ coming, here was a war begun upon juſt ‘ and lawful grounds, and a war being ſo be‘ gun, it is the uncontroverted opinion of all ‘ Lawyers, “ That the ſucceſs of a juſt war “ gives a lawful title to that which is acquired “ in the progreſs of it.” Therefore King James ‘ having ſo far ſunk in the war, that he both ‘ abandoned his People, and deſerted the Go‘ vernment, all his Right and Title did accrue to ‘ the King [William] in the right of a Conqueſt ‘ over him.’ For this paſſage, that Letter was ordered by the Houſe of Commons, 21 January 1692-3, to be publickly burnt; with a Book then newly publiſhed, by . . . . Blount, intitled King William and Qu. Mary Conquerors.

(b) Lord Lyttelton, Life of K. Henry II. Vol. I. p. 10.

(c) The title of it was, A Paſtoral Letter writ by the Rt. Rev. Father in God Gilbert, Lord Biſhop of Sarum, to the Clergy of his Dioceſs, concerning the Oaths of Allegiance and Supremacy to K. William and Q. Mary. Lond. 1689. 4°. The paſſage is in page 21. It ſeems the Biſhop's Letter was ſacrificed to a pun; for ſome of the members having call'd out Burn-it, the cry went immediately round the Houſe.

vours to eſtabliſh the notion of his being heir to K. Edward, from the appointment of that monarch.——He ſoon afterwards confiſcated the eſtates of all the Engliſh who had fought againſt him at Haſtings, and gave them to the Normans, and other foreigners in his ſervice. Life of Henry II. vol. I. p. 8, 9. 28, 29.

Some of theſe Names ſound like Saxon; namely Moduin, Haghebern, Gonduin, Ulueva, and Stanard: But if we look into the places where they are mention'd, it will appear, that they had the eſtates of Saxons diſpoſſeſs'd.

[P] For he ſeparated the Civil and Eccleſiaſtical Juriſdictions, which the Saxon Biſhops and Earls had exerciſed jointly in the County Courts, by giving the Biſhops a Court of their own.—And the lands of the Biſhops and greater Abbots, which had been held before in frank almoigne, or free alms, were by the authority of the whole legiſlature, in the reign of this Prince, declared to be Baronies, and bound to the ſame obligations of homage and military ſervice, as the civil Tenures of the like nature, agreeably to the practice in Normandy and France. Lord Lyttelton, p. 43. 50.

That tyrannical uſurper's true character is thus drawn by the ſame noble Author, in theſe nervous lines. ‘ Attila himſelf did not more juſtly deſerve to be named the Scourge of ‘ God, than this mercileſs Norman.—A luſt of power, which ‘ no regard to juſtice would limit; the moſt unrelenting ‘ cruelty; and the moſt inſatiable avarice, poſſeſſed his ſoul. ‘ —Where he had no advantage nor pride in forgiving, his ‘ nature diſcovered itſelf to be utterly void of all ſenſe of ‘ compaſſion; and ſome barbarities which he committed, ex‘ ceeded the bounds that even tyrants and conquerors pre‘ ſcribed to themſelves.’ Idem, p. 50.

The Panick was certainly without foundation: For how could the Conqueſt made in 1066, influence or affect the Government of this Nation; after the Boundaries between the Prerogative and the Rights and Liberties of Subjects, had been ſettled and aſcertained, by the many ſubſequent Coronation-oaths; by the Charters of K. Henry I. K. Stephen, K. Henry II. by the Magna Charta of King John, and K. Henry III. by the repeated Confirmations of it, and of other Liberties, in Statutes 25 and 28 Edw. I. 10 and 14 Edw. III. 1 Henry IV. 4 Henry V. &c. by the Petition and Bill of Right in 1628; by the Act of Settlement in 1689; by the Statute of Treaſon; by the Habeas Corpus Act; and other ſalutary Statutes.

So heavy was the burden of Military Tenures [S], that even thoſe Normans, at leaſt their Poſterity, who under them enjoyed immenſe Poſſeſſions, were always ſtruggling for ſome abatement and mollification. This produced ſeveral bloody Wars between the Kings and the Barons; but no very great alteration in the Eſtates in this County.

§ 20. It appears in the courſe of this Hiſtory, what large and valuable poſſeſſions the noble Family of Bohun, Earls of Hereford, Eſſex, and Northampton had in this County. It will undoubtedly be a pleaſure to the Reader to ſee how they were divided between the two coheirs of that Family, K. Henry V. and Anne Counteſs of Stafford, in 1421 [T]. By an Act of parliament in 1414, all the Honours, Caſtles, Maners, and other Eſtates once belonging to the Bohun family, and which deſcended to K. Henry V, were ſevered from the Crown of England, and joined, annexed, and united to the Dutchy of Lancaſter for ever.

At preſent the Revenues of that Dutchy in Eſſex and Hertfordſhire, are 1000 l. a year.

§ 21. The cruel Wars between the Houſes of York and Lancaſter [U] occaſioned ſeveral Confiſcations, as the reſpective contending Parties prevailed. Among the reſt, it ruined the noble Family of De Vere, Earls of Oxford, and exalted that of Bourchier to the higheſt degree of power and riches (d).

§ 22. Among other conſiderable Alterations in Property, one was, The Founding and Endowing great numbers of Monasteries, which brought ſo many capital Eſtates into mortmain, or dead hands.

In this county there were Forty-ſeven; namely, Two mitred Abbies, Waltham Holy-Croſs, and St. John's, Colcheſter: and ſix other Abbies, Biley, Coggeſhall, St. Oſith, Stratford-Langthorn, Tiltey, and Walden.

And twenty-two Priories, Berden, Blackmore, St. Botolph's Colcheſter, Bycknacre, Carmelites at Maldon, Chelmsford, Grey Friers in Colcheſter, Earls-Colne, Little Dunmow, Hatfeild-Broad-oak, and - - Peverell, Little Horkſley, Latton, Little Lees, Weſt Merſey, Pantfeild, Prittlewell, Stansgate, Takeley, Tiptre, Toby, and Thremhall.

Three Nunneries, Berking, Hedingham-caſtle, Wickes.

Nine Hoſpitals, Bocking, Brook-ſtreet in South-Weald, Crouched Friers, and St. Mary Magdalen in Colcheſter, Hedingham-Caſtle, Horn-Church, Gr. Ilford, St. Giles's in Maldon, Newport.

Three Colleges, Halſted, Pleſhey, Layer-Marney.

Two Præceptories of Templars, Creſſing, and Little Mapleſted.

Of all theſe, and their endowments, an account is given under the reſpective Pariſhes in which they lay.

§ 23. The Dissolution of theſe Houſes ſpread their large Poſſeſſions into many hands, and cauſed a great Alteration in the Property of this County.

The yearly Revenues of them, amounted to upwards of 7500 l. which, conſidering the preſent increaſe of the Value of Land, riſes to a prodigious Sum, as the Reader may judge.

I will not ſay here, who moſtly ſhared the Plunder in this County; for the following Hiſtory ſhews it under the reſpective Pariſhes where the Monaſteries lay.

Some intention there was of applying part of thoſe Eſtates towards the Public Service, which I ſhall relate in the words of the Author by whom it is mentioned.

‘ The general plauſible project, which cauſed ‘ the Parliament conſent unto the Reformation, ‘ or alteration of the Monaſteries, was that the ‘ King's Exchequer ſhould for ever be enriched, ‘ the Kingdome and Nobility ſtrengthened and ‘ encreaſed, and the common Subjects acquitted ‘ and freed from all former Services and Taxes, ‘ to wit, that the Abbots, Monks, Fryers and ‘ Nunnes being ſuppreſt, that then in their ‘ places ſhould be created forty Earles, three-

[U] They were occaſioned by the aſſumed overgrown Power of a King's uncle, John of Gaunt, who exalted his poſterity to the throne, in prejudice to the line of his elder brother, Edward the Black Prince.

'ſcore Barons, and three thouſand Knights, and forty thouſand Souldiours, with ſkilful Captaines, and competent maintenance for them all, ever out of the ancient Churches revenues, ſo as in ſo doing the King and Succeſſors ſhould never want of Treaſure of their owne, nor have cauſe to be beholding to the common Subjects, neither ſhould the people be any more charged with Loanes, Subſidies and Fifteens. Since which time, there have beene more Statute Lawes, Subſidies, and Fifteenes, then five hundred yeeres before. And not long after that, the King had Subſidies granted, and borrowed great Summes of money, and dyed in debt (e).' To which I ſhall add, That he was under a neceſſity of debaſing his coin.

Such a Proviſion as is here mentioned would have been a laſting Sinking Fund, and prevented thoſe numberleſs burdenſom and vexatious Taxes, the weight of which this Nation groans under.

But that luxurious King's extravagance, and the Rapaciouſneſs of thoſe about him, ſquander'd away, and ſwallowed, what might have been made a Public Good.

Some of the Monaſteries might have been ſaved for Hoſpitals, eſpecially in large Towns. The ſcanty Allowance left for poor Vicarages deſerves ſome conſideration. Half of the Tithes at leaſt would have been but reaſonable.

§ 24. In K. Edward the VIth's reign, the reign, the Suppreſſion of CHANTRIES diſperſed a great deal of landed Property among individuals; though the endowments of them generally conſiſted of ſmall parcels. But ſome of them were conſiderable; Joſeph Elianor's Chantry in Colcheſter, for inſtance, having above 100 acres.

§ 25. In the ſame reign, a great deal flowed from another Source, little known or obſerved; and that was from the VISITATIONS of CHURCHES. The Commiſſioners for that purpoſe were, Sir Richard Riche, George Norton, T. Joſſelyn, and Edmund Mordaunt. § 26. The Wars and Troubles in the laſt century did not, in ſome reſpects, ſo deeply affect this County as they did ſome others.

Indeed, as the lower Sort are always too much inclined to plunder; In 1642, 'divers Aſſemblies of people gathered together in great bodies, who much damnified the houſes, and took the goods of divers perſons, [Sir John Lucas among the reſt,] without Law or other Authority (f).'

The ſame year, the Counties of Eſſex, Suffolk, Norfolk, Cambrige, Hertfordſhire, the iſle of Ely, and the city of Norwich entered into an Aſſociation with one another, for the mayntenance and preſervation of the Peace of the ſaid Counties (g).

The Parliament Committee acting for that purpoſe, were, in 1642, Sir Tho. Barrington, Sir Mart. Lumley, Sir Har. Grimſton, Bart. Sir Henry Mildmay, Sir Wm. Maſham, Sir Ric. Everard, Sir Tho. Honywood, Jo. Sayer, Hen. Holcroft, Wllm. Martin.—In 1643, Jo. Atwood, Rob. Smyth, Sam. Plume, Samuel Freeborne, Fr. Nicholſon.—In 1644, Ol. Raymond, Jo. Sorell, Ric. Wiſeman, Robt. Kempe, Edm. Birkhead, Car. H. Mildmay, John Meade, John Barrington, Deane Tindal, A. Luther, T. Middleton Vicecom. Wm. Atwood, Will. Hickes, Iſaac Wincoll, Will. Collard, J. Mathewes, Henry Clitherowe, W. Rowe.—In 1645, Sam. Sheffeild, Will. Harlakenden.—In 1655, T. Trafford, Jo. Sparrow, Jo. Symonds, John Brewſter, Edm. Mounte (h).

The Committee named in Eſſex, 'for the weekly raiſing of money for the maintenance of the Army and Forces, by a weekly aſſeſſment upon every County,' were Sir Harbottle Grimſton, Bart. Sir Tho. Cheeke, Kt. Henry Wiſeman, Robert Smith, Robert Bourne, Wil. Attwood, Nath. Bacon, Jo. Meade, Robert Wiſeman, of Mayland, Iſaac Alleyn, of Haſeley, Samuel Freebourne, Peter Whitcombe, Robert Young, Eſq; Jeremy Aylet, Gent. Henry Farre, Eſq; Wil. Collard, Gent. Robert Crane, Gent. Robert Calthropp, Gent. Jo. Eldred, Eſquire (i).

The ſums aſſeſſed by them upon this County, were, at firſt the weekly ſum of Eleven hundred and twenty-five pounds; next of Sixteen hundred and eighty-ſeven pounds, alſo weekly: Then, Six thouſand ſeven hundred and fifty pounds monthly; the ſame year, Sixteen hundred and forty-two pounds, likewiſe monthly; and finally Two thouſand and eighty-eight Pounds; and ſo in proportion upon the reſt of the Kingdom. And now alſo it was that the name of New Impoſt, or Exciſe, was firſt invented and laid upon this Nation; to which ſeveral Additions were made afterwards.

Such Inhabitants of this County as refuſed to join the prevailing Powers, being ſtigmatized by them with odious Names, were either ſpoiled of their Eſtates by Sequeſtrations; or forced to redeem them by hard and arbitrary Compoſitions.

For the carrying on the Sequeſtrations, there were Committees appointed in every County, who treated all Delinquents, [for ſo they ſtyled ſuch as would not ſide with them,] "ſeizing all the Money, Goods, Chattels, Debts and perſonal Eſtate; as alſo all and every the Manors, Lands, Tenements, Hereditaments, Rents, Revenues, and Profits belonging to them (k):' allowing only the Fifth Part for the maintenance of their Wives and Families; which alſo was ſubſtracted afterwards. By which rigorous means, many perſons throughout the Kingdom were entirely impoveriſhed, reduced to inexpreſſible diſtreſs, if not brought into total ruin and deſtruction. At length, they were permitted to enjoy their own again; but not without grievous Fines and ſevere Compoſitions, which, in ſome reſpects, was almoſt as bad as being entirely and at once deprived of their Poſſeſſions. The Sums raiſed by theſe oppreſſive Methods were ſo great and exorbitant, that they may appear almoſt incredible to any perſon who hath not ſeen the particulars of them; they amounting to ſome millions of money (l).

The Liſt of thoſe that were admitted to pay their Compoſitions in this County, were as follows,

In 1645, Sixteen thouſand nine hundred and ſeventy pounds, nine ſhillings and ten pence, were received by them, for rents, wood-ſales, and timber, of the Lady Dowager Rivers (m).

Since the Reſtoration, no very conſiderable Diſturbances, or Alterations have happened in this County; and may it always remain quiet and peaceable.

§ 27. The NATURAL PRODUCTS of this County are Corn in great plenty; good Fruits; Cattle, and delicate Meat, of which Veal is excellent to a proverb: Fiſh of all ſorts, eſpecially Soles, Whitings; and much eſteemed Oyſters, in the Royalty of Colne-river belonging to the Corporation of Colcheſter; Wall-fleet in other Creeks about the County, &c.

At Goldangre, Kirby, and other parts along the Coaſt, are many Decoys, which yield plenty of wild Fowl of all kinds.

Among the natural Products muſt alſo be reckoned Saffron, Hops, and many Plants and Herbs, for a particular account of which I beg leave to refer to the learned John Ray's Hiſtory of Plants; to the Liſt, extracted from him, and printed at the end of Camden's Deſcription of this County in his Britannia; and eſpecially to S. Dale's Hiſtory of Harwich.

Eringo, tho' not peculiar to this County, muſt not be forgot, which is candied at Colcheſter.

This County not having any large and high Mountains, the uſual parents and beds of Metals and Minerals, none of them are therefore to be look'd for here.

Attempts have been made to diſcover Medicinal Waters, and ſome have been ſo called, as at Chigwell, Upminſter, Witham, Woodford, &c. but none have kept up their reputation, except Tilbury-water. See this Hiſtory, Vol. I. p. 39, 110, 164. and Vol. II. p. 112.

§ 28. What I call ARTIFICIAL is the Trade and Buildings.

The Clothing Trade formerly flouriſhed in Colcheſter, Dedham, and other parts of Eſſex. Ever ſince Qu. Elizabeth's reign, Bays, and Says, have been chiefly manufactured, in Colcheſter, Dedham, Coggeſhall, Bocking, and Braintree, Dunmow, Halſted, Hedingham, &c. And for the ſupply of thoſe manufactures, the Poor are employed in Spinning wool, in moſt parts of the County. [For a more particular account, ſee the Hiſtory of Colcheſter, p. 75, &c.]

Sacking cloth is alſo wove at Chelmsford.

As to the BUILDINGS, in almoſt every Pariſh there are Seats, or capital Manſions, of which I give an account under the reſpective Pariſhes.

This County indeed is not repleniſhed with ſo many Seats as ſome other Counties in the kingdom: But, within a ſmall diſtance of the metropolis, there are many good Houſes belonging to Citizens.

Of the Churches; Thaxted only I think hath a ſtone Spire: The reſt have either ſquare or round Towers of ſtone and brick, or flints, and often rubbiſh, embattled; or wooden Belfreys; with ſpires leaded or ſhingled. There are not many that can be called large and handſome, unleſs to Thaxted we join thoſe at Walden, Chelmsford, Writtle, and a few others.

With reſpect to the Caſtles, here are four that may be called Royal, as belonging once, or now, to the Crown; namely thoſe at Colcheſter, Hadley, Landguard Fort, and Tilbury Fort.

Eight others were caſtellated Manſions of the greater Nobility; viz. Canfeild, and Hedingham, belonging to the noble Family of De Vere: Clavering, and Raley, to Suene of Eſſex: Ongar to the family of Lucy: Pleſhey to the family of Mandeville, and of Bohun Earls of Eſſex, and High Conſtables of England: Stanſted Montfichet to that of Gernon, otherwiſe de Montfichet: And Walden to that of Mandeville.

Except Colcheſter-caſtle, they are all ruinous or demoliſhed.

(m) Sequeſtrators book, penes me.

And ſo are the Monaſteries; except part of St. Oſith's.

Layer-Marney Tower is one of the fineſt remains we have.

§ 29. There are but few ANTIQUITIES in this County.

The greater quantity of Roman Remains are at Colcheſter: Namely, an infinite number of their Bricks, moſtly eleven inches long, eight broad, and two thick: Urns: Teſſellated Pavements: And Britiſh and Roman Coins are found there in ſuch plenty, that in the thirty years of my reſidence in that Town, I have collected upwards of thirteen hundred. [See Hiſtory of Colcheſter.]

Roman Remains there are alſo at Leyton, Wanſted, Great Burghſted, Tolleſhunt Knights, Weſt Merſey, Harwich, and other places.

And Tumuli, or Barrows, at Lexden, Bures ad Montem, Weſt Merſey, Wigborough.

Stone is very ſcarce in this County, and therefore Inſcriptions ſo plentiful in the Northern parts, ſeldom occur here.

Mr. Horſeley, in his excellent Britannia Romana, hath not any.

One was found a few years ago in the pariſh of St. Mary at the Wall, and brought to me, which is now in the poſſeſſion of my moſt worthy Friend Charles Gray Eſq; and depoſited in his Caſtle. This Inſcription is given below in the Note [X]. It is ſufficiently plain, except the fourth line, which hath puzzled the moſt knowing. Some fancy that it relates to Anderida Silva, and Cogidunus; or to Coccium mentioned in the 10th Iter of Antonine.

§ 30. FOSSILS are found in divers parts of the County, but no where in ſuch quantities as in Harwich-cliff.

They are as follows; Petrified Wood, either looſe in the layers of the Cliff, or incloſed in a layer of ſtone. It is incombuſtible, tho' it retains the grain of the wood.

Stalagmites: Yellow Spar like bees wax: Ludus Helmontii, or the waxen Vein: Amber: Selenites, or mock Cryſtal: Bezoar-mineral, &c.

But what is found in greateſt quantity, is the Copperas ſtone, or Pyrites. The way of preparing it for uſe is as follows. 'They lay the 'ſtones upon a large bed or floor in the open 'air, underneath which there are gutters or 'troughs diſpoſed to receive and carry the liquor 'impregnated with the Mineral to a ciſtern, 'where it is reſerved. For, the air and weather 'diſſolving the ſtones, the rain that falls upon 'them carries away with it the vitrioline juice, 'or ſalt diſſolved. This liquor they boil in 'large leaden Pans, putting in a good quantity 'of old iron: When it is ſufficiently evaporated, 'they pour it into large troughs wherein it 'cools; the Vitriol cryſtallizing to the ſides of 'the troughs, and to croſs bars put into them. 'The liquor that remains after the Vitriol is 'cryſtallized they call the Mother, and reſerve 'it to be again evaporated by boiling.' (n)

The Petrified Shells are either Univalve, Tubulous, or Bivalve.

The Univalve, are the Patella, or Limpet: the Tubuli Vermiculares, Worm-ſhells, fiſtulous caſes of ſome Inſects bred therein: Cochleæ, cockle-ſhells; and thoſe Turbinated, eſpecially fourteen ſorts of the Buccina, or Whelks; Turbo foſſilis, &c. Cochleæ foſſiles, &c.—The Buccina, or Whelks, I am informed, have this ſingularity; that the ſpiral or twiſt goes to the right, and all the live ones of the ſame kind and form, found on the beach and near the ſhore, are twiſted to the left.

The Bivalve Shells are, Pecten, the ſmall Scallop, Pectunculi, the Clam, Purrs, &c. ſeveral ſorts of them; Conchitæ, ſome triangular, and ſome round; oyſter-ſhells, &c.

Odontopetræ, the teeth of Elephants, or bones of ſome fiſh of the cetaceous kind, &c.

For a more particular account of theſe and other Foſſils, be pleaſed to conſult S. Dale's Appendix to the Hiſtory of Harwich; and Dr. M. Liſter's Hiſtoria Conchyliorum.

Thoſe great Men that bore the Title of EARLS OF ESSEX, in the Saxon times, were, Brituulf, in 897; Brithnoth; Harold; Alfgar; and Edwin.

Since the Conqueſt, this County hath given the title of EARL to the Families of Magnaville, or Mandeville; Fitz-Piers; de Bohun; Thomas of Woodſtock; the Bourchier Family; Thomas Cromwell; the Family of Devereux; and finally to the Capel Family, in 1661, which ſtill enjoys that title, William-Anne-Holles Capel being the preſent Earl.

DOMESDAY-BOOK making a conſiderable part of this Hiſtory, I thought the curious Reader would be pleaſed to ſee an exact Specimen of it as it is in the Original: accordingly I have had a Fac ſimile of it taken, and placed here, being the firſt article in this Volume. It is to be read thus. ‘ Hundred de ‘ Beuentreu. Berchingas tenet ſemper Sancta Maria ‘ pro XXX hidis. Tunc IIII carucate in dominio, ‘ modo III, & IIIIta poſſet fieri. Tunc LXX carucate ‘ hominum, modo LXVIII. Tunc C villani, modo ‘ CXL. Tunc L bordarii, modo LXXXX. Tunc X ſervi, ‘ modo VI. Silva M porcis. C acre prati. ii molen‘dina. i piſcina. ii runcini. XXXIIII animalia. CL ‘ porci. CXIIII oves. XXIIII capre. X vaſa apium.’

An explanation of ſome of the terms in that Book, may be acceptable to the Reader.

Manerium denotes the Lord’s capital Manſion houſe, where he dwelt; with the land round it, in his own occupation. ‘ Villas quas a manendo Manerios vulgo ‘ vocamus,’ as Ordericus Vitalis expreſſes it. (o) According to that derivation, I have choſen to write the word, Maner, and not Manor, which is plainly derived from the French word Manoir. Bracton gives this deſcription (p); ‘ Sciendum eſt, quod manerium poterit eſſe per ſe ex pluribus ædificiis coadunatum, ‘ ſive villis & hamlettis adjacentibus. . . . . . Poterit ‘ etiam eſſe per ſe manerium capitale, & plura continere ‘ ſub ſe maneria non capitalia, & plures villas, & plures ‘ hamletas quaſi ſub uno capite aut Dominio uno.’— In the following Hiſtory, ſeveral Eſtates are called Maners, which are not acknowledged for ſuch now. But ſo they are ſtyled in the Inquiſitions poſt mortem, and I thought it beſt to adhere to thoſe authorities.

In dominio, or Demeſne, is what in many Maners is called the Lordſhip; land round the capital Manſion, which the Lord of the Maner kept in his own hands.

Geld, is a Saxon word, Ʒelδ, ſignifying Tax, or Tribute, as Dane-geld &c.

Hide, is a quantity of land, that varied in different places; and therefore cannot be exactly limited to a certain number. Some think it was 100 acres; others as much as could be ploughed with one plough in a year; or as much as would maintain a family. A tax was laid on by Hides, moſt like our Land-tax.

Carucates, from the French word, Charue, or as pronounced in ſome Provinces, Carue. A ploughland; 120 acr. or 60 acr. according to ſome. J. Stow makes Carucata, Plough-land and Hide, the ſame, viz. 100 acres (Annales, ed. 1631. p. 163. col. 2.) Caruca was 60 acres. By Statute 7 & 8 Will. III. a Ploughland is 50 acres.

Homines, were the capital Tenants under the Lord.

Of the Liberi homines, ſome could ſell their lands, and go where they pleaſed, poterant abire quo vellent, ſine licentia; others could not, non poterant recedere ſine licentia. See this Hiſtory, Vol. I. p. 295. 389. 400. 434. 439. The liberi homines were ſometimes reduced to the condition of villans. See Vol. I. p. 260. note.

Villans, are thoſe that dwelt, not under the Lord’s roof, as the Servi, but in the Village; in Little Houſes not abſolutely their own, but holden at the will of the Lord, like our Copy-holders; for which they performed ſeveral cuſtomary Services of Huſbandry, &c. They were appendent and belonging to the Maner, and paſt along with it to every new Lord.

Bordars, held a little houſe of Huſbandry on the Bords, or out-ſkirts of the Maner, with ſome land, on condition of ſupplying the Lord with certain proviſions for his Board, or Table.

The Servi were in effect in a ſlaviſh condition; not at their own diſpoſal, but retainers of the Lord’s Family; and as much part of the ſtock of the Maner, as the cattle &c. And ſo were their children.

Coliberti, were ſuch of the former as were enfranchiſed, but ſtill paid ſome duties to the ſuperior Lords.

Runcini, were working Horſes.

Animalia, bullocks, cows, and other black cattle.

Hundred, denotes the Jury by which the Survey in Domeſday Book was made. It conſiſted partly of Normans, and partly of the ancient Engliſh or Saxon inhabitants. The manner in which they took this Survey, was thus. The King iſſued his Writ to the Sheriff of each County, commanding him to call before him all the Barons, and the French or Norman ones, the Reves of the Hundreds, the Clergy, and ſix Villans out of each pariſh, or diſtrict. They were to give, upon oath, an account of all the Eſtates; the nature of them; the quantity of hides and carucates they contained; and the occupiers, of different denominations and degrees, whether King’s thegns, freemen, ſochmen, or villans, bordars, ſlaves, with the ſtock of cattle, and even of bees, upon each: the quantity of wood for panage, &c. All which was ſet down at length, and returned by the Sheriff into the Exchequer, and from theſe returns Domeſday-book was compiled. One of theſe returns is extant in the Library of the Dean and Chapter of Exeter, and no where elſe that we can find. [Υ]

(o) Scriptores Normannici, p. 523.

(p) L. 4. fol. 212.

[Υ] In the Cottonian Library, there is the form in which this Survey was taken; beginning thus, ‘ Hic ſubſcribitur ‘ Inquiſitio terrarum, quomodo Barones Regis inquiſiverunt: ‘ videlicet per ſacramentum Vicecomitis Sciræ, & omnium ‘ Baronum, & eorum Francigenarum, & totius Centuriatus, ‘ Preſbiteri, Præpoſiti, ſex villani uniuſcujuſque villæ.’ Each article concludes in theſe words, — ‘ & alii omnes Franci & ‘ Angli de Hoc Hundreto juraverunt.’ Cott. Lib. Tib. A. vi. It is printed in S. Gale’s Appendix to his Richmondſhire, p. 5.

PREFACE.

THE very valuable Materials for a Hiſtory of the County of ESSEX (one of the moſt conſiderable in this Kingdom upon many accounts) which have been collecting for above a Century paſt by thoſe Gentlemen whoſe Names are ſet in the Title-page of this Book, having been put into my hands; I conſulted, how I might render them moſt ſerviceable to the Public. As the late Dr. N. Salmon had, in his imperfect Work upon this Subject, left undeſcribed The Hundreds of Chelmsford, Witham, Lexden, Tendring, and Hinckford, it ſeemed beſt to me to go through and finiſh them in the firſt place: And, according to that plan, the HUNDREDS of CHELMSFORD and WITHAM are now publiſhed: the others are in great forwardneſs, and will follow with all poſſible Expedition. With regard to what Dr. Salmon hath publiſhed of this County, it being, in the opinion of the beſt Judges, too much contracted, and at the ſame time too ſuperficial, my Deſign is, if it pleaſes God to grant me life and health, to retouch, correct, improve, and in a manner new-mould his work, which I have begun already to do. To enable me the better to accompliſh this, I intreat the Favor of thoſe Gentlemen, whoſe Families are deſcribed, or who have Poſſeſſions in the Hundreds which he has treated of, to note his Miſtakes and Omiſſions, and to communicate their Obſervations to me as ſoon as poſſible.

The Part now publiſhed I endeavour to make as conciſe, and yet as complete, as it is in my power. For the ſake of Conciſeneſs, I avoid repeating too frequently the titles of Sir — and Knight — concerning the ſame perſon, one being ſufficient till the Creation of the Baronets in 1611: All that bore the title of Sir being of courſe Knights, unleſs they were Knights Bannerets, or Knights of the Bath, which I carefully diſtinguiſh as far as they come to my knowledge. For the ſame reaſon, I avoid repeating too often ſome words, which occurr almoſt at every line in our modern Accounts of Families.

Unleſs a Place hath been diſtinguiſhed by ſome remarkable Event, noted in our ancienteſt Hiſtorians, I can ſeldom begin my Accounts higher than Edward the Confeſſor, or William the Conqueror. The chief Materials I make uſe of, and moſtly depend upon, are Records. Amongſt them the moſt valuable is Domeſday-Book. But as it appears very uncouth in an Engliſh Dreſs, I have not ventured to give a full and literal Tranſlation of it, but only the ſubſtance of each article in few words; and inſert at the bottom of the page, under the reſpective Pariſhes, a very exact Tranſcript of it, from a copy carefully collated with the original by the late very accurate Mr. John Booth. In the beginning of this Hiſtory of Eſſex I propoſe to give a literal and exact copy of ſome of its articles, with all the Abbreviations, and an Explanation of the words Bordar, Villan, Hide, Carucate, &c. ſo often occurring.

2 Other

Other Records which I greatly depend upon, and preſerve almoſt entire, are the Inquiſitions poſt mortem, from the firſt of K. Henry III. to the fifteenth of K. Charles I. Mr. Holman had entered them under the reſpective Pariſhes: But a Gentleman in this town hath Office-copies of them, which he is ſo obliging as to lend me to compare with Mr. Holman's MSS.

What the College of Heralds, and other Repoſitories contain, relating to this County, had been ſearched long ago; tranſcripts of which are in my cuſtody, and have been properly made uſe of. So that I wanted no materials of any kind; but only the Art of Digeſting them. And how I have executed that part, is left to the Reader's Candor and Judgment.

In order to help the Eye as much as poſſible, every diſtinct Family, or Owners of an Eſtate, are compriſed in diſtinct Paragraphs; and their names printed in Italic characters.

I have choſen not to ſwell this Hiſtory with matters, or facts, relating to this County, that are little important or intereſting; or which occurr in Books that are common, and of no great price.

The Liſts of Incumbents in Mr. Newcourt, I intended to bring down to the preſent times, but I have found it impoſſible to make them complete, for reaſons which I will give another time.

If any Articles are not ſo perfect as could have been wiſh'd, it is not for want of Application to the proper Perſons, but for want of an Anſwer, or a timely Information, from thoſe who could have given it, and were intereſted.

All I have to add, is, To return my heartieſt Thanks to thoſe Noblemen and Gentlemen who have been pleaſed to contribute Copper-plates of their Seats, or otherwiſe to favour me with their Aſſiſtance and Encouragement.

ADVERTISEMENT.

THIS Work will be compriſed in One Volume Folio. The Hundreds of Lexden, Tendring, and Hinckford, are now in the Preſs: and the whole will be publiſhed, in the preſent Method, with all poſſible Expedition.

Such of the Subſcribers, who may be diſpoſed to contribute to the Embelliſhment of the Work, by giving Copper Plates of their Seats, will be pleaſed to ſignify to the Editor, or either of the Proprietors, their kind Intentions; which will be gratefully received. Some Plates that are now ready will accompany our next publication.

THE HISTORY and ANTIQUITIES OF COLCHESTER.

BOOK I.

CHAP. I.

General Account of the Place.

THE ancient Town of COLCHESTER lies in the North-eaſt part of the County of Eſſex; in the 51ſt degree, 55 minutes, of Northern Latitude; and the firſt degree of Longitude Eaſt from the firſt Meridian, when placed at London; diſtant between 50 and 51, meaſured, or poſt-miles, from the metropolis of the Kingdom, the city of London [A].

The SITUATION of it is, upon all accounts, very convenient: For it ſtands ſo near the Sea, as to have all the Advantages of it, excellent Fiſh, eſpecially Soles and Oyſters; and Water-carriage, the Hoys and Lighters coming up to St. Leonard's, or the Hyth. And it lies far enough from the Sea [B] to be free from Damps and all noxious Vapours. It is alſo an eaſy day's Journey from London, to which a Coach goes daily, except Sundays, and another returns from thence at the ſame time [C]. The Poſt likewiſe goes to London every day, at five in the afternoon, but Saturdays; and comes in from that place about one in the afternoon, every day except Mondays.

This Town ſtands upon the North-ſide of a fine Eminence, riſing gradually from the River Colne, which waters the North and Eaſt ſides of it, to a height of about a hundred and twelve feet above the Surface of the River. By that means agreeable Proſpects appear on every ſide, ſome extending even ſeveral miles into the country. And that poſition greatly contributes, at the ſame time, to the Healthfulneſs, as well as Pleaſantneſs of the place.

The SOIL, as in moſt other places, is various. Within the Walls, it is ſandy, chiefly a rich black ſand; which is very ſuitable for Gardening, and all ſorts of Roots. And, for that reaſon, the Town is better ſupplied with things of that nature than moſt places in the kingdom, except London. In St. James's it is gravelly towards Ardley, and ſo it is in Greenſtead, and in ſome part of the Borough-fields. In Mile-end, it is loom and clay. But in general the Soil is ſandy, and upon that account a wet ſeaſon is moſt agreeable, and it ſuffers much in a drought.

I have not had an opportunity of examining the ſeveral Strata with ſufficient accuracy. But, as far as my obſervation reaches, it is a Sand within the walls for Ten or Twelve feet into the earth. In one place that I have had an opportunity of examining more particularly, it is a fine yellow gravel, Sixty foot from the ſurface of the ground.

Tho' the Town ſtands on the ſide of a high hill, yet it is well ſupplied with water. The North and loweſt part of it is waſhed by the river Colne. Many fine SPRINGS riſe in divers places, particularly one near Magdalen-ſtreet called Childwell: Another in the Caſtle-lands: Another down the Balkon-hill, &c. But none are medicinal. Wells are alſo common even in the higheſt parts of the Town, and well ſupplied, tho' ſome are Twenty yards from the ſurface of the ground. But the Water in many is hard. The Springs in all the Wells, are obſerved in general to come from the North and North-weſt.

However, theſe Springs not being thought ſufficient to ſupply the place upon all occaſions, means have been long ago invented, to bring WATER from ſome parts adjoining: Eſpecially from a fine Spring in St. Mary's pariſh, riſing in a meadow named Chiſwell-meadow. I cannot trace out when Water was firſt conveyed from thence to this Town. But I find, that in the year 1536, May 8, Robert Leche, one of the Aldermen, and Thomas Nuthal the elder, Maſters

[A] The Obeliſk, or 51 Mile-Stone, is about the middle of the Town within the Walls. But the outermoſt bounds of the Corporation, or Banlieu, towards London, begin at the Ramparts on Lexden-heath, between 48 and 49 miles from London.

[B] About Eight miles from Merſey-iſland; Twelve from Clackton, and St. Oſith; and Eighteen from Harwich.

[C] Both ſet out at five o'clock in the morning, and arrive about two. There is alſo a Machine, which ſets out from London at ſeven o'clock, and from hence at nine, in the morning; performing the journey in about eight hours. And Coaches from Norwich, Ipſwich, and Harwich paſs likewiſe through this Town.

and Governors of the Gild of Jeſus Maſſe kept in the pariſh Church of St. Peter in Colcheſter; with the conſent of all the pariſhioners, did by Leaſe, (a), grant leave and full power, to Henry Webbe, of the ſaid pariſh of St. Peter, and to his heirs and aſſigns for ever, To have the head-ſpring, and concourſe of water, riſing in Chiſwell-meadow belonging to the Gild of Jeſus Maſſe aforementioned; to be conveyed for ever, under and through the grounds of that Meadow, unto the Manſion-houſe of the ſaid Henry Webbe, in North-ſtreet, within North-gate [D]; Paying to the foreſaid Maſters, and their Succeſſors, the yearly Sum of Four pence, at Michaelmaſs.

I alſo find, that when Windmill field, adjoyning to Chiſwell-meadow, was lett by the Corporation, in 1620, to Thomas Thurſton, one of the Aldermen, Liberty was reſerved to lay Pipes or Trunks for the conveying of the water from Chiſwell-meadow (b).

Ralph Fynche, in his will, ordered, among other things, “ That his Executors ſhould convey the Waters from the Ciſterne, to run in the ground in Pipes of Lead into the waſhing place at the Balkon, ſo that the Water ſhould come into it clean, and not ſoyled with any kind of cattle or fowles, but onely to be made for the neceſſarie occupying, and the ſame Waters for all perſons as aforetime they had done, wherein the ſaid Water had his courſe then, into the ſaid waſhing place for ever.”

But to return to Chiſwell-meadow, and Windmill-field. The Ciſtern, or Reſervoir, into which Water was conveyed from that Meadow, ſtood in the higheſt part of this Field, within the laſt century: And from thence ſeveral parts of the Town were ſupplied. But there being many inconveniencies found in that ſituation, John Potter, Eſq; an ingenious and public-ſpirited man, who had been ſeveral times Mayor of this Town, and was concerned in the former Water-works [E]; undertook to ſupply the deficiencies of the ſame, well judging it would be of conſiderable advantage to the Town. The Field belonging to the Parſonage of St. Mary's, within and adjoining to the Town-wall, being the higheſt and moſt convenient ſpot of ground whereon to fix the Ciſtern or Reſervoir, an application was made to Dr. Henry Compton, Biſhop of London, Patron and Dioceſan of the Rectory of St. Mary's, for his conſent to place it there. Whereupon, his Lordſhip iſſued out a Commiſſion to Six perſons, To view that Field, and certify in what part of it the Ciſtern and Paſſage for the Water was moſt conveniently to be made; in what manner; and of what dimenſions: Whether the making thereof would be any prejudice to the Rector of that pariſh, and his Succeſſors; and what yearly recompence ſhould be made to them; Accordingly, they certified, That the fitteſt place for the Ciſtern was near the North-weſt corner of that field, and would take up about Twenty four feet ſquare of ground: That, from thence the Pipes ſhould be laid croſs the field, and a carpenter's yard adjoyning, about Twenty rods in length; and ſo down St. Mary's lane into the Town. And, by way of recompence to the Rector for his Licence. Water for all neceſſary uſes ſhould be conveyed to the Parſonage-houſe, at the charge of the ſaid Mr. Potter, or his aſſigns, which was reckoned as good as Twenty ſhillings a year. In purſuance of this Certificate, the Biſhop granted his Licence, dated 20 Septemb. 1707. And, five days after, the Rev. Mr. Middleton, then Rector, entered into a Leaſe for Seventy ſeven years [F] with Mr. Potter, wherein he gave him leave, to dig and break up the ground to lay the Pipes, &c. Soon after, the Ciſtern was built; but it not being found capacious enough, another was erected by the ſide of it; both which contained about Two hundred and forty hogſheads. Into them the Water was forced from Chiſwell-meadow, above-mentioned, and convey'd by Pipes under ground; which, paſſing through one of the Arches at the Balkon into the Three-crowns Garden, ended in the Ciſterns; from whence the chief part of the Town was ſupplied with excellent ſpring-water.

Theſe Water-works continued in a flouriſhing condition for about Thirty years, namely, till 1737. But the Owner of them being indolent, and more profitably employed; and his Servant careleſs, and extremely diſhoneſt: Likewiſe, the Town growing poor, and not well able to pay; And, eſpecially, this affair not having been ſettled, as it ought to have been, by Act of Parliament, They were neglected, and ſoon came to nothing, to the great prejudice of the Inha-

(a) This Leaſe was in the poſſeſſion of Mr. William Harriſon.

(b) Book of Aſſemblies, 4 Dec. 1620.

[D] In that Leaſe, Henry Webbe did moreover covenant and promiſe, for himſelf, his heirs and aſſigns, poſſeſſors and owners of the ſaid Tenement, with the appurtenances, That if any loſs, hurt, or harm, ſhould fortune to be done, to the hindrance, and loſſe, of the owners of the ſaid Meadow, in the ſearching, digging, and breaking of the ground there. That then the ſame Henry Webbe, his heirs, and aſſignes, poſſeſſors, and owners of the ſaid Tenement, ſhould pay or cauſe to be paid to the foreſaid Maſters, and to their ſucceſſors, owners of the ſaid Meadow, all ſuch ſum or ſums of money, as ſhould be lawfully and indifferently adjudged, by three or four honeſt men, forthwith after ſuch judgment was given, upon pain of forfeiting of the ſaid Liberty before granted: And ſhould alſo, at his and their only coſts and charges, fill up, repair, and make plain the ground there, at every ſearching as neede ſhould require.

[E] On the 3d of February, 1687, a Leaſe for 98 years was granted by Anne Munk of Colcheſter, to John Potter Alderman of Colcheſter, Draper, John Wheely jun. Braſier, and Tim. Cooke Innholder, of thoſe ſeveral Meſſuages, Tenements, and Rentaries, with the yards, gardens, waters, &c. And alſo of all that piece or parcel of paſture, or Meadow-ground, adjoining to the ſaid Meſſuages or Tenements, commonly called Cheeſe [Chiſwell] meadow, ſituate and being in the pariſh of Saint Mary.—And likewiſe the free uſe and benefit of all that way or paſſage leading to the ſaid Meſſuages or Tenements by and through a Field commonly called or known by the name of the Windmill-field, and then in the occupation of Joſeph Andrews, lying in the aforeſaid pariſh of St. Mary's.

[F] This Leaſe was void ipſo facto from the firſt, as being contrary to Statute 13 Elizab. c. 10. Accordingly, bitants, and the inexpreſſible danger of the Town in caſe a Fire ſhould happen [G].

The River Colne, as we have ſaid above, waters the North and Eaſt-ſides of the Town. Over the River there are Three BRIDGES; North-Bridge, leading to North-gate; Eaſt-Bridge, to Eaſt-gate; and the Hyth-Bridge, at the Hyth. The two former are of timber, and the latter of brick. It was firſt made about the year 1473 [H], and new-built in the year 1737. Theſe Bridges are now kept up by the Chamberlain, at the charge of the Corporation: But have ſometimes been repaired by Rates aſſeſſed on the ſeveral Pariſhes [I]. And a Pontage, or Toll for repairing the Bridges, was granted for 14 years by the Second Charter of K. Charles I. [K].

I come now to give an account of the STREETS [L] and LANES of this Town; which, tho' but a dry Subject, ſerves to ſhew the Extent and Conſiderableneſs of the place, and may be uſeful upon many occaſions.

I. The great or main Streets.

The firſt ſtreet, as you come into the Town from London, is Crouch-ſtreet, ſo called from the Hoſpital of the Holy-Croſs (or Crouch) which ſtood near it. That part which is continued in a ſtraight line beyond Head-gate, is Gutter-ſtreet.

The firſt Street within Head-gate [M], as far as the Three Crowns, is Head-ſtreet; called in old writings, Haved, Heved, or Hevedgate-ſtreet.

From thence to North-gate, is North-hill. The ſtreet leading from North-gate to North-bridge, is, the Middle-Burgh.

From the Bridge towards Mile-end,

North-ſtreet; alias Cow-lane.

The great or main ſtreet, from the Three Crowns to Eaſt-gate, is,

The Highſtreet, or Market-Place. Part of it was formerly called Corn-hill. Near All-Saints Church, it is named King-ſtreet. And that part of it which runs along the Wall of the late Grey-friers, was anciently call'd, Frere or Freris-ſtreet.

Without Eaſt-gate, is Eaſt-hill.

Beyond that

Eaſt-ſtreet.

From the High-ſtreet, by the Eaſt-end of All-Saints-Church to St. Botolph's-gate, is,

Queen's-ſtreet; formerly called South-gate-ſtreet.

Without that gate,

St. Botolph's Street; ſometimes called South-ſtreet. The long ſtreet, leading from thence to the Hyth, is called Magdalen-ſtreet; becauſe part of it lieth in the pariſh of St. Mary Magdalen. Tho' in reality the greater part of it is in the pariſhes of St. Botolph's, St. Giles's, and St. Runwald's. It was anciently called Heth-ſtreet, becauſe it leads to the Hyth. But, when it firſt turns out of St. Botolph's ſtreet, it is called Grub-ſtreet.

From the High-ſtreet, by the Eaſt-end of St. Nicolas's Church winding to St. Botolph's-gate, is Wyre, or Wier-ſtreet.

Stone-well, or Stanwell-ſtreet, is that which leads, Eaſt, South-eaſt, from Gutter-ſtreet, or Schere-gate, to St. John's Green.

II. The Lanes, and Alleys.

1. In Crouch-ſtreet,

when the Leſſees of the Water-works did not find their account in keeping them up, they would not ſtand to this agreement, and could not be compelled to do ſo.

[G] The Rector of St. Mary's having given a ſmall conſideration to the Leſſee, took up the Bricks of the Ciſterns in 1738, and therewith repaired the End of the Parſonage-Houſe, &c.

[H] See the Appendix, N°. I.

[I] See Book of Aſſemblies, 22 May 1610, and 1 Oct. 1611, &c.—In 1610, May 22, a Rate was made for repairing the Highways, Cauſeys, and Bridges within this Town and the Liberties. The moſt ſubſtantial Inhabitants of each pariſh, were aſſeſs'd at 3 s. 4 d. ſome at 2 s. and none under 1 s. The Rate was made by the Bailiffs, Aldermen, and Common Council.——But it is a queſtion, whether by Bridges here, is not meant Foot-bridges. For, the Chamberlain hath been preſented, many years paſt, for not repairing North-Bridge, Eaſt-Bridge, &c. See the Preſentments at the Quarterly Seſſions, or Law-hundred-Courts.

[K] This Pontage was ſettled, 17 Aug. 1635, in the following manner:

For every Cart laden, and going out of the Liberties of the Town, if the Cart and Goods be not a Freeman's, ——— ———	4
Every Cart laden with logs, bruſh, oſtrey, billet, ſpray, and broom, furze and linke, ———	1
——— Laden with wool, charcoal, timber, and barke, either into or out of the Liberties, unleſs it be both the Cart and Goods of a Freeman,	4
——— laden with ſtraw, hay, and corn in the ſtraw,	1
——— laden with clay or ſand, ———	0
——— laden with bricks, tyles, and pavements, ——	1
Every Load of hops coming in or going out, ——	4
Every Load of Houſhold-ſtuff and implements of houſhold, and ſuch like things, carried out of the Liberties of the Town, ———	4
Every horſe laden with a pack of Wool, coming into or going out of the Town, except both be a freeman's, ——— ———	2
Every pack of Wool going out of the Town or Liberties (from an inhabitant of the town or Liberties) to Spinners,	1
Every horſe coming in or going out of the Town, laden with a mantle, ———	½

All Corn and Victuals, of what kind or nature ſoever, coming into the town upon the Market-days to ſerve the Market, to be free from Pontage for thoſe days only.

All other Carts laden, coming in or going out of the town, (the Carts laden, before-mentioned, only excepted) to pay. ———	4

On the 30th of July 1635, the Pontage of North-Bridge was ordered to be lett to William Maynard for 40 l. a year; and that of Eaſt-bridge to Rob. Downes for the ſame rent. But the Pontage of North-Bridge was lett, Oct. 26, 1635, to Richard Daniel, Apothec. for 20 l. a year; and that of Eaſt-Bridge, Dec. 24, 1635, to George Harriſon, at the ſame rate. Book of Aſſemblies.

[L] As moſt things in this Town have a relation to Helen, and her finding the Croſs, ſo have the Streets in particular: The main Street repreſenting the Shaft or Body of it, and Head-ſtreet and North-hill the Tranſverſe part of the ſame.

[M] Head-Street, North-hill, and the High ſtreet, are wide and ſpacious; and as handſome as any in moſt Cities and Towns in England.

. . . [On the North-ſide]

The Plough-Alley, by the Plough-Ale-houſe.

The Balkon, Balkerne, or Balkorne-lane, leading along the Balkon, or chief Baſtion, in the Town-wall.

. . . [On the South-ſide]

Maldon-lane, leading towards that town. The upper part of it was called Schrebbe-ſtreet.

Butt-lane, in which were formerly the Butts for ſhooting at with bows and arrows. It was anciently called Holmer, Holmere, and Holmer's-lane; and alſo Lyard-lane, becauſe leading to Layer, which uſed to be ſometimes written Lyard.

2. In Head-ſtreet,

. . . [On the Weſt-ſide]

Church-lane, near Head-gate;

And higher up,

St. Mary's-lane; both leading to St. Mary's Church.

. . . [On the Eaſt-ſide]

Sir Iſaac Rebow's Walk; a lane leading from Head-gate towards Schere-gate, gravell'd and made handſome by Sir Iſaac Rebow.

Culver-lane, or the Back-lane, reaching from this ſtreet as far as Queen's-ſtreet. There come into it,

Trinity-lane, or Schere-ſtreet, going by the Weſt-end of Trinity-Church, and leading to Schere-gate:

The Lion-walk, facing the back-gate of the Red-Lion-inn. 'Twas formerly called Cat-lane:

Alſo part of Wyre-ſtreet.

When theſe Streets and Lanes were firſt paved, I cannot exactly determine. But I find, that in the year 1473, a man was preſented for breaking up the Pavement [Pavimentum] in Wire-ſtreet (d): which is a certain proof that this ſtreet was then pav'd; as were undoubtedly ſome others.

But the whole Town was not effectually Paved till the reign of K. James I. For that purpoſe, an Act was paſſed in the year 1623, wherein it was enacted, That all and every perſon and perſons, bodies politique and corporate, their heirs and ſucceſſors, immediate owners or landlords, of any Meſſuages, Tenements, Yards, Gardens, and Orchards within the ſaid Town, or the Suburbs of the ſame, and of any Eſtate or Eſtates in fee-ſimple, fee-taile, for life, or for term of years; from time to time, and all times, at the aſſignment and appointment of the Bailiffs and Commonalty of the ſaid town of Colcheſter, or the more part of them, ſhould well and ſufficiently Pave, or cauſe to be paved, with paving ſtone, all and every the Streets, Lanes, and Highways, lying directly before their ſaid Meſſuages, &c. ſett and being in the Streets and Lanes of the ſaid Borough and Town: Every perſon and perſons, as is abovesaid, to Pave ſuch Part and Quantity of the ſaid Ways, Streets and Lanes; and in Length, as his or their Meſſuages, &c. do lye and extend againſt the ſaid Ways, Streets, and Lanes. And every perſon and perſons charged and chargeable with the paving of the ſaid Streets, Ways, and Lanes as aforeſaid, or which ought to pave the ſame by this Act, to forfeit to the Bailiffs of the ſaid Town for the time being Twelve-pence for every Yard-ſquare not paved in form aforeſaid. And that all perſons ſhould from time to time maintain, ſupport, repair, and make, all and every the ſaid Pavements over and againſt their Houſes, Meſſuages, &c. from time to time, and ſo often as need ſhould, upon pain to forfeit for every Yard-ſquare Eight-pence of like money. And that the ſaid Owners or Landlords, &c. and their heirs, ſucceſſors, and aſſigns, ſhould ſufficiently from time to time, maintain and repair, ſo often as it ſhould be needful, the Pavement of the ſaid ſtreet and ſtreets ſo adjoyning, with like Stone, againſt all and every the Meſſuages, &c. in like manner as is above ſaid; upon pain of Forfeiture for every Yard-ſquare not ſufficiently repaired and amended, Twelve-pence of like money. And where need ſhould be, of pavement of any ſtreets adjoyning to any Churches or Church-yards within the ſaid Town or Suburbs; the ſame ſtreet and ſtreets ſhould be paved from time to time with like ſtone, and from thenceforth, at the charges of the Pariſhioners of every ſuch Church, &c. the Charges thereof to be indifferently rated by the Bayliffs and Aldermen of the ſaid Town, or the more part of them. And, that the ſaid Forfeitures ſhould be to the uſe of the Bayliffs and Commonalty of the ſaid town of Colcheſter, and their Succeſſors, to be employed and converted for the amendment of the Haven, River, and Channel there.

But the Penalty was ſo ſmall, that few could be conſtrained thereby to keep their Pavements in due repair [O]. And, during the ſuſpenſion of our Charter, there were no perſons legally authorized to enforce the Act. So that at length the Streets grew ſo ruinous, and in many places dangerous, that it was found neceſſary to obtain a new Act, in 1750, of which the principal Clauſe is as follows.

"Whereas the Streets and Lanes in the Town of Colcheſter, and the Liberties thereof, have, for ſeveral years laſt paſt, been much out of repair, and are now in ſo bad and ruinous a condition, that it is dangerous for perſons to paſs and repaſs through the ſaid Town, for the effectual Repairing and Amending thereof for the future, It is enacted, That all and every Landlord or Owner, Landlords or Owners, of any Dwelling-houſe, Shop, Ware-houſe, Coach-houſe, Building, Lands, Tenements, or Hereditaments, being contiguous to, adjoyning upon, fronting, or lying along, the Sides of ſuch Streets and Lanes, in this Town, as have been formerly paved, ſhould from time to time, and at all times, after the commencement of this Act, at his, her, and their own Coſts and Charges, ſufficiently repair, pave with Stone, and amend the Street or Lane, before and lying over-againſt his, her, or their Houſe or Houſes, Buildings, Walls, Fences, Grounds, or Lands, ſo far as his, her, or their Houſe or Houſes, Buildings, Walls, Fences, Grounds, or Lands, extend unto the Middle of the ſame Street or Lane."

And effectually to prevent all Decays in the Pavement, it is further enacted, That after a preſentment at a ſpecial Seſſions, and proper Notice, if the Pavement is not repaired within twenty days, the Surveyor or Surveyors within the reſpective Pariſhes, ſhall and may cauſe the ſaid Decays to be repaired and amended; and ſhall be reimburſed what Charges and Expences he or they ſhall be reaſonably at in ſo doing, by the Party or Parties who ſhould or ought to have done the ſame. To be levied by diſtreſs, in caſe of neglect or refuſal of Payment [P].

The Walls of this Town are ſtill ſtanding, but very much decayed in ſome places, particularly on the North-ſide. They are built of Stone, ſuch as is found on our Eaſtern Coaſt; with a mixture of Roman Bricks. The Cement is excellent, and incredibly ſtrong [Q]; but it ſuffers much in winter, eſpecially in great rains, attended with ſudden froſts and thaws. Where the Wall remains perfect, 'tis faced either with Roman Brick, or ſquare Stones about ſeven or eight inches in diameter. The Thickneſs of it is various, in moſt parts Seven or Eight foot thick [R]; but, about the Gates and Poſterns it is much thicker. The Circumference of the whole Wall was meaſured in Auguſt 1746, and found to be as follows.

[O] See this Act more at length in the Appendix, No. II.

[P] A yard-ſquare of Pavement cannot be done well, now, for leſs than Three ſhillings.

That is, in the whole, 9280 feet and a half, or 3093 yards one foot and a half, or 1856 paces; equal to 562 Rods, ſeven feet and a half; very little more than a Mile and three quarters.

Within that compaſs there are contained a hundred and eight acres, two roods, and five perches of ground.

The Form of the Walls is near a trapezium, the longeſt ſides whereof are the North and South: As may be ſeen in the Ichnography.

Colcheſter being unqueſtionably a Roman Town, 'tis very probable that the Walls were originally built by the Romans. However, of this we have no certain and poſitive Evidence: as we have, that they were built long before the Norman times. For, in the year 921, K. Edward the Elder repaired the Walls, which had been battered and damaged the ſame year, when he took this Town from the Danes (e).

This Town-wall being look'd upon as the chief Strength and Security of the place, great care was taken for its preſervation. Accordingly ſuch perſons as beat off, or meddled with, any of the Stones belonging thereto, or dug any pits or holes under or near it, were conſtantly indicted (f).

But more Care ſeems to have been taken to repair and keep it up, in the time of K. Richard II. than in any other reign. For, notice is taken in the Oath-book (5° Ric. II.) that the Bailiffs and Commonalty were daily repairing the Stone-walls of the Town, where they moſt wanted [S]. And that King, in the 6th, 12th and 17th of his reign, did, of his ſpecial grace and favour, exempt the Burgeſſes of Colcheſter, from the charge of ſending Repreſentatives to Parliament [T]; for three years, on the 6th and 17th; and for five years on the 12th; upon account of the great Expences they were at in repairing their Wall with lime and ſtone, for the ſafety of the Town againſt all Invaders (g). The ſame King, in the 16th of his reign, granted his royal Licenſe to Ralph Algar, Stephen Baron, and Henry Boſſe, impowering them to grant and aſſign Two Meſſuages, Four acres of land, and the Advowſon of the Hoſpital of the Holy Croſs, to the Bailiffs and Commonalty and their Succeſſors, as a help towards mending and repairing the Walls of the Town [U].

The like Exemption as that above-mentioned, of ſending Members to Parliament, and on the ſame account, was granted to the Free burgeſſes by K. Henry IV, in 1403, for ſix years; And by K. Henry V, in the year 1421 (h).

Thus, through the care of our Magiſtracy, theſe Walls continued in a tolerable condition; and, on account of them, the Town was look'd upon as a place of ſome Strength, before thoſe murdering Engines, Canons and Mortars, were brought to their full perfection. But then, as it could make but little reſiſtance, it became leſs conſiderable. The unhappy Siege, in 1648,

THE SOUTH EAST VIEW of COLCHESTER CASTLE.

To William Caslon, Esq.^{r} One of His Majesty's Justices, for the County of Middlesex.
This PLATE, is Humbly Inscribed.

was a great hurt to them, as it was alſo to the reſt of the Town (i). And at preſent, inſtead of being duly repaired by the Chamberlains, as uſual [W], they are chiefly kept up as a fence by thoſe that have Gardens or other grounds adjoyning thereto,

In theſe Walls there are four Gates,

1. Head-gate, called in Records Heved or Haved-Gate; and in Latin Portâ Capitalis. [Now taken down.] 2. North-Gate. 3. Eaſt-Gate. And 4. St. Botolph's-Gate, anciently called South-Gate. Eaſt-Gate fell down in 1651 [X], and in the place where it ſtood were afterwards erected two brick Pillars; and the like where Head-gate ſtood.

There are alſo Three Poſterns. 1. The Weſt Poſtern, in St. Mary's Church-yard [Y]: But when the Church was rebuilt, that Poſtern being low and inconvenient, part of the Wall was taken down in order to enlarge the Paſſage, and Stone-ſteps made, inſtead of the ſloping aſcent there. 2. Schere-gate; called in Records South-Scherde, or South-Poſtern. 3. Rye-gate, as it is vulgarly called; or rather Rhee or Rea-Gate, that is the River-Gate, as leading to the River. It was anciently named the North, or King's Scherde. 'Twas taken down in the year 1659 [Z].

I ſhall now proceed to give as exact and particular an account of the Castle as I can.

This ſtately pile ſtands on the North-ſide of the High-ſtreet, almoſt oppoſite to All-Saints Church. 'Tis a ſquare of about Two hundred and twenty four yards in circumference on the out-ſide, all projections and windings included. The Four ſides lie nearly to the four principal points of the compaſs. The Building conſiſts, of the outer Walls 12 feet thick in the lower ſtory, and 11 in the upper, flanked at the corners, with ſtrong and lofty Towers: On the inſide there run, North and South, two ſtrong parallel Walls, which ſerved for partitions and ſupports to the ſeveral Apartments; but the greateſt part of the Weſternmoſt wall is taken down. The Eaſternmoſt is built in the Roman, i. e. the herring-bone faſhion. The Lodgings were all at the upper part, and there ſtill remain two good chimneys on the Weſt, and the ſame number on the Eaſt-ſide, turned with a handſome Roman arch, as indeed all the Doors and Windows are. Each chimney has a double funnel.

The Gate of the Caſtle is on the South-ſide; and within, on the left hand, and in the South Weſt Tower, is the grand Stair-caſe, which is ſtill pretty entire: The top of it was ruinous, but hath been lately cloſed by a Dome built of rough materials, as like as may be to the reſt of the Caſtle. On the right hand as you go in, is a large Vault above ground, well arched; partly over which ſtands a ſpacious and handſom Room, built by Charles Gray Eſq; for a Library; and through a piazza along the ſide of it, is the paſſage into the Chapel; which being now repaired, and the ancient Stair-caſe covered, as hath been obſerved, the South ſide of the Caſtle is in ſome degree reſtored The Chapel ſtands in the South-Eaſt Tower, or rather Baſtion, being ſtrongly arched at the top. The length of it from Eaſt to Weſt is Forty ſeven feet; the width of it from North to South Forty feet, where wideſt; and the height proportionable. Below it is a good arched Vault, uſed for a Priſon, or Bridewell: which has been lett for a great many years paſt to this County for that purpoſe.

Within the ground, under the greateſt part of the Caſtle, there are fine and ſpacious Vaults. They were diſcovered not above fifty years ago, being full of ſand on which the arches were turned: The ſand was taken out at a conſiderable expence, by John Wheely, who was endeavouring to pull the Caſtle down: And, to carry off the ſand, he cut a cart-way through the foundation-wall near the North-eaſt corner, now cloſed up, where the Wall is thirty feet in thickneſs, but it did not anſwer expectation. The partition in theſe Vaults ſupporting the arches, is exactly in the form of a Croſs.

There was originally no other Gate to the Caſtle, but that one above-mentioned, (except a ſmall ſally-port on the North-ſide;) for the two Gates and Doors that now are on the North and Eaſt-ſides, have been cut, with great labour, out of the ſolid Walls.

The whole Building is a mixture of ſtone and Roman bricks; But moſt of the Roman bricks are in broken pieces, taken from the Ruins of more ancient Edifices formerly ſtanding in this town. The Corners of the Walls, and Sides of the Doors, Windows, &c. are of free ſtone.

It ſuffered extremely from the ill-judged Attempt of John Wheely, who purchaſed it of the late Robert Northfolk, Eſq; with intent and upon condition to demoliſh it entirely, and make money of the materials. For this purpoſe, many of the Roman Bricks were taken away and ſold, with moſt part of the free ſtone at the coins and in the inward arches of the building. A fine Well was deſtroyed, and the tops of the Towers and Walls forced down with ſcrews, or blown up with gun-powder, and thrown upon the heads of the arched Vaults below, in ſuch heavy weights, and with ſo great violence, as to break

[X] For I find, that Febr. 165$\frac{1}{2}$, It was ordered, That the Chamberlain ſhould be allowed out of the Town-revenues Six pounds, for the carrying awaie of the Rubbiſh of the Eaſt-Gate that was fallen down, and to make the Way paſſable for Carts and Horſes that ſhould have occaſion to paſs that way: And the Chamberlain to have ſuch ſtones, lead, and iron, as belonged to that Gate, for his own uſe. But it ſeems to have been repaired again. For 10 January 1675, the following order was made. "By reaſon Eaſt-" Gate is out of repair, and ſoe dangerous that it is believed " it will ſuddenly fall, whereby great miſchiefe may be " done, ordered, That Mr. Mayor, and three of the Aldermen, " together with the Chamberlain, taking with them ſuch " workmen as to them ſhall ſeeme convenient, ſhall view " and ſurvey the ſaid Gate and pull down ſoe much thereof " as they ſhall thinke in danger of falling, and the Rubbiſh " to be diſpoſed of as they ſhall think fitt." (Book of Aſſemblies.)

[Y] It is ſometimes called the Poſtern near Colkynges caſtell. Rot. Cur. 15 Hen. VI. rot. 2. and Rot. Cur. 35 Hen. VIII. rot. 12.

[Z] It was ſold by the Town, in the beginning of the year 1659, and John Woodroffe had 40 ſhillings allowed him out of the ſale of it, towards the Charges he was at about the pitching of the Red-Row. (Book of Aſſemblies)——Undoubtedly, this Poſtern, as well as Eaſt-Gate, were much battered and damaged during the Siege.

one of the fineſt of them. But, after great devaſtations, the remaining part of the Walls being ſo ſtrongly cemented, that the profit did not anſwer the charge of further demolition, he was forced to deſiſt. 'Tis now carefully preſerved by the preſent worthy owner Charles Gray Eſq;

The Caſtle-yard, Bailey, or Baylywick, was formerly encompaſſed on the South and Weſt-ſides by a ſtrong Wall, in which were two Gates. That on the South was the chief. This Wall was taken down by Robert Northfolk, Eſq; who erected in the room of it a range of Houſes, now ſtanding in the High-ſtreet. The Weſt-wall reached as far as the Eaſt-ſide of St. Helen's-lane (k). On the North and Eaſt-ſides, the Caſtle was ſecured by a deep Ditch, and ſtrong Rampart of earth, which are now taken into the gardens of Charles Gray Eſq; This Rampart is thrown upon a Wall, that formerly encompaſs'd either the Caſtle, or the Palace of Coel on the ſite whereof the Caſtle is built; the buttreſſes and other parts of which wall have been lately diſcovered.

The Tithes wherewith the Chapel in the Caſtle was originally endowed, belonged afterwards to St. John's Abbey; for Eudo Dapifer founder of that Monaſtery granted unto it, among other things, omnes proventus Capelle in Caſtello de Coleceſtria, (l) i. e. "all the profits of "the Chapel in the caſtle of Colcheſter:" Which was confirm'd afterwards by K. Richard I. under the title of Capellam Caſtelli Colceſtre, cum decimis & obventionibus (*). i. e. "the Chapel "of the Caſtle of Colcheſter, with the Tithes "and obventions." From what lands theſe Tithes accrued, appears from this authentic Liſt of them (m).

In conſideration of theſe Tithes, the Abbot of St. John's was obliged to find a Chaplain, to officiate three days in every week, either in St. Helen's Chapel, or in the Chapel within the Caſtle; as appears by the Exemplification of a Judgment paſſed in the Exchequer, in the year 1290, between the King and the Bayliffs of Colcheſter of the one part, and the Abbot of St. John's of the other part. And the Abbot was then fined twelve marks, for ſix years neglect of that ſervice [A] After the diſſolution of the Monaſteries, theſe Tithes were leaſed by K. Henry VIII. 29 Novemb. 1542, to Edward Cole for 21 years; and afterwards the reverſion of them granted, among others, by Q. Elizabeth, in the 2d year of her reign to Sir Francis Jobſon, Kt. (n); whoſe ſon Edward dyed ſeized thereof in 1590. After ſome intermediate poſſeſſors, they came into the hands of Sir James Northfolk; of his ſon—and ſon-in-law—Robert Northfolk, and Hope Gifford, Eſquires, and of the Rev. Fr. Powell; now of Charles Gray Eſq;

This Caſtle is ſaid by Norden (o) to have been built by Edward the Elder. He repaired indeed the Town-walls (p), as hath been obſerv'd above. And if there was any remains of Coel's palace, he might perhaps beſtow ſome pains in repairing of that too, and making it a kind of fortification. But the Caſtle in the manner it now ſtands, was undoubtedly built after the Norman Conqueſt, when Fortreſſes were erected in moſt of the conſiderable Towns in England, in order to awe the Inhabitants and keep them in ſubjection (q). Poſſibly too it was founded by Eudo, as 'tis aſſerted in the Monaſticon (r), and in fundo palatii Coelis quondam Regis, according to our Colcheſter Chronicle, anno 1076. The original Proprietor of it, was the King; and it continued in the Crown till the year (s), when the Empreſs Maud granted it to Alberic de Vere, anceſtor of the noble Family of the De Veres Earls of Oxford; but, in all probability, tho' ſhe gave him the title, it was not in her power to give him poſſeſſion.

It therefore remained, as far as we can learn, in the Crown [B] till the year 1214, when K. John granted it, with the Hundred of Tendring, and the Borough, to Stephen Harengood during pleaſure (t).

K. Henry III. in the year 1256, granted the Caſtle of Colcheſter, with its appertenances, and the Hundred and Demeſnes, worth 28 l.

And that the ſaid Guido ſhould keep the Caſtle in the ſame ſtate it was then in and after his deceaſe the Caſtle and appertenances ſhould revert to the Crown. The Patent is dated June 12. at Weſtminſter (u). But Guido having, in 1258, grievouſly offended the King and the Barons, was baniſhed, and deprived of all his goods (w).

On the 18th of December, 1273, K. Edw. I. granted this Caſtle, with the Hundred of Tendring, to John de Burgh for life (x). But he did not enjoy it ſo long; For

In 1275, it was granted to Richard de Holebrook (y). His enjoyment of it was very ſhort; ſince we find it given, 25 December the ſame year, to Laurence de Scaccario, Sheriff of Eſſex, for the County-gaol; and the demeſnes belonging thereto were ordered to be plough'd and ſown, by the ſaid Richard, for the King's uſe (z).

The next poſſeſſor of it was Robert de Benhall, Kt. to whom it was given by K. Edw. III. for life, together with 27 acres of meadow, 180 acres of arable, and two parts of a water-mill, in Colcheſter; and the hundred of Tendring, with thirty ſhillings rent, in Eſſex (a).

In 1404, Octob. 22. K. Henry IV. granted this caſtle, with the Fee-farm of the town of Colcheſter, and the Hundred of Tendring, to his ſon Henry Duke of Lancaſter, and the heirs male of his body for ever; which grant was confirm'd by the Parliament holden at Coventry Octob. 21 (b).

K. Henry VI, in the 25th year of his reign, gave this caſtle and lordſhip of Colcheſter with the Hundred of Tendring, and 25 l. a year out of the fee-farm of the Town, to his Queen Margaret for her life (c).

Sir John Howard, Kt. is the next to whom it was granted, by K. Edward IV. 6 July 1461, for the term of his life; together with a mill of two parts, and the Hundred of Tendring (d).

Thomas Kendale, 20 Septemb. 1485, obtained from K. Henry VII. the conſtableſhip and cuſtody of this caſtle; and of the King's demeſnes in Colcheſter, viz. 180 acres of arable, 27 acres of meadow, 30 ſhillings rent, the Hundred of Tendring, and two parts of a water-mill for his life (e): but, in the 11th of the ſame king, he ſurrendred his Patent into Chancery, to be cancelled; Upon which the conſtableſhip and cuſtody of the Caſtle aforeſaid, &c. were granted 5 Novemb. 1496, to John de Vere Earl of Oxford (f). This grant was ratified and confirmed by K. Henry VIII. 16 May 1509.

The next poſſeſſors of it were, Sir Thomas, afterwards, Lord Darcy, to whom the cuſtody of it was granted for life, 4 June 1541.

Qu. Mary granted it, 25 Novemb. 1553, to her beloved Servant Antony Kempe Eſq; for life.

Without taking notice of this grant, Qu. Elizabeth granted it, 14 December 1558, to Henry Mackwilliam Eſq; for the term of his life.

On the 14th of December 1599, Sir John Stanhope obtained a grant of the cuſtody of this Caſtle, with 180 acres of land, arable and paſture, 27 acres of meadow, the Hundred of Tendring, two parts of a Water-mill, and the rent of thirty ſhillings per ann. after the death of Henry Mackwilliam, whoſe eldeſt daughter Margaret he had married; and during the life of Mary Lady Cheek, relict of Sir John Cheek, and then wife of the ſaid Henry (g). But in 1603, he ſurrendred his Letters Patent, whereupon the premiſſes were granted to him, for his own and his ſon's life, in as full and ample a manner as they had been enjoy'd by Thomas Lord Darcy, John Earl of Oxford, and Henry Mackwilliam (h). He and his ſon ſurrendred them again in 1607, whereupon K. James I. made them a new Grant, 7 April 1607, of the cuſtody of the Caſtle, &c. for their two lives.

In the year 1629, Aug. 5. James Hay Earl of Carliſle obtained of K. Charles I. the reverſion, to him and his heirs for ever, of the caſtle of Colcheſter, &c. after the death of Charles Lord Stanhope, to be held of the Maner of Eaſt-Greenwich in common ſocage. On the 11th of May 1633, the Earl of Carliſle mortgaged the premiſſes for 1000 l. to Archibald Hay Eſq; and releaſed the ſame to him 12 April 1636. Archibald becoming a priſoner in the King's Bench, and making his eſcape from thence, was forced to compound for that fault by yielding and conveying this Caſtle &c. to Sir John Lenthall Kt. Marſhal of the King's Bench. The 15th of April 1656, Lenthall conveyed them to James Northfolk Eſq; Serjeant at Arms to the Houſe of Commons. But tho' an ejectment was brought againſt the Lord Stanhope, in the name of the Crown, under pretence of his being concerned in ſome fraudulent dealings, Northfolk could not get quiet poſſeſſion. So that he was forced to buy the Caſtle, with the demeſnes of it, and the Hundred of Tendring, of Charles Lord Stanhope, and Symon Potter of Nocton in Lincolnſhire, Clerk, 17 Janu. 1661, for the ſum of 2575 l. and a Fine was paſſed before the Barons of the Exchequer (k) [C]. great a ſufferer on account of K. Charles II, that. in 1656, he was forced to mortgage his Eſtate at Plumſted. (Ibid) But he had ſufficiently complied with the uſurping Powers, having been made one of the Serjeants at Arms to the Houſe of Commons, 20 April 1646. Whitelocke's Mem. p. 201. 261. From ſeveral Letters and other Papers of his that have come to my hands, he appears to have been a very incroaching and unjuſt man.

[D] That is, only the Caſtle, with the Soil on which it ſtands, containing in meaſure Half an acre, twelve rods, and one quarter of a Rod. He gave 110*l.* for it. But the Lands that had been granted with the Caſtle, deſcended to Martha ſiſter and heir of Robert Northſolk above-mentioned, the wife of Hope Gifford, Eſq;

About the time John Wheely purchaſed the Caſtle, there was a part of the ground on the South-ſide of it, about three quarters of an acre, made into a Bowling-green; and fenced off from the other part of the Caſtle-Bailey with a high fence of deal boards.

[E] Richard le Wel was Conſtable of this Caſtle, in the reign of K. Richard I. or K. John. But in what year, I am not able to determine. (Rot. antiq. penes me.)

[F] This particular we learn from the induſtrious John Stow, whoſe account be pleaſed to take at length. " In a " certain aſſiege at Bridgenorth, againſt Hugh de Mortemere, " [A° 1165.] when the King [Henry II.] was ſhot at by one " of the enemies, a valiant man Hubert de Saint Clare, Con- " ſtable of Colcheſter, did thruſt himſelf betwixt the King " and the danger of the ſtroke, and ſo received death for " him; whoſe onely daughter the King taking into his " cuſtody, hee gave her in marriage to William de Langvale, " with her father's inheritance, who begat on her a ſonne, " bearing the name and ſurname of his grandfather." (Annales, Edit. 1631. p. 152.)

[G] In a paper, in my poſſeſſion, are the following Arguments, to prove that the Caſtle does not belong to Colcheſter: It cannot be found by any Records, that any Caſtle did or does belong to any Corporation; particularly the Tower of London is exempted from the City juriſdiction.—Alſo the Caſtle of Norwich ſtands in the middle of the City, yet is wholly exempted from it; and what ground is about it, belongs to a pariſh ſome miles diſtant.—The ſame of Worceſter caſtle; which, as far as the bounds thereof go, is out of the Corporation.

In K. Charles the Firſt's time, when Tobacco was monopolized, ſo that none might be ſold in any Corporation, but by a Patent; one Edw. Legg built a Shop within the Liberty of the Caſtle, and could not be hindred. A° 1647. Jonas Whale, a Baker and a Foreigner, ſet up in that Liberty; and Nath. Gilſon and John Kirby, bakers, did what they could to prevent his trading there: but it being out of the Town-liberty, they could not hinder him.—The ſame caſe happened by Tho. Bacon, about the year 1670. John Hicham, about 1654, being a Servant in the Caſtle, and dying there, his child, by an order from Chelmsford, was maintained by Doniland pariſh.

By ſearching the Pariſh Books, and Rates, it doth not appear that either the Caſtle, or the Bailey, were taken in any of the Pariſhes. Nor were the Tenants, or Occupiers, taken in as Pariſhioners any where; except one Peter Alvis, about the year 1678. But this was reckoned unuſual and irregular.

N. B. Hope Gifford, Eſq; had a notion, that the Caſtle, or ſome of its demeſnes, were in Eaſt Doniland: For, in longing thereto, or of which the Chapel there received Tithes, as ſome have falſely imagined; for they lie in ſeveral pariſhes, and ought to be rated in them: All pretenſions to the contrary being entirely groundleſs.

The town of Colcheſter hath heretofore been feudatory to the Caſtle, by Rents and many other Duties and Services; but a diſcharge and exemption was purchaſed from Q. Elizabeth, and confirmed by Parliament in the beginning of her reign (q).

The Donation of the office of Steward of the Hundred of Tendring in Eſſex, and the nomination of the Bailiff of that Hundred, hath appertain'd to the proprietor of this Caſtle. And within, and for that Hundred, there is, and hath been from time immemorial, a Court holden always from three weeks to three weeks, by the Steward. View of Frank Pledge hath alſo been held by preſcription, within twelve days next after the Nativity of Chriſt, every year, by the Steward of the Hundred aforeſaid, or his Deputy, in the pariſhes of Ardleigh, Lawford, Miſtley, Little Bromley, Tendring, Beaumont, and Alleſford. The waſte grounds, and Woods thereupon growing, within the precinct of the view of Frank Pledge aforeſaid, belong to the owners of the ſaid Caſtle of Colcheſter; and thoſe that fell theſe woods, or incroach upon the waſtes, have been puniſhed at that Court. The Steward hath likewiſe kept the Sheriff's Torne twice in every year, according to the form of the Statute, at Tendring; to which Sheriff's Torne the following Towns, or Pariſhes, within the ſaid Hundred and County, do owe ſuit and ſervice, viz. Ardley, Lawford, Little Bromley, Elmſtead, Alleſford, Bentley magna, Fratinge, Tendringe, Miſtley, Beaumont, Great and Little Okeley, Great Holland, Wrabnes, Ramſey, Weeks, and Bradfield (r).

CHAP. II.

§ 1. Name of Colcheſter, whence derived.

WHAT NAME was given to this Town by the ancient Britans, is not perfectly known; except it was Camudolhan (s), or Camalaunuïdun (t), [H] from whence was afterwards formed the word Camulodunum, or Camalodunum. The Romans, after having ſettled themſelves therein, gave it the name of Colonia, and Colonia-Camulodunum (u) as I ſhall endeavour to prove under Section 3. From this word Colonia, the Britans formed Colon, to which prefixing the word Caer, or Kair, that, in their own language, ſignifies a Town or City, they called it Cair-Colun (w), Kair-Collon (x), Kaer-Coluin (y), and Caer-golden (z).

To the word Colon above-mentioned the Saxons adding Ceaꞅꞇeꞃ, formed from the Latin word Caſtrum, or Caſtra, and given by them to moſt places where the Romans had fixed their Camps or Stations [I], they formed the name Colneceaꞅꞇeꞃ (a), from whence is derived the preſent appellation of Colcheſter. And ſo from Colonia, both this Town, and the river Colne running by it, took their names. But others affirm (b), that it took its name from Coel, Captain or Governor of the ſame in the time of the Emperor Aurelian; who repaired and beautified it, and gave it the name of Kayr-coel, as is aſſerted in the moſt ancient Record, which at preſent remains in this place.

§ 2. There is great reaſon to believe, that here was a Town even in the earlieſt times; if we conſider the Healthfulneſs and pleaſant Situation of the Place, and its Conveniency for all the Uſes and Pleaſures of Life; and if we conſider alſo, that the Country was all covered with woods. For, the firſt inhabitants of this iſland were wont generally to fix their abode on dry and hilly grounds; not like the Monks afterwards, in low bottoms for the advantage of fiſh, which was their chief nouriſhment.

The Country's being covered with woods, is likewiſe no improbable Argument of a Town's being here: Either on account of Strength, or of Religion. For, according to J. Cæſar, the ſtrong Towns or fortified Places, of the Britans were only thick Woods, fenced with a ditch and a rampart; and rendered thereby difficult of acceſs either to horſe or foot [K]. The word uſed by that author [L] ſignifies a ſtrong or fortified Town as well as a Town in general; and in the former ſenſe he uſes it here, as is plain by the deſcription he gives of ſuch a place [M].

1693, when he granted to Jeremy Spurgeon a Leaſe, of a meſſuage or tenement adjoining to the dwelling houſe of Iſrael Ram, called or known by the name or ſigne of the Caſtle-inn; He thus deſcribes it,—" ſcituate and being in " Colcheſter aforeſaid, in the pariſh of All-Saints, or Eaſt " Doniland." But he was wrong.

[H] Cam-a-laün-uïdun; which word, in the Britiſh language, ſignifies a Temple, or Town on a Hill, at the winding of a River; as it really is here. And the learned Mr. W. Baxter thence infers, that the ancient name of the River was Alaun. Mr. Camden ſays (Britannia, in Eſſex) " He durſt not venture to affirm, that this place was " ſo called from the God Camulus; and yet, that Mars was " worſhip'd under this name appears (ſaith he) from an old " Stone at Rome in the Houſe of the Colloti, and from " Altars that have been found with this Inſcription, Camulo " Deo Sancto et Fortiſſimo." But, as this is not confirm'd by the concurrent Teſtimony of any ancient Author, there is much reaſon to call it in queſtion. And it is much more probable, that thoſe Inſcriptions were made in honour of Claudius, who had a Temple, and was worſhipped as a God, at Camulodunum. See below, Ch. iii. § 2. and N. Salmon's Hiſt. of Eſſex, p. 263. Vide etiam Lipſii Notas in Taciti Ann. l. xii. et Urſini Notas. ibid.

[I] It is to be obſerved, that all places ending in Cheſter, faſhioned in the Saxon times, ariſe from the ruines of the old Roman Caſtra. W. Burton's Comment, on Antonine's Itinerar, p. 41. Caſtrum was a name uſed by the Romans to ſignifie or expreſſe any caſtle or fortreſſe; which the Saxons, upon their admiſſion into this iſland, finding impoſed upon all places of ſtrength and importance, adopted it into their dialect, and from the word Caſtrum extracted the word Ceaſter. T. Philipott's Villare Cantianum, p. 384.

[K] Oppidum autem Britanni vocant, quum ſilvas impeditas vallo atque foſſa munierunt, quo, incurſionis hoſtium vitandæ cauſſa, convenire conſueverunt. De bello Gallico, lib. v. c. 21.

[L] Oppidum; vide Lexicograph. According to Varro and Feſtus, it is deriv'd from Opis, that is the mutual Help men, gathered into Towns, gave to one another, and the Works made for their ſecurity and defence.

Next, if we reflect on the Religion of the ancient Britans, the Woodineſs of this place was quite ſuited and agreeable thereto. It is well known, that Woods, eſpecially of Oaks, were the Habitations of the Druids, and their places of religious worſhip. Here all their Myſteries were tranſacted, and their Sacrifices offered. Here their much admired and celebrated Miſſeltoe grew, which they gathered with ſo much ſolemnity and ceremony [N]. And, as they were the Inſtructors of Youth, the Houſes for their ſchools were ſituated in the midſt of pleaſant Groves; tho' they had withal little arch'd, round, ſtone-buildings, capable only of holding one Perſon, where the retir'd and contemplative Druid ſat, when his Oak could not ſhelter him from the Weather (c). The very name of Druid is deriv'd from the Celtic word Deru, i. e. the Oak, which they ſo much venerated, and under which they dwelt (d).

Here are indeed no remains of Druidical Temples or Altars, as there are in other Countries [O], but that is to be imputed to the many Revolutions and Changes which this place and neighbourhood have undergone; and the thorough Cultivation of it. For ſuch Monuments are chiefly ſtanding now in the remoteſt and leſs cultivated places. Thoſe that were here, have been demoliſh'd to make room for other Edifices, or even for the ſake of the Stones to be employed in building.

It can be no Objection to what I have here ſaid, That the Country is now but thinly wooded. For it muſt be conſidered what great Alterations muſt have happened in the ſurface of the Earth in a courſe of above 2000 years. Even within the two hundred years laſt paſt, King's Wood made a conſiderable appearance on the North-ſide of this Town, but is entirely gone: And ſmaller parcels are cleared round it almoſt every year. On the Weſt ſide of the ſame, the Royal Foreſt reached as far as Lexden; but in the fifth of K. John, the whole North part of it, lying between Suffolk and the road that leads from Colcheſter to Biſhop's-Stortford, was diſafforeſted, as appears by the Record below [P]. Notwithſtanding which, this County is ſtill fuller of Wood than many others.

[M] In all probability, the ſtrong Holds or defenſible Places of the ancient Inhabitants of this Iſland, were then no other than ſuch as he there deſcribes, [as they have been alſo in many other Countries,] namely, like "Caſſibelines "forreſt campe, or faſtneſſe, miſnamed a towne," to uſe the ingenious Mr. Edm. Bolton's words, (Nero Cæſar, p. 78.) But it is wrong to infer from thence, that the Britans had no other but ſuch ſorts of Towns and Habitations in woods, and lived only a little degree better than wild beaſts. For it appears from J. Cæſar himſelf, That when he invaded this Eaſtern part of the Iſland, there was in it an infinite multitude of people, and houſes very thick, built like thoſe of the Gauls. Hominum eſt infinita multitudo, creberrimaque ædificia fere Gallicis conſimilia: pecoris magnus numerus. De bello Gall. l. v. c. 12. Whatever therefore is ſaid of the mean and ſcattered cottages of the Britans, (Diodor. Sicul. l. iv. & Strabonis Geog. l. iv.) might in ſome meaſure be true of the more inland, remote, and uncultivated Places; but the country nearer the ſea, which maintain'd a commerce with Gaul, had better Towns, and was more polite. Their Houſes however were then but of timber; for it was the Romans that taught them the art of building with brick and ſtone. Tacit. Vit. Agricol.

[O] By the Druidical Temples and Altars, I mean thoſe ſtupendous and maſſy ſtones, either ſtanding ſingle, or in circles, or in rows, with others of an enormous bulk, ſet up horizontally, or on two or more of them: Such as are thoſe at Stoneheng, and Abury, in Wiltſhire; Biſcauwoon, in Cornwall; Nevern, Kereg drudion, Lhanhammulch, Angleſey, &c. in Wales; in the Weſtern Iſles, and other parts of Scotland; in Ireland; in the iſle of Jerſey; and many other places; and are called Carns, Kiſtieu-vaen, Cromlechu, &c. The true uſe of them was firſt diſcovered by John Aubrey, Eſq; and the curious Reader may ſatisfy himſelf fully on that point, by peruſing the Right Reverend the Lord Biſhop of London's laſt edition of Camden's Britannia, the Rev. H. Rowland's Mona antiqua reſtaurata, J. Toland's Poſthumous Works, Vol. I. M. Martin's Deſcription of the Weſtern Iſlands of Scotland, the Rev. Ph. Falle's Account of Jerſey; and eſpecially the learned Dr. W. Stukeley's moſt curious Works on that Subject.—It is really ſurprizing, how ſtones of that enormous bulk could be dragged up in the places where they are ſeen; generally upon a natural or artificial hill, and raiſed on two or more ſupporters, about five feet above the ground. In the year 1731, I meaſured one of them in the iſle of Jerſey, that was 15 foot long, $10\frac{1}{2}$ broad, $3\frac{1}{2}$ thick. And another, which was 11 foot $\frac{1}{2}$ long, 10 foot broad, 2 foot thick at the Eaſt and North ſides, about 1 foot and a half thick on the Weſt ſide. There are many of thoſe Monuments of the Religion of our Anceſtors, ſtill ſtanding in that Iſland.

ther this Town was the ancient Camulodunum? And, not to throw confuſedly what is to be ſaid upon that Subject, but to reduce it into ſome order, I ſhall place it in the following method.

I. I ſhall examine and compare all that is ſaid concerning Camulodunum in any of the ancient authentic Writers.

II. Conſider more particularly the Itinerary which goes under the name of Antoninus.

III. Bring together the Opinions of our moſt learned Antiquaries [Q].

I begin with examining and comparing all that is ſaid concerning Camulodunum, in any of the ancient authentic Writers.

The firſt time we find it mentioned in Hiſtory, is, when it was conquered by the Emperor Claudius, A°. U. C. 796. A°. Chr. 44. That Emperor had ſent before his Lieutenant A. Plautius, to reduce Britain; with inſtructions, That if he found himſelf too weak, or too hard preſſed, he ſhould ſend him notice of it. Plautius doing ſo, the Emperor reſolves to come over in perſon. Accordingly he embarks at Oſtia, with a large army of horſe, foot, and elephants (e): but being frighted, and his tranſports probably damaged, with a great tempeſt, he diſembark'd at Marſeilles, and marched from thence by land croſs Gaul to Geſſoriacum (f). There ſhipping again his forces, he landed in Britain, without doubt in Kent; and went and joined Plautius and Veſpaſian near the Thames. Having taken upon himſelf the command of the whole army, he paſſed the River; where the Britans boldly encountred him, and began the fight, which for a long time they bravely maintained, till great numbers of them were ſlain. At length being over-powered they fled into the woods, and ſome were ſubdued by force, and others yielded upon terms. Claudius purſuing his victory, took Camulodunum, the royal ſeat of the late King Cunobeline, where he placed a Colony of Veterans [R], and reduced this part of the Iſle into the form of a Province. But he behaved with ſo much lenity towards the Britans, that he only diſarmed the moſt refractory, and confiſcated their Goods; which confiſcation he alſo remitted to ſuch as made their ſubmiſſion. And This ſo endeared him to them, that they erected a Temple and an Altar to him at Camulodunum, and honour'd him as a God (h).

One very material circumſtance there is in this relation, which ſeems an undeniable and convincing proof of this Town's being Camulodunum: And that is, Camulodunum's being expreſly ſaid to be the royal ſeat, or reſidence of King Cunobeline [S]. Now, more of his Coins have been, and are daily found at Colcheſter, than in any other part of the kingdom, both in gold, ſilver, and braſs. I have been myſelf ſo happy, in the ſhort time I have lived here, to get one of gold, and ſeveral of copper, very curious and valuable. Charles Gray, Eſq; has alſo two very valuable ones. The late Rev. Mr. Robert Turner had likewiſe two very fine ones. And ſcarce a Collection hath been made in this town, without ſome of them. They generally have on one ſide CAMV, and on the other CVNOB. One of mine, a very curious and ſcarce one, has on one ſide Cunobeline's head, CVNOB . . . REX: On the reverſe a Horſe feeding, and below it . . MV. Which ſufficiently indicates Camulodunum to have been the royal ſeat or capital of that Prince. And by their being found here in greater quantities than any where elſe in England, it is at leaſt extremely probable, if not demonſtratively certain, that this very ſpot was That Ancient Camulodunum.

At the ſame time, it appears from them, that the right name of the place is Camu-and not Cama-lodunum.

The next time we find it mentioned, is by the excellent Hiſtorian C. Tacitus (h), who relates, That the colony at Camulodunum, reinforced with a ſtrong body of veterans, was quartered in the new conqueſts, on purpoſe to hinder the Siſures from making incurſions. But they ſoon returned, it ſeems, to Camulodunum, or elſe others were planted in their room. Which way ſoever it were, they behaved with intolerable Inſolence towards the natives; turning them out of their houſes, diſpoſſeſſing them of their fields, and calling them captives and ſlaves. Moreover, the Prieſts that ſerved in the Temple erected here in honour of Claudius, did, under pretence of Religion, ſwallow their whole fortunes. And the Temple itſelf was looked upon with a very evil eye, as a Fortreſs built to keep them in everlaſting bondage.

Theſe were ſome of the motives which induced the old Inhabitants to join the brave virago Boadicea; when, provoked by the brutiſh and unnatural uſage of the Romans, ſhe made a vigorous effort to ſhake off their galling yoke. The particulars will be related under Chap. III. § 2. of this book. They needed no perſuaſions to be zealous in her intereſt, ſpurr'd on as they were by their moſt violent hatred againſt the veterans [T]. And they thought it no difficult matter to cut off the Colony, as it was defended by no walls or fortifications: which the Roman officers had very imprudently neglected, conſulting the pleaſant ſituation rather than the Strength of the place. Nay, even at the approach of danger, they did not ſo much as take the precaution to encompaſs the town with a Rampart and a Ditch; nor to turn out the old people, and the women. Thus remaining as careleſs and unconcern'd as in proſound peace, they were ſuddenly

[Q] The different Opinions about the Situation of Colonia-Camulodunum, are as follows. —— Rob. Talbott, Humphrey Lhuyd, J. Leland, Bp. Stillingfleet, and W. Baxter, place it at Colcheſter.——— W. Camden, Edm. Bolton, W. Burton, &c. place it at Maldon.—— Dr. Tho. Gale, at Walden.—— N. ſuddenly ſurrounded by the Britans: Which, like an over-flowing torrent ſwept all before them, and put whatever ſtood in their way to fire and ſword. The ſtrength of the Garriſon conſiſted only of a moderate number of ſoldiers, which threw themſelves into the Temple, but were taken in that place, and made priſoners after a two days ſiege. The procurator Catus Decianus ſent them a ſmall reinforcement of two hundred men very ill-armed. And the Ninth Legion coming to their relief, was routed, and all the infantry of it killed; the horſe eſcaping to the camp: which Camp is juſtly ſuppoſed to have been the ſame as is ſtill to be ſeen on Lexden-Heath.

From this whole account of Tacitus the following Obſervations naturally will ariſe.

1. The Amoenity and pleaſant ſituation of the place, particularly taken notice of by that noble Hiſtorian, do plainly point at this moſt agreeable ſpot of ground. Healthfulneſs and good air, always regarded by the wiſe and elegant Romans, doth not by any means agree with Maldon, ſeated in one of the moſt unhealthy corners of the kingdom; but agrees very well with Colcheſter. For, to apply what the learned Dr. T. Gale improperly celebrates (i) that leſs conſiderable place Walden for [U]; “ The ſituation of this town [Colcheſter] is ſo wholſome and pleaſant, that nothing can be more ſo. The Fields every where ſmile with the plenteous Harveſt, which is repreſented by a Wheat-ear upon a Coin of Cunobeline, who had his palace at this place. There is about it an agreeable variety of hills, groves, and champain-plains, well adapted for the Pleaſures of Riding, which is pretty clearly indicated by the Horſe on the coins of Cunobeline.”

2. This agreeable Situation the Romans improved into a charming retirement, conſulting their pleaſure more than advantage: Which is a concurrent proof that it muſt have been rather here than at Maldon. Be pleaſed to take the following account of it from an ingenious author. “ Camalodunum, the ſtanding court or palace roiall of their Kings, while Cunobeline lived, was now become the center of pleaſant retirements for the Romans, not the rendevous of their power.——The outward ſtate of the towne ſeemed very flouriſhing. For, beſides the old palace, and other buildings of the Britanns (for the Romans, ſaith Sigonius, did not uſe to deſtroy the buildings they found) it had a ſenate houſe for conſultations, a theater for playes, that goodlie temple of Claudius, and as well they, as the reſt undoubtedlie anſwerable in ſome meaſure to the Roman magnificence.—The colonie lay open on all ſides, the better to enjoy free walkes and aër about—Yet ſafetie was not altogether neglected, though pleaſure was rather ſought than ſtrength. It had no trench, no paliſado, nor other defence about itſelfe, but it had the majeſtie of the Roman name (a reputed wall of braſſe) the awe of a freſh conqueſt, and ſundrie ſtrengths in the marches, or pale of the province, where the Roman garriſons watcht, and warded in caſtles, ſconces, and other preſidiarie places (k).”

3. It is more natural to ſuppoſe, that the Romans would fix themſelves, at their firſt Coming over, in a place not far from the Sea, whence they might have an eaſy retreat to the Continent; than go and entangle themſelves ſo far as Walden [where Dr. T. Gale places Camulodunum] among a new People, on whoſe laſting Friendſhip they had no ſufficient reaſon to depend; as the event ſufficiently ſhewed.

4. This ſtood much more in the way between the Iceni [Suffolk and Norfolk] and that great trading place London, than a town at Maldon would have done: And therefore the Britans made their firſt irruption through it, and laid it even with the ground, that they might not leave an enemy at their backs. Whereas going to that place now called Maldon, would have been fetching too great a compaſs on the left; and would have entangled them among the meadows and moraſſes, that are on the north of that place; And over which it may be ſuppoſed there was then no Cauſey erected.

Finally, That this was a very conſiderable Roman Town, and that here was fixed their celebrated Colonia, we have all the intrinſic evidence that can be deſired. For, to apply again Dr. T. Gale's words, “ It is ſeated near the military Stone way, from whence the neighbouring pariſh of Stanway took its name”. There are every where hereabouts many and remarkable Monuments of the Romans [W]: Sepulchres, and Tombs [X]: Urns and the like Veſſels filled with burnt bones, dug in the adjacent fields: innumerable Coins [Y]: Garriſons and Camps, (Caſtra and Caſtella) at Lexden particularly; and Forts, ſuch as Tacitus mentions to have been placed about Colonia-Camulodunum [Z]: though it was itſelf no walled or ſtrongly fortified Town. To which add, That at Colcheſter there are to this day ſuch immenſe quantities of Roman Bricks to be ſeen, and other footſteps of that people; as evidently ſhew, that very great Numbers of Roman edifices were formerly ſtanding here. The Churches, the Town walls, and the Caſtle, are half-built with Roman materials, and in ſe-veral parts of them the Roman workmanſhip is alſo copied. Roman Pavements are ſtill found almoſt all over the town; and a moſt magnificent one is at Merſea, which was very probably the Roman landing-place, it being upon a bold open ſhore, and proper for the purpoſe; whereas they could not get to the place now called Maldon, but by way of a creek up the Country, quite dangerous to Invaders.

Now, if Colcheſter, which hath ſtill all the aforeſaid marks of ruined Grandeur, be not the ancient Camulodunum; What was then the Roman name of this Station? It was long inhabited by thoſe Conquerors of Britain, as appears by the reaſons juſt now alledged. And is it probable that a Place ſo grand, ſo near London, and ſo exactly anſwering the deſcription given by Tacitus, ſhould have no name at all; and that Maldon, which has no remains, nor appearances of ſuch a Colony, ſhould be the Camulodunum; [much leſs Walden?] For as Dr. T. Gale rightly obſerves, Let thoſe perſons who are for fixing this Colony at Maldon, by reaſon of ſome little reſemblance in the Sound, ſhew the leaſt mark or footſtep of the Roman elegance in that place [A].

The finding of one gold Coin of Nero and Agrippina there, is far from being a concluſive argument: For I was once poſſeſſed of the like in ſilver, found in this Town. And a beautiful one of Tiberius was found ſome years ago at Earls-Colne, late in the poſſeſſion of the Rev. Mr. Rob. Turner, and now of the Rev. Mr. Myers. And yet no one will thence immediately conclude, That Earls-Colne was a very conſiderable Roman Station, though it is far preferable to Maldon for ſituation.

After all, there is not ſo great a Neceſſity of fetching the name of Maldon from Cama-or Camu-lodunum, as Mr. Camden and others have imagined; upon a kind of preſumption that it could not ſo well admit of any other derivation. For it is plainly a Saxon name, formed from the two words Mael a croſs, or boundary, and dun a hill. As if you ſhould ſay Croſs-Hill [B]: The occaſion of which name, as of many others, is at preſent unknown. Nor does the very Name ſo plainly point it out, that any blind man may diſcover [C]: ſince the firſt ſyllable muſt be entirely dropped, and the next turned into Ma, inſtead of Mu; which, by the Coins, appears to be the true reading, though it hath been adulterated by ſeveral Authors, who had never ſeen any of Cunobeline's Coins [D].

By laying all which Circumſtances together, it may appear to any unprejudiced perſon, that Colcheſter hath a better right to reclaim Camulodunum as its own, than any other place wherein it has been fixed by Writers ancient or modern.

II. Next, If we examine the Itinerary that paſſes under the name of Antoninus, it will moſt plainly appear, That the Diſtances therein ſet down between London and Colonia, or Camulodunum, agree as exactly as poſſible with Colcheſter, but not ſo well with Maldon, or any other town, where that Colony hath been attempted to be placed by ſeveral modern Authors.

To render it more evident, I ſhall ſet down here part of the two Itinera, or Journeys, wherein Colonia and Camulodunum are mentioned.

[A] But what the Doctor ſays in the ſame place, "that "Ceres is ſo averſe to the Inhabitants of Maldon, that, "for the moſt part, they are under a neceſſity of fetching "their Corn from a great diſtance,"—is contrary to matter of fact. For the Country about Maldon produces now very good Corn, whatever it might do formerly.

[B] See the Saxon Gloſſaries; and Dr. N. Salmon's Hiſt. of Eſſex, p. 419. 162. The right Saxon name of Maldon is Mældune, (Saxon Chron. p. 106. 108.) and not Maledune and Mealdune, as Mr. Camden affirms, Britannia, Edit. 1722. Vol. I. col. 4 6.

[C] They are Mr. Camden's word's; Britannia, in Eſſex.

[D] The Diſtance of Maldon from Mona, (as mentioned by Pliny, Nat. Hiſt. l. II. c. 75.) which Mr. Camden looks upon as a plain proof of the former's being Camulodunum, is of no weight: Since it is equally applicable to Colcheſter, they lying nearly under the ſame degree of Longitude.

⁂ I have not taken notice of Dr. N. Salmon's Opinion; ſince nothing but an affectation of ſaying ſomething New, could induce him to place Camulodunum at Caſtle-Camps: Which had the name of Caſtle, from a Caſtle, or Seat, of the De Veres Earls of Oxford, who had ſome time their reſidence there; And Camps, from the Incampments of the Engliſh and Danes, about the time the deciſive Battle was fought between K. Ethelred and Canute, Aº. D. 1016.

[E] I will not pretend to determine where Durolitum ſtood: But, that it could not be at the place called Low-Layton, only 7 miles diſtant from London (and ſo named from the river Liga, Lygean, or Lea) is undeniable. R. Talbot places it at Brentwood. Similitude of Names is often a very deceitful rule.

III. If we lay together the Opinions of our moſt learned Antiquaries, we ſhall find them much in our favour. And there is reaſon to hope, that the Conſent of Authors, eminent for their great Learning, and other valuable Qualifications; which in moſt caſes is reckoned of no ſmall weight, will be treated with due reſpect upon the preſent Subject.

Robert Talbott then [F], John Leland [G], Humphrey Lhuyd [H], William Harriſon [I], Biſhop Stillingfleet, and William Baxter [K], agree in placing the Colonia and Camulodunum at Colcheſter [L]. Biſhop Stillingfleet being the fulleſt upon this point, I ſhall therefore conclude this Chapter and Section, with his own words:

“ Cair Colun or Colon; which by the interpretation of H. Huntingdon and Alfred is ſaid to be Colcheſter, called in the Roman Itinerary Colonia, as appears by the diſtances and ſcope of the Fifth Iter; which is from London to Carliſle, not direct, but with a great compaſs to the Eaſt, and then to Lindum. And the ſixth Iter from London to Lindum, is very different. So that the Itinerary doth not ſhew the ſhorteſt ways, but the roads which lay fitteſt for buſineſs, eſpecially for the Roman Magiſtrates taking their progreſs through the ſeveral Cities and Colonies inhabited by the Romans, or Natives of the Country, for the adminiſtration of Juſtice among them; ſo theſe Itineraries ſeem to be framed here in Britain, to ſhew the ſeveral ſtages and diſtances between them; much like our Circuits for the Itinerant Judges. Thus, from London to Lindum they ſet out Eaſtwards, and ſo went into Eſſex, part of Suffolk, Cambridge, Huntingdon, and ſo by Caſterton to Lindum; but being there, the Sixth road ſhews how they might paſs thence by Ancaſter to Leiceſter, and thence, by ſeveral places mentioned, to Verulam and ſo back to London. So that the deſign of the Itinerary is to ſhew, what Places were viſited in the ſeveral progreſſes; and no doubt there were Roman Ways then to all theſe places, and therefore they were moſt convenient for travelling; although the great Roads called Viæ Stratæ were more remarkable than the reſt; which Hieron. Surita (l) ſaith, ought to be reckoned among the greateſt works of Mankind, being made through all the Provinces of the Roman Empire. To this purpoſe the Romans made uſe of their own Souldiers, and the Inhabitants of the ſeveral Provinces: So Galgacus complains, that the Romans did wear out the Bodies of Britains in Paving of Bogs and Woods [M]; and Bede ſaith (m), the Romans were known here by their Cities, and Temples, and Bridges, and Highways. It ſeems, Bede had not heard of the Four famous Ways made by Belinus the ſon of Malmutius, called Watling-Street, the Foſſe, Ermin-ſtreet, and Ickneld-ſtreet (n); about which our Antiquaries have been ſo puzzled, that they know not where to begin and end them. For in truth, they were no other, but ſuch as led from one Roman Town to another. And although Camden ſaith, he could

Burton, though he makes Camulodunum to be Maldon, ſays, “ that all our Antiquaries acknowledge Colcheſter to be the Place where Colonia ſome time had its being.” (Comm. on Antoninus, p. 192)——But that Colonia and Camulodunum were one and the ſame place, we have, among others, the concurrent Evidence of the learned Dr. T Gale. “ Antoninus Camalodunum & Coloniam non pro diverſis locis habet:——& Ravennas ex veritate Camuloduno jungit Coloniam, ita enim ſcribendum eſt pro Camulodulo.” Comm. in Antonin. p. 111.

[L] Dr. T. Gale contends, That the right name of this Station was Colanea, not Colonia; but brings no proof of it. Colania is placed by Ptolemy among the Damnii, between Lancaſhire and Yorkſhire. See W. Burton on Antoninus, p. 199.

“ find no Footſteps of ſuch Ways in Eſſex, time having worn them out; yet it is certain, according to the courſe of the Itinerary, and the Peutinger-Tables, there had been ſuch; for, according to both of them, there was a Road from Venta Icenorum to London, by Sitomagus, Combretonium, Camalodunum, Cæſaromagus, &c. and again from London to Cæſaromagus, Colonia, Villa Fauſtini, Iciani, Camboricum, and ſo to Lindum. In the Fifth Iter, we find Colonia mentioned, in the Ninth Camalodunum, but not Colonia; which makes me think the ſame place is meant in both, becauſe they both lie at almoſt an equal diſtance in the Itinerary from Cæſaromagus, and all perſons yield the Numbers to be much corrupted; and in the Peutinger Tables, Camalodunum is ſet down but not Colonia; upon which reaſons I am very inclinable to Leland's Opinion, that Colcheſter was both Colonia and Camalodunum. I know Mr. Camden, whoſe Sagacity and Judgment were extraordinary, hath pitched upon Maldon, rather than Colcheſter, becauſe of the Affinity of the Name; which is a very deceitful way in ſuch a Corruption of Languages in Britain, to judge of the original of a Town. But, which is far more obſervable, at Maldon, Camden takes no notice of any Roman Antiquities, but ſuch as ſuppoſe it to have been the Colony; but at Colcheſter, he ſaith (o), an infinite Number of Roman Coins were found; and as to the name, Colcheſter hath as much remaining of Colonia, Cheſter being the Saxon Addition, as Maldon of Camalodunum.”

CHAP. III.

§ 1. State of the Town, under the Britans.

THIS Iſland was inhabited long before J. Cæſar's Invaſion (p): And I think it may be laid down for a rule, That the Inhabitants did not live without ſome Form of Government or other. Undoubtedly it was the ſame as their neighbours the Celts, or Gauls, from whom they derived their origin. For I ſhall, once for all, take it for granted, That England, eſpecially the Eaſtern parts of it, were peopled from the oppoſite Continent of Gaul [N]. What the Gauliſh Government was, we learn from J. Cæſar: which is to this effect; That the Country was divided into ſeveral ſmall States, or Principalities; governed by Magiſtrates, which in ſome places were annually choſen (q). But, in caſe of war, they choſe a General, or Commander in chief (r). That they had a Senate, or Public Council [O]: naturally were infinitely fond of Liberty, and deteſted and abhorred Slavery [P]. And Parties and Factions, the effect of Liberty, prevailed in all their communities, villages, and even houſes [Q].

In conformity to this, It is moſt probable, that Britain was divided into ſeveral Diſtricts or Governments; who had their petty Kings [R], and choſe a General from amongſt themſelves in time of war [S]. But under theſe petty Kings, or otherwiſe, what the particular ſtate of this Town and County was, we are not able to determine, for want of memoirs, or monuments.

The ſtory of Brute and his Trojans coming to people this Country after the deſtruction of Troy, is now univerſally exploded. Yet I think it carries in it too ſtrong a prejudice, to condemn in the groſs Geoffrey of Monmouth who hath handed that ſtory down to poſterity; and boldly to aſſert, as ſome have done, that the whole Twelve Books of his Hiſtory are a mere fiction void of all truth or even probability.

We ſhall therefore ſet down below, by way of Note [T], the Names of the ſeveral Princes recorded by him to have reigned in South-Britain, under whoſe Government, or of ſome of them at leaſt, this Town was, as ſoon as it had a being.

Hely, or Beli-Mawr, the laſt mentioned King, had three Sons, Lud, Caſſivellaun, and Nennius.

His eldeſt ſon and ſucceſſor Lud, who is thought (s) to be the ſame as J. Cæſar calls Imanuentius (t), was a great reſtorer of the city of London (u). After having reigned ſeveral years, he was murdered by his brother Caſſivellaun, who ſeized his Dominions, to the prejudice of Lud's two ſons, Mandubrace, and Tenuant or Theomant. The former fled to Julius Cæſar in Gaul for protection (w); But what became at firſt of the youngeſt, we cannot learn.

Before I paſs on to the next Section, I ſhall recommend theſe few Obſervations to the Reader's ſerious conſideration.

There is no Hiſtorian of any note, not a contemporary one at leaſt, during the firſt part of this period, that could record or bear witneſs to theſe tranſactions. Britain was then unknown to the Romans [U]; it was looked upon as a place out of the world [W] and no one knew or concerned themſelves with what paſſed therein. Even from neighbouring Gaul few paſſed over here, except Merchants, and they viſited only the Eaſtern coaſts, and thoſe Towns and Diſtricts that were oppoſite to their own Country (x). For though the Britans were well ſituated for Trade, they neither had large veſſels, nor ventured to ſea beyond the Coaſts of Gaul. Their chief commercce was with the Phœnician Merchants, who after the diſcovery of the iſland, exported every year great quantities of Tin, with which they drove a very gainful Trade with diſtant Nations (y): The Greeks diſcovered it at length, and came and traded alſo to the ſame place. But this commerce being carried on in the furtheſt parts of Cornwal only, foreign Merchants had no opportunity to know exactly the ſtate of the iſland. And for this reaſon we are ignorant of many particulars concerning the Religion and Government of the Britans, that probably would have been tranſmitted down to us, if other Nations had met with information (z). No wonder therefore that the name of Britans ſhould be heard of ſo late among the Greeks and the Romans; ſince they were ſuch ſtrangers to them.

As for the pretended Difficulty which ſeems to attend this part of our Britiſh Hiſtory, namely, That theſe many Kings and their Actions are not mentioned by the ancient and ſo much admired Writers, ſuch as Herodotus, &c. it is certainly of no weight. For how many of the moſt intereſting Parts of Hiſtory have no Greek or Roman Author to confirm or corroborate them? And yet God forbid they ſhould notwithſtanding be rejected.

Finally, let it be conſidered, That if nothing is to be credited but what is written in claſſical Latin, or in a fine flowing elegant ſtyle, we muſt then give up the moſt valuable Parts of our Hiſtory; Namely, Thoſe which convey to us the Nature and Origin of our excellent Government, and the Foundation of thoſe glorious Privileges brought hither by our Saxon Anceſtors; which are the Honour and the Happineſs of the Britiſh Name, and which that they may be conveyed to our lateſt Poſterity, ought to be the ardent Wiſh and the earneſt Endeavour of every Briton.

§ 2. State of this Town and Country under the Romans.

C. Julius Cæsar, as appears by his own relation, never viſited theſe parts in his two Expeditions. He landed in Kent, and croſſing that countrey, and what is now called Surrey, forded the Thames between Kingſton and London; and penetrating into Caſſivellaun's capital, extended his Conqueſts no farther than part of Hertfordſhire, and of Buckingham and Berkſhires. Satisfied with that ſmall exploit, unworthy of his fame and of the Roman Name [X], he returned with a few hoſtages into Gaul, and never ſaw again the Britiſh dominions [Y].

Among thoſe that appeared in arms againſt him, were undoubtedly ſome of the Inhabitants of this town, and Country. For Caſſivellaun, the Britiſh General, was King of the Trinobants [Z], whereof what is now called Eſſex was then a part. But what ſhare they bore in this Expedition, is not expreſly mentioned. However, after this their King had diſmiſſed the bulk of his forces, and retained only ſmall bodies with him to watch the enemies motions; the Trinobantes, ſtyled by J. Cæſar the moſt valiant people in the country, ſent Embaſſadors to him, with offers of ſubmiſſion. Deſiring him, at the ſame, to protect Mandubrace [whom ſome name Androgeus (a), or Androgorius (b),] from Caſſivellaun's attempts and inſults, and to ſend him to be their King or Governor (c). Cæſar ſent him accordingly, and received from them Corn and Hoſtages which he had required.

Such was the end of J. Cæſar's mighty exploits here, which ſome flatterers extolled to the ſkies [A]. But others who ſpoke more moderately, did not ſcruple to own that he hardly touch'd Britain [B]; nay, that he ſhewed his back to the Britans [C].

After J. Cæſar's departure from this iſland, the Britans continued unmoleſted for a ſpace of above ninety years [D], being governed by their own kings, and paying tribute to the Romans (d).

Mandubrace, or Androgeus, was, as we have obſerved, ſent by J. Cæſar, to take poſſeſſion of the Kingdom of the Trinobantes. But ſome authors ſay (e), he went along with J. Cæſar to Rome; and that Caſſivellaun remained poſſeſſed of that kingdom, which he enjoyed ſeven years, and then peaceably died. His ſucceſſor was Tenuant, Lud's ſecond ſon, of whom nothing memorable is recorded. He was ſucceeded by his ſon Cunobilin, or Cunobeline, (for his name is written both ways upon his coins) otherwiſe Kymbeline, who had a great friendſhip for the Romans, and punctually paid them tribute, though he might have with-held it during the civil wars between M. Antony and Auguſtus [E]. Many of this King's coins have been found in this town, which is a ſtrong argument of its having been his capital, and not Maldon, as ſome have imagined.

C. Jul. C. Octavianus Auguſtus, ſecond Emperor of Rome, long neglected Britain. At length [A° U. C. 720.] rouzed either by ſome outrages of the Britans, of which Hiſtory makes no mention, or by their refuſing to pay the cuſtomary tribute; he advanced as far as Gaul, with a full reſolution to chaſtiſe the inhabitants; but was diverted by a rebellion in Dalmatia and Pannonia. Seven years after, he came again to Gaul, in his way to Britain, where he intended to make war. But ſome of our Kings appeaſed him, and obtained his favour by embaſſies, and preſents they ſent to the Capitol; and made almoſt the whole countrey familiar and well known to the Romans (f).

Tiberius, the third Emperor, was for contracting rather than enlarging the bounds of the Roman Empire; and therefore left the Britans unmoleſted within their own Seas.

C. Caligula was as extravagant with regard to Britain, as in all his other actions. Adminius ſon of Cunobeline, having been baniſhed by his father, with ſome companions of his, went and made his ſubmiſſion to the Emperor then in Gallia Belgica. Upon which C. Caligula, as if he had been put in poſſeſſion of the whole iſland, wrote boaſting letters to Rome; and charged the meſſenger to drive up as far as the forum and ſenate-houſe, and not to deliver them to the Conſuls, but in the Temple of Mars, and before the whole Senate (g). Shortly after, [A. D. 37.] advancing to the Sea, and drawing up his army on the ſhore, he embarked on board a galley, as if he had intended to make a deſcent on theſe parts: Having cauſed himſelf to be rowed a little way, he returned; and ſtanding on a high place, gave the ſignal for battle, and commanded an alarm to be ſounded. But on a ſudden, he ordered the ſolders to fill their helmets and boſoms with ſhells, calling them the ſpoils of the ocean, due to the capitol and the palace. Then highly praiſing and rewarding his ſoldiers, he ſet out with the ſhells for Rome, carrying his gallies moſtly by land. For this ſignal victory he required a greater triumph than ever had been (h): and, to perpetuate the memory of it, built a pharos or tower, ſuppoſed to be Brittenhuis, on the coaſt of Holland.

[Z] Mr. W. Baxter derives this name from the Britiſh Words Tri, or Tre, a town, Nou, new, and Hant, Hent, or Hynt, a place much frequented; from which he forms the name Trinouante, ſignifying the inhabitants of a new Town, i. e. London, which, according to him, was built by the Belgæ.——Caſſivellaun was at firſt only King of the Caſſii, [now part of Hertford and Buckingham ſhires.] But, having ſlain his brother Immanuentius, (otherwiſe called Lud, as is ſaid above, p. 18. col. 1.) he ſeized his Dominions, and by that means became King of the Trinobantes; as he was at the time of J. Cæſar's invaſion. On account of theſe violent proceedings it was, that the Trinobantes came in ſo readily to J. Cæſar, and deſired him to ſend Mandubrace their late King's ſon, to govern them. [E] Id. l. iv. c. 11. 'Tis ſaid, that he attended Auguſtus in his Wars; and ſo well behaved himſelf, that he grew into particular Favour with the Emperor, and accompanied him to Rome, where he was ſaluted by the name of Friend of the Commonwealth: and that, during his reſidence there, Tenuant paid no tribute.

Cunobeline was then reigning in Britain and died about the 42d year of the Chriſtian æra (i). Beſides Adminius above-mentioned, he had two ſons, Guider or Togodumnus, and Caractacus who ſucceeded him, and according to ſome Arviragus (k).

Caligula dying, after a ſhort reign of four years, had Claudius Druſus for ſucceſſor in the Imperial dignity; and he enjoyed it from the year of Chriſt 41 to 52. He was the firſt that may be ſtyled a Conqueror of any part of the Britiſh dominions. And he was put upon that undertaking by Adminius and other fugitives; among whom was one Bericus, who had been newly obliged to quit his native country, on account of a ſedition [F]. Theſe impious and deluded wretches were always preſſing the Emperor to ſend over an army (l), and make himſelf maſter of Britain, which they repreſented as a very eaſy conqueſt. For it hath always been the unhappineſs of Britain, to abound with ſordid traitors; who, to gratify their own ambition or revenge, would involve it in endleſs ruin. Claudius, eaſily perſuaded to what he had a ſtrong inclination for, ſends A. Plautius, a Roman ſenator, and an experienced General, to take the command of the army, [A. D. 42.] with orders to tranſport it into Britain. But the ſoldiers could hardly be prevailed upon to embark, ſaying, They would not make war out of the world [G] : However, after many perſuaſions and debates, they declared their readineſs to follow Plautius wherever he went. Upon that, they were embarked; and in three diviſions, leſt coming all into one place, they might be hindered from landing. At their firſt ſetting out, they were driven by contrary winds; but putting out again to ſea, they arrived in this iſland without any reſiſtance: [and very probably in Kent, where J. Cæſar had landed before.] For, the Britans, informed of their mutinous diſpoſition, had not prepared to oppoſe their landing; and therefore, ſurprized at their arrival, retired, without uniting or making head, into their own fens and woods, in hopes of wearing out the Romans by delays (m). After great ſearch and trouble, Plautius found them out, and overthrew ſingly their two kings Togodumnus and Caractacus: [A. D. 43.] who flying before him, part of the Boduni [now Oxford and Glouceſter-ſhires] ſurrendered, being at that time ſubject to the Catuellani or Cattieuchlani. [The inhabitants of Bucks, Bedford, and Hertfordſhires.] Leaving a garriſon there, he marched towards a certain river, which the Britans imagining he could not paſs without a Bridge, they lay careleſs and negligent in their camp on the other ſide. But Plautius ſent over ſome of his German ſoldiers, who were accuſtomed to ſwim through the ſtrongeſt current in their arms. Theſe, ſurpriſing the Britans, ſtruck not at the men, but at the horſes in their chariots, and by that means put their whole Force into diſorder. Fl. Veſpaſian, who was afterwards Emperor, paſſing, next, the river with a conſiderable body, ſuddenly attacked the Britans, and killed ſome, and took more. However the reſt did not fly; but, rallying their diſperſed forces, they encountered the enemy ſo vigorouſly the next day, that the victory was long doubtful; but the Romans at length remained conquerors (n). In this conflict, Veſpaſian being encompaſſed by the Britans was in great danger either to have been killed or taken, had not his ſon Titus opportunely reſcued him; who was a tribune, and began early to manifeſt his valour (o).

After this defeat, the Britans retreated to the river Thames, near its mouth [H], where it falls into the ſea, and overflowing makes lakes or ſhallows. Theſe they eaſily paſſed over, knowing where they were firm at the bottom and fordable. But the Romans unacquainted therewith, ran great hazards in purſuing them. However, the Germans ſwimming over, and ſome others paſſing by a bridge a little above, attacked at once the Britans on all ſides, and killed great numbers of them; but in the heat of the purſuit, they fell among bogs, and loſt many of their own men. In this battle Togodumnus was ſlain; which ſo enraged the Britans, inſtead of diſheartening them, that they raiſed new forces in divers parts of the iſland, [A. D. 44.]

Plautius, afraid of their ſtrength, proceeded no further: but ſecuring the places he had conquered, he ſent for the Emperor over, as he had been ordered, if he found himſelf too hard preſſed [I]. Thereupon Claudius embarks at Oſtia with a large army of horſe, foot, and elephants; and diſembarking at Marſeilles, marches from thence by land to Geſſoriacum; [Boulogne] where ſhipping again his forces he landed in Britain, [A. D. 44. U. C. 796.] and came and joined Plautius and Veſpaſian near the Thames. Having taken upon himſelf the command of the army, he paſſes the river where the Britans boldly encounter him, and begin the fight, which for a long time they bravely maintained till great numbers of them were ſlain. At length being over-powered, they fled into the woods [K], and ſome were ſubdued by force, and others yielded upon terms. Claudius purſuing his victory, took Camulodunum, [afterwards named Colcheſter] the royal ſeat of the late King Cunobeline, where he placed a Colony of Veterans, [L]

(from whence the town came to be called Colonia by way of eminence) and reduced this part of the iſle into the form of a Province [M].

In honor of this victory, Claudius was divers times ſaluted Imperator, contrary to the Roman cuſtom, which permitted it but once in one expedition. After this he ordered the Britans to be diſarmed: But to thoſe that yielded he remitted the confiſcation of their goods; which ſo endeared him to them, that they erected a Temple and an Altar to him at Camulodunum, and honoured him as a God [N]. Having thus ſettled this part of the iſland [O], he left it under the goverment of Plautius, with orders to ſubdue the reſt (p).

The Emperor's ſtay in this iſland was but ſixteen days; and his abſence from Rome upon this expedition only ſix months in all. For this victory, anniverſary games [P], triumphal arches both at Rome and Geſſoriacum, and laſtly a glorious triumph were decreed him by the Senate: And the ſurname of Britannicus was entailed upon his family (q).

Plautius, who, as we have ſaid, was left the Emperor's Lieutenant in Britain, diligently proſecuted the war, [A. D. 45. &c.] and extended his conqueſts as far as the Weſtern parts of the iſland. Wherein he was greatly aſſiſted by T. Fl. Veſpaſian, who, partly under him, and partly under the conduct of Claudius himſelf, fought thirty battles with the Britans, ſubdued two of the moſt powerful nations, took above twenty towns, and conquered the iſle of Wight (r).

About the year of Chriſt 48 Plautius being recalled (s); P. Oſtorius Scapula is ſent in his room, who was the ſecond Pro-prætor, or Lieutenant. At his arrival here, he found things in great diſorder; the Britans that were yet unconquered making inroads into the territories of thoſe that were in alliance with the Romans: and the more outrageouſly, becauſe they ſuppoſed that the new General, unacquainted with the army, would hardly take the field in the beginning of winter. But Oſtorius being ſenſible, that firſt events either beget fear or confidence, advanced againſt them with ſuch forces as were ready; and putting thoſe that reſiſted to the ſword, ſo diſperſed the reſt, that they could not rally again. And becauſe an unſafe and treacherous peace would be no ſecurity to the General or his army, he diſarmed thoſe that were ſuſpicious; and, to check them, placed garriſons on the rivers Antona [Nen] and Sabrina [Severn.]

This check and confinement the Iceni were the firſt to diſlike; a powerful nation, and not yet weakned with war, becauſe they had voluntarily entered into alliance with the Romans. By their perſuaſion, the adjoining Nations riſe in arms, and intrench themſelves in a convenient place, fenced with a rude rampart of earth, and acceſſible by a narrow paſſage only, to prevent the entrance of the horſe. Oſtorius, tho' he wanted the ſtrength of his legions, attempted that fence with the auxiliaries only: and having placed both horſe and foot in due order, they broke down the rampart and attacked the Britans pent up as they were in their own entrenchments. However, conſcious of their guilt in rebelling, and having no way to eſcape, they fought deſperately, and behaved themſelves with great bravery.

By this defeat of the Iceni, other States, that were fluctuating between war and peace, being ſettled and confirmed; Oſtorius led his army againſt the Cangi [now Somerſetſhire] whoſe country he waſted as far as the coaſt of the Iriſh ſea. But he was recalled thence by a ſedition among the Brigantes [i. e. the inhabitants of Yorkſhire, Lancaſhire, &c.] As for the Silures [the inhabitants of South-Wales] he found they were to be reduced neither by ſeverity nor clemency, without a war and garnies planted by the Romans were of three ſorts; 1. Civil. 2. Military. 3. Mixt. The Civil Colonies conſiſted only of Roman citizens, drawn out of the City, and planted in ſuch places as the former inhabitants were removed from. Theſe had all the Privileges of the City of Rome, the ſame ſort of Magiſtrates and Government. (A. Gellius, l. xvi. c. 13.) 2. Military Colonies, were ſuch, as the Veteran Soldiers were ſettled in, for a reward of long ſervice. Of this kind were the Colony here at Camulodunum, and the Colonies at York, Cheſter, Caerleon, &c. 3. The Mixt Colonies, were thoſe wherein the Roman citizens and the natives were mixt together; and though they had not the name, yet had the privileges of a Colony. Of this kind Bp. Stillingfleet concludes London to have been; which was nobile emporium, in Tacitus's time, (Ann. l. xiv. c. 74.) a place of mighty advantage by its ſituation for trade, and therefore apt to draw both Romans and natives together. (Bp. Stillingfleet's Diſcourſe of the true antiquity of London, p. 533. &c.)——The planting of the Colony here at Camulodunum is commemorated in a fine Medal of Claudius; having, on one ſide, the Emperor's effigies with this inſcription, TI. Theſe Governors, with the reſt of the Officers, were, the Legatus or Propraetor, the Procurator, Quæſtor, Tribuni, &c. of all which a large and curious account may be ſeen in Wolfgangi Lazii Commentariorum Reipub. Salmon, with regard to this Temple of Claudius, is both ingenious and extremely probable. Mr. Camden (Britannia in Eſſex) would have inferred from this inſcription Camulo Deo Sancto et Fortiſſimo, That Camulodunum was ſo called from Camulus, another name under which Mars was worſhipped. But, ſays N. Salmon, (Hiſt. of Eſſex, p. 263, col. 1.) "As "Claudius was deified, and had a Temple here,——Camulo may ſtand for Camuloduni, according to the Roman practice of cutting words ſhort. riſons. The more eaſily to effect this, the colony at Camulodunum, reinforced with a ſtrong body of veterans, was quartered in the new conqueſt; to be ready to quell any rebellion, and to inure the Allies to law and good order. After which followed the defeat of the Silures, and of their brave general Caractacus, or Caradoc (t); but as the inhabitants of theſe diſtricts do not appear to have been concerned in that war, the ſcene of action being quite at the further ſide of the iſland, we ſhall not relate the particulars of that expedition [Q].

Oſtorius dying A. D. 55. had for ſucceſſor A. Didius, the third Pro-prætor in Britain; who being old and infirm managed the war by his officers. However, he took care to keep what had been gained by his predeceſſors, and enlarged the extent of his frontier-garriſons a little, that he might be ſaid to have made ſome addition to the old conqueſts (u).

In his time, A. D. 55, the Emperor Claudius departed this life; being ſucceeded by Cn. Domit. Nero. As this wicked Prince was not at all of a warlike temper, he thought to draw the Roman army out of Britain; and would certainly have done it, if it had not been for the ſhame of ſeeming to detract from his adoptive father Claudius's glory (w).

Didius had for ſucceſſor [A. D. 57] Veranius, the 4th Pro-prætor of Britain, who died within the year (x).

After whom came [A. D. 61.] Suetonius Paulinus, a man of great conduct and reputation: who continued two years in his office (y). His firſt exploit was to reduce the iſle of Angleſey, which had been a common place of refuge to the poor Britans, harraſſed and driven out of their habitations by the invading Romans, and at that time the ſeat, and the laſt reſidence of the Druids (z). While he was employed in this conqueſt, the Roman Province, whereof this Town and County were a part, roſe in arms, in order to revenge the avarice and cruelty of their new tyrannical maſters. The occaſion was this: Praſutagus, king of the Iceni, famous a long time for his great riches, had left the Emperor co-heir with his two daughters; hoping, by this compliment, to ſecure both his kingdom and family from inſults. But it happened quite otherwiſe; for, (under pretence of taking poſſeſſion of the Emperor's new inheritance) the kingdom became a prey to the centurions, and his houſe to their ſervants and under-officers. His wife Boadicea was whipped, and his daughters raviſhed. As if the whole country had been given to the Romans, the chief of the Iceni were deprived of their paternal eſtates, and thoſe of the Blood-royal treated as the meaneſt ſlaves. Upon this inſult, and for fear of worſe, ſince they were now reduced to a Province (a); the people began to reflect on the miſeries of their ſlavery, to compare each other's misfortunes, and to aggravate every thing by the worſt conſtruction. "That their patience and eaſineſs would only encourage their enemies to lay heavier burthens upon them. Heretofore every State had its own king, now they were ſubjected to two, the Lieutenant and the Procurator [R]: the firſt preyed upon their Blood, the ſecond upon their Eſtates. That the enmity and friendſhip of the governours proved equally pernicious; the one oppreſſed them with ſoldiers and officers, the other with violence and affronts. Nothing eſcaped their covetouſneſs or luſt. In war, the braveſt had the ſpoil; but now they were pillaged by cowards and weaklings. Theſe were the wretches that bereft them of their children, and preſſed them at their pleaſure for foreign ſervice; as if the Britans could fight and die for any country but their own. For what vaſt numbers would they appear to have tranſported, if the Britans were to take account of their preſent ſtrength? Thus Germany had ſhaken off the yoke, which has only a river to defend it and not an ocean: That they had their country, their wives, and parents, to fight for, and inſpirit them; while the others had only avarice and luxury. Theſe would retreat as Julius Cæſar did, if the Britans would but imitate the bravery of their anceſtors: and that the iſſue of one or two battles ought not to terrify them. That fierceneſs and reſolution were the natural effects of miſery. And even, the Gods took compaſſion of them, in removing the Roman General, and keeping his army as it were baniſhed in another iſland. That the moſt dangerous part of the deſign was what they were upon, namely deliberating; and it would be worſe to be diſcovered in the plot, than to attempt the execution (b)." Some of theſe complaints were but too well grounded. For Catus Decianus the Procurator endeavoured to bring all their goods and eſtates under a new confiſcation, tho' Claudius had generouſly remitted it to them. And Seneca [a philoſopher only in his writings, as one (c) rightly obſerves] had drawn them in to borrow of him vaſt ſums, upon fair promiſes of an eaſy loan, and for repayment to take their own time; but he compelled them on a ſudden to repay him at once, to their utter ruin (d),

Highly provoked at theſe and the like outrages, the Iceni take arms; [A. D. 62.] drawing over the Trinobantes to revolt with them, and ſuch others as were not yet inur'd to ſlavery: who ſecretly conſpired to recover their Liberty, with the utmoſt ſpight againſt the veterans. For theſe being newly planted in the colony Camulodunum, thruſt the inhabitants from their houſes, and diſpoſſeſſed them of their lands, calling them captives and ſlaves; and were encouraged in ſuch outrages by the younger ſoldiers, as well through a likeneſs in manners and profeſſion, as in hopes of the ſame licentiouſneſs. Moreover, the Britans looked upon the Temple built at Camulodunum in honour of Claudius, as the foundation, or pledge, of a perpetual Tyranny; and the Prieſts who ſerved therein, under a ſhew of religion conſumed their whole eſtates (e). The Colony itſelf the Britans conſidered as the ſeat of ſlavery (f); and fancied, there could be no great difficulty in overthrowing it, as it had no forts nor caſtles. For the Roman commanders had been ſo imprudent, as to conſult pleaſure rather than uſe and ſervice. The Britans, it ſeems, were mightily encouraged by ſome pretended prodigies [S], which, on the other hand, threw the veterans into the utmoſt conſternation. In this diſtreſs, as Suetonius was at ſo great a diſtance, they applied to Catus Decianus their Procurator for help: Who ſent them not above two hundred men, and thoſe ill-armed. There was but a moderate garriſon in the town, who relyed wholly upon the ſtrength and protection of the Temple; and ſome that were privy to the conſpiracy, had ſo perplexed their counſels, that they had neither made trench nor ditch round it for their own defence, nor ſent away the old people and women, reſerving the youth only. Thus living ſecure and careleſs as in a profound peace, they were ſurpriſed and ſurrounded by the Britans [T]. What things ſtood defenceleſs, were immediately over-run and plundered, or conſumed by fire; the Temple, wherein the ſoldiers were crowded, ſtood a two days ſiege, and then was forced to yield. The victorious Britans meeting Petilius Cerialis, Lieutenant of the Ninth Legion, who was coming to the Colony's aſſiſtance, routed the Legion, and put what foot there was [U] to the ſword: Cerialis eſcaped with the horſe into the Camp, where he defended himſelf by the help of the fortifications. Catus the procurator, whoſe covetouſneſs, and the hatred of the Province that enſued upon it, had been the cauſe of this calamity, cowardly fled into Gaul.

But Suetonius, with prodigious reſolution, marched through the midſt of the enemies to London; which was not honoured with the name of a Colony, but was very famous for the concourſe of merchants, and the great plenty of all things. Being come thither, he could not preſently reſolve, whether to make that the ſeat of war, or not; but conſidering his want of ſoldiers, and how much Petilius had ſuffered for his raſhneſs, he determined to ſacrifice this one town to the ſafety of the reſt. And not relenting at the cries and tears of the inhabitants, who implored his aid and protection, he gave orders to march, receiving ſuch as followed him into his army. Thoſe who by weakneſs of ſex or age were obliged to ſtay, and ſuch as allured by the pleaſantneſs of the place choſe to remain behind, were deſtroyed by the enemy. The municipium of Verulam [W] was involved in the like deſtruction; for the Britans paſſing by the forts and caſtles, pillaged the richeſt and weakeſt places; being intent upon the ſpoil, and regardleſs of the reſt. About ſeventy thouſand of the Romans and their allies were ſlain. For the Britans would give no quarter, nor cumber themſelves with priſoners, or ranſome or exchange any, according to the laws of war; but did kill, burn, hang, crucify by way of retaliation, and in ſuch haſte, as if they foreſaw it would cruelly be returned upon them.

Suetonius having with him the fourteenth legion, and the vexillarii of the twentieth [X], together with ſome auxiliaries from the neighbouring places, almoſt to the number of ten thouſand fighting men [Y], reſolved immediately to engage the Britans. For that purpoſe, he choſe for the field of battle, a place acceſſible by one narrow paſſage only [Z], and fenced in the rear by a wood; as ſenſible, he ſhould then have no enemy but in front, and the plain being open there would be no danger of ambuſcades. He drew up the Legion cloſe in the middle, with the light-arm'd ſoldiers on both ſides, and the horſe on the two wings. The Britiſh forces were drawn up in ſmaller bodies and ſquadrons (g), to the amount of about 230,000 men (h): And had placed their wives on chariots, round the field of battle, to be witneſſes of the victory. Boadicea riding about in a chariot, with her daughters, addreſſed herſelf to the ſeveral Britiſh nations that compoſed her army, to this effect: "That it was no new thing for the Britans to fight under the conduct of women: but now ſhe went not, as one royally deſcended, to fight for empire or riches, but as one of the common people for loſt liberty; to revenge the ſtripes ſhe had received from them, and the diſhonour they had done her daughters. That the Romans luſt was grown ſo exorbitant and unruly, that neither old nor young eſcaped its pollutions. However the Gods had already begun to puniſh them according to their deſerts; for one Legion, which durſt hazard a battle, had been cut in pieces, and the reſt ſkulk'd in their Camp, or fled for their lives. So that they could not endure the noiſe and ſhouts of ſo many thouſands, much leſs be able to ſtand their attacks. If the Britans would but conſider the number of their own forces, and the motives of the war, they muſt either conquer or die. Such was her own reſolution, tho' ſhe was but a woman; as for the men, they might, if they pleaſed, live and be ſlaves." Suetonius alſo animated his ſoldiers, and adviſed them to keep cloſe together; and, after they had diſcharged their darts, to continue the ſlaughter with their pikes and ſwords, and not heed the booty.

Several enthuſiaſtick women foretold the approaching deſtruction. Strange noiſes were heard in the Court, and howlings reſounded in the theatre; and an apparition was ſeen in the æſtuary of the Thames, of a Colony deſtroyed. [Y] Mr. Bolton computes, that they were in all about 19000. Ibid. p. 156, 157.

[Z] By comparing all accounts and circumſtances, I am perſuaded, that the field of battle was between Waltham and Epping, or thereabouts; not far from London. Mr. Bolton thinks that it was in September the battle was fought, p. 162. See Hiſtory of Eſſex in Waltham H.

When the engagement began, the Roman Legion remained firm and unmoved, and kept within the narrow paſſage abovementioned for their ſecurity and defence. But, after the enemy had ſpent their darts, they ſallied out in a wedge [A] upon them; and the horſe with their ſpears, broke whatever came in their way, and made reſiſtance. The reſt fled, but eſcaped with difficulty, becauſe the paſſes quite round were blocked up by the wagons. Then a dreadful carnage began, the ſoldiers not ſparing even the tender ſex; nay the very horſes were ſlain, and encreaſed the heaps of carcaſes. It was computed, that no leſs than fourſcore thouſand of the Britans were ſlain; and the Roman authors ſay, they loſt but about 400 men and had not much above that number wounded. Boadicea finding her affairs ruined, ended her life by poiſon (i); or, according to others, by ſickneſs (k).

The Roman army, after a general review, took the field again, to put an end to this war. And Nero reinforced it with a ſupply of two thouſand Legionaries from Germany, eight auxiliary cohorts, and a thouſand horſe; by which the ninth Legion was compleated. Theſe cohorts, and ſome others, were ſent into winter-quarters; and the countries that were either enemies or neuter, were waſted with fire and ſword. To compleat the miſery of the diſtreſſed Britans, they were afflicted with a ſore famine, which they had brought upon themſelves by neglecting to till the ground (l).

I have dwelt the longer upon this action, becauſe it was the laſt vigorous Effort the oppreſſed Britans made for the recovery of their loſt Liberty. And it ſhews, that even a ſmall body of regular forces, can eaſily rout and diſperſe a raw and undiſciplin'd multitude, tho' infinitely ſuperior in number.

By this compleat victory, the chief part of South-Britain came abſolutely under the Romans dominion; and their chains were thereby firmly rivetted upon the inhabitants, who were thenceforward awed and kept in order by a large ſtanding Military force; as I ſhall ſhew more particularly when I come to Domitian's reign.

The Colony here being deſtroyed as is related above, another was undoubtedly planted in their room, and the Town repaired, very ſoon after this fatal overthrow (m). For great numbers of Roman coins, even of Claudius himſelf, and of Veſpaſian, Titus, Domitian, and their ſeveral ſucceſſors, are found daily in and about this place. Not in heaps, pots, or large quantities together, as if they had been deſignedly buried; but diſperſed all about, as if accidentally loſt at different times. Buſhels, I may ſay, have been found in this Town and Suburbs; chiefly in the higheſt parts, namely about St. Mary's, the Burgh-fields, St. John's garden, &c. a certain ſign that the Roman City ſtood there.

To return to Suetonius: He did not make the advantage that might have been expected from his late great victory; becauſe he behaved with arrogance towards thoſe that ſubmitted, and impoſed very harſh terms upon the vanquiſhed: And diſputes alſo having ariſen between him and the new procurator Julius Claſſicianus, Nero ſent over his freedman Polycletus to reconcile their difference, and to incline at the ſame time the diſcontented Britans to a quiet behaviour. Polycletus coming over with a grand retinue, made himſelf formidable to the Roman army; but contemptible to the Britans, who ſtill retaining a warm affection for Liberty, were unacquainted with this power of freed-men; and thought it ſtrange, that a General and his army, after ſuch great exploits, ſhould be ſubject to ſlaves. However, he gave ſuch a favorable account to the Emperor, that Suetonius was continued in his poſt. But, ſhortly after, having loſt ſome gallies on the ſhore with their crews, he received orders to deliver up the command of the army [A. D. 63.] to Petronius Turpillianus. He being indolent, and doing nothing memorable, delivered up his government, after two years poſſeſſion, to Trebellius Maximus; who being of a very unactive temper, and unexperienced in military affairs, governed the Province in a gentle manner. But a quarrel between him, and Cælius commander of the twentieth legion, obliged him to quit Britain (n).

Nero putting an end, the year following, to his own infamous life; no Pro-prætor was appointed during the ſhort reigns of Galba, and Otho. Notwithſtanding which, this Province continued quiet and peaceable; being governed by the Lieutenants of the Legions, all of equal authority, tho' Cælius aſſumed the moſt power (o).

Vitellius having obtained the Empire, [A. D. 68.] ſent Vectius Bolanus Pro-prætor into this iſland. He was a little troubleſome to the Britans as his predeceſſor. 'Tis obſervable, that, during the conteſts for dominion between Vitellius and Veſpaſian, there were no mutinies in the army here: And indeed, in all the civil wars of the Empire, the troops quarter'd in this iſle were more peaceable and quiet than in any other Province. The fourteenth Legion, called the Conqueror of Britain, had been removed from hence to the Caſpian war by Nero; and after, while they ſided with Otho, defeated: They were ſent into Britain again by Vitellius, but recalled by a Letter from Mutianus (p).

The great eſteem which this Province had for T. Veſpaſian, who had commanded here the ſecond Legion under Claudius, as is related above, induced Britain to declare for him. About which time Venuſius had incited the Brigantes [inhabitants of the North] to a revolt; but 'tis moſt probable this part of the iſland had no concern therein (q).

As ſoon as Veſpaſian was quietly poſſeſſed of the Imperial dignity, [A. D. 71.] he ſent over famous Generals, and excellent armies, which quickly reſtored peace in this iſland.

Petilius Cerialis, his Lieutenant, [A. D. 73.] a man of Conſular dignity, conquered the Brigantes then the moſt populous nation in the whole Province. When he had eclipſed the fame as well as prevented the care of a Succeſſor, Julius Frontinus was ſent to command in his room. [A. D. 75.] He ſubdued the powerful and warlike Silures. [i. e. now the Eaſtern part of Wales] (r).

But Julius Agricola, the next Lieutenant, abundantly ſurpaſſed the glory of all his predeceſſors. He was Pro-prætor here from the 9th year of Veſpaſian to the 5th or 6th of Domitian (s), i. e. from the year of Chriſt 81 to 92; In which time, he commanded in chief in ſeven campaigns; ſubdued the Ordovices [North-Wales;] and reduced the iſle of Mona, or Angleſey; built forts in ſeveral places, to awe the natives; extended his conqueſts beyond the Fyrths of Glotta and Bodotria, [Dunbritton and Edenburgh] and, upon the neck of land between them, raiſed forts, and planted garriſons, for the ſecurity of the Roman Province, which he had extended thus far; cauſed his fleet to ſail round about the north parts of Britain: And inur'd the Britans to the Roman manners, faſhions, cuſtoms, and ways of building [B]. Beſides ſeveral other uſeful regulations [C]; which tended as much to his honour, as to the ornament, welfare, and happineſs of the country.

Theſe particulars I have but ſlightly touched on, becauſe the Trinobantes ſeem to have had little or no ſhare in them; but whoever deſires to ſee them more at length, will be pleaſed to conſult the Life of Agricola, written by his ſon-in-law C. Tacitus.

The exploits of that renowned General, glorious to himſelf, and beneficial to the Roman name, were ill-requited by that monſter Domitian; who envied his bravery, and was an enemy to all virtue. For he recalled him under pretence of appointing him governor of Syria; but ſoon after cauſed him to be poiſoned, as was ſuppoſed (t). Thus died the famous Agricola, who carried the Roman eagles to the furtheſt bounds of Britain: Conquering more nations than all his predeceſſors had done; and he intended alſo to have ſubdued Ireland, had he not been ſo recalled (u).

South-Britain, now parted from Caledonia by Agricola's ramparts, was reduced to a COMPLEAT PROVINCE; not governed by Conſular or Proconſular Deputies, but accounted Preſidial, and appropriated to the Emperors, as being annexed to the Empire, after the diviſion of Provinces by Auguſtus, and having Prætors of its own. To keep it in ſubjection, there were four Legions at leaſt [D], quartered in different parts, eſpecially upon the frontiers; to ſtop the incurſions of the poor natives, who were now cooped up in the Weſtern and Northern extremities of the iſle. And undoubtedly theſe Stations and Garriſons of the Legions proved very often the foundations of conſiderable towns and cities; whoſe names generally end in Cheſter, or Ceſter, from the Latin word Caſtra (w).

In this manner was the Yoke firſt laid upon the Britans, by ſtanding forces and garriſons. And to keep them humble and obedient, they were loaded with tribute, and heavy impoſts: for the gathering of which Publicans were maintained, who exacted the tribute, &c. with great rigour, and greedily ſucked the very vitals of the natives. Moreover, they were not permitted to enjoy their ancient laws and government; but were put under the juriſdiction of Magiſtrates, ſent by the Romans with their rods and axes, to adminiſter juſtice [E]. But, as

[B] The Britans being diſpoſed to break out into open war upon every occaſion; that he might by pleaſures induce them to be quiet, he exhorted them privately, and alſo aſſiſted them, to build temples, forums and fine houſes; thoſe who were forward, he commended; thoſe who were ſlow and backward, he reproved. Moreover, he took care to have the ſons of their Princes, or chief men, brought up in the liberal arts; preferring the wit and parts of the Britans before thoſe of the Gauls; ſo that they, who but lately deſpiſed the Roman language, did now effect eloquence. From that time alſo, the Roman faſhions and dreſſes became in requeſt among them; and the Toga, or gown, was commonly worn. By degrees, they came to thoſe incitements to debauchery, Portico's, Baths, and Banquets; which went by the name of Genteelneſs among the ignorant, when they were indeed but badges of ſlavery. See Camden, in the Introduct. col. 78. & 222.

[E] The Prætor, in particular, held a kind of Aſſize once every year, and then decided all cauſes of more than ordinary conſequence; ſitting in great ſtate upon a high tribunal, with his lictors round him, bearing rods for the backs, and axes for the necks of the people. Ibid. See above, note [S].

a ſort of recompence for the loſs of their Liberty (and indeed nothing can be a ſufficient recompence for it) the Britans were poliſhed and civilized by their conquerors. For the Romans, by planting their colonies here, and reducing the natives under the rules of good government; by inſtructing them in the liberal arts, and ſending them into Gaul to learn the laws of the Roman Empire; did at laſt ſo reform and civilize them, that in their dreſs and manner of living they became no way inferior to the inhabitants of the other Provinces. Their buildings and other works were ſo very magnificent, that, as one expreſſes it (*), we view the remains of them at this day with great veneration.

To ſecure their conqueſt, the Romans took a moſt effectual method; that was, To draw the flower of the Britiſh youth out of this iſland; which forming into twelve large bodies, or more, they ſent into the moſt diſtant provinces, and continually recruited them from Britain. This was no leſs than draining the ſtrength and vigor of this iſland; and depriving the inhabitants of all diſpoſition, at leaſt of all power, of ſhaking off their yoke. A moſt infallible method to keep a mutinous and revolting Province in due ſubjection (x)!

But to return: Towards the end of Domitian's reign, we find mention of Arvirag, a Britiſh king (y). Where his dominions lay we do not underſtand. Probably, he was one of thoſe Princes that were conquered by J. Agricola; or that cauſed an inſurrection after his return. He died about the year of Chriſt 91, and was ſucceeded by his ſon Marius, or Meurig, who died about the year 132 (z).

The next Propraætors of Britain after J. Agricola, were, Cn. Trebellius, and Salluſtius Lucullus [A. D. 92.]; of whom nothing is recorded. Nor is there any mention made of this iſland under the ſhort reign of C. Nerva [A. D. 94, 95.]

In good N. Trajan's reign, [A. D. 96.] ſome of the Britans revolted againſt the Romans, but were ſoon reduced again to obedience (a). And in his time it was, if we are rightly informed (b), that thoſe Public Ways leading from one ſtation or colony to another, were firſt made. Though, upon the whole, 'tis more probable, that they were the work of more than one reign.

The Proprætors under the Emperor Hadrian, were, Cn. Trebellius, Priſcus Licinius [A. D. 117.], and Julius Severus.

In the firſt year of this Emperor, the Caledonians, or Northern Britans (c), made irruptions into the Roman Province; and even the Britans in general made great efforts for throwing off the galling yoke under which they groaned [F]. They had very near ſucceeded, had not the Emperor come over in perſon [A. D. 120.] to ſecure this conqueſt. In order to prevent future incurſions, he threw up a Rampart of Earth, faced with large planks fixed in the ground and joined to one another; from the mouth of the Tine to Solway-frith, fourſcore miles in length, and quite croſs the country from Eaſt to Weſt (d). Great numbers of his coins, and very fair and valuable ones, have been found in this place.

His ſucceſſor Antoninus Pius. [A. D. 136.] at his firſt coming to the throne made a law, That all who were within the bounds of the Roman Empire, ſhould be citizens of Rome [G]; of which South-Britain received the benefit. However the North-Britans uneaſy within the confinement of Hadrian's rampart, broke it down in ſeveral places, and ravaged the Roman Province. But Lollius Urbicus, the Proprætor, drove them back again into their wild and inhoſpitable mountains and deſerts. And to reſtrain them from future irruptions, he raiſed another Rampart of earth and piles between the fyrths of Glota and Bodotria [Dunbritton and Edenburgh] where Agricola had before built his fortreſſes [H]. By means of this rampart, and a camp at a little diſtance where troops were kept ready to march upon occaſion, he compelled the Caledonians to remain quiet in their country.

Under Marc. Aurel. Antoninus, the Britans, impatient of foreign ſubjection, again raiſed new commotions: for the appeaſing whereof Calpurnius Agricola was ſent over; who, partly by prudence, and partly by force, ſettled the minds of thoſe who ſeemed moſt uneaſy under the Romans dominion (e).

In this reign, Coel I. a Britiſh king, tributary to the Romans, dying, left his ſon Lucius for his ſucceſſor; who is otherwiſe called Lhes, and ſurnamed Lever Maur, the great light, becauſe he is ſaid to have received, and very much encouraged here, the light of the Goſpel (f).

In Commodus's time, [A. D. 183.] the Caledonians paſſing over the rampart, cut off the Roman General and his army; and committed terrible ravages throughout the Province (g). Ulpius Marcellus is therefore ſent to reduce them within bounds: which he effected by his bravery and conduct. But being envied for his virtues, by Commodus who hrd none, he was recalled. Whereupon the army mutinied, and threatned to elect another Emperor (h): However, they were appeaſed by Helvius Pertinax, promoted afterwards to the Imperial dignity; who had been a ſoldier here in M. Aurel. Antoninus's reign (i).

Clodius Albinus was the next Proprætor appointed by Commodus, who offered alſo to create him Cæſar, but he declined that honour. Not long after, a falſe report being ſpread that Commodus was ſlain, Albinus, in a ſpeech to his ſoldiers, inveigh'd againſt the male adminiſtration of Nero and other Emperors, meaning Commodus; and extolled the Senatorian power. Which coming to the Emperor's ear, he appointed [A.D. 192.] Junius Severus Proprætor in Albinus's room: but the latter refuſed to give up that office. Not long after, Commodus being poiſoned and ſtrangled (k), [A. D. 198.] Helvius Pertinax, his ſucceſſor, confirmed Albinus in the government of Britain (l): Which he enjoyed during that Emperor's ſhort reign of two months and 26 days.

After the violent death of Pertinax, Didius Julianus purchaſed the Empire, which was ſet to ſale by the ſoldiers: But Peſcennius Niger is proclaimed Emperor by his army in Syria; And, at the ſame time Septimius Severus in Pannonia, and Albinus here in Britain, receive the ſame honour from their reſpective armies. But Severus having procured himſelf to be confirmed Emperor at Rome, by the unanimous conſent of the ſoldiers and ſenate (m), reſolves to diſpatch his three competitors, one after another. Accordingly D. Julianus is murdered by Severus himſelf (n); or by his order. And that he might not have both the others to deal with at once, he ſooths Albinus by the ſpecious pretence of making him his partner in the Empire; erecting ſtatues to him, ſtamping his image on the coins, and conferring upon him the conſulſhip. Having thus lulled him aſleep, he marches againſt Peſcennius, who is vanquiſhed in battle, and ſoon after ſlain. Then he employs aſſaſſins to murder Albinus; which wicked deſign failing he declares him an enemy of the State, and advances againſt him with the utmoſt expedition. Albinus had paſſed into Gaul, with the flower of the Britiſh army to oppoſe his competitor's progreſs; but being defeated, he puts an end to his own life (o).

Severus now ſole maſter of the Empire, finding that Britain was too great and powerful a province to be truſted into the hands of one man, he divided it into Two Governments [A. D. 208]; committing the Southern part to Heraclitus, or Heraclianus; and the North to Virius Lupus, under the title of Proprætor or Preſident of Britain; who repaired many caſtles in this iſland. But being extremely haraſſed by the Meatæ [the people on the confines of Scotland] he was forced to buy a peace of them at a dear rate. Notwithſtanding which, they and the Caledonians continuing their irruptions, Lupus deſired the Emperor either to ſend more force, or to come in perſon to his aſſiſtance (p). Severus, though above ſixty years old, and much troubled with the gout, joyfully reſolved upon this expedition; both that he might wean his ſons Baſſianus and Geta, who grew very debauched, from the pleaſures of the city, and alſo add the name of Britannicus to his other titles. He came over therefore to Britain with numerous forces, and penetrated to the furtheſt parts of the iſland. But in this laborious expedition he loſt above 50,000 men (q). However, he compelled at laſt the enemies, and their king Fulgentius, to ſue for peace, and to give up to the Romans all the country between the two Walls. But Severus finding it not tenable without a great army always on the ſpot, he abandoned it ſoon after; and, to prevent for the future the incurſions of the Caledonians into the Roman territories, he built, in the place where Hadrian's rampart ſtood, a Wall (r) of free-ſtone; ſixty eight miles and three furlongs in length from beyond Newcaſtle to Boulneſs, about eight feet thick and twelve high, and ſecured with caſtles and turrets at proper diſtances [I]. One of the ſtupendous monuments of Roman greatneſs!

Severus ſeems alſo to have divided the Roman Conqueſts here into two Provinces, by a line drawn from Clauſentum to Gabroſentum [i. e. from Southampton to Gateſhead by New caſtle;] ſo that all the country on the Eaſt ſide of the line was called Britannia Prima, as lying nearer to the ſea and Rome, and having been firſt conquered; as all on the Weſt ſide was named Britannia Secunda (s).

Notwithſtanding the peace, the Caledonians began to revolt, and committed hoſtilities; which ſo enraged Severus, that, in a Speech to his ſoldiers, he recommended the utter extirpation of them [K]. But death put a ſtop to his cruel purpoſe. He died at York, aged ſixty ſix years, A. D. 209.

His eldeſt ſon, Baſſianus, or Antoninus Caracalla, continued for ſome little time to proſecute the remains of the war by his officers; but he ſoon made a peace with the Caledonians, and ſlighting the forts and garriſons, left Britain, together with his brother Geta [A. D. 211.]. And yet ſo vain was he, that he aſſumed the name of Britannicus Maximus, as Geta did that of Britannicus (t).

From this time till the beginning of the reign of P. Lic. Gallienus, i. e. from the year 211 to 260, we meet with nothing particularly relating to Britain, nor the Lieutenants names; except that Mæcilius Fuſcus, Cne. Lucilianus, and Nonius Philippus were Proprætors here in the reign of Gordianus junior (u). But this long chaſm in the Roman and Britiſh hiſtory, is more for want of hiſtorians, than of matter.

Gallienus, already mentioned, being given up to idleneſs, luxury, and riot, the Empire was not only invaded on all ſides by its barbarous neighbours, but alſo full of convulſions within its own bowels. For, thirty of the Governors of the Provinces aſſumed the imperial purple, purple, in different parts; who are called by hiſtorians the Thirty Tyrants. Six of them, namely, Lollianus Victorinus, Poſthumus, the two Tetrici, and Marius, particularly, are ſuppoſed to have been Governors in this iſland; for their coins are daily found in great numbers, eſpecially about this town of Colcheſter (w).

To theſe times of confuſion, may alſo be referred what we find in our Colcheſter-Chronicle. Namely, That in the year 238. Coel II, General or Governor of this diſtrict under the Romans, (who did much repair and beautify this town, and gave it the name of Kayr-Coel,) ſeized the Government of thoſe parts now known by the names of Eſſex and Hertfordſhire: That, a°. 242, his daughter Helena was born at Colcheſter: That, a°. 260, Conſtantius the Roman General in Spain, came and beſieged Colcheſter, held by Coel againſt the Romans. But, after the ſiege had continued long, it was raiſed upon Conſtantius's betrothing Helena. And by her, a°. 265, he had his ſon Conſtantine, born before the ſolemnization of the nuptials [L]. And though theſe things are not mentioned in the Roman writers, yet there is nothing impoſſible or improbable, in them. So far from it, that the main parts of this relation are confirmed by writers of undoubted credit.—That her name was Helen, is univerſally allowed.—That ſhe was a concubine, is affirmed not only in this chronicle, but alſo by the Emperor Julian [M], Euſebius, Oroſius, and St. Jerom [N], Caſſiodorus [O], Zoſimus [P], Beda [Q]; and indirectly by Eutropius [R], and the author of the collections concerning Conſtantius and Conſtantine, at the end of Amm. Marcellinus [S].

Next, That Britain was her own, as well as her ſon Conſtantine's native place, is, according to Mr. Camden (x), what all Hiſtorians who have written on that ſubject, except Cedrenus and Nicephorus, affirm with one voice. And, indeed, the conſtant Tradition among us hath always been, That Helen was the daughter of Coel II. king of this diſtrict [T]; who, firſt, revolted againſt the Romans, and afterwards became tributary to them: and that Conſtantius being ſent here to reduce him to obedience, fell in love with his daughter Helen, and had by her his ſon Conſtantine, born before marriage; but, ſoon after the birth, he married her, and adopted him. This Tradition is preſerved in the old Britiſh Memoirs, publiſhed, though in a very confuſed and imperfect manner, by Geoffrey of Monmouth. And it is followed not only by our ancienteſt Engliſh writers, but alſo by great numbers of Hiſtorians and other authors of various nations, and at different times, of whom no leſs than LXX. are cited by Michael Alford, alias Griffith, who hath profeſſedly written on this ſubject [U].

What ſome modern Writers pretend to oppoſe to it, is grounded upon the authority of one obſcure writer or two [W], who have aſſerted, That Conſtantine was born at Naiſus in Dardania; or that Naiſſus, a town in Thrace, was his country [X]. But, thoſe who are for fetching him from the Eaſt are far from agreeing about the true place of his nativity. For ſome fix it at Tharſus, or Tarſus near Nicomedia in Bithynia [Y]: others at a certain village in the ſame country, which he afterwards con-

[W] Namely, the Author of the Excerpta, or Collections at the end of Ammianus Marcellinus, mentioned above, ſee note [T]—And Stephanus Byzantinus, or rather his abbreviator Hermolaus the Grammarian.—As for the firſt; H. Valeſius who publiſhed them at the end of his edition of A. Marcellinus, calls them ancient Collections of an author unknown: (Præfat. ad Lectorem) but how ancient they were, he doth not tell us. They might not be above two or three hundred years old; and taken from late writers of no veracity.—With regard to Stephanus; what is publiſhed under his name, is only a ſorry Abridgment, made by Hermolaus the grammarian, a man of little judgment; who retrenched a thouſand good things, and foiſted in many interpolations of his own. (See Bayle's Dictionary, under the article STEPHANUS BYZANT.)

To them might alſo be added Conſtantinus Porphyrogenitus; but he lived in the 10th century, and therefore too long after the time.

[X] Hermolaus's words are Ναϊσσὸς Θρᾴκης κτίσμα ϗ πατρὶς Κωνςαντίνȣ τȣ̃ βασιλέως. Stephan. voce Ναισσὸς. Conſtantinus Porphyrogenitus ſays alſo much the ſame, Ναισὸς ἡ πατρὶς τȣ̃ μεγάλȣ Κωνςαντίνȣ. Themat. ix. lib. ii. p. 98. But it is a queſtion, whether πατρὶς ſignifies always a native place; and not ſometimes alſo, that a perſon is derived from thence by his father; or that his family was ſettled there. Vide Alford, ubi ſupra, p. 100.

[Y] For this, Julius Firmicus junior is quoted; (Matheſ. l. i. c. 4.) and J. Lipſius lays a great ſtreſs upon his words, thinking them very concluſive. (Not. ad lib. iv. de Magnitud. Rom). The words of Firmicus are,---Dominus & Auguſtus noſter, ac totius orbis Imperator, pius felix ac providus princeps, Conſtantinus ſcilicet maximus, Divi Conſtantini filius, . . . apud Tharſum genitus . . . &c. Edit. Baſil. 1533. p. 14. But Mr. Camden hath ſhewn, that they are not verted into a city, and named Helenopolis [Z]: others at a town in Dacia [A]: others at Drepanum in Nicomedia [B]: others at Capharphacar near Edeſſa [C]. So that our oppoſers are far from having in this caſe the Conſent of Hiſtorians, much leſs of contemporary Hiſtorians; ſome of thoſe here referred to having lived even a thouſand years after Conſtantine's birth, and being writers of very ſlender reputation. And therefore what little ſtreſs ought to be laid upon their contradictory accounts, let any impartial perſon judge [D]. If indeed Euſebius, or ſome other credible contemporary Hiſtorian, had aſſerted in expreſs terms, that Conſtantine was born at Naiſus, or was not born in Britain, the point would be decided at once. But, as R. Gale Eſq; obſerves (y), neither Euſebius, nor the reſt of "the Eccleſiaſtical Hiſtorians, nor any other writer near that Emperor's time, give us the name of the town where he came into the world, either being ignorant of it, or thinking it no great honor to him."

However, we are not deſtitute of Arguments, drawn from contemporary writers, or ſuch as lived a very little while after, to prove that Britain was his native country. For the author of a Panegyric ſpoken before Maximian and Conſtantine the Great, thus addreſſes himſelf to the latter. "He [i. e. Conſtantius, the father] freed Britain from ſlavery: and You have ennobled it by being born there [E]."

There is another paſſage in Eumenius's panegyric ſpoken before Conſtantine, which hath been uſed as an argument to prove that Britain was Conſtantine's native place; and it is compriſed in the following words. "O fortunate Britain, and now happier than the reſt of the Earth, which firſt ſaw Conſtantine Cæſar." And then he deſcants on the excellencies of this iſland in a very florid ſtrain [F]. Some learned men (z) have ſuggeſted, that theſe words do not relate to Conſtantine's Birth, but to his being declared Cæſar. But if he was not declared Cæſar in Britain but in Gaul, as Archbiſhop Uſher, Biſhop Stillingfleet, and Juſtus Lipſius contend (a), then why does his contemporary Eumenius call Britain fortunate for what it had no ſhare in? or with what propriety doth he celebrate its praiſes on that account? That is ſuch an inconſiſtency as cannot eaſily be reconciled. But allowing Britain to have been the Emperor's native countrey, [as we are aſſured he was not declared Cæſar here] then the Panegyriſt's words are pertinent, and not otherwiſe.

Another author, whoſe words ſerve to prove that Britain was the native place of Helen and her ſon, is Fl. Lucius Dexter, who lived about the end of the 4th century [G], and who ſays, That Conſtantine ſurnamed the Great, ſucceeded his father Conſtantius Chlorus, a°. 306, in the Empire, and in the Government of Spain, being the ſon of Helen, a chief woman of Britain [H].

bine Helen [I]. And the ſame is aſſerted by many other writers: who fix particularly his native place at Colcheſter [K].

But, notwithſtanding all that can be ſaid on this ſubject, Roger Gale Eſq; in a letter to the Antiquarian Society [L], has thought fit to declare, That "it is very improbable that Conſtantine the Great was born in Britain. And "his reaſons are chiefly grounded upon a Chronological view of the time when he and his "father Conſtantius Chlorus lived, which he "thinks will ſet the matter in a true light. "According to him,

"Conſtantius Chlorus was born A. D. 250
"Conſtantine the Great 272
"Conſtantius Chlorus was ſent to Britain againſt Carauſius, } 292

"So that, ſays he, Conſtantine was twenty years "old when his Father came into Britain, and "conſequently it is highly improbable that he "ſhould be born there."

To ſupport this opinion, Mr. Gale ſays, That it is "without any authority ſome ſuppoſe, that Conſtantius came a ſoldier into Britain under Aurelian; for no Roman Hiſtorian whatever mentions Aurelian's being there. And Vopiſcus, who fully enumerates all his wars, mentions no ſuch thing; by which 'tis evident that he never was employed there [M]."

But, in anſwer to this, let it be obſerved in the firſt place, That, to argue from the Silence of Hiſtorians, is only a Negative Argument, which is far from being concluſive.

Next, who are thoſe Roman Hiſtorians to whom Mr. Gale pays ſo great a compliment, as to depend wholly upon their authority, whether Conſtantius came to Britain under Aurelian, or no? And we find, they are only thoſe little trifling Hiſtorians, ſtyled Hiſtoriæ Auguſtæ Scriptores, that may juſtly be ſuſpected not to have related Half of what had happened within the period they treat of [N]; and who are read only becauſe there are no better.

But even from them we learn, that Aurelian was very much employed in Gaul [O]; that he ſtopped the Incurſions of the Francs who ranged over that whole country, and utterly defeated them; on which account he is ſtyled the Reſtorer of Gaul [P]. And being ſo near Britain, which was then alſo full of Troubles and Commotions; it is no way improbable, that he ſhould either come over himſelf, or ſend ſome forces, and amongſt them a perſon of ſuch growing virtues as Conſtantius; who was great nephew of the Emperor Claudius [Q], of a warlike diſpoſition, and adorned with many other ſhining qualities, that could not fail of diſtinguiſhing, and recommending him to the Emperor's eſteem.

Mr. Gale goes on thus, "Others ſuppoſe with as little foundation, that Conſtantius Chlorus was ſent thither in the year 271. to pacify ſome diſturbances, and that He then married Helena the daughter of Coel king of Britain. —The Roman hiſtory is entirely ſilent, about this time, for 17 years as to the Affairs of Britain. Which ſhews, that all things in that iſland were then quiet, or neglected by the Romans, which is the ſame thing to my argument." But though the Roman Hiſtory doth not mention Conſtantius his being early in Britain, and his marriage with Helena [R], yet as they tell us nothing of what paſſed in the Interval of 17 years mentioned by Mr. Gale, I can ſee no reaſon why we ſhould not rather follow the account given, by the Britiſh authors, of this occurrence within that period of time; than leave ſuch a chaſm in our Hiſtory, merely becauſe other writers, who do not profeſſedly treat of the affairs of Britain, but only mention them occaſionally and in a very imperfect manner, ſay nothing of this marriage.

What Mr. Gale adds, ["Neither can it be imagined, that Aurelian would have ſent a youth of 20 or 21 years of age to have pacified a tumultuous or rebellious Province, had there been occaſion"] will not appear concluſive to any perſon, who remembers with pleaſure the Trophies of the victorious Duke of Cumberland at Culloden, when he was but a very few years older.

But ſtill Mr. Gale contends that Conſtantius "rather ſeems at that time to have been in the army of Probus one of Aurelian's Generals. —But it does not appear that Probus was ever in Britain. On the contrary, as the ſcenes of his Actions lie in other parts of the world, it is much more probable that Conſtantius was fighting under his banners, than commanding an army, and pacifying Troubles in a diſordered Province."

This is more than can be proved, nay there are ſome circumſtances which render it extremely probable that Probus was here. The [R] The Reader is to obſerve, That the Life of Conſtantius is not written ſeparately by any one ancient Roman author; on which account moſt of his actions in the former part of his Life are buried in oblivion. For, he is not much taken notice of, or mentioned, till after he had been declared Cæſar. One Claudius Euſthenius writ his life, but what is become of it we know not. Flav. Vopiſcus, p. 740.

Britans not only had a particular regard and affection for him, but they were very inſtrumental in his obtaining thoſe many ſignal victories in Gaul; wherein he defeated in ſeveral battles the Franks, Vandals, and Burgundians that had invaded the Roman territories, ſlew 400,000 of them at different times, and took 70 of their towns. Moreover he planted many of thoſe conquered Barbarians in Britain, which ſhews he had a perfect notion of the Iſland. And, as a reward for the Natives ſervices, permitted them to plant vines, and to have wine to rejoice their hearts [S].

Mr. Gale would have it believed, that Probus was all his reign employed in places diſtant from Britain, by ſaying that "the ſcenes of his Actions lie in other parts of the world." But his exploits juſt now mentioned plainly ſhew that he was ſufficiently employed in theſe parts of the world.

Moreover, let it be conſidered, That Conſtantius his chuſing Britain for part of his Province, preferably to Italy, which comprehended Rome, the capital of the world; ſhews that he had a very particular affection for Britain.

To which add, That Conſtantine ſeems to have known very little of the Greek language, and therefore 'tis very improbable that it ſhould be his mother-tongue; for when he ſpoke in public, it was always in Latin (b).

Upon the whole; The ſilence of Hiſtorians (eſpecially of ſuch Hiſtorians as have treated of this period) is no way concluſive: And, as it doth not make for me, ſo neither doth it make againſt me.

In order to pronounce with certainty, where Conſtantius was, or was not, in any part of his life, we ſhould have a better Account of him than we have. For (undoubtedly to the Reader's aſtoniſhment) during the 56 years of his life we have only theſe few Particulars of him, recorded in credible Hiſtorians (c). That he reduced Spain; came into Britain; fought under the banners of Probus; was Preſident of Dalmatia under Carus; came to reduce Carauſius; was declared Cæſar in 292, and after that, being ſent into Gaul, defeated above 60,000 of the Francs, who had invaded Batavia and the countries weſt of the Rhine; came again into Britain to reduce the Caledonians to obedience, and died at York 25 July, A. D. 306.

I ſhall conclude with obſerving, that whatever Inconſiſtencies or Anachroniſms are pretended to be found in thoſe writers which affirm that Conſtantine was born in Britain, and at Colcheſter; there are as great, if not greater, in thoſe who affirm that he was born at Naiſus: Witneſs Nicephorus, &c.

The Reader will be pleaſed to remember, That I do not contend for theſe things tanquam pro aris & focis: but the Love and Reſpect I have for this Place, to which I owe a great part of my Happineſs; and the due Regard I bear to Truth, have drawn theſe obſervations from me. And if they can ſatisfy the unprejudiced, or engage ſome learned and ingenious perſon in the further examination and clearing of this point, it will give me the great ſatisfaction.

But to return:

The reigns of Claudius II, and Quintilius were ſo ſhort, that nothing memorable happened under them.

L. Dom. Aurelian being choſen Emperor, [A. D. 270.] ſet himſelf immediately to bring the Empire under one head. Tetricus, one of the Thirty Tyrants, was then poſſeſſed of Britain and Gaul: But the Emperor's arms ſoon reduced him to obedience; and he was led in triumph, though permitted afterwards to enjoy his life, and ſome places of profit and honour (d). Conſtantius Chlorus was employed againſt him, or at leaſt in Britain; which had then ſome ſhare in the commotions wherewith the whole Empire was ſhaken, as hath been already ſhewn (e).

Bonoſus, a notorious drunkard, who made himſelf Emperor about this time, was a Britan by birth. He endeavoured, jointly with Proculus, to ſeize Britain, Spain and part of Gaul; but being defeated near Agrippina [Cologne] he hanged himſelf. And it was ſaid of him by way of joke, Here hangs a hogſhead, not a man. Aurelian alſo uſed to ſay of him, That he was born, not to live, but to drink (f).

Probus (Emperor after Tacitus, who was Aurelian's immediate ſucceſſor) gave the people of this Province, as well as the Gauls and Spaniards, leave to plant vines (g): which it muſt be ſuppoſed were unknown before, or at leaſt very ſcarce, in this iſland—But they have not turned to ſo good account here as in the two other Provinces, which enjoy a kinder climate, and a warmer ſun. One ſaying of his is memorable, That in a ſhort time ſtanding armies ſhould not be wanted or neceſſary. Which declaration, together with his ſtrictneſs to the ſoldiers, provoked them to murder that worthy Prince (h).

Carus who ſucceded Probus, [A. D. 282.] gave the government of Britain, with Gaul, Italy, Illyricum, Spain, and Africa, to his eldeſt ſon Carinus, who by his riot and luxury very much waſted this Province. But he was ſhortly after defeated and ſlain by Diocleſian, [A. D. 284.] who was advanced to the Empire by the Eaſtern army; and adopted M. Aur. Maximianus ſurnamed Herculius, as his aſſociate in the Empire (i).

In the beginning of this Emperor's reign, Carauſius, an Iriſhman [T], who had, by his [T] So O. Walker calls him. (Of coins and medals, p. 316.) Aurelius Victor (cap. 39.) ſtyles him Manapiæ civis. Now Menapia, or Manapia according to Ptolemy, was not in the Low-countreys but in Ireland; being the ſkill in navigation, and his courage and bravery, acquired great reputation was appointed governor of Bononia [Boulogne,] with a commiſſion to ſecure the Belgic and Armoric ſhores [i. e. the narrow ſeas] againſt the Saxon and Frank [U] pirates. But, as he appropriated what he took to his own uſe; and did not reſtore it to the right owners, or ſend it into the Emperor's treaſury; Maximian therefore gave orders to have him diſpatched out of the way. But Carauſius receiving intelligence of it, aſſumed the imperial dignity, and ſeized Britain (k). Thither he brought the fleet which he was entruſted with for the defence of Gaul, built more veſſels after the Roman model, was joined by the Roman forces here, kept out foreign troops, preſſed the merchants trading here into his ſervice, garriſoned Bononia, and converted the revenues of Britain, and Batavia [Holland] to his own uſe. Moreover he engaged many of the neighbouring nations into his intereſt, particularly the Franks, whom he had trained up to the ſea ſervice [W]. Maximian ſurpriſed at his boldneſs, marched againſt him as far as Gaul. But finding him too well eſtabliſhed, and having no conveniency to tranſport over his forces, he entered into treaty with him, and taking him his partner in the Empire, left him Britain for his ſhare, which he was the fitteſt to defend againſt all invaſions (l). He governed it about ſeven years, with great authority, and in perfect peace (m); repaired the Wall between the two Fyrths; and fortified it with ſeven caſtles (n).

In the mean time, the whole Roman Empire being full of revolts and commotions, Diocleſian and Maximian aſſociated to themſelves Fl. Valer. Conſtantius Chlorus, and Galerius Maximianus ſurnamed Armentarius, in the government, and declared them Cæſars. They made them alſo divorce their wives, and Conſtantius putting away Helena, married Theodora Maximian's daughter-in-law; as Galerius did Valeria daughter of Diocleſian (o).

Maximian, notwithſtanding his treaty with Carauſius, having ſtill a great deſire to get rid of his hated aſſociate, ſent Conſtantius with an army againſt him (p). He came with incredible ſpeed to Bononia [X], which Carauſius had ſtrongly fortified, and inveſted that place. But while he was ingaged in the ſiege, Carauſius was treacherouſly killed by Allectus, his boſom friend and prime miniſter: who thereupon uſurped the government, and held it three years (q): But was encountred and ſlain by Aſclepiodotus, captain of the life guard (r); who alſo taking upon him the Imperial dignity, was afterwards ſlain in battle.

I have dwelt the longer upon Carauſius, becauſe he ſeems to have been much converſant about Colcheſter, many of his Coins being found in and about this place. See Dr. Stukeley's Hiſtory.

Diocleſian and Maximian reſigning the Empire both on the ſame day, [A. D. 304.] though in different places, (a moſt uncommon and memorable event!) were ſucceeded by the two Cæſars above-mentioned, F. Conſtantius Chlorus, and Galerius M. Armentarius. They divided the Empire between them, and Conſtantius had to his ſhare the Weſtern Provinces, namely Italy, Africa, Spain, Gaul, and Britain: But he yielded the two firſt to Galerius, and contented himſelf with Spain, Gaul, and Britain (s). He ſpent ſome time in Britain, more time it ſeems than our trifling and ſuperficial Hiſtorians either knew, or have thought fit to tranſmit to poſterity [Y]. And he was employed in an expedition againſt the Caledonians, when he was ſeized with his laſt illneſs at York. His ſon, who had been for a conſiderable time kept by Galerius as an hoſtage or kind of priſoner [Z]; eſcaping by a ſtratagem, and killing all the poſt-horſes he uſed in his journey, to prevent being purſued (t), came to his father juſt as he was ſailing from Geſſoriacum to Britain, according to ſome (u); or, according to others (w), as he lay on his deathbed at York, and was by him declared Cæſar, or appointed his ſucceſſor. Conſtantius died A. D. 206, July 25, in the 56 year of his age.

[Z] The reaſon of his confinement was, the Emperor's jealouſy of him on account of his diſtinguiſhed merit and growing virtues; and his having too openly expreſſed his reſentment, becauſe he was not declared Cæſar at the ſame time with Severus and Maximinus. Galerius Maximianus, therefore, ſenſible of his ambition, and afraid of his enterpriſing genius, kept him as an hoſtage, or a kind of priſoner. And expoſed him not only to all the dangers of war, particularly againſt the Sarmatians, whom he entirely defeated; but alſo obliged him to combat with wild beaſts, in hopes of deſtroying him. In all theſe, Conſtantine acquitted himſelf with the greateſt bravery and ſucceſs; and in one of the latter killed a fierce lion let looſe againſt him: which glorious action is repreſented on a Medal of his; upon the reverſe of which is repreſented Hercules fighting the monſter, with an inſcription denoting the Emperor Conſtantine's valour, VIRTVS PERPETVA AVG. R. Gale's letter, as above. Aurel. Victor de Cæſaribus, c. 40. Euſeb. Conſtantin. l. i. c. 20. Excerpta de Conſtant. &c.

Immediately after this excellent Emperor's deceaſe, his eldeſt ſon Flav. Valer. Conſtantine, juſt now mentioned, (ſurnamed the Great) was ſaluted Emperor by the army; but he did not accept that high dignity till it was actually conferred upon him by Maximian (x). However, as ſoon as he was inveſted with it, he proſecuted thoſe wars againſt the Picts and other Caledonians, which his father had begun. Being reſolved to leave all quiet in this iſland before he left it, he penetrated even to the furtheſt parts of the ſame: and conquered ſome by force, others he won with money and civil and kind offices. Then croſſing the ſea, he conquered the Franks in Batavia [Holland] and other German nations, that were endeavouring to withdraw themſelves from the Romans obedience. Not long after, [A. D. 310.] he returned into Britain (y), to appeaſe ſome commotions raiſed by one Octavius, who had endeavoured to make himſelf maſter of this country (z).

In the mean time, Maxentius, ſon of M. Aur. Maximianus Herculius above-mentioned, having laid claim to the Empire, at Rome; Conſtantine drew a very large army out of Britain, Gaul, and Germany, amounting to 90,000 foot and 8000 horſe, and marched into Italy [A. D. 311.] againſt Maxentius, whom he totally defeated (a). Conſtantine's drawing ſuch large forces out of Britain, proved of pernicious conſequence to this country; as will preſently be ſhewn. Prodigious quantities of this Emperor's coins are daily found in and about this town; which is a proof of his having been much in theſe parts.

One very great Alteration he made in the government of the whole Empire, which we muſt here explain, becauſe this town and country were included in that new regulation. He divided the Romam Empire into Four Præfectures; viz Italy, Gaul, Illyricum, and the Eaſt; which, as to civil affairs, contained under them fourteen large Dioceſes or Provinces. Britain, one of the fourteen, was ſubject to the Præfect [A] of Gaul, and governed by a Vicar, or deputy; the firſt of which was Pacatianus. Under him were two Conſular deputies, anſwerable to the number of the Provinces (Britannia prima, & ſecunda;) and three Preſidents, who were to determine all cauſes criminal and civil.

As for the Military Goverment, there were in the Empire two Generaliſſimo's [B], one for the Eaſt, and the other for the Weſt. Britain was under the Generaliſſimo of the Weſt; and to him were ſubject, the Count of Britain, the Count of the Saxon ſhore throughout Britain, and the Duke of Britain. The Count of Britain took care of the inland parts of the iſland; and had the command of ſeven companies of foot, [about 3000 in number] and nine troops of horſe, [about 600.] The Count of the Saxon ſhore, who was to guard the Eaſtern and Southern coaſts from the Saxon piracies [C], had under him ſeven companies of foot [about 2200] two troops of horſe, [about 200] the ſecond legion, and a cohort. The Duke of Britain, who was to defend the borders or marches againſt the Caledonians, Picts, Scots, &c. had the command of thirty eight garriſons conſiſting in all of Fourteen thouſand foot, and Nine hundred horſe. So that the ſtanding Roman forces in Britain were, Nineteen thouſand Two hundred foot, and about Seventeen hundred horſe (b).

There were beſides, in this eſtabliſhment, many other officers; as the Count of the Imperial Largeſſes [D], who diſtributed the Emperor's gifts, or largeſſes; and had under him here, a receiver-general [E]; a Treaſurer [F]; an overſeer of the Gyneſium, i. e. of the place where the cloaths of the Emperor and Army were woven [G]. Here was alſo a Keeper of the privy purſe [H], who had under him a private Auditor [I]. And the Vicar's court ſwarmed with Officers, too tedious to be mentioned in this place [K], who pilled, and enriched themſelves at the expence of, the Province.

Beſides this regulation, Conſtantine altered the former Diviſion of Britain. We have ſeen that the Emperor Severus divided it into two Provinces. But Conſtantine divided it into Four; viz. Britannia Prima, bounded by the Thames, the Severn, and the Britiſh Channel: Britannia Secunda, being what is now called Wales: Flavia Cæſarienſis, the midland parts of the iſle, wherein lay Colonia-Camulodunum [Colcheſter:] Maxima Cæſarienſis, all the Northern parts as far as Severus's wall. To which Theodoſius, General under the Emperor Valens, added a fifth Province, and called it Valentia, comprehending the country between Severus's wall, and Lollius Urbicus's rampart (c).

I ſhould have obſerved before, to Conſtantine's immortal honour, that he was the firſt Roman Emperor, who made public profeſſion of the Chriſtian religion, and protected and encouraged it by wholeſom Laws. His father Conſtantius had ſecretly favoured the Chriſtians, and ſtopped the perſecution againſt them. But Conſtantine declared himſelf their protector; and, jointly with Licinius, publiſhed an edict in their favour, at Milan, in the year 313 (d).

The Chriſtian Religion had been planted in this iſland, even in the Apoſtolical times, and very probably by St. Paul, as hath been proved by Archbiſhop Uſher (e), and Biſhop Stillingfleet (f). However, it ſeems not to have taken much root here, ſince K. Lucius, a petty Prince, whoſe dominions are ſuppoſed to lye in Britannia prima, between the Thames and the Channel [L], ſent Elvan and Medwin to Eleutherius biſhop of Rome, A. D. 167, deſiring him to ſend over ſome perſons to inſtruct him in the Chriſtian religion (g). Eleutherius ſent him accordingly Damian, Fagan, and Aaron, who inſtructed him in Chriſtianity, and baptized him, with as many as would embrace that holy religion (h). Lucius founded St. Peter's Church in Cornhill, and made it an Archiepiſcopal ſee; of which Thean, or Theon, was the firſt Archbiſhop: Who had for his ſucceſſors, before the Saxons arrival, Elvan; Cadar, or Cadoc; Obin, or Owin; Conan; Palud, or Palladius; Iltut; Dedwin, or Theodwin; Thedred, or Theodred; Hilary; Gwythelin, or Guidelin (i).

Biſhops and Archbiſhops ſees were alſo, in proceſs of time, fixed in XXVII other conſiderable cities, which were then in Britain; among which was Cair-colon [Colcheſter] (k). But the names of the Biſhops that preſided over this town are not recorded; nor any of them mentioned any where till the year 314; when three Britiſh Biſhops were at the council of Arles, viz. Eborius of York, Reſtitutus of London, and Adelfius of the city Colon [M]. Some Britiſh Biſhops were alſo at the council of Sardica in 347 and at the council of Arminum in 359; and, among the reſt, unqueſtionably, the Biſhops of this city (l).

Thus Chriſtianity flouriſhed in this City and neighbourhood for many years, as we have reaſon to preſume; eſpecially under the auſpicious reigns of Conſtantius, and Conſtantine the Great, and through the favour and encouragement of the moſt pious Helena [N], who undoubtedly ſhewed a tender regard to this her native place, and built St. Helen's Chapel (m). But the barbarous and heatheniſh Saxons, who became early poſſeſſed of theſe parts, baniſhed Chriſtianity from hence for a while; as I ſhall ſhew under the next ſection.

Another remarkable event in the life of Conſtantine, was, His removing the ſeat of the Empire from Rome to Byzantium, [A. D. 330.] called from him Conſtantinople. This proved pernicious not only to Rome, to Italy, and to all theſe Weſtern parts, but to Britain itſelf. For he wanting very large armies, to oppoſe the Perſians who threatned the Eaſtern parts of the Empire, not only drew away the Legions out of the Frontier-garriſons here, building forts and caſtles to ſupply the want of them; but alſo carried away ſuch prodigious numbers of the choiceſt and beſt of the Britans, to ſerve in his armies, as left this iſland weak and defenceleſs, and a prey both to the Pict and Scot plunderers, and moreover to the Saxon pirates (n).

Conſtantine, after having arrived to the age of 66, died at Achyron near Nicomedia (o), May 22, a. d. 337. A. U. C. 1089. And was conſecrated after his deceaſe [O].

We are too much intereſted in Helena, to let her paſs without giving a further account of her. She was the beautifulleſt woman in the country, extremely well ſkilled in muſic, and adorned with all other, acquired as well as natural, accompliſhments. Her father, having no other child, had cauſed her to be educated in ſuch a manner as might beſt fit her to govern (p). Withal ſhe was a woman of uncommon charity and piety; and had been converted to Chriſtianity by her ſon (q), who committed the overſight of the ſeveral churches he was building to her care; wherein ſhe acquitted herſelf in the moſt laudable manner (r). Having a very great deſire to viſit the place where our Saviour had ſuffered, ſhe made a voyage to Jeruſalem, tho' ſhe was near fourſcore. In her journey, ſhe diſpenſed very conſiderable gifts and benefactions to many perſons, towns, and ſocieties (s). Finding that the Heathens (offended at the ſuperſtitious veneration paid to the place of Jeſus Chriſt's burial) had covered the tomb with a great quantity of earth, and erected over it a Temple conſecrated to Venus (t); ſhe ordered that Temple to be pulled down, and the earth to be removed, in order to build there a magnificent Church (u). While the workmen were preparing the place for the foundation, they diſcovered, on the 3d of May, 319, three Croſſes, whereon Jeſus Chriſt and the two thieves had been crucified. Helena, overjoyed at the finding of ſo great a treaſure, ſent part of the Croſs of Chriſt to her ſon as a moſt valuable preſent, and left the reſt at Jeruſalem (w). This occurrence, or invention, is what hath raiſed the reputation of St. Helen ſo high, and rendered her ſo extremely venerable among the worſhippers of the croſs: And for this very reaſon it is, that the Arms of Colcheſter, her native place, are a Croſs between three crowns, or coronets. However, this pious Princeſs died at Rome, in her ſon's arms, 18 Aug. a° 327 (x).

In order juſt to continue the thread of the Hiſtory, I ſhall go on, in the remainder of this ſection, to give a brief Account of the Decline of the Roman Affairs in this Iſland, and of the ſeveral Ravages the poor Inhabitants were continually expoſed to; wherein theſe Parts had but too great a ſhare.

Conſtantine left three Sons; Conſtantine junior, Conſtans, and Conſtantius; who divided the Empire between themſelves, according to their father's direction. The firſt had all on this ſide the Alps, namely Spain, Gaul, and Britain: The ſecond, Rome, Italy, Afric, Illyricum, Macedonia, Peloponneſus, and Greece: The third, Aſia, and the Eaſt. Annibalianus Delmatius, nephew of Conſtantine the Great, had Armenia and the neighbouring Provinces (y). Delmatius was ſlain, ſome time after, by his ſoldiers (z). Conſtantine, not ſatisfied with his ſhare, ſeized on part of Italy, but was defeated and ſlain by Conſtans's army near Aquileia, [A. D. 340.] (a). Whereupon Conſtans, exalted with his victory, poſſeſſed himſelf of Britain, and Conſtantine's other Provinces; and came hither with his brother Conſtantius, in the midſt of winter, [A. D. 343.] to quiet ſome commotions of the Scots and Picts (b). But Conſtans giving up himſelf wholly to his pleaſures, particularly to hunting, ſo diſguſted his ſubjects, that ſome of them conſpired againſt him; and Magnentius, commander of the Joviani and Herculiani, aſſumed the imperial Dignity. Conſtans, hearing of it, endeavoured to conſult for his ſafety by flight; but was overtaken and ſlain at a town called Helena, near the Pyrenees (c).

Thereupon Britain declared for Magnentius, whoſe father was a native of this iſle, though an inhabitant of Gaul; but Conſtantius defeated him in a bloody battle in Pannonia: and afterwards preſſed him ſo cloſe, that he murdered himſelf at Lugdunum [A. D. 353.] after a ſhort reign of three years and a half (d). Many fair Coins of his are frequently found about this town.

At this time Gratian, ſurnamed Funarius, was General of the Forces throughout Britain; but having countenanced Magnentius, he was recalled, and puniſhed with a ſevere confiſcation. Conſtantius, now without a rival, and in whoſe time a whiſper was a crime, acted in the ſame rigorous manner towards all thoſe in Britain that had eſpouſed Magnentius's party. His deteſted inſtrument was one Paul, a notary, and a ſordid flatterer; who committed numberleſs extortions and cruelties (e).

In the mean time, this country being miſerably harraſſed with the incurſions of the Picts and Scots [P], Lupicinus, maſter of the armory, a warlike man, and an expert ſoldier, was ordered with forces to Britain; who accordingly repaired, in the midſt of winter, to London, in order to concert proper meaſures for the ſecurity of the Province (f).

In Julian's time, Alypius was Vicar of Britain, which is all we know of him (g).

In the reign of Valentinian I. [A. D. 364.] the whole world being full of wars and tumults, Britain was alſo infeſted with the continual incurſions of the Picts, and Saxons, Scots and Attacots (h). And, by confederacies among them, this country was reduced to extreme miſery. For, Nectaridus Count of the Saxon ſhore was ſlain; and Fulloſaudes the General ſurpriſed and deſtroyed (i). In this exigency and diſtreſs, Theodoſius, eminent for his valour and good fortune, was diſpatched hither [A. D. 368.] He landed at Rutupiæ [Richborough] with a brave army, and marched directly to London. The Picts, then divided into the Dicaledonæ [or Deucaledonii] and the Vecturiones; the Attacottii [Q] and the Scots, ranged over the whole countrey for ſpoil and plunder. At the ſame time, the Franks and Saxons were perpetually pirating, and commiting depredations on our coaſts. Theodoſius having therefore divided his army into ſeveral bodies, fell upon the enemies, which were roving up and down laden with ſpoil. Soon were they routed, and forced to leave their booty behind, conſiſting of cattle and priſoners they had taken from the Roman ſubjects. After he had reſtored the booty to the reſpective owners, ſaving only ſome ſmall part to refreſh his army; he entered London in a kind of triumph, which, though in the utmoſt diſtreſs before that time, revived in hopes of future ſafety and protection. This ſucceſs ſpurred him on to greater deſigns; yet he cautiouſly conſidered, that ſo large and mixt a multitude as the Enemy, compoſed of various and very fierce nations, was not to be routed but by ſtratagem and ſurpriſe. Having therefore publiſhed an Act of indemnity, he ordered all deſerters, and others diſperſed up and down the country for proviſions, to repair to him. This brought in many; upon the ſtrength of which reinforcement he thought to take the field, but deferred it upon ſeveral accounts, till Civilis was come, whom he had deſired to be ſent over as Deputy-Præfect of Britain; and alſo Dulcitius a gallant and experienced Captain (k). Then having with uncommon diligence, gathered together a good army, he marched out of London, and took in all ſuch places as could favour him in cutting off the enemy by ambuſcades. Defeating by theſe means ſeveral rapacious clans, who preſuming upon ſecurity, had the inſolence to invade the Roman territories, he laid the foundation of a laſting peace: rebuilding and repairing the Cities, Caſtles, and Garriſons, which had been exceedingly damaged (This, we may ſuppoſe, among the reſt) and ſtrengthening the frontiers with watch-towers and intrenchments. theſe and the like excellent regulations, he was ſent for to court, and left the Provinces here in a joyful and flouriſhing condition, A. D. 369 (l).

Valentinian I. died in 374. His ſon and ſucceſſor Gratian, who ſhared the Weſtern Empire with his brother Valentinian II, did, in the 5th year of his reign, give the Empire of the Eaſt to Theodoſius, ſon of the brave General lately mentioned. But Magnus Maximus, deſcended from Conſtantine the Great, and according to ſome [R], born in Britain, commander of the Roman forces here, thinking himſelf more worthy of that honour than Theodoſius, reſolved to aſſume the title of Emperor (m). He defeated firſt the Picts and Scots, who were making continual inroads into theſe Provinces. And having either put it out of their power to continue their ravages, or ſown diviſion between them; He embarked for Gaul, carrying with him a very large Army, which never returned: Whereby Britain was robbed of her military forces, of her rulers, and of her numerous youth; and, thus drained of all that could bear arms, became afterwards an eaſier prey to her rapacious Invaders (n). Maximus with his forces went and fixed his court at Treves; ſpread one of his wings into Italy, the other as far as Spain; and, with the terror of his name, brought under ſubjection the yet-unconquered Germans (o). Gratian advanced againſt this uſurper; but, after ſeveral ſkirmiſhes, being deſerted by his own ſoldiers, he was aſſaſſinated by the procurement of Maximus: who having alſo dethroned Valentinian II. was himſelf vanquiſhed, and beheaded by Theodoſius, A. D. 387. The latter reſtored Valentinian, but he was ſoon after murdered by Arbogaſtes (p).

After the death of Theodoſius I, [A. D. 395.] the Empire was divided between his two ſons. Arcadius was made Emperor of the Eaſt, and Honorius of the Weſt. As the latter was but ten years old, the famous Fl. Stilico was Regent during his minority. His firſt care was to ſend Victorinus, a man of a fierce temper, with a Legion into Britain to awe the Northern invaders (q). He killed great numbers of them, and drove the reſt out of the Roman Provinces; and ſo delivered the inhabitants from ſpoil and captivity (r).

But, ſhortly after [viz. A. D. 403.] the Roman Empire being hard preſſed on all ſides, and Alaric King of the Goths threatning even Rome itſelf; the Roman forces were drawn from the extremities, to ſave that capital, the heart of the Empire. Among the reſt, Victorinus was recalled with the Legions: Whereupon the barbarous Picts and Scots entered the Roman Provinces, and committed terrible devaſtations every where (s).

The Britans finding themſelves thus harraſſed by their rapacious neighbours, and deſpairing of any aſſiſtance from Rome, reſolved to elect an Emperor of their own [A. D. 407.]; and, for that purpoſe, pitched upon an Officer of great credit among them, called Marcus (t): But not having the good fortune to be generally liked, he is quickly ſlain or dethroned; and another, called Gratian, a countryman of theirs, was choſen in his room. Being a man of a cruel and bloody diſpoſition, he meets, four months after his election, with the ſame fate as Marcus (u).

Conſtantine, a common ſoldier, was next raiſed to the Imperial Dignity, purely for the ſake of his name, which was thought to carry a good omen. He being a man of courage, and of a genius far above his former condition, beat back the northern people into their country, and then concluded a peace with them. This ſucceſs inſpiring him with a higher conceit of his merit and fortune, he was not content to reign in Britain, but formed the deſign of becoming maſter of the whole Empire. To that end, paſſing over into Gaul, with the remains of the Britiſh army as well natives as Romans, he ſends word of his election to Honorius; who being then hard preſſed by the Goths, was forced to own him for his aſſociate in the Empire. Conſtantine fixed his reſidence at Arles, which he named Conſtantina, and made it his capital. But, ſoon after, his Ambition admitting of no bounds, he formed the project of becoming maſter of the whole Roman Empire, and marched towards Italy to dethrone Honorius. But being taken, he was ſent to the Emperor, and beheaded (w).

The Britans thus left to themſelves, and deſtitute of the Romans aſſiſtance, forthwith took arms; and reſolving to ſtand on their own defence, renounced all further obedience to the Roman Empire; which they believed they might juſtly do, as it could no longer afford them any protection [S]. And they beginning to be a Burden to the Emperor Honorius, that he might free himſelf at once from their future importunities, he voluntarily reſigned the Sovereignty of the Iſland, and diſcharged the inhabitants from their Allegiance to the Empire (x), A. D. 410.

But ſoon did the diſtreſſed Britans feel the great want of the Romans protection. For, the Picts and Scots, encouraged by their abſence, renewed their ravages and incurſions with greater fury than ever. Upon which the Britans ſent to implore the Romans aſſiſtance, with promiſe of perpetual Submiſſion and Allegiance to the Empire. Accordingly, a Legion was diſpatched hither, which ſlew great numbers of the rapacious enemies, and obliged the reſt to fly with precipitation into their mountains.

However, upon the Legion's departure, they repeated again their devaſtations; which obliged the Britans to ſend Embaſſadors, with clothes rent and ſand upon their bare heads, to beg aſſiſtance once more of their old protectors the Romans (y). This was about the beginning of Valentinian the IIId's reign; when the Roman affairs being ſomewhat reſtored by the victories of the famous Aëtius over the Wiſigoths and Burgundians, this General, out of pity for the wretched condition of the Britans, ſent them one Legion commanded by Gallio of Ravenna, or, as ſome ſay, by Maximian (z). This aid arriving unexpectedly in autumn, made great ſlaughter among the enemy (a), and drove the reſt beyond the Walls. But the Romans not being able to ſtay, plainly told the Britans, That they could not any more undertake ſuch laborious Expeditions for their defence: And adviſed them to inure themſelves to arms, and to fight for their country, eſtates, wives, children, and liberties; and boldly encounter their enemies, who could not overcome them, unleſs they gave themſelves up to cowardice and lazineſs. They alſo exhort them to repair the Wall of Severus with ſtone; and aſſiſt them in that work with all diligence, making it eight feet thick and twelve high. Moreover, they build Towers on the Southern coaſt, at proper diſtances, to hinder the enemies landing. Then leaving the inhabitants patterns how to make their weapons; and uſing proper encouragements, to ſpirit up that lazy people, they took their laſt farewell of Britain (b) [T]. This was in the year of Chriſt 434, and 489 years from Julius Cæſar's firſt landing in this iſland, or 391 from the more abſolute Conqueſt of it by Claudius.

§. 2. State of Colcheſter under the Saxons.

UPON the final departure of the Roman forces from this iſland, the condition of the Inhabitants of that part now called England, became much worſe than ever. The Picts, Scots, and other Barbarians [U], then without controul ranged over every part. They poſſeſſed themſelves not only of all the North, but extended their ravages throughout every corner of the kingdom. So that, by continual devaſtations and troubles, the miſerable Britans were brought into ſuch horrible diſtreſs, that they were ſtarved, or forced to rob one another for preſent ſubſiſtance (c). This Famine obliged even the hungry Picts and Scots to leave this country quiet for a while. And during that reſpite, through the natural Goodneſs of the Britiſh ſoil, there enſued ſuch an agreeable Plenty of all things, as was never remembered in any Age before (d). In which quiet interval, the Britans formed themſelves into ſeveral Governments, and elected Kings of their own; [though, for want of memoirs, we know the names only of very few (e); and to which of them this part of the Iſland was ſubject, cannot be determined.] But, inſtead of making a thankful and proper uſe of their preſent Happineſs and Proſperity, the inhabitants of South-Britain grew vicious, and ran into all manner of Luxury and Extravagance (f); too common a failing in human Nature, and in this Nation in particular. As a juſt Puniſhment for which, a dreadful Plague raged amongſt them, and ſwept off ſuch numbers that the living could ſcarce be ſufficient to bury the dead. At the ſame time, their old Invaders were preparing to renew their incurſions; whereupon they had recourſe once more to the Romans for aſſiſtance (g). But Attila having entered the Empire with a moſt formidable army, the Britans moſt moving entreaties could not be regarded. Being thus left without refuge, they followed the ſame method as their anceſtors were wont to do in times of common danger; that is, they elected a Monarch [W]. But the Diſcord that reigned among the principal members of the State, prevented the good effects of this choice. For, ſeveral great men having fortified themſelves in divers parts, acted like Sovereigns. All theſe petty Tyrants, jealous of one another, far from owning the Monarch elect, ſought only to deſtroy him, in order to be choſen in his room. Thus the Britans, whilſt they endeavoured to unite themſelves under one Head, were plunged the deeper into anarchy and confuſion.

We know not the names of theſe Monarchs till Vortigern, Count or King of the Dunmonii, elected in the year 445 [X]. He was by no means qualified to reſtore the affairs of the Britans: For, as he attained to the ſupreme Dignity by artifice and cabal, and by the murder of his predeceſſor Conſtans (h), he wholly bent his thoughts to maintain himſelf in the throne by the ſame wicked methods, regardleſs of the general welfare of his ſubjects. Living thus in equal Dread of the enemies of the State, and of his own Subjects, he deviſed an Expedient to free himſelf, as he imagined, from the Danger of the one, and the Plots of the other. That was, to call in the Saxons; inſtead of permitting the Picts to come and poſſeſs again South-Britain, to which they had a better title than any other Nation, as their anceſtors had been unjuſtly diſpoſſeſſed of the ſame by the Romans.

However, as Vortigern could not put his deſign in practice without the conſent of the Bri-tans, he ſummons a general Aſſembly; and, after deſcribing the extreme Miſery of the Nation, occaſioned by the Enemies repeated Devaſtations, he propoſes the calling in the warlike Saxons to their aſſiſtance; by whoſe means they would ſoon be in a condition, not only to reſiſt, but alſo to attack in their turn, their cruel and conſtant oppreſſors (i).

This Propoſal being approved of, it was agreed, after ſome debates, That the Saxons ſhould have the iſle of Thanet in Kent, as a proper place to land their forces, and alſo convenient whenever they might want to return into their country: And that the Saxon ſoldiers ſhould be allowed pay, as ſettled by agreement on both ſides.

Thereupon Embaſſadors are ſent [A. D. 449.] to Witigiſil, General of the Saxons, who were then in poſſeſſion of what is now called Holland. After hearing the cauſe of their coming, Witigiſil aſſured them, That the Saxons would ſtand by the Britiſh nation in their preſſing neceſſities. Accordingly a ſupply of 9000 men was granted for that ſervice, on the conditions abovementioned. But the Saxons not thinking fit to ſend over at once ſo conſiderable a body of troops, to a country they had but an imperfect knowledge of; therefore, under pretence that they were not all ready, they ſhipped off only a part of them, on board three kiules, or long boats, with their commanders Hengiſt and Horſa, ſons of Witigiſil (k). The nature of thoſe veſſels ſhews, the men could not be above 1000 in number. They arrived at Ebbsfleet in the iſle of Thanet; where Vortigern ſtood ready on the ſhore, and received them with all demonſtrations of joy and reſpect imaginable, putting them in immediate poſſeſſion of the iſland according to agreement. After they had refreſhed themſelves, Vortigern led them againſt the Picts and Scots, that were advanced as far as the place now called Stanford in Lincolnſhire, and whom they utterly routed (l). They conſtantly defeated them afterwards in ſeveral encounters (m): So that the enemies being diſcouraged by theſe frequent defeats, abandoned their conqueſts by degrees, and retired into their own country; dreading nothing ſo much as meeting with the Saxons.

Vortigern overjoyed to ſee his projects thus far happily ſucceed; in order the more effectually to engage Hengiſt and Horſa to ſupport him in his power, preſents them with ſome lands in Lincolnſhire, near the place where they had defeated the Picts and Scots. And there they ſhortly after built Thong-caſter, to ſecure the booty they ſhould take from the enemy (n).

The Britans growing uneaſy at this ſettlement of the Saxons, Hengiſt and Horſa ſend for the remainder of the 9000 men (o); which came over in ſixteen large veſſels, [A. D. 450.] and among them Eſcus, and Rowena, eldeſt ſon and daughter of Hengiſt.

Hengiſt having now formed the project of ſettling in Britain, to which he was encouraged by the fruitfulneſs of the place, and the indolence and luxury of the inhabitants (p); makes uſe of his daughter Rowena to accompliſh his ambitious deſigns. Having obſerved that love and pleaſure were Vortigern's predominant paſſions, he invites him to a feaſt; and ſo manages, that this laſcivious Prince falls in love with Rowena, and deſires her in marrage, though he had a wife living and ſeveral children. But he could not obtain her father's conſent, without giving up Kent to him (q), which he peopled ſome time after with Jutes (r); and of which he took upon him the name of King in 455 [Y].

Though Hengiſt had a good body of troops here under his command, he did not think it ſufficient to execute his vaſt projects. The Britans therefore freely venting their complaints againſt him, and Vortigern; he thence took occaſion to perſuade that weak Monarch, to let him ſend for more forces over (s). Which having done, Octa brother of Hengiſt comes over with forty ſhips, bringing with him his ſon Ebuſa, and a great number of Saxon troops, [A. D. 452.] Theſe, firſt ravaged the Orcades; then making a deſcent on the coaſts of the Picts, obliged them to retire Northwards. As ſoon as the Picts had thus deſerted part of their country, the Saxons fixed themſelves there ſo ſtrongly, that it was not poſſible to diſpoſſeſs them. At firſt they ſettled on the north ſide of the Tine towards the Eaſt [now Northumberland;] and afterwards advancing towards the South, drove, by degrees, the Britans beyond the Humber. With theſe freſh ſupplies Hengiſt found himſelf ſtrong enough to be in no great fear of any attempt from the Britans: Nay he began to ſhew leſs regard for Vortigern; and, under colour of wanting frequent recruits to keep up the number of his forces, ſent for continual ſupplies from Germany, without aſking his leave (t). At length he throws away the maſk, and demands larger allowances for his troops [Z]; declaring, unleſs it was granted him, he would break the treaty, and waſte the whole country (u). The Britans greatly ſurprized and provoked at theſe menaces, not only refuſed to comply with the Saxons unreaſonable demands, but alſo began to rouze themſelves, and think of means to free their country from theſe inſolent gueſts, whom they now looked upon as their mortal enemies. For that purpoſe, juſtly deeming Vortigern unworthy of the ſupreme command, the chief of the Britans entered into a confederacy, and ſuddenly compelled him to make his ſon partner with him in the government, and to leave the adminiſtration of affairs to his care: So that on a ſudden Vortimer was inveſted with the whole royal authority, leaving his father only the empty title of King without any power (w). Hengiſt, finding he was like to have a fierce war upon his hands, haſtily concluded a peace with the Picts (x); and then made a powerful diverſion in the North, by means of them, and the Saxons ſettled in thoſe parts.

The courſe of the wars between him and the Britans are not very diſtinctly related. Only we find, that in the years 455, 456, and 457, three battles were fought, in Kent, between the Britans and the Saxons: The firſt near the river Derevent [Darent;] the ſecond near Episford, or Eglesford, [Aylesford,] in which Horſa, and Catigern Vortimer's ſecond ſon, were ſlain (y); and the laſt near Crecanford [Crayford,] wherein Vortimer was entirely defeated, with the loſs of more than 4000 men, and his beſt officers (z): So that, not being able to keep the field, he was forced to ſhut himſelf up in London (a). In the mean while, the barbarous Saxons having no oppoſition committed terrible ravages and unheard-of cruelties [A]; of which theſe parts undoubtedly had an unhappy ſhare. What might have ſaved the Britans, proved, through their unreaſonable factions and animoſities, their further ruin. For, Aldroen king of Armorica having ſent 10,000 men to their aſſiſtance under the command of Aurelius Ambroſius [B], ſecond ſon of his brother Conſtantine (b); Vortimer's party repreſented him as an uſurper, who was come to ſeize the Crown, under colour of defending it. Both ſides having at length wrought themſelves up into the utmoſt fury, a civil war enſued, which laſted ſeven or eight years (c). And thus the miſerable Britans, always a prey to their inteſtine diviſions, inſtead of uniting againſt the common enemy, deſtroyed one another. At length, the wiſeſt of both parties conſidering, that their diſſenſion would be the cauſe of their common ruin; an end was put to it, by parting the kingdom between the contending Princes: Vortigern and Vortimer had the Eaſtern (and this Town and Country among the reſt), and Ambroſius the Weſtern part; divided from one another by the Roman highway called afterwards Watling-ſtreet.

The civil diſſentions among the Britans being thus appeaſed, both ſides re-united againſt the common enemy; and the war began again [A. D. 466.] It was carried on with various ſucceſs till the year 473; when a battle won by Hengiſt, gave him an opportunity of enlarging his territories (d). Vortimer, the principal promoter of the war, died in 475 (e). He had always ſtrenuouſly oppoſed a peace, fearing, when the war was over with the Saxons, he ſhould be obliged to begin another with Ambroſius: But, upon his death, both ſides, after a twenty years war, began to ſhew an inclination for peace (f). And ſo it was concluded [A. D. 475.] upon theſe terms, That each party ſhould keep what he poſſeſſed (g).

Hengiſt, who had for many years paſt entertained ſtrong hopes of becoming maſter of Britain, finding himſelf obliged, after a twenty years war, to ſit down contented with Kent, and ſome few other ſmall diſtricts, was the moſt uneaſy party at this peace. But being a man of unbounded ambition, and void of all principles of honour and juſtice, he reſolved to extort by fraud and violence, what he could not obtain by fair and honourable means. For that purpoſe, putting on a peaceable and contented diſpoſition, he invited Vortigern (who was, as we have obſerved, a man of pleaſure) to a ſplendid entertainment [A. D. 477.] Vortigern went thither, attended with 300 of his principal ſubjects; and unarmed, as ſuſpecting no treachery: But, towards the end of the feaſt, a quarrel being deſignedly raiſed by Hengiſt; at a certain ſignal given [C], the Britiſh Lords were all murthered by the Saxons, who had concealed daggers, or ſhort ſwords, for that purpoſe (h). Vortigern's life was ſpared, and he was only made priſoner: But he could not purchaſe his Liberty without delivering up to the Saxons a great tract of land bordering upon Kent, which Hengiſt added to his ſmall territories. This was afterwards divided into three Provinces, and peopled with old Saxons (i). Thoſe that were planted Eaſt with regard to the reſt, they named Єaꞅꞇ Sexa or Єaꞅꞇ Seaxe, Eſſex: thoſe that were South of the ſame, Suð-Seaxe, Suſſex: and thoſe that were in the middle between them, Miððel Seaxe, Middleſex.

From this time, Eſſex remained in the peaceable poſſeſſion of the Saxons, as far as we can find: And, ſince it was not involved in the calamities and diſtractions, that prevailed in the other parts of Britain for ſome years, we ſhall have no occaſion to attend the Saxons in their ſeveral motions; at leaſt till the year

The buildings, as well publick as private, were ruined: the prieſts were commonly ſlain at the very altars, and the biſhops deſtroyed, without any reſpect, together with the people; and there were ſcarce any left to bury the dead. Some miſerable remains, that had fled to the mountains, were purſued, and ſlaughtered in heaps. Others, to avoid ſtarving, were forced to ſurrender themſelves to the enemies, thinking themſelves happy if they could but purchaſe their lives with the loſs of their liberty. 527, when Eſſex was erected into a diſtinct kingdom, one of the Heptarchy.

In the mean time, as our Conſtitution is built upon the Saxon foundation, more than ſome perſons imagine [D]; It will be uſeful and neceſſary to ſhew, 1. In what manner that people divided the Country they were ſettled in: 2. The ſeveral orders and degrees amongſt them: and 3. What government they eſtabliſhed here.

They firſt indeed came over as Auxiliaries, and for pay: But as ſoon as they had made any part of the Country their own, we may ſuppoſe, they divided and ſettled it in the ſame manner they were accuſtomed to in their own country. What Form of Government theſe Saxons particularly had, we cannot preciſely determine, for want of monuments. But, as the Saxons, Jutes, and Angles [E], who peopled South-Britain, were all inhabitants of Germany, and for the moſt part went under the general appellation of Germans, let us therefore examine what account Tacitus, one of the beſt ancient Hiſtorians, who hath profeſſedly treated of the Germans, gives of their Policy.

When they were overſtocked with inhabitants, they uſed to ſend out Colonies, to make conqueſts upon their neighbours, and obtain ſettlements for themſelves [F]. Theſe adventurers were a voluntary Society; joint-partners in the expedition, and not hired for pay, as at preſent. Therefore the property of the new-acquired territories was in the whole collective body of the conquerors. They ſo divided their acquiſitions, as to place the ſame families or neighbourhoods together; who being linked by ſeveral relations and affinities, were the moſt likely to ſit down together peaceably, and be united in the ſame intereſts. They had no fixed inheritance; but ſeverally enjoyed the lands by turns, according to the number of the occupiers; and divided them amongſt themſelves in proportion to their dignity or eminence. The largeneſs of the fields made the partition eaſy. Every year they changed their arable lands, and yet had ground enough to ſpare: For they did not value either gardens or orchards, but only corn-fields (k). Julius Cæſar more fully expreſſes this particular, in the following words: "No man had any certain quantity of land to his own uſe; but their magiſtrates and princes did every year allot a certain portion of land to kindreds and tribes inhabiting together, as much, and in ſuch places, as they thought fit, and the next year appointed them a new place. For which they aſſigned many reaſons: viz. Leſt they ſhould be led away by continual uſe from the practice of war to huſbandry: Leſt they ſhould much enlarge their territories, and the ſtronger deprive the weaker of their poſſeſſions: Leſt they ſhould grow too nice in their houſes, and unaccuſtom themſelves to bear heat and cold: Leſt they ſhould learn covetouſneſs, the ſource of factions and diſſenſions: And that by this equal diſpoſition they might content and ſatisfy the common people, when they obſerved the equality between their revenues and the poſſeſſions of the great ones (l)."

They were divided into theſe Four Orders of men; the Æthelinga, or Nobility; freolica, Freemen; frioletan, Freedmen; and lazzos, ſervants, or ſlaves. From the Nobility they choſe their Governors, or Ealdormen, called by the Roman writers Reges, or Kings; for they had not Kings originally, though they eſtabliſhed ſome in their new acquiſitions here (m). Their power was limited (n). By way of honor, and alſo for their maintainance, they received from every man, within the cities or diſtricts under their juriſdiction, a quantity of cattle or corn: which was the beginning of Fees and Feudal Tenures (o). The neighbouring Nations, under their amity and protection, ſent them alſo choice horſes, arms, &c. that were in great eſteem amongſt them (p). But ſome tell us, that, in time of peace, the German nations had no common ſuperior of the ſeveral cantons each nation was divided into, but upon any war one was choſen [with power of life and death (q)] to command the army: and continued in that ſtation ſo long only as the war laſted; for, as ſoon as it was at an end, his name and dignity of King ceaſed, and he became as before (r). Theſe Generals, or Heretoghan, were choſen purely on account of their known bravery; and directed the troops more by their example than by their command and authority (s). The Freemen were the Thanes of the ſecond and third claſſes; merchants, artificers, and countrymen, poſſeſſed of bock-land, i. e. ſuch ſtate as they could convey by will or otherwiſe (t). The Freedmen were but one degree above the ſlaves; ſeldom conſidered in their maſter's houſe, and never employed in any publick office. Of the Lazzos, or ceorls, ſome were perfect ſlaves, and reckoned part of their owner's ſubſtance, and employed in family-drudgeries and ſervices. Others were ſo far free, that each managed his own houſe and family: But they furniſhed their Lords with a certain quantity of grain, cattle, and apparel, which they required of them as huſbandmen, and no more. And their wives and children performed all the other ſervices of the houſe (u). Their Princes, Gerefas or Graves (w), determined matters of leſs conſequence, but the whole community was conſulted in affairs of greater moment. And ſuch things, as were determinable by the people, were alſo taken in-

[D] For, the main of our Conſtitution, our Language, great part of our common Law and many of our Manners and Cuſtoms, are plainly derived from our Saxon anceſtors.

[E] They differed more in Name than Nation, and are in good authors but ſynonymies of the ſame country people, as Mr. Selden hath rightly obſerved. Epinomis, c. 3. See Bp. Stillingfleet's Orig. Britan. p. 305, 306.

to conſideration by the Princes. They held their ſtated aſſemblies on certain days, either at the new or full moon; and ſat armed in thoſe councils as the commonalty liked. Silence was enjoined by the Prieſts, who were chairmen here, and had a coercive right. Then the King, Gereſa, or other perſon, according to his age, nobility, reputation in arms, or eloquence, delivered his ſentiments, in a perſuaſive more than commanding manner. If the ſpeech was diſapproved, the aſſembly teſtified their diſlike by a rude and confuſed noiſe: If the propoſal was approved, they ruſtled their ſpears together; which was the moſt honorable kind of aſſent. Accuſations were alſo preferred, and judgments, or trials, for capital crimes held, before theſe great councils. Their puniſhments were proportionable to the offence: traytors and deſerters they hanged upon trees; and drowned ſluggards, or infamous perſons. For ſlighter faults they impoſed mulcts of horſes and other cattle, part of which went to the Gereſa or State, and part to the ſufferer, or his relations. In theſe ſame aſſemblies were chief men [Cent-graves, Bur-graves, and Tun-graves] choſen, to adminiſter juſtice in the ſeveral territories and villages (x). Each of theſe had a Hundred aſſeſſors, or aſſociates, out of the people or commonalty, for their counſel and authority (y). In the Burghs, the community of Burgeſſes exerciſed the ſelf-ſame prerogatives and powers, that the Comes, Earl, or Lord of the manor, afterwards did within his county, or manor, and being generally Lords of the diſtrict of land whereof the Burgh conſiſted, they exerciſed therein not only a judicial but alſo a legiſlative power. Their chief magiſtrate was uſually called Port-gereſa, contracted afterwards into Port-reve; and ſometimes Burgrave, or Burgmeſter. From theſe ancient cuſtoms of the Germans in general may be deduced the Grounds and Rudiments of the Saxon Laws, Government, and Policy eſtabliſhed in this nation. Particularly, in imitation of the Great Council mentioned here, they formed a Mycel, or Wittena, Gemot in each of the Seven Kingdoms, and a general one of the whole Heptarchy: anſwerable to our Parliament. They alſo introduced the ſeveral Courts of the Tything, Hundred, Trything, Shire-gemot or Folcmote, Burghmote, &c.

The preſent allotments and boundaries of the Pariſhes, with the Names of them, are all likewiſe in general Saxon, and were fixed by that people: who brought us alſo our excellent Conſtitution, and that glorious Liberty, which we have hitherto preſerved, and hope ſhall ever maintain inviolable; while moſt of our neighbouring nations, who were derived from the ſame original, groan under a grievous and unhappy ſtate of Slavery.

But to return: From the time Hengiſt had peopled Eſſex and Middleſex with Saxons and Jutes, they had been governed by a deputy under the king of Kent (z). But the condition of them, and of this Town together, was altered in the year 527 (a), when the Kingdom of the Eaſt-Saxons, or Eſſex, was erected. This kingdom comprehended not only the preſent county of Eſſex [G], but alſo Middleſex, and part of Hertfordſhire; much the ſame diſtrict as what is now the Dioceſe of London, or the ancient kingdom of the Trinobantes. The principal cities therein were Colcheſter, and London its capital, which afterwards became the metropolis of all England. The founder of this kingdom was Erchenwin, ſon of Offa; deſcended from Woden the common parent of the Saxon Kings (b). Our ancient hiſtorians tell us nothing of this Prince, except his name and pedigree; relating neither the number of his forces, the place of his landing, nor ſo much as the leaſt encounter he had with the Britans (c). Probably, he was governor under Octa king of Kent, and taking advantage of his weakneſs, engaged the people to acknowledge him for king (d). He died in 587 (e).

His ſucceſſors in the throne of Eſſex were, Sledda; Sæbyrht; Saxred, Siward, and Sigebriht, who reigned jointly; Sigebriht the little; Sigebriht the good; Swithelm; Sibbi, and Sighere; Sigehard and Senfrid; Offa; Selred; and Swithred.

Sæbyrht, ſon and ſucceſſor of Sledda, was the firſt Chriſtian king of the Eaſt-Saxons. For thoſe people, at the time of their firſt ſettling here, were Heathens; and cruelly perſecuted all ſuch as profeſſed Chriſtianity. But, A. D. 604, Mellitus being ſent by Auguſtine the monk, to preach the goſpel to the Eaſt-Saxons, eſpecially at London, Sæbyrht was converted by his preaching, and the example and influence of his uncle Æthelbyrht, king of Kent; who built the cathedral church of St. Pauls at London (f), and removed the ſee thither from St. Peter's in Cornhill. And then this Town and Country were made part of the ſee of London (g). Sæbyrht himſelf was noted for his piety, and zeal for Religion; and founded [A. D. 611.] the Church and Abbey of Thorney, near that city, which lying Weſt of the ſame, was for that reaſon named Weſtminſter (h).

Sigebriht the Good reſtored Chriſtianity in his dominions, from whence it had been baniſhed ever ſince the death of Sæbyrht. He was convinced of the abſurdities of Idolatry by his intimate friend Oſwi king of Northumberland, whom he uſed frequently to viſit; and, by his good inſtructions, being perſuaded (with the conſent of his people) to make open profeſſion of the Chriſtian religion, was baptized by Finan biſhop of Lindisfarne. Upon his return to his dominions, he deſired Oſwi to ſend him ſome teachers, to inſtruct his ſubjects in the faith of Chriſt. Accordingly, Cedd, and another prieſt, came and preached the goſpel in theſe parts with very good ſucceſs. Cedd finding the number of Chriſtians increaſing, took a journey to Lindisfarne, and was conſecrated biſhop of the Eaſt-Saxons; and then returning into theſe parts, erected [H] Churches in many places, and conſecrated prieſts and deacons, to aſſiſt him in the work of the miniſtry. He exerciſed it chiefly in the moſt unhealthy, and, as we may ſuppoſe, the moſt ignorant, parts of this country; about Ithanceſter, and Tilbury, or the preſent Hundreds of Dengy and Rochford (i). The other better and more populous places are not mentioned, probably becauſe they did not ſo much want his inſtructions; as many Chriſtians had undoubtedly been eſtabliſhed there ever ſince Sæbyrht's reign, or even long before Auſtin's coming.

[G] During the Heptarchy, England was not divided into Counties, but into Hides; and the Kingdom of Eſſex was then reckoned to contain 7000 hides. (Camden. Britan. Introduc. col. 225.) But afterwards the whole kingdom was cantled out into Counties, Hundreds, Ridings, Wapentakes, and Tythings: not indeed all at once, but by degrees; and were ſo ſettled by K. Alfred the Great.

After the death of Swithred, the laſt king of Eſſex mentioned above, there were ſome few other Kings [I], but their names are not recorded any where; for the hiſtory of this kingdom is the moſt imperfect of any. All we know, is, That after Kent had been conquered by Ecbryht, this kingdom among the reſt, ſubmitted to him [A. D. 823.] And ſo it was diſſolved, the Heptarchy being converted into a Monarchy.

Under Ecbryht's ſucceſſors, this Town and Country, now become part of the Kingdom of England, remained without any great alterations; eſpecially after the ſeveral Diſtributions of it were finally ſettled by Alfred the Great. But from the year 787 to 1013, it was miſerably haraſſed by the piracies and depredations of the Danes (k); and came ſucceſſively under the power and government of Four of their Kings; namely, Swægn; Edmund Ironſide; Cnut; and Hardicnut. And this leads us to conſider, §. 3. The State of this Town under the Danes.

These Danes were poſſeſſed not only of the preſent kingdom of Denmark, but alſo of ſome part of the coaſt of Holland, and of Norway. Thus conveniently ſituated for navigation, they became very powerful at ſea; and as trade was not then much in faſhion, they chiefly employed themſelves in Piracies; and ravaged the coaſts of Europe, particularly of England, France, and the Low-Countries.

Their firſt deſcent in England, was upon the Weſtern coaſts in the year 787 (l). They repeated their deſcents again in thoſe parts, in the years 789 (m), 833, 835, 837, 840, 845, 851, 860, 876 (n).

Kent, Eaſt-Anglia, Lincolnſhire, and even London itſelf, the metropolis of the whole kingdom, were likewiſe expoſed to their depredations, for ſeveral years, as may be more particularly ſeen in the Note [K]:

Northumberland, and the other parts adjoining, felt alſo their cruel ravages; and, in the end, they made themſelves maſters not only of the country north of the Humber, but of all the heart of England, which uſed to compoſe the kingdom of Mercia, wherein London was then included. They even reduced Alfred the Great to ſuch ſtraits, that, being deſerted by his troops, he was forced to lye hid for a while in the iſle of Athelney, till he could aſſemble ſufficient forces together, and recover part of his dominions by dint of ſword in 878 (o).

But, to take more particular notice of this Diſtrict, and neighbourhood: In 866, the Danes came and wintered among the Eaſt-Angles [in Suffolk and Norfolk.] However, they ſeem not to have entered Eſſex at that time, but to have ſpread themſelves Northward and Weſt-ward. But coming back in 870, they ſlew Edmund, tributary king of the Eaſt-Angles, from whom St. Edmund's-bury took its name; and ravaging all that country, made themſelves maſters of it, killing great numbers of the inhabitants, and burning the Monaſteries of Bardney, Croyland, Peterburgh, and Eley (p): for thoſe brutiſh plunderers were ſtill heathens. K. Ethered fought nine pitched battles with them in 871, but ſtill they kept their ground; and having brought Eaſt-Anglia wholly into their own power, ſettled there in 879, under the government of Godrun (q): who, the year before, entred into a treaty with K. Ælfred, and embraced Chriſtianity (r). By this treaty the Danes engaged never to invade Weſſex again. But they remained in poſſeſſion of the whole country north of the Humber, and of the late kingdom of Mercia; as alſo of Eſſex, as bounded by the rivers Thames and Lea, and with it of this Town in particular: that is, of above one part in three of England.

Alfred, ſenſible that a powerful Fleet was the beſt ſecurity againſt future Daniſh invaſions, took the opportunity of this peace to furniſh himſelf with a conſiderable one; and putting out to ſea, deſtroyed thoſe rovers where-ever he could meet them. Particularly ſome of his veſſels that were ſailing from the coaſt of Kent northward, ſurpriſed ſixteen of the enemies ſhips at the Sture's-mouth [near Harwich] took them all, and put the men to the ſword. But, in their return, they fell among a ſtronger fleet of Danes, ſet out by the Eaſt-Angles, who had broke the peace with K. Ælfred; and they not only took and deſtroyed thoſe ſhips of his, but alſo many others about the Thames mouth (s). Notwith-

[K] In 832 they ravaged the iſle of Shepey; and wintered there in 854. In 838 they landed in Lincolnſhire, Eaſt Anglia, and Kent, with an army; over ran thoſe countries; and extended their ravages as far as Canterbury, Rocheſter, and London. In 851, they wintered in the iſle of Tenet; and, the next ſpring, coming up the Thames with 350 ſhips, landed near London, where they committed great ravages, as they did alſo at Canterbury, but were defeated by K. Ethelwulph and Athelſtan at Aclea, or Okley in Surrey: as they were again by Ealhere, in 853, in the iſle of Tenet; notwithſtanding which, they wintered there again in 865. The Kentiſhmen offered them a ſum of money, to go off quietly, but the treacherous barbarians, after the agreement, ravaged the country with fire and ſword. In 872 they wintered at London; as they did at Fulham in 879. And beſieged Rocheſter in 885, but could not take it. Chronic. Saxon. under thoſe reſpective years.

ſtanding this advantage, Ælfred retook London from them, which he repaired and fortified, "as he did alſo many other places and towns in "the kingdom" (t). Godrun died in 890; whereupon this Town and country came again into Ælfred's poſſeſſion, who made Bertheolf Earl of the ſame (u).

The Daniſh pirates had left our coaſts unmoleſted from the year 885 to 893, and turned their arms againſt France. But in 893, a band of them came with 250 ſhips to Romney, and entrenched themſelves at Appledore: Another band landing ſhortly after in the Thames-mouth, built a fortification at Middletun [Milton,] and ravaged the adjoining country in a mercileſs manner (w).

Before K. Alfred marched againſt them, he endeavoured to ſecure the reſt of their countrymen ſettled in Northumbria and Eaſt-Anglia to his obedience, by exacting a new oath of fidelity from them, and taking hoſtages from the latter: But, notwithſtanding ſuch engagements, theſe faithleſs barbarians joined the new-come rovers, upon every occaſion, in their plunders and ravages (x).

Alfred, in order to prevent the junction of the two bands that had landed in Kent, went and poſted himſelf between them [A. D. 894.] and though he thereby prevented their junction, he could not hinder their robbing in ſmall parties. When they had got a good booty together, they attempted to carry it over the Thames into Eſſex, to their ſhips that lay at anchor on that coaſt: but the King's forces over-took them at Farnham, and having diſperſed them, recovered the booty. Thence the rovers fled over the Thames, and up the river Colne into a certain iſland [L], where the King's army beſieged them as long as their proviſions laſted: When they were ſpent, they returned home. And the King went and ſupplied their place with the forces of the county [M]; but the Danes remained there blocked up, becauſe their king having been wounded in the late battle, was not fit to be removed. In the mean time, the treacherous Northumbrian and Eaſt-Anglian Danes, notwithſtanding their engagements, finding their countrymen here too hard preſſed, made a diverſion in their favour, with two fleets. One of 40 ſail, going round the north of Scotland, went and attacked a fort on the north coaſt of Devonſhire: the other of 100 ſhips, going down the Channel, laid ſiege to Exeter. Alfred, informed of this, flew to the relief of that place, with a large army; leaving ſome forces to block up the Danes here. Another party of Engliſh, reinforced by the Londoners, came and attacked a fort at South Bemfleet; where Hæſten, and the other Daniſh band, had poſted themſelves from Middleton and Appledore, it being ſtronger by nature than thoſe places. The fort was ſoon taken with all the booty therein, and razed. And of the Daniſh ſhips ſtationed there, ſome were broken to pieces, others burnt, and the reſt carried to Rocheſter, and London (y).

Shortly after, the remains of theſe Danes, and ſnch as had retired into the iſland in the river Colne, as above-mentioned, aſſembled at South-Shoebury, and built a caſtle there, to ſecure their booty and ſhipping, according to their uſual method: And then made incurſions quite through England, as far as the Severn; where they were either ſtarved, or moſtly deſtroyed by the King's forces. The remnant of them fled into this county, and retired to their caſtles or entrenchments [N], and to their ſhipping. And gathering together a large army before winter, chiefly out of the Northumbers and Eaſt-Angles, and leaving their wives, ſhips, and money in Eaſt-Anglia, they renewed their incurſions, and penetrated as far as Cheſter. When they could ſubſiſt no longer there, they retired [A. D. 895.] through Northumbria and Eaſt-Anglia into this country; with ſo much precipitation that the King's forces could not come up with them. And even theſe cowardly plunderers, for their further ſecurity, ſheltered themſelves in Mereſige [Merſey,] an iſland at the mouth of the Colne: where not caring, or not being able, to winter, they ſailed up the Thames, and drew their ſhips up the river Lea, about twenty miles north of London [at Hertford, as is ſuppoſed] and there erected a caſtle or fortification for their defence [A. D. 896.] But K. Alfred having made ſeveral cuts through what is now called Hackney-marſh, and turned the current of the river from Oldford through Stratford, deprived them of all opportunity of getting them off again. Whereupon the Danes quitted them, and retired to the Severn. The year following [A. D. 897.] a plague that raged in England drove them over into France, after they had made greater devaſtations than that dreadful diſtemper. To keep them off from the coaſts for the future, K. Alfred invented new gallies, by the help of which he deſtroyed as many as attempted to land afterwards. Whereupon the Danes ſettled here, ſubmitted to him, and acknowledged him for ſovereign of all England. But this great and renowned king enjoyed peace and quietneſs only a very ſhort time; for he departed this life in 901, after a troubleſome, though glorious, reign of 29 years and a half.

His death brought freſh Troubles, particularly to this Town and country. For his ſon Edward, ſurnamed the Elder, having ſucceeded him; Æthelwald, eldeſt ſon of Ethelbriht king Alfred's elder brother, reſolved to diſpute the crown with him, and landed in Eſſex [A. D. 904.] with an army of Danes and Normans, which ſoon made themſelves maſters of theſe parts. But Æthelwald being ſlain, the year following, in an engagement near Bradenſtoke in Wiltſhire, peace was reſtored to this kingdom; the Danes here ſettled acknowledging Edward for ſovereign, as they had done his father, and the Normans returning home. And, about this time, he became again maſter of the beſt part of Eſſex, which had been many years in ſubjection to the Danes (z).

In order to ſecure the poſſeſſion of it, and to awe the wavering inhabitants, K. Edward came, in the beginning of the year 913, to Maeldune [Maldon,] and encamped there the whole ſummer, whilſt a town was building and fortifying at Witham. In 920 [O], he came again to Maeldune, which he rebuilt, and fortified; for we may ſuppoſe it had ſuffered much during the Danes depredations. All this while Colcheſter, as being a ſtronger place, remained in the hands of the Danes: but, in 921, a large army of Engliſh aſſembled together, in autumn, as well from this county, as from Kent, Surrey, and the neighbouring towns; and coming to Colneceaſter, [Colcheſter] beſieged this Town till they took it. After which they plundered it, and killed all the Danes that were therein, except a few that eſcaped over the wall. Immediately after, the Danes drew together a large army out of Eaſt-Anglia [Suffolk, and Norfolk,] taking alſo ſome pirates to their aſſiſtance; and, in order to revenge their late defeat, went and laid ſiege to Maeldune. But multitudes coming to the relief of that place, the Danes quitted the ſiege, and fled: And being purſued, many hundreds of them were ſlain. In the beginning of November following, K. Edward came to Colcheſter with an army of Weſt-Saxons, and repaired or rebuilt the wall where it was neceſſary [P]. Then many in this country, as well as Eaſt-Anglia, that had been under the Danes power; and eſpecially the Daniſh army there, and at Cambridge, ſubmitted to K. Edward, and ſwore fealty to him (a).

After ſeventy years reſt, theſe part began to be diſturbed again by the Danes. For, in 991, they landed in Suffolk, and plundered Gypeſwic [Ipſwich,] the forces that were ſent againſt them not being able to ſtop their ravages. In the end, to prevail upon them to deſiſt, an unhappy expedient was deviſed by Siric Archbiſhop of Canterbury; which was attended with very pernicious conſequences, as it ſerved only to encourage them in their invaſions: Namely, The giving them a large ſum of money [Q], ſtyled in proceſs of time Danegeld (b). Much better would that money have been laid out in fortifying the Kingdom againſt their inſults!

In 993 they landed again, and pillaged Gypeſwic; and thence [paſſing by this Town, which probably they were not ſtrong enough to attack,] they advanced to Maeldune, where having overthrown Byrhtnoth the king's ealdorman, they remained maſters of the field of battle: ſo that Æthelred was forced to make a peace with them.

The year following, having attempted in vain to become maſters of London, they ravaged the coaſts of Eſſex, and Kent, &c. and wintered at Southampton. For ſeveral years after, they ravaged many places with fire and ſword, and committed horrible barbarities (c).

As their countrymen ſettled here were joining them upon all occaſions, Æthelred ordered a general maſſacre of them; which was executed the 13th of November 1002, with implacable fury and cruelty, on thoſe that were diſpers'd in Weſſex and Mercia. But this was ſeverely revenged afterwards. Though a large fleet was fitted out by the Engliſh in 1008, they could not hinder another roving band of Danes from wintering, the very next year, in the Thames; which drew their ſubſiſtance from this county and parts adjacent. And, by the end of the year 1011, they were become maſters not only of this county, but of Middleſex, Eaſt-Anglia, and twelve other counties (d). The deciſive battle of Aſſandune, or Aſhdon near Bartlow, in 1016, fixed their dominion here for a while [R].

From the year 1016, till the Conqueſt, or Acquiſition of William the Baſtard, in 1066, we find nothing particular relating to this Town or County.

THAT great and unexpected Revolution, one would have thought could have made no great Alteration in the Saxon Laws and Conſtitution; ſince both Normans and Saxons were originally of the ſame Northern Stock, and therefore may be ſuppoſed to have agreed in the Eſſentials of Government and Policy. The Religion of both Nations was likewiſe the ſame, with its manifold Errors, and Deviations from true and genuine Chriſtianity. Thus far therefore there could be no great Alteration.

But almoſt a total one was made in Property, and the Poſſeſſors of the Lands; the Saxon Owners being in general deprived of their Maners and Lands, which were given to the Norman Chiefs and Advanturers. This is plainly evident from Domeſday-book, wherein very few Names appear in the Liſt of the Owners of the Lands within this County, that look like, or can be ſuppoſed to be, the ancient Saxon Poſſeſſors. See the Liſt of them in the Introduction to the Hiſtory of Eſſex.

The lower ſort of People indeed that could not make proper reſiſtance, or quietly ſubmitted, were not maſſacred, but protected. But then let it be remembered, that they had no property, nor any thing to loſe, being conſidered only as Appendages, or part of the Stock, if I may ſo expreſs it, of the reſpective Maners.

When the Survey, entered in Domeſday-book, was taken, the Lordſhip and Demeſnes of this Town belonged to the King; and there is in that Survey a long Liſt of the King's Burgeſſes, or Tenants, that paid him rent; which by their Names appear to be Saxon.

Moſt probably, nay certainly, the Conqueror did not chuſe to unpeople his Towns at once, as he muſt have done had he turned out the Saxon Inhabitants. For the Normans were then unſkill'd in Trade, and the quiet Manual Arts; nay they ſlighted and under-valued them, eſteeming nothing honorable but a rapacious, wandring, Military Life [S].

However, what the ſtate of Colcheſter was in the time of K. William I, will appear by the following Extract of that original Survey, commonly called Domeſday-book, of which an exact copy, as far as relates to this Town, is given in the Appendix [T]. Now by that it appears (e), That the Biſhop of London had in Colcheſter 14 houſes and four acres, paying no rent except ſcot, unleſs it was to the Biſhop. In the ſame, Hugh held of the Biſhop, two hides and one acre, for which he paid rent. Always two carucates in demeſne, and one plough-land for the Tenents, and two villans, and 11 bordars, and one ſervant, ſix acres and a half of meadow. Now one mill, Then and afterwards it was worth 40 ſhillings now 50.

The next article in that Book (f), relating to Colcheſter, begins with Greenſtead, of which an abſtract is given below in the account of that pariſh.---After which it is ſaid, That the Burgeſſes claimed cuſtom and ſcot out of Lexden, lying near the land which Godric held.

Then follows a Liſt of the King's Burgeſſes, who paid rent.

The number of thoſe Burgeſſes was 276, who had 355 houſes, and 1296 acres of land; beſides 51 acres of meadow.

After that, we have an account of ſome great Men, who had poſſeſſions in this Town.

Hamo Dapifer had one houſe, and one court, or Hall, and one hide of land, and 15 Burgeſſes, holden by his predeceſſor Thurbern in Edward the Confeſſor's time; All which uſed then to pay rent, except the Hall: And the Burgeſſes ſtill paid ſo much a head, but nothing for their arable land, and the hide they held of Hamo. In the hide there was then one carucate, or plough-land, but at the time of the Survey none. Six acres of Meadow. All which was worth in K. Edward's time iv l. and ſome time the like was paid afterwards, but now 40 s.

Manſune two houſes and four acres. Goda one houſe. Eudo Dapifer five houſes, and 40 acres of land, which the Burgeſſes held in K. Edward's time, and paid all the rent uſually paid by Burgeſſes, but now pay only by poll. All this, with the fourth part of St. Peter's Church, pays 30 s.

Hugh de Montfort one houſe, which his predeceſſor Godric held in K. Edward's time, and then paid the King's rent, but now none.

Roger Pictavienſis one houſe, which his predeceſſor Alflet held in the time of K. Edward, and paid the Kings rent, but now doth not, nor hath done ſince Roger became poſſeſſed of it.

Earl Euſtace 12 houſes, beſides one which Engelric hath ſeized. In K. Edward's time they paid the King's rent; but now do not, nor have done ſince Euſtace hath enjoyed them. They are worth 12 ſhillings.

William, the Biſhop's nephew, two houſes, which Turchil holds, and pays rent.

Otto the Goldſmith, three houſes lying at Eſceldeforde, which the Counteſs Alueva held, and they paid the King's rent, but now do not. And this is part of the Queen's land.

The Abbat of Weſtminſter four houſes, which Earl Harold held at Ferigens, and they paid then rent, but now do not.

Goisfrid de Magnaville two houſes, which Geny at Erlige held in K. Edward's time, and they paid rent, but now do not.

Sueno one houſe, which Goda held at Elmeſtade in K. Edward's time: It then paid the King's rent, but now they pay only head-money.

William de Wateville, one houſe of his own name, which Robert Wimarc held in K. Edward's time; and it paid rent, but now doth not.

Turſtin Wiſcard three houſes of John Fitz-Waleram, and half a hide of land, which two Burgeſſes held in K. Edward's time; and they paid the King's rent, but now pay none. That half hide was then worth 10 ſhillings, and he ſometimes hath received ſix ſhillings, now five.

Ranulf Piperell five houſes, which Ailmar at Terlinge held; in the time of K. Edward; and they paid rent, but now do not: one of them is without the walls.

Radulf Baignart one houſe, which Ailmar Melc at Tollenſum held in K. Edward's time; and it then paid rent, but now does not.

The Abbeſs of Berchingis three houſes, and ſhe then paid rent, but not now.

Alberic de Ver two houſes and three acres of land, which Ulwine his predeceſſor held in K. Edward's time; and they then paid rent.

The King's Demeſnes in Colcheſter, 102 acres of land, of which ten are meadow, wherein are ten bordars, and beſides that 240 acres between paſture and heath: And all this is let to ferm by the King.

In common among the Burgeſſes Fourſcore acres of land, and eight perches round the wall, of all which the Burgeſſes have ſixty ſhillings a year for the King's ſervice, if need be; if not, they divide it in common.

And the Cuſtom is, For the King's Burgeſſes to pay yearly, fifteen days after Eaſter, two Marks of ſilver; and that belongs to the King's ferm. Likewiſe ſix pence a year out of each houſe;

[S] 'The Towns were ſituated either within the demeſnes of the King, or the Lands of the great Barons, and were almoſt entirely ſubjected to the abſolute will of their maſter. The languiſhing ſtate of Commerce kept the inhabitants poor and contemptible; and the political inſtitutions were calculated to render that Poverty perpetual. The Barons and Gentry, living in ruſtic plenty and hoſpitality, gave no encouragement to the Arts, and had no demand for any of the more elaborate produce of Manufactures: Every profeſſion was held in contempt but that of Arms.——It appears from Domeſday, that the Boroughs were, at the time of the Conqueſt, ſcarce more than country Villages; and that the inhabitants lived in entire dependance on the King or great Lords, and were of a ſtation little better than ſervile. They were not then ſo much as incorporated; they formed no community; were not regarded as a body politic; and being really nothing but a number of low dependant tradeſmen, living, without any particular civil tie, in neighbourhood together, were incapable of being repreſented in the ſtates of the Kingdom.' . . . which may be employed either for the maintenance of the King's ſoldiers, or for an expedition by ſea or land: And that to be paid, whether the King hath ſoldiers, or undertakes an expedition.

And, for thoſe Six pences, the whole City paid in K. Edward's time, in lieu of all debts, Fifteen pounds five ſhillings and three pence, a year. Of which the Moneyers paid Four pounds, in the time of K. Edward; and now Fourſcore pounds, and four quarts of honey, or forty ſhillings and four pence: Beſides 100 ſhillings fine to the Sheriff. And ten ſhillings and eight pence for the maintenance of Prebendaries.

Moreover, the Burgeſſes of Colcheſter, and of Meldune, pay 20 pounds for the privilege of coining money; which was ſettled by Waleram. And they appeal to the King, that he hath remitted them ten pounds. And Walchelin, the Biſhops tenent, demands of them forty pounds.

Then follows an account of St. Peter's Church, of which an abſtract is given below under that pariſh.

This is the Subſtance of that moſt ancient and valuable Record, ſtyled Domeſday-Book, as far as it has a relation to this Town.

COLCHESTER, now become a fixed and ſettled part of the Engliſh Monarchy, will not ſo much require a diſtinct Hiſtory as it hath done hitherto. I ſhall therefore only ſet down, in order of time, what hath occurred in each King's reign, relating more immediately to this place.

Under K. William IId, we find nothing remarkable concerning it: Only, that it was put by him under the care or government of Eudo Dapifer [U], the munificent Founder of St. John's Abbey (g).

K. Henry I. granted Letters patent to the Tenents of his Manor of Colcheſter. Theſe Letters were preſerved among our Records in Q. Elizabeth's reign (h), and undoubtedly were exceeding curious and valuable. But they are now loſt.

In the reign of K. Stephen, and alſo in the 9th and 17th years of K. Henry II, the Crown was ſeized or poſſeſſed of this Town; and it was let in ferm to the Sheriff of Eſſex and Hertfordſhire [W]. But, in the 32d and 33d of K. Henry II, and even before, it was granted to the Men or Burgeſſes of Colcheſter for a Fee-farm of 42 l. [X].

In the beginning of the ſame K. Henry's reign, the Burgeſſes were in poſſeſſion of King's-wood-heath; which, for reaſons not particularly mentioned, the King took again into his own hands in the 14th year of his reign (*). They had alſo then, and in the time of K. Henry I, the Cuſtoms, or Duties of the water, and of the banks or ſides of the ſame (i).

K. Richard I, confirmed the ancient Privileges of this Town, and alſo enlarged them very much by his Charter; which is the moſt antient we have now extant (k).

During the fierce Conteſts between K. John and his Barons; in 1215, Saher de Quincy Earl of Wincheſter having brought an army of foreigners into this kingdom, beſieged Colcheſter-caſtle; but hearing that the Barons at London were haſtning to its relief, he withdrew to St. Edmund's-bury. However, he, or another party, ſoon made themſelves maſters of it; and plundered this Town as they had done Ipſwich, and other places: But the king retook it, after a few days ſiege.

The year following, in the beginning of K. Henry the Third's reign, Lewis ſon of Philip II. king of France, having been invited over by the diſcontented Barons, made himſelf maſter, not only of this caſtle and town, but alſo of all the Eaſtern parts of England (l).

In the reign of K. Edward I, very large Sums were impoſed and aſſeſſed upon this Nation [Y]. Particularly in the 1ſt and 8th of his reign, a Fifteenth was levied upon this Town and the Liberties; as appears by the Rolls, ſtill preſerved: And a Tallage, in the 4th of his reign, to which this Town paid 64 l. 18 s. 10 d. In the 24th of the ſame reign a Seventh was alſo raiſed, within the precinct and liberty of the Burgh of Colcheſter, on the goods and chattels every one had the Michaelmaſs before, by the oath of twelve of the Burgeſſes [Z]: Of the manner of which aſſeſſment be pleaſed to take theſe few inſtances, from the original Roll [A]: "Richard Tubbe had, the day aforeſaid, 1 quarter and a half of Robert Lord Fitz-Walter had, the day aforeſaid at his manor in the vill of Lexden, 8 quarters of rye, pr. of each quarter 5 s. &c."

But the moſt minute and remarkable Taxation was as follows; viz. In the 18th of this ſame king, the Parliament having granted his Majeſty a Fifteenth of all the Moveables in England; which Grant was afterwards repeated, and extended to all the Cities and burghs (*): Colcheſter was accordingly aſſeſſed thereto, among the reſt, on the 29th of that King, anno 1300. The original Taxation for that year is ſtill extant. The number of Perſons therein aſſeſſed in this Town and the Liberties, was Three hundred and ninety; and the whole Sum they were taxed at amounted to 34 l. 12 s. 7 d. As the manner of aſſeſſing theſe Fifteenths is but little known, I ſhall lay a ſpecimen of it before the Reader, from this curious Roll [B].

"1. Roger the Dyer had, on Michaelmaſs day laſt, in his treaſury, or cup-board, 1 ſilver-buckle, price 18 d. 1 cup of mazer [maple] pr. 18 d. In his chamber, 2 gowns, pr. 20 s.---2 beds, pr. half a mark---1 napkin and 1 towel, pr. 2 s. In his houſe, 1 ewer with a baſon, pr. 14 d.--- 1 andiron, pr. 8 d. In his kitchin, 1 braſs-pot, pr. 20 d.---1 braſs-ſkillet, pr. 6 d.---1 braſs-pipkin, pr. 8 d.--- 1 trivet, pr. 4 d. In his brew-houſe, 1 quarter of oats, pr. 2 s.---woad-aſhes, pr. half a mark.---1 great fat for dying, pr. 2 s. 6 d. Item, 1 cow, pr. 5 s.---1 calf, pr. 2 s.---2 pigs, pr. 2 s.---each 12 d.---1 ſow, pr. 15 d. Billet-wood and fagots for firing, pr. 1 mark.

And they did not ſpare even the pooreſt perſons; as appears by this, among many other the like inſtances. "John Fitz-elias, weaver, had, the day aforeſaid 1 old coat, pr. 2 s.---1 lamb, pr. 6 d.

Sum 2 s. 6 d.---The Fifteenth of that 2 d."

In the 6th of K. Edward II, a Tallage was aſſeſſed upon every particular perſon [or Maſter of a family] in this Town and the Liberties, according to the value of his chattels, or rents [D].

The number of perſons taxed, was 518. And the Value of each perſon's chattels was ſet down in one ſum, not in the ſame minute manner as in the ſubſidy-taxations [E].

A Twelfth was alſo levied upon this Town and the Liberties, in the 13th of this reign; of which one inſtance or two are given in the Note [F].

In 1347, when K. Edward III. blocked up Calais by ſea with a large fleet, Colcheſter furniſhed Five ſhips, and One hundred and ſeventy mariners (m). And, after the glorious victory won by that renowned Prince at Creſſy, he ſent ſome of his French priſoners to be kept here, as appears by the letter below [G].

In 1348, a violent plague raged in this Town; ſo that no leſs than an hundred and eleven wills were entered on the Town-rolls. There was a ſecond plague again in the ſame reign a° 1360 (n).

Wat Tyler's Inſurrection, which happened in the following reign, had ſome abetters in this town. For J. Ball, one of the chief incendiaries, calls himſelf ſome time St. Mary prieſt of York, and now of Colcheſter (o). And, after the chief ringleaders had been put to death, numbers that would not ſubmit to the King's terms, came to this Town, and ſollicited the Inhabitants to a new Rebellion, but they were ſo wiſe as to remain quiet (p). In the 10th of the ſame reign, K. Richard being apprehenſive of an Invaſion from France, ſent a Commiſſion of Array, to put this Town and places adjacent in a poſture of defence [H].

What part this Town took in the bloody Diſputes between the Houſes of York and Lancaſter, doth not plainly appear. But it may be inferred, that the inhabitants were chiefly in the intereſt of the Houſe of York: For K. Henry VI. deprived them of their moſt valuable Privilege, of the Fiſhery, and beſtowed it on his favorite John de Vere Earl of Oxford [I]. And K. Edward IV. granted them the fulleſt Charter they ever had before or ſince.

However, they had Pardons from the ſeveral contending Kings [K]; which, probably, were things of courſe at that time.

Auguſt 5, 1445, K. Henry VI. came to Colcheſter; but the reaſon of his coming is not expreſſed (q).

The cuſtom of this Town, in K. Edward IVth's time, as appears by one inſtance, was, Not to permit any perſon to abide forty days in Colcheſter, without ſwearing fealty to the King [L].

We do not find any remarkable particulars in the ſucceeding reigns till we come to K. Henry VIII. Tho' his father, K. Henry VII, left him no leſs than Eighteen hundred thouſand pounds in ready money (r); an immenſe ſum for thoſe times! yet that waſteful and prodigal Monſter ſoon ſquandered it away in ſhews, tournaments, and ſuch other trifling amuſements, without doing therewith the leaſt ſervice to the Kingdom (s).

[K] The Pardons of K. Henry IV. Henry V. Henry VI. and Edward IV. to this Town, under the Great Seal, are in the poſſeſſion of Jeremiah Daniell Eſq;

[L] For, in the year 1473, ſome perſons were preſented at the Law-hundred-court---quod moram fecerunt infra villam Colceſtr' per 40 dies & ultra, & non fecerunt fidelitatem Domino Regi juxta conſuetudinem ville predicte. Rot. Cur. 13 Edw. IV. rot. 19.

And though his firſt Parliaments had granted him very large ſums, yet he was fain, in the 15th year of his reign, to have a Loan from his ſubjects. Upon which occaſion, the inhabitants of this Borough did "lovingly avaunce to him a ſum by "weye of Lone, for the maintenaunce of his "Grace and Warys ageynſt Fraunce and Scottlond," as the words of the original ſchedule are [M], though the Parliament granted him at the ſame time very large and uncommon ſupplies [N].

In 1516 on the day before the feaſt of Corpus-Chriſti, Queen Catharine of Arragon came to this town, with a grand retinue, in her way to Walſingham, where ſhe was going in pilgrimage to the famous Image of the Virgin Mary there. The Bailiffs, Aldermen, and a great number of the Burgeſſes went and met her at Lexden; and thence conducted her in ſtate to St. John's Abbey, where ſhe abode that night, and the day following. They made her a preſent of a purſe with forty pounds; not that they were obliged to it, but to welcome her to this Town; and ſhe made them a return. At her departure from hence, the Bailiffs, Aldermen, and Burgeſſes attended her, in the ſame ſtate as before, to the further bounds of Mileend pariſh (t).

In the year 1544, the following letter under the King's ſignet, came to the Bailiffs of this Town.

By the King.

Henry R.

"Truſtie and welbeloved, we greate you well: And wheras betweene us and Themperor, upon provocation of manyfolde Injuries committed by the Frenche King unto us both particulerlie: And for his confederation with the Turke againſt thoſe common-wealth of Chriſtendom, It is agreed, that eche of us aparte in perſone with his puiſſant Armey in ſeverall parties this ſoommer ſhall invade the Realme of Fraunce; And being not yet furnyſhed of ſuch ample noomber of men as ſhall ſuffice for that purpoſe; For the good opinion we have in you to ſee us furnyſhed as to our honour apperteyneth, We have appointed you to ſend us the nombre of xv hable fotemen, well furnyſhed for the warres as apperteyneth, whereof three to be Archers, everye oone furnyſhed with a good bowe in a cace, with xxiiii good arrowes in a cace, a good ſworde and a dagger; and the reſt to be bill men, having, beſides theyre bills, a good ſworde and a dagger: To be levied of your own ſervants and tenants. And that you put the ſaide nombre in ſuch a redynes, furniſhed with cotes and hoſen of ſuch colours as is appointed for the Battell of our Armey. As they faile not within oone howres warnyng to marche forwarde to ſuche place as ſhall be appointed accordinglie. Yeven undre our ſignet at our Palace of Weſtm' the vth daie of June the xxxvith yere of our Reigne" (u).

Towards the latter end of this reign, the Face of this town underwent a great Alteration for the worſe. For the ſtately Church and Abbey of St. John's, the Priory of St. Botolph's, the Church and Hoſpital of the Crouched-Friers, &c. which were a great Ornament to this place, and a conſiderable Support to the Poor, were either demoliſhed or permitted to grow ruinous. The Revenues undoubtedly came into more uſefull hands. But, however, pity it is, that ſome of them were not applied to the public Benefit of the Kingdom; or reſerved to make proviſion for the Poor, either by founding a good Hoſpital in this large Town, or by eſtabliſhing a fund in every Pariſh for their better maintenance. But there were growing Families that wanted to raiſe large Eſtates at once. —Whatever cauſe it was owing to, I have not been able truly to diſcover: But certain it is, that the Town went then much to decay; ſo that twenty five houſes, or tenements, were taken down in Headward only, and others were grown very ruinous; for which the owners of them were preſented and proſecuted; a thing very uncommon and extraordinary, unleſs thoſe had been Town-houſes, which doth not appear.

In the reign of K. Edward VI, the Reformation was eſtabliſhed in this Town, as in the reſt of the Kingdom; and a rational Service ſet up, in the room of a burdenſom load of ſuperſtition. But, according to the common Foible and Perverſeneſs of Human Nature, Chriſtians, inſtead of making a thankful Uſe of the glorious Liberty they were reſtored to, fell into violent Contentions and Quarrels about trifles; and, inſtead of uniting with meekneſs and decency in the regular and eſtabliſhed Worſhip of God, embraced any thing, though full of the moſt palpable abſurdities, or of the moſt blaſphemous reflections on God's moral character; and did run into the wildeſt freaks of Enthuſiaſm, and what not [O].

[O] In this Town, in particular, much about this time, (to uſe the Words of a contemporary Writer,) "leaſt Sathan ſhould be thought to bee idle, &c. he ſtyrred up divers Schiſmaticall ſpirits, which—ſought to be teachers of that wherof they had no underſtandyng, and thereby turned the knowledge of God's teſtimonies (which in many of them though it was ſmall, yet ſomewhat) to vayne and contentious janglying, whereby the deare Saintes of God were not a little diſquieted: at ſuch tyme eſpecially as ſome of them beyng condemned to death looked to taſt of the ſame cup, whiche had bene in full meaſure powred out unto their brethren. [viz. in Q. Mary's time.] For not only in the private aſſemblies of the godly did theſe ſpider-catchers ſwarm together to pervert the right ways of the Lord, but alſo in divers priſons in London they kept a continual haunt, where they ſcattered their deviliſh cocle of abominable hereſies among ſuch as were committed for the love of the Goſpel." One of the buſieſt

To which muſt be added, That no tolerable maintenance was left in this, no more than in moſt other Towns, for a laborious and preaching Miniſtry. And therefore it is to be wiſhed, that ſome Chantries, as Barwick's and Harmanſon's in St. Leonard's, which were partly founded for helping to ſerve the cure of that church, had been preſerved for that uſe; as well as others; and not ſquandered away to no good purpoſe whatever.

In 1549, there was a Dearth in and about this Town; for the remedying of which, an Order of Council was ſent down, the 20th of November, to the Juſtices and other Gentlemen of this County, to be communicated to the Mayor, Bailiffs, and other Head-officers of every market-town: Whereby they were impowered to ſearch the barns, granaries, and houſes of every farmer, and others, having corn to ſell; and to oblige them to bring, every market-day, ſuch a quantity of grain to market, as they could conveniently ſpare.

Upon pious K. Edward's deceaſe, I find that Colcheſter declared for Q. Mary, in oppoſition to the learned and moſt deſerving Lady Jane Grey. For Meſſengers were diſpatched from hence, and proviſions ſent to Q. Mary, at Framlingham, of which the accounts are extant [P]. This Town was alſo put into a poſture of defence againſt her oppoſers: And ſo well did ſhe like the Magiſtrates Zeal, that ſhe came to this place July 26, 1553. The Corporation made her a preſent of 20 l. in gold; and of a cup of ſilver, with a cover, parcel gilt, weighing forty one ounces [Q]; and ſpent a great deal of money in treating her.

The 7th of March following, an Order of Council came to Colcheſter, to put in readineſs 18 armed men, viz. 10 archers, and eight bill-men, well harneſſed and weaponed, to be ready at one hour's warning to be embarked at Brightlingſey, for the ſervice of her Majeſty beyond the ſeas, at Calais or elſewhere, as they ſhould be appointed.

During this cruel reign, the fire of Perſecution raged in Colcheſter, as well as in other parts of the Kingdom. For March 29, John Laurence; and June 14. 1555, Nicolas Chamberlayne, were burnt here (w). April 28, 1556, John Mace apothecary, John Spence, weaver, Simon Joyne, ſawyer, Richard Nichols, weaver, and John Hammond, tanner, were burnt in this town (x). As the June following, Elizabeth the wife of Thomas Pepper, and Edmund Hurſt, both of St. James's Colcheſter, were burnt at Stratford-bow (y) Auguſt 2, 1557, William Bongeor of St. Nicolas, glazier, William Purcas, of Bocking, Thomas Benold, tallow chandler, Agnes Silverſide alias Smith, Helen Ewring, and Elizabeth Folks, were burnt in this place, without the Town-wall, in the morning: As were, in the afternoon of the ſame day, within the Caſtle-yard, William Munt, Alice Munt, John Johnſon, and Roſe Allin. And John Thurſton died a priſoner in the Caſtle, for religion (z). About the ſame time, 14 men, and eight women, were apprehended, and (faſtned all in a ſtring) driven up, like a flock of ſheep, to London, and impriſoned; but ſhortly after were releaſed, upon their own eaſy ſubmiſſion (a). May 26, 1558, William Harris, Richard Day, and Chriſtiana George, were burnt at Colcheſter, being the laſt that ſuffered this moſt unnatural puniſhment here (b). Eight others remained priſoners on account of Religion [R]; but were ſet at liberty the beginning of the year following, 1559 (c);

For, theſe cruel Fires were extinguiſhed with that deteſted Monſter Mary I.; and the Reformed Religion flouriſhed again, upon the peaceable acceſſion of Q. Elizabeth; who carried the Engliſh Name, Commerce, Diſcoveries, and Reputation to the higheſt pitch of Grandeur; and brought this Town into a more flouriſhing condition than it had been for ſome time before.

The firſt years of her reign do not furniſh us with any occurrences, particularly relating to this place.* But,

In 1571, the Dutch and Flemings firſt came and ſettled in Colcheſter, and brought with them the moſt valuable Trade of Bay and Say making, as I ſhall ſhew under Chap. IV. § I. of this Book.

In December 1578, there was a plague in this Town, and neighbourhood; which continued fellows of this kind here, was one Henry Harte. And in 1555, Chriſtopher Vitels, a diſciple of Henry Nicholas the founder of the Family of Love, coming from Delft, brought over and ſpread their Tenets in and about this Town. This fellow Vitels was a joyner by trade; but "being, as it "ſeemed, weary of his occupation, he left his craft of joignyng, and took unto him a new trade of lyfe: ſo that of a "ſimple Scholer he became a great and learned Schole-maiſter "of that doctrine." [R] It will be proper to add here, what Mr. Wilkinſon relates concerning the ſtate of this Town, in theſe perillous times. "The auncient and famous Towne of Colcheſter was in the troubleſome tyme of Queene Maries perſecution a ſweete and comfortable mother of the bodyes, and a tender nourſe of the ſouls, of Gods children: which towne was the rather at that tyme frequented, becauſe it afforded many godly and zealous Martyrs, whiche continually with their bloud watered thoſe ſeedes, which by the preachyng of the worde had been ſowne moſt plentifully in the hartes of Chriſtians in the dayes of good Kyng Edward. This towne for the earneſt profeſſion of the Goſpell became like unto a citie upon an hill, and as a candle upon a candleſticke gave great light to all thoſe who for the comfort of their conſcience came to conferre there from divers places of the Realme, and repairying to common Innes had by night their Chriſtian exerciſes, whiche in other places could not be gotten. For proofe whereof I referre the Reader unto that which is truely reported by M. Foxe in his booke of Actes and Monuments: (1ſt Edit. p. 606. A.) that at the Kynges-head in Colcheſter, and at other Innes in the ſayd Towne, the afflicted Chriſtians had ſet places appointed for themſelves to meet at."——A brief till the Auguſt following, though uſeful Orders had been given to prevent the ſpreading of the infection.

The Queen took a progreſs through part of this County, and of Suffolk, in 1579 [S], and was here the 1ſt and 2d of September. For her better reception, the following orders were made. “ That the Bayliffs and Aldermen, in the receipt of her Majeſtie, ſhall ride upon comely geldings, with foot-clothes, in damaſk or ſattin caſſocks or coats, or elſe jackets of the ſame, with ſattin ſleeves in their ſcarlet-gowns, with caps and black velvet tippets. The Councell to attend upon the Bayliffs and Aldermen at the ſame time, upon comely geldings, with foot-clothes, in grogram or ſilk caſſock coats or jackets, with ſilk doublets, or ſleeves at the leaſt in their livery morray-gowns, with caps: &c. —That her Majeſty ſhall be gratified from the Town with a Cup of ſilver double-gilt, of the value of 20 marks, or 10 l. at the leaſt, with 40 Angels in the ſame, and the Officers of her Majeſty to be gratified as afore they have been. The Recorder for the time being, to make the Oration to her Majeſty (d).”

Before the Art of Murdering was arrived to ſuch a helliſh pitch as it hath ſince, the Safety and Defence of this kingdom depended in a great meaſure upon the Militia; therefore the muſtering of them, in this as well as the foregoing reign, was a conſiderable Buſineſs, and duly and frequently performed. Q. Elizabeth, in particular, as ſhe had chiefly, if not ſolely, the Hearts and Hands of her own Subjects to rely upon, took a zealous care to have them duly trained and exerciſed: Eſpecially when ſhe came to have apprehenſions from the revengeful Spaniard. For that purpoſe, with regard to this Town, ſpecial Commiſſions were generally granted to the two Bailiffs, and a few other neighbouring Gentlemen [T], to take thoſe Muſters, ſomewhere within the precincts of our Liberties. And then the Bailiffs ſent warrants to the High Conſtables of each ward; to warn, and command in the Queen's name, all able-men, being not ſick, impotent, or lame, from the age of 16 years to 60, reſident, dwelling, or ſojourning within each pariſh, hamlet, or village, within the ſaid ward (all ſpiritual perſons, Juſtices of either Bench, and all head-officers of every of the Queen's courts of record occupying judicial places in their own perſons, only excepted) perſonally to appear and muſter before, &c. As alſo all manner of perſons, within the limits of the ſaid ward, to bring, at the ſaid day, upon able mens backs, all manner of armour and weapons for Foot-men, which either by the laws of this realm, or heretofore, by any new increaſe or order, they were bound or had promiſed to keep, or had in readineſs. And to warn the petty Conſtables of every pariſh, to ſhew, upon able mens backs, all ſuch common and Pariſh armour, which the whole pariſh by itſelf muſt find; ſcowered, and in all points perfect: With a ſchedule of the names and ſurnames of all able men within their ſeveral pariſhes, and the quality of their vocations; together with the names and ſurnames of all ſuch perſons as kept any armour or weapon.

The Queen, upon the earneſt Entreaties of the States of the United Provinces, having promiſed them aſſiſtance; in order to raiſe ſufficient Forces for that purpoſe, this county ſent a hundred and fifty ſoldiers, in Auguſt 1585, under the command of Sir Walter Walker; towards which number this Town furniſhed Eight men, ſingle perſons, or ſuch as might be beſt ſpared; provided as below [U]. The General of this body of auxiliaries, Robert Earl of Leiceſter, in his way to the Low-Countries, Decemb. 6. came to this Town; where he was honourably received by the Magiſtrates, and ſplendidly and generouſly entertained by Sir Thomas Lucas (e).

Upon the news and apprehenſions of the intended Spaniſh Invaſion in 1588, great and ſuitable preparations were made throughout the Kingdom. Among the reſt, Colcheſter furniſhed Two ſhips, and a pinnace, for the Queen's ſervice at this critical juncture. One of the ſhips, was the Foreſight of London; the particular charge of which is ſet down in the Appendix [W]. The other ſhip, was the Margaret and John 80 tuns burden; owners Mrs. Turner, Mr. Richard Lambert, and— Chandler. And the pinnace, was the Mark Speedwell, owner, Tho. Lambert, 18 tuns burden. They were furniſhed, for two months, with victuals, mariners, ammunition &c. and obliged by the 25th of April to join her Majeſty's Navy on the ſeas for the defence of the kingdom. And in order to defray the charge of them, there was a Tax laid on all the Inhabitants within this Liberty, at 2 s. in the pound on goods, and 3 s. land (f).

The 11th of October following, her Majeſty granted a Commiſſion to Sir John Norris and Sir Francis Drake, to retaliate on the Spaniards. In purſuance of which, the Deputy-Lieutenants of the County of Eſſex ſent a Letter to the Bailiffs of this Town; ſignifying to them, That in virtue of this Commiſſion the ſaid Sir John Norris and Sir Francis Drake had authoritie to levy within the ſeveral counties of this realm certain numbers of Soldiers and Pioners, to be employed in ſome ſpecial ſervice committed to their charge; amongſt which numbers, this county was proportioned to ſet forth 250 Soldiers, and 60 Pioners: So as by allotment it fell to this Borough to find and ſet forth 13 Soldiers and 4 Pioners: In the choice of whom, her Majeſty's expreſs command was, that great care ſhould be taken they might be ſtrong and ſerviceable perſons. Her Majeſty's further pleaſure was, that there ſhould be an allowance, at the common charge of the country, made to every Soldier of 13 s. 4 d. and to every Pioner 6 s. 8 d. which they were to ſee collected within this Borough, anſwerable to their proportion: And alſo ſo much conduct-money for every of the ſaid Soldiers and Pioners, after the rate of 8 d. by the day, as might ſuffice to bring them to Romford, to be there the 20th of that month, by 10 o'clock in the forenoon, delivered to their captain (g).

An Army being raiſed in England, on purpoſe to aſſiſt K. Henry IV. againſt the Leaguers; by order of Council, in January 1590-1, a hundred and fifty able men were levied and arrayed within this County, to be tranſported into Bretagne, which had been ſeized by the Leaguers and a body of Spaniards. Upon that occaſion eight men, able of body, were raiſed in each Ward here; from ſuch as might beſt be ſpared, and were newly come into the Town. Again, in March 1591-2, fourteen ſoldiers were preſſed in this Borough for the ſame ſervice: And, the July following, ſix men were likewiſe raiſed, armed, and put in readineſs here, to be imbarked at Harwich [with 144 more out of this county] for ſerving in Normandy; under the Earl of Eſſex, General of all thoſe her Majeſty's forces then ſent abroad. The like number of ſix ſoldiers, part of 135 out of this county, was again raiſed in this Town, in Septemb. 1596, with the ſum of 21 l. for their arms, apparel, and furniture, at 3 l. 10 s. each: to be tranſported from Harwich into France.

In 1595, this Town, and the other ports in Eſſex, were ordered to furniſh three ſhips, for the ſervice of her Majeſty, at Cadiz. And on this occaſion, Colcheſter paid 200 l. to the Vice-Admiral of Eſſex, towards the furniſhing of one ſhip (h) [X].

In the year 1593, this Town began to be firſt charged with Purveiance, or Compoſition-ſervice, for the Queen's Houſhold; which the Corporation long refuſed to yield to, as thinking it inconſiſtent with their Charters and Privileges. But at length they were forced to ſubmit thereto, towards the end of the year 1595 (i); and for the aſſeſſing of it, an account was taken of the Lands in every Pariſh within this Town and the Liberties, and renewed in 1599, of which the originals are in my poſſeſſion. The ſum paid by this Town for Compoſition-ſervice, was only 6 l. a year.

Upon the diſcovery of the Spaniſh Fleet on the coaſts of France, in Auguſt 1599, an order was ſent to the Bailiffs of this Town; ſtraightly charging and commanding them, upon pain of death, preſently and without delay on the receipt thereof, to give warning to all perſons concerned, to repair with all poſſible ſpeed, upon pain of death, to the place of rendezvous formerly appointed.

During the beſt part of Q. Elizabeth's reign, this Town had the Wiſdom of chuſing, and the Honour and Happineſs of having, for their Recorder the great Sir Francis Walſingham, for whom they expreſſed a due regard; and, through his means, received from the Court all the Favour and Protection they could deſire [Y].

The unactive reign of K. James I. affords but few materials.

The Plague which raged, at his acceſſion, in the city of London, ſpread itſelf as far as this place, where it ſwept off great numbers in Octob. Novemb. Decemb. and January 1604 (k). The only times it hath appeared ſince in this Town, was in the years 1631 (l), and 1665 and 1666.

In 1608, there was a Dearth of Grain and [X] But, in June 1591, when Ships were fitted out at the charge of the Ports, they pleaded Inability; as appears by this letter of theirs to Sir Thomas Henneage. "Right honourable (our moſt humble duties remembred) underſtandinge, that there are, or lyek to be, certen Shyps apoynted to ſome places to be provided preſentlye for the ſervice of her Majeſtie, we are bold to flye unto your Honour for the patronizing of our poor Towne therein: not for that the ſame ys unwillinge to further any ſervice of her highnes (which our whole Towne, to the uttermoſt of their powers hathe and wyle be moſt prone to accompliſh) but in reſpect of the great Decay that this Towne ys fallen into, and the charge of thyrtene ſcore trained ſoldyers, beſydes the great burthen in the laſt ſetting forth of one ſhipp, wherewith it was alone charged, and other Villages and Townes which weare apoynted to joyne with us, diſcharged; for which as yet this Towne ys indebted ſome hundred and fyſtye powndes, conſtrayned to pay uſe for the ſame, by reaſon we are not able as yet to aunſwer it; beſeeching your Honor as ſole patron of the good eſtate of this Corporation, to extend your honorable favor herein, &c."—22d of June 1591.

[Y] See Appendix to Book I. N°. V.

In 1608, there was a dearth of grain and other victual about this, as well as other parts of the kingdom; for the preventing and remedying of which theſe uncommon meaſures were taken. The conſtables in each ward took an account, of the number of perſons in every family that had corn by them, what number of acres they had ſown; what bargains they had made with any perſon for any kind of grain to be ſold, by, or to them; and what quantity of any manner of grain they had in their barns, granaries, &c. Alſo what number of kidders, malt-makers, bakers, common brewers, or tiplers, dwelt in each pariſh. And, according to that ſurvey, every perſon was ordered to bring weekly to market, ſo many quarters or buſhels of corn, as they had not directly ſold to the poor artificers or day-labourers of the pariſh within which they dwelt [Z].

In 1609, this town paid 46l. for the aid for making the King's eldeſt ſon, Prince Henry, a Knight: And, in 1612, they paid 63l. 6s. 8d. for marrying the King's daughter, the Princeſs Elizabeth, to P. Frederick, Elector Palatine (m). Theſe reſpective ſums were levied upon the Burgage-lands in this town, for which purpoſe an account was taken of them: and is ſtill extant, though not quite perfect.

In 1611, money was raiſed in this and other places by Privy-ſeals; a method always unpopular and diſagreeable.

This reign abounded with Patents and Proclamations. Of the firſt kind I ſhall give an inſtance in the Note, concerning the Patent of Inns [A], which though remonſtrated againſt by the Parliament, and frequently mentioned by our Hiſtorians, yet is no where duly explained. But, notwithſtanding theſe Patents, Ale-houſes continued to be licenſed by, and under the direction of, the Juſtices of Peace, as before.

K. Charles I. at his acceſſion to the Crown, found the nation engaged in a war with Spain; the cauſes of which it is not needful here to enquire into.

About the beginning of the ſummer, in 1625, the Spaniards had 28 ſail at Dunkirk, which threatned a deſcent on our coaſts, and greatly alarmed all theſe parts (n). Whereupon, orders from the Privy-Council, and from the Deputy-Lieutenants of Eſſex, were ſent on the 10th of June, to the Magiſtrates of this town, To take preſent care, as well for their own ſafety as that of the whole county, that this Corporation ſhould be well furniſhed with all military proviſions fitting for the defence thereof; always well manned; and the trained bands, and others fit to bear arms, exerciſed, and in readineſs. And, moreover, great numbers were ſent down to Harwich, and parts adjacent; which were furniſhed from hence with neceſſaries [as beer at a quart a penny, &c.] and all the military Engines this town had, or could procure; theſe forces having no other remedy but to have recourſe to this town, and Ipſwich. Our Magiſtrates likewiſe ſent a light veſſel unto the coaſt of Flanders, to eſpy the enemies motions; which brought word, that they were blocked up by 40 ſail of Dutch (o).

The 2d of September a fleet of the enemies was diſcovered off Harwich, as appears by the letter below [B]: but it only occaſioned a panick, without any real danger.

However, the town of Newcaſtle upon Tyne, and the northern coaſts of England, continued a long time expoſed to the outrages of the men of war of Dunkirk; for preventing which inconveniencies for the future, and ſetting out ſhipping for the guarding and defending of thoſe coaſts, his Majeſty not only aſſigned a great part of the revenues of his crown accruing by the forfeitures and fines of Recuſants in the counties north of the Trent; but alſo conſented to have a contribution of Six-pence, on every chaldron of coals that ſhould be tranſported from Newcaſtle into any of his dominions, or

⁂ It was uſual in this reign, for our Corporation to make preſents of ſugar-loaves, to perſons of rank and eſtates, from whom they expected Favour and Protection: And from the Chamberlain's accounts we learn, that in 1607 in particular, the beſt refined ſugar was 2*s*. 2*d*. and the next beſt 1*s*. 10*d*. a pound.

[B]. " Mr. Bayliffs, By all preſumption a great Fleete of enemies are bownd for England, and are deſcried upon the coaſt of Harwich. The Town is weakly provided to defend ittſelfe, and the countre-ſoldiers deſtitute of powder, beyond the ſeas into foreign parts: as appears by a letter under the King's ſignet in the Appendix [C], ſent to the Bayliffs, Burgeſſes, and members of the Town of Colcheſter, being a curious original.

About the beginning of the year 1627, forces were tranſported from theſe parts to the King of Denmark's aſſiſtance; but they went ſo much againſt their will, that the militia was ſent from this town, to reſtrain their mutinies.

The October following, 100 men were impreſſed within this county, to be ſent to Plymouth, for the expedition againſt France; of which number ten able men were raiſed in this town, with eight pounds in money [D]. And likewiſe 150 l. towards the expedition againſt the pirates of Algiers and Tunis.

In 1634, ſhip-money was firſt impoſed upon This and other maritime towns; and the Writ, under the great ſeal, directed, that the chief Magiſtrates of Ipſwich, Orford, Aldburgh, Dunwich, Southold, Colcheſter, Malden, and Harwich, ſhould by a time therein limited, aſſeſs and levie upon their ſaid citie, townes, &c. ſuch ſum or ſums of money as ſhould be ſufficient for the providing and ſetting out of a ſhip of 700 tuns furniſhed in all points. But it appears by two orders of council, of the 9th of December and the 21ſt of January following, to haſten the levy, that this town was very backward in raiſing their proportion. And in the ſecond order, directed to the Sheriffs of Eſſex and Suffolk, the King was graciouſly pleaſed to offer, that ſince theſe two counties had not a ſhip of 700 tons burden meet for that imployment, his Majeſty would furniſh them with one, ſo as they cauſed the full ſum of 6615*l.* to be forthwith levied, and ſent up.

The next year, 1635, this County, with the ſeveral corporate towns therein, were ordered to pay 8000*l.* towards the ſetting forth of a ſhip of 800 tons burden; The proportion of which charged upon Colcheſter was 400l. But this town refuſed to pay their ſhare, alledging the demand thereof to be an intruſion upon their privileges [E]; as appears by an order of council, 18 May 1636 [F]. And, ſo long after as 1639, they petitioned the Privy-Council for eaſe thereof, on account of the deadneſs of trade in the town, and other reaſons, which rendered them unable to pay ſo large a ſum (p).

Whether owing to this, or to the general diſaffection which had ſpread itſelf almoſt throughout the ſouthern parts of this kingdom, eſpecially among traders; it is certain, that a ſpirit of ſedition and diſloyalty, began early to break forth in Colcheſter. For, as ſoon as January 1641-2, a Petition from thence was preſented to the Houſe of Commons, againſt Biſhops, and for Liberty of Conſcience; deſiring, that Church-Diſcipline might be eſtabliſhed according to the word of God, and the town better fortified (q). In compliance with the latter part of which petition, the Parliament granted 1500*l.* for making the town of Colcheſter, and the Blockhouſe at Merſey defenſible (r). From petitioning, the Inhabitants here proceeded to more flagrant overt-acts of diſloyalty and violence. For, Auguſt 22, 1642, they ſeized Sir John Lucas, who was preparing, with about 10 or 12 horſe, and ſome arms, to go to King Charles into the North; barbarouſly uſed his mother and Lady, with his chaplain, Mr. Thomas Newcomen, Rector of H. Trinity here; robbed and plundered his houſe at St. John's [G], not ſparing even the aſhes and remains of his anceſtors in the Church of St. Giles adjoyning; and carried him, and Mr. Newcomen, priſoners up to London (*).

But, excepting theſe outrages, this town had at firſt very little ſhare in the dreadful calamities, the cruel plunderings and ravages, the murders and bloody battles, which brought the reſt of the kingdom almoſt to the brink of deſtruction.

For, the major part of the chief inhabitants of this county of Eſſex, being in the Parliament's intereſt; they entered, as early as December 1642, into an aſſociation with the counties of Suffolk, Norfolk, Hertford, and Cambridge, [including the Iſle of Ely;] wherein they engaged to aid, ſuccour, and aſſiſt one another in the mutual defence and preſervation of themſelves, and of the peace of the ſaid Counties from all rapines, plunderings, &c. For that purpoſe, large ſubſcriptions were made, arms provided, the trained bands formed into companies and regiments, officers appointed, and all proper means of ſafety and defence uſed by the Lord-Lieutenants and Deputy-Lieutenants (s). This was called the Eaſtern-Aſſociation.

Some months before, the governing party in this town had very readily complied with the propoſitions and orders of the Parliament, for the bringing in of money and plate, or ſubſcribing to maintain horſe and arms, for the preſer-

I thinke you ſhall doe very well to drawe your Trained band to Harwich, and to come ſo well provided of all manner of munition, as that you may help ſupplie the wants of your neighbors. Harb. Grimſton's Letter Feb. 24, 1642-3; and his and Sir Tho. Barrington's vation of the public peace (t). And how much they were cajoled and complimented for this their forward zeal, will appear by the following original letter to Mr. Wade, Mayor, and the reſt of the Aldermen.

" Gentlemen, Wee have acquainted the Parliament with your extraordinary Care and Paines in advancing the Propoſicions for the raiſinge of horſe, armes, money and plate for the defence of the Kinge, Parliament, and kingdome; how well your ſervices are accepted of and what thankes we are enjoined to give yourſelves and the reſt of the gentlemen, free-houlders and others of your towne for your zeales therein, and how farre they have engaged themſelves for the protection and defence of the county: the order of both Houſes of Parliament will better ſpeake it then our letter, and for your better ſatisfactions, to that wee muſt for the preſent referre yee which Mr. Grimeſton will acquaint you with. The perfectinge of that worke begunne by you with ſoe great affection, and wherein you have mett with ſoe much incouragement both from the Parliament and people, is the occaſion of this letter. And in the firſt place wee are commanded to deſire yee to ſend away the money and plate ſubſcribed for, with all the ſpeede yee can. And likewiſe to give particular notice to them that have ingaged themſelves for the findinge of horſes, to bringe them upp to London, where there is order taken for the preſent inrollinge and vallueinge of them. Many Lords doe want horſe, to make upp their troupes, and the ſervice and ſafety of the kingdome doe much depend uppon your activitie and diſpatch herein which wee have cauſe to bee very confident of. Shortly after, the Committee of the Lords and Commons for the ſafety of the kingdom, made uſe of the " activitie and diſpatch " of the leading men in this place, jointly with the inhabitants of the other towns in this county, and in Suffolk, to raiſe 2000 horſe for dragooners [H]. The chief Supplies of Men they furniſhed, were,

2. One compleat Company they alſo impreſſed, in the beginning of the year 1643, for the Earl of Mancheſter's uſe: and ſent it to Cambridge [L], the rendezvous of the Forces raiſed in

[H] The Order of the Committee began in this manner; " 28 Octob. 1642. Whereas the Lords and Commons in Parliament have choſen the Earl of Warwicke Generall of the Forces now to be raiſed in the Cittie of London and adjacent Countyes for the ſervice of the King and Parliament, Six thouſand whereof are immediatlie to be ſent to his Excellencie the Earle of Eſſex: And in regard of the ſeaſon of the yeare, they cannot well march on foote, nor do that ſervice that otherwiſe they might if they were horſed, It is therefore ordered, that the Maior and Aldermen of Colcheſter, the Bailiffs and townſmen of Chelmsford, Malden, Braintree, Bocking, Coxhall, Dunmow, Dedham in the County of Eſſex: and alſo the Bayliffs and townſmen of Ipſwich, Woodbridge, Edmundſbury, Framingham, Saxmundham in the Countie of Suffolke, ſhall forthwith procure and raiſe in the ſaid ſeverall townes, and other pleces adjacent, two thouſand horſes for dragooners, or as manie as poſſibly they may, for the ſervice aforeſaid, and with all poſſible ſpeed to ſend them up to London unto Thomas Browne Grocer, and Maximilian Beard Girdler, by us appointed to liſt horſes for the ſervice aforeſaid; Which horſes ſo ſent up ſhal be valued by the Commiſſaries appointed for that purpoſe; and ſatisfaction ſhall be made to the ſeveral owners, according to the propoſitions of monie, plate, and raiſing horſes." &c. —— Subſcribed by

And the Warrant thereupon from the Committee of Parliament, or Deputy-Lieutenants of this County to the Mayor, &c. of this Town. for putting that Order in execution, concluded with theſe urgent words. —— " And all high Conſtables, petty Conſtables, and other officers are hereby required to obey your directions in this ſervice, and to be aydinge and aſſiſtinge to you therein, as perſons in whom the Parliament hath repoſed great truſt and authority for the defence of this county: and yee are all hereby deſired for God's ſake, and as you tender the ſafety of your lives, eſtates, and, that which is deareſt of all, your Religion, and the government of this kingdome, to execute this warrant with all poſſible expedition, wherein we are confident noe good ſubject or honeſt Chriſtian will bewantinge. [I] And very amply and readily, as Mr. John Sayer, of Bourchier's-hall, acknowledges in his letter to them of Novemb. 4. 1642.—" I underſtand you have bene very " forward and active in the ſervice: And that your Towne " have ſent up a large number."——

[K] Upon that occaſion, the following letter was ſent throughout this County. " All you of the County of Eſſex that are well affected to the Parliament and Citty of London; know, That the King's army under the pretence of peace and accommodation are marchyng upp within ſeven myles of London, and are now in fight with my Lord of Eſſex, And intends to ſurprize the Citty this night; you are therefore deſired with all poſſible ſpeed, as you tender your Religion, lives, and liberties; Repair forthwith with your Trained bands and Volentiers to the City of London to defend the Parliament Citty yourſelves and the kingdome againſt our Enimys to be commanded by his Excellency the Earle of Warwicke."

[L] The following Letter of the famous Oliv. Cromwell, giving ſome account of this Company, may not be unacceptable to the Reader; whom I ſhall leave to make proper reflexions upon it. " Gentlemen. Upon the cominge down of your townſmen to Cambride, Capt. the Aſſociated Counties: Which, during the whole continuance of the war, received from hence perpetual reinforcements and ſupplies, not only of men, but alſo of all kinds of ammunition.

3. But they exerted themſelves moſtly in June 1643, upon the earneſt ſollicitations of the Earl of Eſſex, and of his Spur the ambitious Cromwell [M]. The Earl, in his firſt letter, after aſſuring " all Gentlemen, Freeholders, and other well-affected people in this town and county, of all the aſſiſtance that his army could afford, and his earneſt deſire to help them: [For they were then afraid, the Royal Army would have bent their courſe this way.] He deſired ſuch as had moſt intereſt in the Cauſe, to approve themſelves in it; men of religious lives and affections, fitteſt to bear arms for the truth of religion; men of eſtates, to defend thoſe eſtates; the imployment not being too mean for the beſt men. Therefore he requeſted them, to provide themſelves, as well as they could, with arms and neceſſaries, and to bring ſix weeks pay in their purſes, conſidering that the march was long." Upon this order and at the repeated inſtances of the ſaid Earl and of Oliver Cromwell, as contained in their letters in the Note; a general Subſcription was made throughout this town, on the 26th of June 1643, whereby great numbers engaged to go in perſon; others to find men, horſes, muſkets, and pay: others ſubſcribed 1, 3, 5, 10, 15, 20, 30, 40 s. even the women not being leſs generous than the men. Very few took time to conſider, and fewer yet would give, or do, nothing [N]: So few Friends had the poor King here: or ſo few were there that choſe or dared to declare for him!

Upon many other occaſions, the inhabitants of Colcheſter furniſhed recruits, and gave aſſiſtance of every kind to the Parliamentarians.

But the moſt conſiderable and ſubſtantial aſſiſtance they gave them, was in very large Supplies of Money. The duplicates of the ſeveral ſums aſſeſſed upon this town and the liberties, during the whole courſe of the civil war, are ſtill extant, and in my poſſeſſion. From which it appears, what great ſums were levied here, particularly from 1642 to 1648, under theſe reſpective articles: For raiſing a body of horſe for Sir William Waller; for the maintenance of the Britiſh army in Ireland; for the Scots; for the garriſons at Newport-pagnel, &c. For Sir Tho. Fairfax's army; for reducing Newark, &c. [C]. And the yearly amounts of them, were thus,

[M] Their Letters according to the order of time, were as follows. " Gent.' I thought it my duty once more to write unto yow for more ſtrenghth to be ſpeedily ſent unto us for this great ſervice; I ſuppoſe yow heare of the great defeat given by my L. Fairfax to the Newcaſt: Forces at Wakefield; it was a great mercy of God to us, and had it not bin beſtoune upon us at this very preſent, my Lo: Fairfax had not knowne how to have ſubſiſted: we aſſure yow, ſhould the force we have miſcarry, expect nothing but a ſpeedy march of the enemy up unto yow; why yow ſhould not ſtrengthen us to make us ſubſiſt, judg yow the danger of the neglect, and how inconvenient this improvidence or unthrifty may be to yow; I ſhall never write but according to my judgment, I tell you againe it concernes yow exceedingly to be perſwaded by me: My Lor: Newcaſtle is near 6000 foot and about 60 troopes of horſe: my Lo: Fairfax is about 3000 foot and 9 troopes of horſe; and we have about 24 troopes of horſe and Draggooners: The enemy drawes more to the Lo: Fairfax; Our motion and yours muſt be exceeding ſpeedy, or elce it will doe you noe good at all; if yow ſend let your men come to Boſton, I beſeech you haſten the ſupply to us: forgett not monie. I preſſe not hard, though I doe ſoe need that I aſſure yow the foot and Draggooners are ready to mutiny: lay not too much upon the back of a poore Gentl' who deſires without much noyſe to lay downe his life, and bleed the laſt dropp to ſerve the Cauſe and yow: I aſke not your monie for myſelfe, if that were my end and hope (viz. the pay of my place,) I would not open my mouth at this time. I deſire to denie myſelfe, but others will not be ſatisfied: I beſeech yow haſten ſupplies. Forget not your prayers. Gent' I am yours,

Gent' The deſigne now reſolved upon for the Kingdomes ſervice, for the advance of the Army, is of that concernment that I thought good to deſire your aſſiſtance, in cauſing all the inhabitants of your Countie according to my warrant ſent to your High Conſtables, preſently with what Armes, Clubbs, and other inſtruments of warre, to march forthwith and to appoint a common rendevowz at Cheſham in Buckinghamſh. and to bring a monthes pay in their purſes, and let them not doubt, but they ſhall have the Aſſiſtance of the Armie, and of what Commanders and Officers for their ſuccour in this deſigne is fitt: I expect your furtherance by the power you have in the County, and that yow ſee the Warrants executed by thoſe whome it concernes, and uſe your endeavours to make a Generall riſing, and that you take notice of all thoſe that ſhall refuſe or diſcourage the worke; it being now a time wherein is neceſſary to be known who are friends to the Kingdome, and who are not: ſoe noe waiſe doubting of your encouraging this ſervice, I reſt Essex.

towards the relief of the Proteſtants in Ireland, 630 l. In April 1644, a voluntary Loan to the Brethren of Scotland; and December 26, the like for Sir William Brereton. Sept. 16, the ſame year, a collection in each Pariſh from houſe to houſe towards buying ſhoes for the army under the Earl of Eſſex. And, May 1645, a collection of voluntary contributions for horſe and foot for the garriſon of Glouceſter, and for the Counties of Glouceſter, Hereford, Monmouth, Glamorgan, Brecknock, and Radnor (u).

From the Committee's and Sequeſtrators Books for this Town, and part of the County, I alſo learn, that conſiderable ſums were raiſed by Sequeſtrations of the Eſtates of thoſe termed Delinquents, that is, ſuch as would not come into the Parliament's meaſures; the third part only being allowed to them. Of which number, in this Town and the Liberties, were Sir Thomas Lucas of Lexden, Sir Henry Audeley of Bere-Church, Beſtney Barker of Monkwick, Eſq; Laurence Torkenton, Eſq; Mr. Stephen Nettles Rector of Lexden, &c.——John Lord Lucas is not mentioned at all; foraſmuch as, in all probability, he was not admitted to compound, but his eſtate was ſeized entirely.

Thus from the whole courſe of Hiſtory, it appears, that this Town, at leaſt the Majority and the governing part of it, were in the Parliament's intereſts. So that they who, from the Reſiſtance made by the Town of Colcheſter againſt the Parliament's Forces, ſhould infer, that it was entirely loyal, would be greatly miſtaken [*].

§ 7. Hiſtory of the SIEGE.

WE are now come to the year 1648, and hitherto this Town and County had been exempt from the calamities of a Civil War, which had brought almoſt the whole Kingdom to the brink of deſtruction; but at laſt Colcheſter had its full ſhare of them. For, in the year 1648, ſeveral perſons of a public ſpirit, obſerving the mean and unworthy treatment of Majeſty in diſtreſs, and finding that Ambition, and Self-ſeeking (to uſe one of the canting phraſes of that time) was the grand motive, which Oliver, and other Deſperadoes, were acted by, and not the real advantage of the Public, whatever they might outwardly pretend [P]: Therefore Major-general Langhorn, Sir John Owen, and Sir Nicolas Keymis, in Wales; James Duke of Hamilton, in Scotland; George Duke of Buckingham, and Henry Earl of Holland, at Kingſton upon Thames; and others in divers parts, raiſed forces, in order to oblige the Parliament and army to reſtore peace to the Kingdom upon reaſonable terms. The like endeavours were uſed in Kent, where great numbers took arms at the inſtigation of Edward Hales, and Roger Leſtrange Eſqrs. Theſe headed by George Goring Earl of Norwich, and Sir William Waller, aſſembled near Rocheſter on the 24th of May; and thence marched to Blackheath, in expectation of being joined by the Londoners. But Thomas Lord Fairfax, the Parliament's-General, advancing againſt them with great expedition, they drew back, and made ſeveral ſtands; till being too hard preſſed, they divided; ſome retiring to Rocheſter, others to Maidſtone. Fairfax, who had 6000 foot and 2000 horſe, having, on the 2d of June, defeated theſe, conſiſting only of about 2000; the reſt, under the Earl of Norwich, moved from Rocheſter to Blackheath, hoping ſtill for aſſiſtance from London. But none coming, and a detachment of the enemy haſtning after them, the greater number diſperſed. Only about five or ſix hundred, with the Earl of Norwich, being denied a free paſſage through the city of London, ferried over the Thames at Greenwich into the Iſle of Dogs, [moſt of them ſwimming their horſes] and came and poſted themſelves at Mile-end heath, and quartered afterwards at Bow and Stratford (w). Here they continued till the 7th of June, in which time their numbers increaſed by the flocking in of many Kentiſh-men, and London-apprentices.

In the mean time, the Royal party were not idle in this county, but held private and public meetings, on purpoſe to promote the King's intereſt; at ſome whereof the Earl of Norwich aſſiſted: And at Chelmsford they ſeized on the Committee of Parliament. Sir Charles Lucas, one of the moſt active Royaliſts, who had attended theſe meetings, having drawn together a conſiderable body, advanced to Brentwood; where the Kentiſh forces joined him June 8. And he earneſtly perſuaded them not to lay down their arms, as many were inclined to do, upon proclamation of an Indemnity from the Parliament (x).

The next day, June 9, they came all together to Chelmsford, where they were joined by Arthur Lord Capel, Henry Haſtings Lord Loughborough, and divers other Gentlemen of quality from Hertfordſhire, and other counties; which gave them great encouragement [Q]. That afternoon they were all drawn out to a rendezvous in Newhall-park; and the Earl of Norwich the General, and Sir Charles Lucas, held a conſultation with the Gentlemen of both counties. At one time, they reſolved to march away immediately, and fall upon a large party of horſe and foot raiſed by Sir Thomas Honywood at Coggeſhall [R]; but, upon a more ſerious deliberation, they altered their purpoſe,

[P] This is the true light in which Affairs ought to be repreſented in the beginning of the year 1648. For, no man of an honeſt diſpoſition, who is acquainted in the leaſt with the Hiſtory of thoſe Times; or whoſe Principles do not lead him ſtrongly to deſire an utter ſubverſion of the Conſtitution; can like or approve of the Meaſures taken at that period, and even a conſiderable time before, under the Tyranny of the Army.

[Q] There came in alſo a party of about fifty Gentlemen from London, by way of Epping; and the day following they were joined, in their march, by about an hundred and twenty horſe from Hertfordſhire and Bedfordſhire.

[R] This party ſo much diſcouraged the country, that and orders were given for quartering in Chelmſford that night.

The next morning, Saturday June 10, they marched towards Braintree, taking in their way Lees-houſe, the Earl of Warwick's ſeat. Here the General, and Sir Charles Lucas arrived about noon; and having firſt dined there, ſeized on the armory, where they found a good magazine of arms and ammunition of all ſorts. They carried from thence two braſs-field-pieces; about two or three hundred muſkets, and as many pikes; with about ſixty great ſaddles, and body-armour proportionable; ſome piſtols, and carbines; a good quantity of match and ball; four barrels of powder (y), and divers other inſtruments and furniture of war. In the Park, beyond the Houſe, they remained all the afternoon [S], and towards the evening marched on, and quartered that night at Braintree.

June 11, being Sunday, both parties, from Kent and Eſſex, were drawn into the field in the morning to rendezvous: And, after prayers, all the Gentlemen in the army were formed into troops, under the command of the Earl of Norwich, the Lord Capel, Lord Loughborough, and Sir Charles Lucas; that they might not only know how to diſpoſe of themſelves upon any alarm, but alſo for the conveniency of quartering upon every remove. About nine o'clock at night they marched from Braintree, and continued their march all night, making only one halt about day-break, till the next day at four o'clock in the afternoon: At which time they drew near Colcheſter, where, at a Council the night before (upon Sir Charles Lucas his deſire, and belief of recruiting very much there) they unfortunately concluded to march, but not to ſtay above one night or two at the moſt; and therefore they moved in the night, to amuſe the enemy, that he might not too ſuddenly follow them.

Thus, June 12, being come within five or ſix miles of Colcheſter, a party was ſent before, Sir Charles Lucas having received intelligence that the Townſmen would not receive him in arms. He himſelf continued his march at the head of the army, but, before the Quarter-Maſter general went forwards, news came from the party, that the Town ſtood upon their guard, and were ſo far from giving them entrance, that they oppoſed it, and were too ſtrong for them. Whereupon, Sir Charles, and, the Gentlemen with him, galloped full ſpeed till they came within ſight of the Town. Approaching nearer, they found that the inhabitants had ſhut the Gates, and drawn out about ſixty horſe in a very formal troop, well armed and accoutred; and ſome of their ſcouts ſtood without the Turnpike, by the Alms-houſes or St. Catharine's hoſpital. Sir Charles made a ſtop here, and ſent a meſſenger back to the army to haſten their march; but four or five Gentlemen keeping on their ſpeed, drew their ſwords, and charged up to the ſcouts, whom they forced within the Turnpike: from whence they retreated to Head-gate, where their whole Troop was drawn up in order. The Gentlemen retreated again towards the Turnpike, and ſome of the Townſmen fell in amongſt them, but did not fire till the Gentlemen were come out to the Turnpike; and one of theſe turning quick about, ſhot one of the Townſmen, which fell from his horſe. But when they perceived the body of the army coming, and that Sir Charles Lucas had drawn up two or three troops of horſe very near them, they ſent out to treat with him; and, upon his engagement that the Town ſhould not be plundered, nor any injury offered to the inhabitants for what they had done, they ſubmitted themſelves and engaged to deliver up their horſes and arms, with the Town; ſo the Gates were opened, in a very inauſpicious hour, ſuch gueſts being always beſt at a diſtance, and the army began to quarter that night in the Town; "being about 4000, "whereof 600 horſe, and about 2500 well "armed (z) [T]."

In the mean time, Thomas Lord Fairfax having entered Eſſex, as is ſaid above, was advancing this way with the utmoſt ſpeed; and, "being joined on the road by Col. Whalley and "Sir Thomas Honywood with 2000 horſe and "foot of the country (a)," came to Lexdenheath, June 13, the very next day after the Royaliſts had entered Colcheſter [U]. From that Heath he immediately ſent the following ſummons to the Earl of Norwich, "My Lord, they began to be very ſlack in their appearance to join the Royaliſts, and the reverſe of what they were at their firſt arrival. Eſpecially when they heard of the Lord Fairfax's being entered the county with his Forces; which he did by croſſing from Graveſend, for the greater expedition. Mr. Carter, edit. 1650. p. 126. Whitelock, p. 311.

[S] And Col. Whalley, who had been ſent after them by Lord Fairfax, rendezvouſed very near the other ſide, and at night in the Park; but ventured not to appear all the day in ſight of the Lord Norwich's army. Mr. Carter, p. 128, and Whitelock, p. 311.

[T] The particulars were thus. Of horſe; the Regiments of Lord Goring, Lord Capel, Sir William Compton, Col. Slingſby, Sir Bernard Gaſcoigne, Col. Hammond, Col. Culpepper. Of foot; the Regiments of Sir Charles Lucas, Sir George Liſle, Col. Tilly, Col. Tuke, Col. Farre, Col. Gilberd, Col. Sir William Campian, Colonel Burd, Colonel Bowman, Col. Cheſter. And thoſe who had no particular command; Lord Loughborough, Sir William Leyton, Sir Richard Haſtings, Col. John Heath, Col. Lee of Kent, Col. Panton, Col. Cook, Col. Sir Hugh Orilye, Col. William Maxey, Col. Pitman, Col. Beal, Lieutenant Col. Hatch, Major Jammot. (Diary.)

[U] He had with him theſe Forces. Four troops of his own regiment of horſe, commanded by Major Deſborough. Six troops of Col. Whalley's regiment. Five troops of Col. Fleetwood's, commanded by Major Coleman, three troops of Commiſſary general Ireton's, commanded by Capt. Cecil, two troops of dragoons, commanded by Capt. Freeman, and Capt. Barrington. — Of foot; Col. Barkſtead's regiment, 10 companies, about 800 men, Col. Needham's regiment, 7 companies, about 400 men. Part of Col. Ingoldſby's regiment, 4 companies, 320 men commanded by Capt. Grimes. — Of the Eſſex forces; Col. Harlackenden's regiment, 4 troops of horſe, commanded by Major Rob. Sparrow, Capt. Turner's troop of Dragoons, Col. Henry Mildmay's regiment of horſe, and two troops of dragoons. Part of Col. Carew Mildmay's regiment of foot, commanded by Major Bard. Beſides Sir Tho. Honywood's and Col. Cook's auxiliaries abovementioned. (Diary.)

"I am come hither with the Parliament's forces to reduce thoſe under your command to the obedience of the Parliament. If your Lordſhip, and thoſe under you, will inſtantly lay down your armes, there may be a prevention of much blood that is like to be ſpilt, and the Town preſerved from plunder and ruine; the evil muſt lie upon you, if you refuſe: I expect your preſent anſwer, and remaine your ſervant, Tho. Fairfax (b)." But this ſummons was ſlighted by the Earl of Norwich, who aſked the Trumpeter that brought it, "How his General did, telling him, that he heard he was ill of the gout, but he would cure him of all diſeaſes [W]." Which ſcoffing anſwer highly enraged the ſoldiers; and was thought, as Mr. Whitelock informs us (c), to have coſt the lives of many. For, incenſed greatly at this unſuitable Anſwer, the choleric Fairfax came ruſhing with the utmoſt fury againſt this place; and, about one or two o'clock in the afternoon, his forlorns engaged with the out-guards of the Royaliſts in the ſuburbs. Theſe doubled immediately their Guards, and were ſoon as ready to receive, as the others to aſſault, them: And the Royaliſts being drawn up to their colours, ſent out freſh parties both of horſe and foot under the conduct of Colonel Farre [X], to aſſiſt the Guards; which made a brave reſiſtance againſt the Parliamentarians, that advanced ſtrongly on all parts of that ſide next Lexden, and fired up to the very hedges and Guards of the others foot; till at laſt ſome of the Guards wanting ammunition to maintain the heat of the Service, about St. Catharine's-hoſpital, and the late Crouched-Friers, [then Sir Harbottle Grimſton's houſe] were overpowered with numbers, who threw their ſhot upon them like hail, and being forced to retreat, gave their Enemies the liberty of poſſeſſing themſelves of all that ground called Sholand, and Boroughfield; Col. Barkſtead, with his regiment, puſhing on, fell upon other Out-guards near Scheregate; whereupon all the guards were ordered to retire within the Town. But before this retreat could be made, the Diſpute grew ſo cloſe and hot, that great numbers, moſtly of Col. Farre's regiment, were ſhut out, and taken priſoners. The Parliamentarians ſtill endeavoured to force their way into the Town, firing under Head-gate, and throwing ſtones over it; but met with very obſtinate reſiſtance. At length being ſorely galled by the forces, within the Town, and out of St. Mary's Church-yard and the gardens adjoyning; they became ſo diſabled, that, after ſeven or eight hours fighting, they were forced to a diſhonourable retreat, leaving behind them one braſs-gun, which they brought to force open the Gate, twelve of their train-horſes that were ſhot within twenty yards ſpace of ground, and above five hundred arms, which the next morning were brought into the Town. Their retreat was in ſuch diſorder, as the Royaliſts affirm (d), that had they ſallied out with a freſh party upon them, as was once intended, they had cut their whole army off, or at leaſt the greateſt part, as many of them acknowledge.

The King's forces, by their enemies confeſſion (e), "made good reſiſtance." Even the Gentlemen of diſtinction amongſt them, performed the duty of the meaneſt and inferior officers, and run the hazard of the privateſt ſoldier. When their horſes were not of immediate ſervice, they took their pikes in their hands, and mixed among the croud, to give all proper encouragement and direction to the whole body. Arthur Lord Capel, in particular, charged with a pike at Head-gate, where the greateſt ſtruggle was, till the gate could be ſhut; which at laſt was faſtened with his cane only.

The account of the loſs on both ſides is various, according to cuſtom: both parties magnifying their enemies loſſes, and making as little as poſſible of their own. The Parliamentarians affirm, "That there were ſlain of the King's forces, Col. Sir William Campian [Y], Col. Cooke, and divers officers of quality, and about 80 private ſoldiers.—And wounded, Col. Panton, Captains Brunkard, Clifford, Workſop, and divers other officers. On General Fairfax's ſide, Col. Needham, Capt. Lawrence of horſe, Capt. Cox of foot, and near 100 private ſoldiers and inferior Officers ſlain." The Royaliſts, on the other hand, relate, That they themſelves loſt Sir William Campian, and Col. Cooke, men of unblemiſhed honour; alſo one Lieutenant, and about 30 or 40 private ſoldiers; and many more were wounded. And the priſoners taken from them, were Sir William Layton, Lieutenant-Col. George Rawlins, and about 80 men more; many of whom, upon the confuſed retreat of the Parliamentarians, got off again, and came ſafe into the Town.——But they make their enemies whole loſs to amount to upwards of 700 men; among whom were Col. Needham, and divers other prime officers, beſides many wounded, and above 130 taken priſoners, and brought into the Town. Many of their ſlain were thrown into wells, ſome buried in ditches, others carried off, and conſiderable numbers left behind [Z].

[W] The Lord Clarendon gives this Character of the Earl of Norwich, that he was of "a frolick and pleaſant humour,——of a jovial nature." (Hiſt. Book XI.) and Mr. Whitelock, that he was too much addicted to jeſt and droll (p. 312.) But, adds Lord Clarendon, "he had no experience or knowledge of the war, nor knew how to exerciſe the office he had taken upon him of General."

[X] He was Lieutenant-Colonel to the Earl of Warwick; and, under him had the Government of Landguard-fort but he now quitted the Parliament's ſervice.

[Y] Of Kent: He was buried in St. Peter's chancel.

[Z] Two days after, when the Royaliſts ſent to Lord Fairfax for a Liſt of the Priſoners taken from them, he ſent them as follows. Sir William Leiton Colonel, Lieutenant Colonel Roberts, Capt. Gregory Baker, Capt. Chriſtmas, George Rawlins Eſq; Lieut. Thomas Outing, Lieut. Francis Bland, and ſixteen Gentlemen more. Sir John Dorrell, Col. Francis Clark, Geo. May Gent. theſe three taken before the fight, with 320 private ſoldiers. (Papers printed by authority.)

Night coming on, and it proving darkiſh, the Parliamentarians made uſe of that opportunity for retreating: But, before they drew off, ſet ſome houſes on fire near Headgate, hoping the wind would ſo force the fire inwards, that it might burn the whole Town; but the diligence of the ſoldiers proved as great in defending it from fire, as before from plunder and the ſword, guarding it from an enemy mercileſs in the one, and inſatiable in the other, as the ſuburbs in the Town witneſſed [A].

General Fairfax being thus diſappointed in his firſt attack upon this Town, and not having forces enough to ſtorm it at once; he reſolved, June 14, to ſit down before it, in order to ſtarve the Royaliſts, that had ſhut themſelves up therein, into a compliance [B]. For that purpoſe, he "fixed his head-quarters at Lexden, "in the road to London; where he ordered "the main body to lye, to prevent any Aſſiſtance coming from that quarter to the Lord "Goring: And he ſent a ſtrong guard of horſe, "on the W. Bergholt, or Cambridge road, that "the Beſieged might not eſcape that way Northward, and go and join Sir Marmaduke Langdale; thus leaving them no place open except towards the ſea. But, to deprive them alſo of that refuge, "he diſpatched a party of Horſe "to ſecure Merſey-iſland, that the King's ſhips "ſhould not come up the river to relieve the "Town: The Royaliſts ſent Col. Tuke, with "a ſtrong party an hour after, but he came too "late."

June 25. The Beſiegers, in the night, began to carry on their approaches nearer, "and to "make a Fort," or Battery, in the Sholand, which they named Fort Eſſex [C]. The Beſieged, on their part, erected "the Royal Fort at St. "Mary's, from whence they fired hard, and "killed ſome of the workmen employed in "making Fort-Eſſex; and others as they were "ſtragling the fields;" three more were ſlain "the next day with a cannon-ball".

The night following, they broke ground upon a Hill, then called the Warren and now the Hanging-field, where they placed a ſtrong guard. And ſo every night broke up freſh ground in ſeveral places, which they thought moſt advantageous, running their Line by degrees from one redoubt and fort to another.

This gave the Royaliſts juſt occaſion to believe that the Lord Fairfax and his army intended to plant themſelves before them for a longer continuance than they had imagined, and to block them up. And that induced them to provide for their own future ſecurity; which then conſiſted in the greateſt care for victualling and fortifying; the only two things to be firſt thought on in ſuch a caſe; eſpecially in a Town then deficient in both. And therefore when they firſt came, their intention was only to quarter a night or two here.

But this engagement having forced them to it, every man, enlivened with a cheerful behaviour, began to forward all things requiſite for the buſineſs: for march away now they could not, having no way to proceed, without falling into a champian country, where, they being unavoidably weak, and the enemy very ſtrong, in horſe, would have cut them off in an inſtant, their foot being no ſuch experienced ſoldiers as to maintain a charge of themſelves, againſt both horſe and foot, without hedges to guard and ſhelter them from the horſe.

However, by the incomparable diligence of all parties, though no one at firſt knew where to find proviſion of any ſort, more than belonged to every private family for their ordinary ſuſtenance, yet they found in a ſhort time, in ſeveral parts of the town, and particularly at the Hythe, many private ſtores of corn, and wine of all ſorts, (more than had been known there within the memory of man) with much ſalt, ſome fiſh; and a good quantity of powder, the want whereof would ſuddenly have thrown them into abſolute ruin, having very much exhauſted their magazine by the laſt day's buſineſs. All this, being much more than indeed they could have hoped for, was conveyed into the town with expedition and ſecrecy, the enemy being ſo favourable as not to endeavour to cut them off from that place, till they had almoſt drained the honey from the comb; which they might eaſily have done, had they known what the others were doing.

[A] The people whereof, chiefly poor Weavers, rather ſeemed to oppoſe, than to aſſiſt or help the Royaliſts in all they did: yet the next morning, they found ſcarce a houſe unplundered, from the one end to the other, and many poor Men dead in their houſes; and the women and children fled. Amongſt the reſt, M. Carter received this account the next morning by break of day: Juſt over-againſt the Almes-houſes, lived a poor Weaver, whoſe dwelling he happened to ride by, and ſeeing a woman heavily bemoaning herſelf demanded the cauſe of ſo much grief: whereupon ſhe anſwered him, that the laſt night, ſome of the ſoldiers who fought againſt the town, came violently into her houſe, and took what they pleaſed; and that they were no ſooner gone, but others came in, and not finding any thing left in the houſe that pleaſed them, came to her huſband at work in the loom, and demanded money of him, who told them, that he had been worth but little, and that what he had, the Soldiers that came before them had taken from him, excepting only a ſmall ſum in his purſe, which he would willingly give them, if they would be ſatisfied with it; but that not anſwering their expectations, they told him, he was a Cavalier-rogue, and had more money, which they would have, or kill him; both which he denying, one of them ſhot him through the body, ſo that he died immediately: At which noiſe his ſon coming in, they fell to cutting of him, and had ſo cruelly wounded him, that he lay more likely to die than live many days. p. 137.

[B] 'Tis ſomewhat unaccountable, that the Lord Fairfax ſhould undertake a formal ſiege, or ſpend ſo much Time in a Blockade againſt ſo weak and ill-provided a Town as this was. Mr. Rapin hath invented a far-fetched reaſon for it; namely, that his Lordſhip "would not have been "ſorry to ſee Cromwell defeated by the Scots; in ex- "pectation that, if he were ſlain, or loſt his reputation, it "would be eaſier to make Peace." (Vol. II. under the year 1648.) But his Lordſhip's anſwer to the Earl of Norwich, preſently mentioned, ſhews, that he had no inclination for Peace. And his proceedings before and ſince demonſtrate, That he had an entire Love and Attachment for Oliver Cromwell, to whom he made himſelf a thorough Tool. The chief motive in his ſitting down thus obſtinately before Colcheſter, appears to me, to have been an inveterate Pique againſt Sir Charles Lucas, whom he was reſolved to deſtroy at any rate.

[C] This fort was filled up and levelled about Michaelmas 1742. It was about 8 rods long, and 3 broad.

Whilſt they were thus active in preventing the dangers which might happen, by ſtrengthening the walls of the town, fortifying thoſe places which were moſt defenceleſs, and caſting up ramparts and counterſcarps, as a great part of the town required; the enemy was as buſy without in running their trenches, making their approaches, and caſting up forts and batteries againſt them, and they as diligent and laborious within: not without great neceſſity on their part, the Town being in all places very weak, neither had it any more than one flanker about it, and that very bad too, which was called the Old Fort, ot Balkon [C].

Shortly after the Parliamentarians received a great reinforcement from Suffolk and Norfolk; being Colonel Gurdon's Regiment of Horſe; and Sir Thomas Barnardiſton's, Colonel Fothergill's, Colonel Harvey's, and Colonel Bloys's Regiments of Foot; which lay at Neyland, Stratford, Cataway-bridge, and other paſſes over the river Stoure: ſo that the Beſieged could not have forced their paſſage on that ſide, in caſe they had attempted it, without being attacked by their enemy in the rear, and forced to engage both ways, to the hazard of their immediate deſtruction.

Saturday, June 17, Sir Charles Lucas ſent a Trumpet, propoſing an exchange of priſoners, but General Fairfax anſwered, “ That Sir “ Charles had forfeited his parole, his honour, “ and faith, being his priſoner upon parole, and “ therefore not capable of command, or truſt “ in martial affairs (g).” But I wiſh Mr. Whitelock had cleared this point. For I have peruſed, I think, every thing material that was publiſhed about theſe times, and never could find when Sir Charles was thus made a priſoner upon his parole, to the Lord Fairfax. It behoves therefore the Lord Fairfax's admirers to explain this inſolent Reply, which his Lordſhip has not thought fit to mention in his ſhort Memorials.

June 18. The Parliament ſhips at Harwich took “ two frigats, one of 11, the other of “ 10 guns,” that lay there to aſſiſt the King's party in this Town. And, the ſame day “ Col. “ Ewer came up to the ſiege with ſix com-“ panies from Chepſtow-caſtle.” A reinforcement that was coming to the Royaliſts, under the command of “ Major Muſchamp, was de-“ feated at Linton by Sparrow and Wallingford, ſent from before this town by Lord Fair-“ fax, wherein the Major was ſlain, ſome taken “ priſoners, and the reſt, about five hundred, “ diſperſed.”

June 19. The Committee of Parliament that had been ſeized at Chelmsford, as is ſaid above, and was under reſtraint in this Town, (being Sir William Rowe, Sir William Maſham, Joh. Eden, Samuel Sheffeild, J. Langley, Ti. Middleton, Tho. Ayloff, Robert Smith, J. Barnardiſton, and Robert Crane) “ upon their humble “ requeſt for it to the Lord Norwich, Lord “ Capel, and Sir Charles Lucas, obtained leave “ of them, that they, the ſaid Committee, might “ make it their humble Propoſal to the Lord “ Fairfax, that there might be a Treaty be-“ tween both Armies for a Peace.” To which the Lords Norwich, and Capel, and Sir Charles Lucas, added theſe words, “ It is the general “ Peace of the Kindome we contend for, and “ therefore we are content, that the Committee “ ſhall ſend their above-written Propoſall to “ the Lord Fairfax, according unto their Re-“ queſt made unto us.” The Lord Fairfax's anſwer was thus, “ My Lords, The Paper ſent to me, incloſed in the letter from your Lordſhips, and Sir Charles Lucas, of the 19th inſtant, ſeems in the firſt part of it ſo drawn, as that I could not well underſtand it, what kind of Treaty, or for what Peace it meant. But the latter part, under-written by your Lordſhips, and Sir Charles Lucas, ſeems to explain your own meaning, ſo, as if you meant a Treaty betwixt the Armies for the generall Peace of the Kingdom, and not otherwiſe for yourſelves, or your garriſon: And to the Contents of it in that ſenſe, I can only ſay, That ſuch a Treaty and for ſuch a Peace, is not the proper work of myſelf, or the Army, but theirs that have imployed us: But if the Engliſh be, to make a way for conditions to your Garriſon, I ſhall, without the trouble of a Treaty, let you know what yourſelves, and thoſe under you may expect from me, which for the reſtoring of quiet to this County, and the Kingdom, without more blood-ſhed, and for the ſaving of ſo eminent a Town from the chance of War, I ſhall offer, viz. That if yourſelves, and the reſt with you in Colcheſter, ſhall, within twenty-four houres after notice hereof, lay down armes, the common ſouldiers, and men of that rank, ſhall have liberty to depart to their ſeveral homes, and there quietly to remain ſubmitting unto the Authority of Parliament: (And this I ſhall make good however, to ſo many of that ſort reſpectively, as ſhall accept thereof, and do accord-

[C] The Royaliſts give theſe reaſons, why they did not come and fight the Lord Fairfax's army. “ We had hopes of ſpeedy Relief, both from the Scots, and divers other places, who were at the ſame time in action: Beſides, it was judged the greateſt piece of policy, to keep the Enemy in a lingering action, to give a Remora to their deſigns, and ruin them by long delays; by which means, we ſhould gain liberty, and an opportunity to others, who were then in action, to work their deſigns without interruption; and not to run the hazard of an immediate ruin, by giving them battle: For, had we fought with them, it muſt have been upon infinite diſadvantages. Firſt, in the inequality of the number of infantry. Secondly, becauſe we had no conſiderable party of cavalry in reſpect of theirs, whoſe greateſt ſtrength conſiſted in horſe. And it was no raſh or fond ſuppoſition to think, that, could we hold what we had till the reſt of the Kingdom ſhould riſe, we ſhould then do as good ſervice as the immediate victory; we ſuppoſed we might poſſibly hold out a month, and were reſolved on it, though it concluded in our own ruin, by which time, if not ſooner, we could not but expect to be relieved. By this deſign, we were alſo certain to give liberty to the Scots to march quietly into the Kingdom, being then, moſt aſſuredly, upon their march, and near the borders. Neither was this a l the hopes we cheriſhed by this reſolution; for there remained a poſſibility of a victory over that army, by delaying to fight with them, till ſome more fit opportunity ſhould offer itſelf; or the tediousneſs of the ſervice weaken them by hard duty, conſtant action, and unſeaſonable lying in the field, in reſpect of the weather.” See the Appendix, No.

ingly.) Yourſelves, and the Officers and Gentlemen engaged with you in the Town, ſhall have liberty, and Paſſes to go beyond ſea, with equipage befitting their qualities (engaging themſelves not to return into this kingdom without leave from the Parliament.) And all of both ſorts, with the inhabitants of the Town, ſhall be free from plunder, or violence of the ſouldiers, their arms, ammunition, and furniture of war within the town, and alſo their horſes imployed in militarie ſervice (except ſuch horſes and ſwords as ſhall be fit to be allowed to Captaines, or ſuperior Officers, and Gentlemen of quality, for their removall) being firſt delivered up without imbezlement, in an orderly manner, as ſhall be further ſet down, and the forces under my command, or ſuch as I ſhall appoint, being admitted a peaceable entrance into the Town. I deſire the Gentlemen of the Committee of Parliament now in your hands (who by their ſubſcriptions to part of the Paper, and by your ſending of it, as from them, or at their requeſt, are concerned to know what my anſwer is) may be acquainted herewith, and indeed, if it be concealed from any that are concerned in it, the blame thereof from God and man is like to fall on their heads, who ſhall be the authors of ſuch concealment."

The ſubſtance of this Anſwer was publiſhed, two days after, by beat of drum, and ſound of trumpet, in the head of every Troop and Regiment of the Parliamentarian army before Colcheſter.

On the 21ſt of June, the Earl of Norwich, Lord Capel, and Sir Charles Lucas returned this anſwer to the Lord Fairfax. "My Lord, We have received yours of the 20th, which takes notice of the Paper of the 19th, ſubſcribed by the Committee, and of our permiſſion to have it delivered to you. You have very juſtly apprehended our intentions to be the Publique Peace of the Kingdom, and we againe own that ſence, and no other, as befitting the duty of Engliſh-Men; And we believe, if both Armie were accorded in ſuch an indeavour, it were the moſt pious, eaſie, and honourable action, wherein they could be ingaged; but why you have taken occaſion by that act of ours, to offer Conditions in particular to us, we underſtand not, nor can it be ſuppoſed, without ſtrayning and offering violence to our manner of proceeding. Thoſe Conditions you proffer to the Officers and ſouldiers on our part, we doe hereby make offer of to the Officers and ſouldiers on your part. We ſhall in this occaſion deale frankly and plainly. We doe not, without evident reaſon, conceive ourſelves to be in a condition able to entertain all the force you can make, and thereby to give courage and opportunity to all true-hearted Engliſh-men, to recover their ancient and knowne Lawes; or, if you ſhall adventure to attaque us, we doubt not but by the mercy and aſſiſtance of Almighty God to give you ſuch a repulſe, as ſhall give Teſtimony of our force and courage, and at how high a rate we value the Generall Peace of the Kingdome. You doe with more then uſual earneſtneſſe deſire, that your Anſwer ſhould be communicated to the Committee, and whom elſe it may concerne; we apprehend you chiefly intend the Inhabitants of Colcheſter; We were very unworthy perſons if any ſhould exceed us in our Care for this good Towne, and we doubt not but God will recompence the kindneſs we have received from them, and that he hath a reward in ſtore for them ſuitable to the loyalty and fidelity they have hitherto in this occaſion manifeſted toward the King, and knowne Lawes of the Kingdome: and becauſe you apprehend it ſo important and neceſſary to divulge the proceedings in this affaire, we will therefore put it into your power: And therefore we deſire your Lordſhip, to cauſe the Paper ſigned by the Committee of the 19. and our anſwer ſubſigned, the anſwer of your Lordſhip to us of the 20. and this our reply of the 21. to be all printed, and as many of the prints as you ſhall ſend to us, we will diſperſe in Colcheſter, and thoſe parts of the Country under our power, and to each perſon of the Committee one (b)."

The ſame day a letter from the Lord Goring, with a Petition from the Inhabitants, was preſented to the Lord Fairfax, "That liberty might be granted to the Bay and Say-makers in the town, to have a free trade with London during the ſiege." His Lordſhip anſwered, "That they ſhould have conſidered this, and divers other inconveniences of war before they had admitted the Forces in their town: That the preſent interruption of their Trade was brought upon them not by his default, but by thoſe whome the Town had harboured; and that to grant liberty of Trade to perſons beſieged, was ſuch a motion as was never granted: That there were with him ſundry Gentlemen of quality, and townſmen of good eſtates and eminent in trade, who offered to buy all the Bays and Says in the town at the uſual prices, and to pay for them within a fortnight after the Town ſhould be rendered, or quitted to him: And, though it were without example to a beſieged town, yet he would give leave to their commodities to be brought to Lexden Heath near the town, to be bargained, or returned back, as there ſhould be occaſion."

About the 20th of June, divers Gentlemen were diſpatched privately by the Royaliſts, with Commiſſions to raiſe men in Norfolk, Suffolk, and Cambridgeſhire; but the Country forces ſtrictly watching the paſſes, and having broken down the bridges; and the Beſiegers withal taken Merſey-fort, which commanded the paſſage into that Iſland, there was no way left open for them, ſo they were forced to return back; which they did ſecurely, though through the enemy's Quarters, not a Man being taken.

The next night, parties of horſe and foot were commanded to go into the Hundred of Tendring, for the bringing in of Proviſions; which returned ſafe the day following, with about a hundred ſheep, and ſixty oxen, that were all delivered to the Commiſſary for the general ſtore. And ſo in like manner, proviſions were brought to the public ſtore-houſes every night.

Two or three days after, part of the country roſe to join with them; but the Captain, who by commiſſion from Sir Charles Lucas was to levy and command them, would have betrayed them to their enemy, in order to ingratiate himſelf with the prevailing Power: but his deſign was diſcovered, and himſelf ſeized on by the countrymen, till Sir Charles Lucas's pleaſure ſhould be further known concerning him, and them: To whom they ſent two ſufficient men, to give him an account of the affair, making it their earneſt requeſt, that he would ſend a party of horſe and foot to aſſiſt them in their riſing, and to conduct them ſafe into the Town. Accordingly, a party was drawn out, and marched away in the night, who ſtayed there about a week, and then returned ſafe with what men they had raiſed, through the Quarters of the Suffolk foot, who were drawn over the river Stoure. And Another party was commanded out in the night, which marching out at north-Gate, forced through their quarters, and in the morning returned ſafe, loſing not above two men, for which Loſs they gained livelihood for many more, by bringing in with them above fifty oxen and cows, beſides ſheep, ſome corn, and other proviſions. They might have brought more, but Sir Charles Lucas being tender of injuring his countrymen, would not permit them to drive from any, but thoſe he knew to be actual enemies; though his tenderneſs proved a very great inconveniency and prejudice to the people in the Town. For, after that time, they never obtained the like opportunity, the enemy drawing immediately nearer, and confining them within narrow bounds, being vexed and angry, amongſt themſelves, that they ſhould ſuffer them to march through their quarters upon a ſally, and return again ſafe. They yet ſecured the Hythe, as a final refuge for proviſion, from whence they conveyed daily, ſuch neceſſaries as it would afford, by keeping a conſtant guard there; which the enemy did not endeavour to hinder them of, till they had very little left there of any uſe.

June 22. The Parliamentarians were hard at work upon “ Colonel Ewer's fort, near the “ Shepen; which 100 of the Royaliſts ſallied “ out in the night to view, but were inſtantly “ beaten in again. However, their cannon “ killed two of the beſiegers.” This day the Lords Goring and Capel, and Sir Charles Lucas, ſent a ſummons to the Suffolk-forces at Cataway-bridge and Stratford; aſſuring them, that their intents were levelled at the reſtoring the known Laws of the land, the proper intereſt both of King and ſubjects, and a well-grounded Peace: But the Suffolk men refuſed to join them.

“ Friday, the 23d, the Beſiegers Guns began “ to play from Fort-Ingoldſby, which much “ annoyed the Beſieged at North-bridge.” And the next day, June 24, “ a gunner belonging to the latter “ was killed.” The ſame day, “ the Suffolk-“ forces, though unwillingly, advanced out of “ that Country, and took up their Quarters at “ Mile-end, over-againſt North-gate, being “ about 2000 foot and 500 horſe, leaving a “ guard at Cataway and Neyland, to ſecure “ thoſe paſſes.” Soon after, they fell upon a party of the Royaliſts, killed two, and took twenty priſoners: Some of whom are ſaid to have had in their pockets chewed bullets, rolled in ſand. And two Affidavits being made by Deſerters, that they were delivered out of the ſtores by the Earl of Norwich's and the other Officers directions; thoſe noble perſons denied any ſuch command or practice; but, for rough-caſt ſlugs, they ſaid they were the beſt they could ſend on the ſudden (i).

On the 26th the Beſieged being drawn “ out “ in Crouch-ſtreet, a party of Col. Barkſtead's “ foot beat them out of their hedges, and from “ their court of guard, fired the guard-houſe, “ and brought away the hour-glaſs by which “ they ſtood century.”

Wedneſday, the 28th, “ early in the morning, the Beſieged, with a party of horſe, at-“ tempted the Parliamentarians Horſe-guards “ near St. Mary's, and ſhot a ſcout, but were “ inſtantly beaten back.” The day following, as the Enemies were buſy in making Barkſtead's Fort, on the Weſt-ſide of Maldon-lane, the Beſieged did annoy them as much as poſſible, not only with their great cannon, but alſo with ſmall ſhot out of Sir Harbottle Grimſton's houſe, [formerly the Crouched-Friers.] Whereupon General Fairfaxe's great cannon ſhooting through and through that houſe, obliged the Royaliſts to retire, which they leiſurely did, ſetting firſt the ſaid Houſe on fire. “ At night they alſo “ fired Mr. Barrington's houſe,” where now ſtands Mr. Winſley's Hoſpital :] And a “ party “ of their horſe advancing over Eaſt-bridge, “ whither an embuſcade was laid for them by “ the enemies dragoons, Lieut. Col. Hatchet, “ and divers other officers and ſoldiers of the “ Royaliſts were ſlain.”

Saturday, July 1, “ Col. Whaley poſſeſſed “ himſelf of Greenſtead-church,” and erected a ſtrong battery in the Church-yard.

On Wedneſday, July 5, the Royaliſts council of war publiſhed a proclamation, for calling all ſuch town's-men, as would ſerve upon the line for the ſecurity of the Town, to enliſt themſelves, under the ſeveral Captains and Officers deputed by Sir Charles Lucas to command them; and all others, to bring in their arms to be delivered into the magazine; thoſe who refuſed to enliſt themſelves, not to keep any arms in their houſes, on pain of death, and forfeiture of their goods to the benefit and uſe of the Town.

About this time, the Beſiegers encroached ſo near by their approaches, notwithſtanding the daily ſallies and ſkirmiſhes from within, that they fell into Eaſt-ſtreet, ſeized the water-mill, and placed a ſtrong guard there; which guard, (in hopes of firing all that part of the ſtreet betwixt them and the Town, becauſe many of the Royaliſts both quartered and guarded there alſo) ſet fire to a Tanner's houſe and barn, and conſumed them with all the goods therein. They alſo began to be very buſy and troubleſome to the others guards; whereupon, at the next council of war, a reſolution was taken for a grand ſally on that part of the Town; which was accordingly performed. Sir Charles Lucas commanded in chief, marching at the head of the horſe, and Sir George Liſle commanded the foot; the whole party conſiſted of five hundred foot, and two hundred horſe, out of which, a forlorn party being drawn, they firſt marched down towards the river, whilſt the Beſiegers guard was placed on both ſides of the ſtreet, and a barricade a-croſs; from whence, with caſe-ſhot from their Drakes, and ſmall ſhot from the barricado and guard-houſes, they played very thick upon the forlorn, which had no other paſſage over the river, than a foot bridge, the end whereof reached within five feet of the enemy's barricado. But, as if it had been only a ſporting ſkirmiſh amongſt tame ſoldiers, at a general muſter, they ran in a ſingle file over the bridge, and ſome for haſte through the river, mounted their barricado, and beat the enemy off in an inſtant. Having once gained that, they overturned the Drakes, charged upon other parties that ſtill fired upon them in the ſtreet, paſſed by the guard houſes, till they had cleared a great part of the ſtreet; and ſurrounding them, charged upon them, who having neither poſſibility of relief, retreat, or eſcape, yielded upon quarter. So they took the Captain, Lieutenant, Enſign, and about eighty private ſoldiers, with all the other inferior officers. Many were alſo killed in the adjacent houſes, the whole ſtreet being almoſt full of ſoldiers: They over-turned the Drakes, and threw one of them into the river, but not having teams ready, could not bring them off.

The whole party being now advanced, and having thus ſurpriſed the guard, they marched on, and made good the charge till they had cleared the whole ſtreet; which gave ſo great an alarm to all the Parliamentarians Leaguer, that they immediately rallied together all the foot and horſe on that ſide of the river, and marched down the hill from behind the Eaſt Windmill, to the top of another hill, near St. Anne's, in a very full and orderly body, leaving only their colours and pikes, with a reſerve behind the Windmill. But the party having gained almoſt the top of the firſt hill, followed their charge ſo ſmartly, that they ſoon forced the Beſiegers to a diſorderly retreat. So that the fields were overſpread with confuſed and diſperſed ſoldiers, both of horſe and foot. The Royaliſts being thereby encouraged, proſecuted their ſucceſs, till they had beat the enemies up beyond the Windmill; and forced reſerve, colours, and all they had, or that could rally, to quit the ground, and ſo to diſperſe themſelves, that they were forced to divide their horſe into three ſquadrons or bodies; one diviſion to keep the field againſt the Party, who had now made a ſtand in better order; and the other two conſtantly wheeled up and down, beating up their foot as they ran away. But having now gotten a very thick hedge for a ſhelter, and being thus forced up, they began to make a ſtand; and the others foot, more out of heat of courage than mature policy, ſtill ran on, till they gained an old thin hedge, oppoſite to their enemy, beyond the Windmill, where they ſtill fired upon the enemy, maintaining the ſaid hedge, whilſt a party of Col. Whaley's horſe, wheeled about the field between them: Which party accidentally diſcovered they had ſpent all their ammunition, by hearing a ſoldier fooliſhly call out for ſome; and thereupon ſuddenly clapping ſpurs to their horſes made a full charge, through the hedge, upon the Royaliſts, who not having ammunition, nor time to retreat, were moſt of them killed, or taken; till which time they had loſt very few in the charge, though many were wounded, as could not otherwiſe be avoided in ſo ſmart an engagement. However, the body of the Royaliſts party being upon their retreat, and perceiving what had happened, faced about again, and forced their purſuers once more to a ſpeedy retreat; and ſo marched eaſily into the town again, in very good order.

In this Action, Sir George Liſle was once taken priſoner, but immediately reſcued; and in all, the Royaliſts affirm they loſt one Captain, one Lieutenant, and about thirty [D] private ſoldiers, who were taken at the broken hedge, but very few killed.

Of the Parliamentarians upwards of eighty [E] were brought into the town priſoners, and between two and three hundred killed; amongſt whom was Colonel Shambrooke that had ſucceeded Colonel Needham in the command of his regiment; and many were wounded, of which very few eſcaped, but died within a very ſhort time, either through the neglect of the Surgeons (in which both parties ſuffered very much) or through the ſeverity of the weather [F]. Inſomuch that divers which came into the town afterwards, and theſe men too, that had been formerly in the King's ſervice, affirmed, that the attack was at the leaſt 500 men loſs to them; beſides many that left the ſiege upon it, ſome coming into the town, three or four in a day, and often more, for a long time together; and others ſtealing away to their own habitations.

After which ſally, the country-men employed amongſt the Beſiegers began to be diſpleaſed with the ſervice, and thought it hard duty to lie ſo long in the trenches, and were glad to entertain all comers who would perform their duty for them, allowing them ten ſhillings a week, conſtant pay, to be excuſed themſelves: By which means, many who came from London, and other places, with a deſign to have joined the Royaliſts, not being able to come into the town, entered themſelves in the army; that they might have an opportunity more eaſily to come to them, had they marched out into the field, as they declared.

The next night, the enemy ſtrengthening their Leaguer on that part of the Town, came into Eaſt-ſtreet again with a ſtronger party than before; poſſeſſed themſelves of their former guards and ground, and began a ſecond time to fire the houſes on the Weſt-ſide of the river next the Town, in order to drive away the Royaliſts guards, by whom they were much incommoded.

Then Colonel Whalley ſet fire to all the Wind-mills near the town, to hinder the Beſieged from grinding their corn; but they ſoon had a remedy for that: for having found at the Hythe, by the river-ſide, many Mill-ſtones lying ready for exportation, they brought ſome into the town, and ſet up Horſe-mills, which proved very ſerviceable during the remainder of the ſiege. From this day to the 11th the Beſieged ſallied almoſt every night, being encouraged by their ſucceſſes; and they conſtantly cut off ſome of the Enemy, but not without loſs alſo on their own ſide. About this time they received by a ſpy, the bad news of the defeat of the King's friends almoſt in all parts of England, and eſpecially ſeveral Parties which wiſhed well to the gentlemen, and intended to relieve them.

Their Batteries from St. Maries-Fort and Steeple, and from the N. Bridge, greatly annoyed the enemy. Particularly, a one-eyed Gunner, was placed in St. Mary's ſteeple; whoſe memory is ſtill celebrated, for having ſingled out and killed many of the Parliamentarians. Here a platforme was made in the frame of the bells, and a braſs-ſaker planted, which flanking their trench, did them much injury: Beſides, a Centinel was kept in that place, which diſcovered their motions night and day. Therefore, as ſoon as they had drawn their Line near the Lord Lucas's houſe, they planted two demi-cannons againſt St. Mary's Church, and fired threeſcore and odd great ſhot at the ſteeple; but did very little hurt. For, with as much ſpeed as could be, a battery was raiſed upon the curtain, from whence the Royaliſts had not fired above four times, before one of the Beſiegers beſt gunners, and about ſix men more fell. Whereupon, they drew off their guns from that place, finding it too hot for continuance.

July 14. The Beſiegers attacked and took the Hyth Church, with a ſmall work which the Beſieged had there, but the Defenders retired in time; ſome were taken Priſoners in the Church, but not in the Fort. Next John Lord Lucas's Houſe at St. John's, was attacked by a great body of the Beſiegers; the Party which was in the Gate-houſe, being about 100 in number, defended themſelves with good Reſolution for ſome time, 'till two or three hand-granadoes thrown in by the aſſailants having fired the Magazine, the Houſe was blown up, and moſt of the gallant Defenders buried in the Ruins. This was a great blow to the Royaliſts, for it was a very ſtrong Paſs, and always well guarded.

The Beſiegers having thus poſſeſſed themſelves of the Lord Lucas's houſe, and the Hythe, began to draw their Line cloſer, and very ſtreightly to ſurround and block up the Town. Then they brought their biggeſt pieces of Battery, being two demi-cannons, and two whole culverines, upon St. John's Green; and, battering again St. Mary's Steeple, beat down one ſide of it, in a ſhort time, with a great part of the Church, breaking the ſaker that was planted there. The Gunner, and one of the matroſſes, were killed.

July 15. The Lord Fairfax ſent offers of Honourable Conditions to the ſouldiers of the Garriſon, if they would ſurrender, or quit the ſervice. Upon which the Lords Goring and Capel and Sir Charles Lucas returned an anſwer ſigned with their own Hands, That it was not Honourable or agreeable to the uſage of war to offer Conditions ſeparately to the ſoldiers, excluſive of their officers, and therefore civilly deſired his Lordſhip to ſend no more ſuch meſſages or propoſals; or if he did, that he would not take it ill if they hanged the Meſſenger.

This Evening, all the Gentlemen voluntiers, with all the Horſe of the Garriſon, headed by Sir Charles Lucas, Sir George Liſle, and Sir Bernard Gaſcoign, reſolved to break through the Leaguer, and forcing a Paſs, to advance into Suffolk by Neyland Bridge. For this purpoſe, they paſſed the River by Middle-mill; but their Guides, one of whom was the miller, having miſled them, the Beſiegers took the alarm; upon which the Royaliſts Guides and ſome Pioneers which they had with them to open the hedges and level the banks for their paſſing to Boxted, ran away: ſo the Horſe were obliged to retreat. The Enemy pretended to purſue, but thinking they had retreated by the North-bridge they miſſed them; upon which being enraged, they fired the ſuburbs without the Bridge, and burned them quite down.

July 18. Some of the Horſe attempted to eſcape the ſame way, and, had the whole Body been there as before, they had effected it: but there being but two troops they were obliged to retire.

Now the Town began to be greatly diſtreſſed, proviſions failing, and the Town's People, which were numerous, being very uneaſy; and no way of breaking through being found practicable, the Royaliſts would have joyned in any attempt wherein they might die gallantly with their ſwords in their hands, but nothing preſented; they often ſallied and cut off many of the Enemy, but their numbers were continually ſupplied, and the Beſieged diminiſhed: their Horſes alſo ſunk and became unfit for ſervice, having very little hay and no corn, and at length they were forced to kill them for Food, ſo that they began to be in a miſerable condition, and the ſouldiers deſerted every day in great numbers, not being able to bear the want of Food, as being almoſt ſtarved with Hunger.

July 22. The Lord Fairfax offered again an exchange of Priſoners, but the Lord Goring rejected it, becauſe they refuſed Conditions to the chief Gentlemen of the Garriſon.

" This day, a Horſe was roaſted whole, near “ North-gate ; to make the Soldiers merry at “ the entrance into ſuch diet.”

During this Time, two troops of the Royal horſe ſallied out in the night, reſolving to break through, or die: They firſt rode up full gallop to the Enemies Horſe-guards on the ſide of Maldon Road, and exchanged their piſtols with the advanced troops, wheeling as if they would retire into the Town; but finding they were not purſued, they wheeled about to the right, and paſſing another guard at a diſtance, without being perfectly diſcovered, they went clean off, and paſſing towards Tiptree Heath, and having good Guides, they made their eſcape towards Cambridgeſhire. In which length of way they found means to diſperſe, without being attacked, and went every man his own way as fate directed, and few of them were taken: They were led, as we are informed, by Sir Bernard Gaſcoin.

Upon theſe attempts of the Horſe to break out, the Enemy built a ſmall fort in the meadow, right againſt the ford in the River at Middle-mill, and on the 26th ſet that mill on fire, but it was extinguiſhed without much damage; however, the fort prevented any more attempts that way.

July 22. The Lord Fairfax General ſent in a trumpet, to propoſe again the Exchange of Priſoners, offering the Lord Capel's ſon for one, and Mr. Aſhburnham for Sir William Maſham; But the Lord Capel, Lord Goring, and the reſt of the Gentlemen, rejected it; and Lord Capel in particular ſent the Lord Fairfax word, it was inhuman to ſurpriſe his ſon, who was not in arms, and offer him to inſult a Father's affection, but that he might murder his ſon if he pleaſed, he would leave his blood to be revenged as Heaven ſhould give opportunity; and the Lord Goring ſent word, that as they had reduced the King's ſervants to eat Horſe-fleſh, the Priſoners ſhould feed as they fed.

The Parliamentarians ſent again to complain of the Royaliſts ſhooting poiſoned Bullets, and ſent two affidavits made by two Deſerters, ſwearing it was done by the Lord Norwich's direction; The Generals in the Town returned, under all their Hands, that they never gave any ſuch Command or Direction; that they diſowned the Practice; and that the Fellows who ſwore it were perjured before in running from their Colours, and the ſervice of their King, and not to be credited again: But they added, that for ſhooting rough caſt ſlugs they muſt excuſe them, as things ſtood with them at that time.

About this time a Porter in a ſouldier's habit got through the Enemies Leaguer, and paſſing their out-guards in the Dark, got into the Town and brought Letters from London, aſſuring the Royaliſts, that there were ſo many ſtrong Parties up in arms for the King, and in ſo many Places, that they would be very ſuddenly relieved: This they cauſed to be read to the ſouldiers to encourage them; and particularly it related to the Riſing of the Earl of Holland and the Duke of Buckingham, who with 500 Horſe were got together in arms about Kingſton in Surrey. But the Beſieged had notice in a few days after that they were defeated, and the Earl of Holland taken, who was afterwards beheaded.

July 26. The Enemy now began to batter the walls and eſpecially on the Weſt ſide from St. Mary's toward the N. Gate; and the Beſieged were aſſured they intended a ſtorm; on which the Engineers were directed to make Trenches behind the walls where the Breaches ſhould be made; that in caſe of a ſtorm they might meet with a warm reception: Upon this they gave over the deſign of ſtorming. The Lord Goring, finding that the Enemy had ſet the ſuburbs on fire right againſt the Hythe, ordered the remaining Houſes which were empty of Inhabitants, from whence their Muſketeers fired againſt the Town, to be burnt alſo.

July 31. A Body of foot ſallied out at Midnight, to diſcover what the Enemy were doing at a place where they thought a new fort raiſing; they fell in amongſt the Workmen, and put them to flight, cut in pieces ſeveral of the Guard, and brought in the officer who commanded them.

Auguſt 2. The Town was now in a miſerable Condition; the ſouldiers ſearched and rifled the Houſes of the Inhabitants for victuals; they had lived on horſefleſh ſince July 20, and moſt of that alſo as lean as carrion, which not being well ſalted bred worms; this want of Diet made the ſouldiers ſickly, and many died of Fluxes, yet they boldly rejected all offers of ſurrender, unleſs with ſafety of their officers: However, great numbers got out, and either paſſed the Beſiegers Guards, or ſurrendered to them and took paſſes.

Aug. 7. The Town's people became very uneaſy to the ſoldiers, and the Mayor of the Town with the Aldermen waited upon the General, deſiring leave to ſend to the Lord Fairfax, for leave to all the Inhabitants to come out of the Town, that they might not periſh; to which the Lord Goring conſented; but Lord Fairfax refuſed them.

By this time, Horſe-fleſh began to be as precious to the diſtreſſed Royaliſts as the choiceſt meats before: The Souldiers in general, and all Officers and Genlemen, from the Lords to the loweſt degree or quality, eating nothing elſe, unleſs Cats and Dogs. And ſo great were their neceſſities, that the Horſes could ſcarce be ſecure in the Stables, but every morning one Stable or other was robbed, and the horſes knocked on the head, and ſold in the ſhambles by the pound. Nor was there in a ſhort time a Dog left; for it was the cuſtom of the Souldiers, to reſerve half their ammunition-loaf, and in a morning walk the ſtreets, and if they diſcovered a dog, to drop a piece of bread, and ſo draw him on till within their reach; then with the butt-end of their muſket kill him, and carry him to their quarter. Six ſhillings was known to be given for the ſide of a Dog, and yet but a ſmall one neither.

Aug. 12. The poor people got together in great crouds about the Lord Goring's Quarters, clamouring for a ſurrender. This they did every Evening: bringing women and children, who lay howling and crying on the Ground for Bread: The ſouldiers beat off the men, but the women and children would not ſtir, bidding the ſouldiers kill them, ſaying, They had rather be ſhot than ſtarved.

Aug. 16. The General, moved by the cries and diſtreſs of the poor inhabitants, ſent out a trumpet to the Lord Fairfax, demanding leave to ſend to the Prince, who was with a fleet of 19 men of war in the mouth of the Thames, offering to ſurrender if they were not relieved in 20 Days. The Lord Fairfax refuſed it, and ſent them word he would be in the town in Perſon and viſit them in leſs than 20 Days, intimating, that they were preparing for a ſtorm. Some tart Meſſages and Anſwers were exchanged on this occaſion. The Lord Goring ſent word, they were willing, in Compaſſion to the poor Towns people, and to ſave that effuſion of Blood, to ſurrender upon honourable Terms; but as for the ſtorming them as they had threatened, they might come on when they thought fit, for they (the Royaliſts) were ready for them. This held to the 19th.

Aug. 20. The Lord Fairfax returned, what he ſaid was his laſt anſwer, and ſhould be the laſt offer of Mercy: The Conditions offered were, That upon a peaceable ſurrender, all ſouldiers and officers under the degree of a Captain in Commiſſion, ſhould have their lives, be exempted from plunder, and have paſſes to go to their reſpective dwellings: all the Captains and ſuperior officers with all the Lords and Gentlemen as well in Commiſſion as Voluntiers, to ſurrender Priſoners at diſcretion, only that they ſhould not be plundered by the Souldiers.

Aug. 21. The Generals rejected thoſe offers, and when the People came about them again for Bread, ſet open one of the Gates, and bid them go out to the enemy, which a great many did willingly: Upon which the Lord Goring ordered all the reſt that came about his door to be turned out after them: But when the People came to the Lord Fairfax's Camp, the outguards were ordered to fire at them, and drive them all back again to the Gate; which the Lord Goring ſeeing, he ordered them to be received in again. And now though the Generals and Souldiers alſo were reſolute to die with their ſwords in their hands rather than yield, and had maturely reſolved to abide a ſtorm; yet the Mayor and Aldermen having petitioned them, jointly with the Inhabitants; being wearied with the importunities of the diſtreſſed People, and pitying the deplorable Condition they were reduced to, they agreed to enter upon a Treaty. Accordingly they ſent out Dr. Gliſſon, a Phyſician, then living in the Town, to the Lord Fairfax, to treat; but he would not make the leaſt alteration in his laſt Offers.

Upon the return of the ſaid Meſſenger with General Fairfax's Terms, the Lord Goring and the reſt ſent out a letter, declaring they would die with their ſwords in their hands, rather than yield without Quarter for Life; and ſent a paper of Articles, on which they were willing to ſurrender: but in the very interim of this Treaty, news came that the Scotch army under Duke Hamilton, which was entered Lancaſhire, and was joined by the Royaliſts in that Country, making 21,000 men, were intirely defeated. After this, the Lord Fairfax would not grant any abatement of Articles, viz. To have all above Lieutenants ſurrender at mercy.

Tueſday the 22d, early in the morning, more arrows were ſhot into the town at ſeveral places of the Line, with papers faſtened to them, wherein was written as followeth:

Auguſt 21, 1648. "Whereas on Sunday laſt, in a letter to the Lord Goring, Lord Capel, and Sir Charles Lucas, Conditions were offered to all private Souldiers, and inferior officers under Captains, to have liberty to go to their ſeverall homes, without injury or violence; and all ſuperior Officers, Lords and Gentlemen, to ſubmit to Mercy. And whereas the ſame hath been concealed from the Souldiers and inferior Officers aforeſaid: Nevertheleſs, if they will before Thurſday next lay hold on the ſaid Conditions, and come away in a body from the enemy, the ſame conditions ſhall be performed to them which have been offered; but in caſe they ſhall ſuffer the Town's People (whom we ſhall not receive) to be turned out of the town, and ſuffer them to periſh under the Walls, they muſt expect no Mercy; and if the Town's-men in arms ſhall joyne with the ſoldiery, in coming forth in a body as aforeſaid, they ſhall alſo be free from violence." This little ſtratagem, they thought, would have infuſed ſuch a mutiny in the brains of the mob, as would in an inſtant invite the Souldiery to deliver their Officers up as a ſacrifice, to obtain their own liberty. But their hopes were alſo diſappointed in this: for inſtead of a compliant Acceptance of theſe Propoſitions, they reſolved to accept of no conditions wherein their Officers ſhould not receive a benefit, as well as themſelves.

The council of war having the day before permitted Dr. Gliſſon to go out again, with Mr. Sheffield (one of the Committee-men, then Priſoner in the Town, brought from Chelmſford) to mediate with the General for the people of the Town, ſent alſo by him, other Letters concerning the Souldiery, for Conditions of Surrender; but the following Anſwer was returned: "That they had given them a former account of what Conditions they would give them, and thoſe they would ſtand to, and no other muſt they expect."

And now the poor Royaliſts were drawn to a ſad exigency, and plunged into very great extremities. They had ſcarce one Cat or Dog left uneaten in the Town. Some Horſes they had yet alive, but not many, for there were at that time in the Commiſſary's Account, a liſt of ſeven hundred and thirty horſes, which had been killed by him, and orderly diſtributed out; beſides thoſe that the ſouldiers had ſtolen out of the ſtables and killed, and others that Gentlemen had ſlaughtered for their own tables, which made the number above eight hundred. And as for Bread, there was not corn left for one day's proviſion, and many mouths to feed; and they had made all kind of corn the town did afford, as malt, barley, oats, wheat, rye, peaſe, and all they could recover, into bread, for eight weeks together, to lengthen their ſtore, ſtill contented to undergo any hardſhip that might probably tend to the advancement of the general Good; but their hopes were now quite diſſolved into abſolute fear of unavoidable ruin.

However, their Enemies ill uſage, inſtead of breaking their Spirits, ſerved only to ſtir them all up, from the higheſt to the loweſt, to ſome vigorous Reſolutions; and either to extricate themſelves at any rate out of their moſt uneaſy ſituation, or to periſh in the attempt. And, that there might be no miſunderſtanding between the Souldiers and their Officers, upon putting any deſign in execution, the following Engagement was drawn up, and ſigned by all the Officers and Gentlemen thro' the quarters. "We whoſe Names are hereunto written, do, in the preſence of Almighty God, proteſt againſt all Conditions that are or ſhall be ſent from the Enemy, by which our Liberties may be infringed, and our Honours blemiſhed. And we do upon our Honours ſolemnly engage ourſelves, not to deſert one another, nor the foot, 'till by God's aſſiſtance, we have forced out paſſage through all that ſhall oppoſe us, or to periſh in the act, which we atteſt this three and twentieth of Auguſt, one thouſand ſix hundred and forty-eight."

Then the Town was again ſearched, in order to find what proviſions were left, of which upon a ſevere account given, and all private ſtores taken and brought to the Commiſſaries, leaving to every family that had moſt, but one peck of corn of all or any ſorts; yet, after all, the whole would ſcarce amount to one day's proviſion of bread.

The next day, Thurſday, the 24th, the Beſiegers ſent a paper kite into the town, which hovering a good while over it, that the ſouldiers might take notice thereof, at laſt they let it drop in the midſt of the town, with many papers fixt to it, to the ſame purpoſe as thoſe before ſhot in with the arrows, and with them, a book containing, The Relation of a great Victory over the Scots, and their general rout: Within two hours after they made a general triumph through the whole Leaguer, giving a volley both of ſmall and great ſhot: Which the Beſieged thought the beginning of a Storm. But their aſſurances were ſo ſtrong of gaining a Victory without Blows, that they ſuppoſed it (as indeed it was) the beſt Policy to forbear, though they had drawn their approaches ſo near the Line under Berry-Fields, by the ſhelter of the Town-Wall, that their Souldiers from the trenches, and thoſe of the Beſieged from the Line, might talk together, and throw Stones at one another, both which they frequently did.

On Friday the 25th, the Council of war met again early in the morning, at which it was reſolved to ſend. General Fairfax word into the Leaguer, "That ſince he denied to treat upon "any conditions that were honourable, not-"withſtanding their actions and demeanours in "the ſervice had been nothing but what became "their Honour and Fidelity, if he were pleaſed "to make an attempt of attacking them, he "ſhould not need to ſpring any Mine (as he "boaſted he had ready) but that any Gate "about the town that he ſhould make choice "of, ſhould be ſet open, and his entrance diſ-"puted afterwards." But he thought himſelf now ſure of having them at an eaſier rate than the loſs of ſo much blood as ſuch a Surpriſe muſt have coſt him, had he carried it, which he would hardly have done. For the Beſieged had ſtrongly provided and armed themſelves againſt a Storm, by Scythes fitted with long handles, and alſo with ſcalding Pitch, which was kept boyling in iron pots, and caldrons every night round the Line, with long ladles to caſt it over the rampire upon the enemies, had they begun ſtorming.

Wherefore the diſtreſſed Royaliſts conſidering the melancholy Condition they were plunged into, as they could expect no relief or aſſiſtance from any quarter; and the want they were in of proviſion to ſubſiſt withal, not having any hopes of holding out two days longer unleſs without Bread, which was impoſſible; it was the final reſolution of the council of war, To draw out the whole party that night to their arms, both horſe and foot, with what ammunition was left, which was not much, and as many ſhort ſcaling ladders as could be procured in the interim; and, in the deadeſt time, when they might be leaſt expected, to ſet open two of the Gates, and march out and ſtorm the enemy's Line, and ſo fall into their head-quarters, beat up their whole army, and relieve themſelves; or force their march through all oppoſition; or periſh in the attempt. And if the private Soldiers ſhould entertain any ſuſpicion, that the Gentlemen and Officers who had yet horſes, ſhould ſeek for their own ſafety by flight, and leave them engaged, every man (excepting only the General and the Major-general) to piſtol his own horſe at the head of them. This deſign being agreed on, ſecrecy enjoined, and every one receiving his orders according to his duty in the undertaking, the council broke up, and every man betook himſelf, with the utmoſt endeavours, to the making preparation in the day-time for the intended expedition at night.

The Enemy had this day planted four great pieces of battering cannon againſt Berry-Fields, and fired about 140 great ſhot in the forenoon, againſt the Town-wall, but did very little hurt, only beat off the tops of two old ruined Towers upon it, and killed three men. This was taken as a fit alarm for calling the Souldiers in general to the Line, where they might unexpectedly be in a readineſs for the intended ſally at night, without bag or baggage. And in the mean time, the Officers gave the Souldiers burnt claret, raiſins, and good words, to make them join heartily in the work (k). All things were got in readineſs before night came on, and the ammunition and ſcaling ladders brought to a particular place, ready to be carried to the Line. But, a little before the project was to be put in execution, certain Officers ſtarted objections againſt it; and, the ſame night, ſo ſtrong a mutiny aroſe amongſt the private Soldiers, that many threatned to caſt their Officers over the Line, or to kill them if they offered to ſtir out; and the greater part left their guards, and ſent a deputation of Thirty to the Council of war, to know their intentions: Declaring, "That if they would not make conditions for them, and ſuch as they ſhould like of, they would article for themſelves over the Line, and leave their Officers to ſhift for themſelves, as they underſtood the Officers would have done by them." This put the Council into great diſorder and confuſion. But at length, through the induſtry and good management of the Lords concerned in the Engagement with Sir Charles Lucas, Sir William Compton, and Sir George Liſle, the Mutiny was appeaſed; eſpecially upon the Lord Goring's making this Declaration to the Soldiers: "That they were ſo far from deſerting them, or ſeeking any good, that ſhould not extend in as great a meaſure to the meaneſt Soldier amongſt them as to themſelves; that they were thoroughly reſolved to become a prey to their enemies mercy, and caſt themſelves into the greateſt inconveniences that the cruelty of a bloody enemy could oppreſs them with, if thereby they might free the inferior Soldiery from ſuffering: And that it was their deſires, to deliver themſelves up priſoners to the Enemy, to purchaſe them an honorable Liberty; to which end, they were Commiſſioning Gentlemen to the Lord Fairfax to treat for it.". Whereupon, the Soldiers returned to their poſts, with many affectionate expreſſions of the utmoſt readineſs to ſerve their officers again.

But, by this experiment, the Lords and other Officers found ſo little Reliance was to be had on the common Soldiers, that they immediately reſolved to ſend a Gentleman to treat with General Fairfax for Conditions; being fruſtrated of all hopes of longer ſubſiſtence or ſecurity, or poſſibility of further attempting any deſign. Whereupon Col. Samuel Tuke, a man of Honour and Integrity, was immediately ſent out (with J. Barnardiſton one of the Committee-men brought from Chelmsford) to treat upon what had been offered before by the Lord Fairfax (l), together with full power to accept of any Conditions he could obtain, and to conclude before he came back. He returned not till very late that night, yet time enough to let the Royaliſts know the ſad concluſion they were like to have. For General Fairfax (at the inſtigation of his council of war) was fallen from thoſe conditions which formerly he had offered; and now beginning to inſult over the Miſeries of thoſe whom the Fortune of war, and the Defection of the Kingdom, had put in his power; He inſiſted, That in regard the inferior Officers and Soldiers in the Town had ſlipt their opportunity, they ſhould now only have fair quarter: That the Lords, general Officers, Captains, &c. ſhould be rendered up to Mercy: That the Committee-men under reſtraint in the Town ſhould be forthwith releaſed; And, upon that condition, a Treaty ſhould be admitted for the clearing and orderly performance of the fair quarter offered, and to treat as to ſecuring the Town from plunder (m).

The next morning, being Sunday the 27th of Auguſt, the council of war met again, and this account being given in, there was no refuge, nor remedy left, nor any thing to truſt to, but what conditions their enemies would give them. The Committee was therefore immediately diſpatched, and Colonel Tuke, with five other officers, ſent out again to the Parliamentarians, to confirm and ſign Articles for ſurrender, and the manner of delivery.

The Soldiers of both Armies were already mixed on many places of the Line, and no fire given on either ſide, as if the Royaliſts had been abſolute priſoners, long before any concluſion was made.

Towards night they came back, and brought with them the following Articles, which were to be put in execution the next morning.

Articles agreed upon the 27th of Auguſt, 1648, by and betweene the Commiſſioners of his Excellency the Lord Generall Fairfax, on the one Part; and the Commiſſioners of the Earl of Norwich, Lord Capell, and Sir Charles Lucas, on the other part; for and concerning the Rendition of the Town and Garriſon of Colcheſter.

Heith, Auguſt 27, 1648.

Quæries propounded by the Commiſſioners from Colcheſter, to the Commiſſioners of his Excellency the Lord Fairfax, upon the Conditions ſent into the Towne.

1. WHAT is meant by faire Quarter? 2. What by rendring to Mercy? Anſw. To the firſt, By faire Quarter we underſtand, That with Quarter for their lives they ſhall be free from wounding or beating; ſhall enjoy warme clothes to cover them and keep them warme; ſhall be maintained with victuals fit for priſoners while they ſhall be kept priſoners. To the 2d, By rendring to Mercy we underſtand, That they be rendred or render themſelves to the Lord Generall or whom he ſhall appoint, without certaine aſſurance of Quarter, ſo as the Lord Generall, may be free to put ſome immediately to the ſword [G] (if he ſee cauſe) although his Excellency intends chiefly and for the generality of thoſe under that condition, to ſurrender them to the mercy of the Parliament and Generall. There hath been large experience, neither hath his Excellency given cauſe to doubt of his civility to ſuch as he ſhall retain priſoners, although by their being rendred to mercy, he ſtands not engaged thereby.

Upon return of theſe Anſwers, the Commiſſioners from Colcheſter propounded theſe two further Quæries.

1. Whether theſe that were ſurrendred to Mercy, ſhall enjoy their wearing cloathes, as well thoſe on their backs, as what other change they have. 2. Whether the Noblemen and Officers ſhall have uſe of their owne Horſes to the places where they ſhall be confined? To which was anſwered by his Excellencies Commiſſioners. To the firſt, It is intended that thoſe who ſhall be rendred and received to mercy, ſhall enjoy the wearing clothes on their backs; but for more the Generall will not be ingaged. To the ſecond, It is expected (in caſe of ſurrender upon Treaty) That all Horſes as well as Arms be delivered up, and for circumſtances thereof there is to be an Article yet for the Gentlemen and Officers under this condition in queſtion, (when any of them ſhall be removed to the places of confinement) his Excellency will take care for Horſes to carry them (with reſpect to their qualities), but for allowing their owne Horſes he will not be ingaged.

The next morning, the Articles were duly performed in every part; and the Lords and Gentlemen met at the King's-Head, and the reſt of the Army at their appointed places; the number of priſoners of all ſorts amounting to 3531 [H]. When they ſurrendred, they had only one Barrel and a half of Powder left: But many great ſhot remained in the Lord Capel's Quarters, which, as they were fired into the Apleton, Sir Dennard Strutt, Sir Hugh Oriley, Sir Richard Maulyverer [made his eſcape, but retaken] Quarter-maſter-general Carter, Col. Gilburne, Col. Farr [eſcaped, but retaken] Col. Hammond, Col. Cheſter, Col. Till, Col. Heath, Col. Tuke, Col. Ayloffe, Col. Sawyer.——Lieutenant-Colonels Culpepper, Lancaſter, Gough, Powell, Aſhton, Baggley, Wiſeman, Smith.——Majors Aeſcot, Smith, Armeſtrong, Warde, Bayley, Reade, Scarrow, Blyncott, Genings.---Captains Wicks, Pits, Buley, Burdge, Bartrope, Lynſey, Myldmay, Oſbodſton, Eſtwick, Town, the Soldiers had gathered, and ſold to him for ſix pence a-piece.

About two o'clock in the afternoon the Lord Fairfax entered the town, and rid round it, to view the Line, and ſhew himſelf in triumph to the inferior ſoldiers; wondering how the place could hold out ſo long againſt him. Then he went to his Quarters in the town; and, according to his appointment, a Council of war immediately met at the Mote-hall. As ſoon as they were aſſembled, they ſent Col. Ewer, to the King's-head; who coming up into the chamber where the Officers were confined, firſt ſaluted the Lords, and then addreſſing himſelf to Sir Charles Lucas in a ſlighting geſture, told him, That the General deſired to ſpeak with him at the Council of war, with Sir George Liſle, Sir Bernard Gaſcoigne, and Col. Farre, [but the latter had made his eſcape.] Whereupon Sir Charles Lucas, as foreſeeing his approaching fate, took his ſolemn leave of the Lords and other his fellow-priſoners, and calling to Sir George Liſle, (who was in diſcourſe and heard not what was ſaid by Col. Ewer,) they and Sir Bernard Gaſcoigne, went along with the Colonel, and were locked up in an apartment belonging to the Hall; a ſtrong guard being placed at the door. After a ſhort debate in the council of war, they were brought forth, and told by the council, "That after ſo long and obſtinate a defence until they found it neceſſary to deliver themſelves up to Mercy, it was neceſſary, for the example of others, and that the peace of the Kingdom might be no more diſturbed in that manner, that ſome Military juſtice ſhould be executed; and therefore the Council had determined they three ſhould be preſently ſhot to death." (n) Forthwith they were conducted thence to the caſtle, which in thoſe times was the county-gaol. Soon after which, Col. Ireton came and bade them prepare for Death. Sir Charles aſked him, "By what Law they were to dye, or whether by an Ordinance of Parliament, by the Council of war, or by the command of the General. "To which Ireton made anſwer, "That it was by the Vote of the Council of war, according to an Order of Parliament; by which Order all that were found in arms were to be proceeded againſt as Traytors [*]." Then Sir Charles replyed, "Alas! you deceive yourſelves, Me you cannot; but we are conquered, and muſt be what you pleaſe to make us." He then deſired time till the next morning, in order to ſettle ſome things in this world, and eſpecially to prepare and fit his ſoul for another: But that requeſt being denyed him, he went on again thus. "Sir, Do not think I make this requeſt out of any deſire I have to live, or eſcape the death you have doomed me to, for I ſcorn to aſk life at your hands; but that I might have time to make ſome addreſſes to God above, and ſettle ſome things below, that I might not be thrown out of this world with all my ſins about me. But ſince it will not be by your charity, I muſt ſubmit to the mercy of God, whoſe holy will be done. Do your worſt, I ſhall ſoon be ready for execution." Sir George Liſle ſaid very little, only in the like manner deſired a little reſpite, that he might have time to write to his father and mother, but was alſo denied.

The two injured Knights having thus received their doom without a legal tryal, ſent and deſired that the Lord Capel's chaplain ſhould attend them [I]: And ſpent the ſhort remains of life they were allowed to enjoy, in fervent prayer and devotion, and in receiving the communion.

About ſeven o'clock in the evening (o), they were brought forth, and conducted to a green ſpot of ground on the North-ſide of the Caſtle, a few paces from the wall; where they were received by the three Colonels, Ireton, Rainſborowe, and Whaley, with three files of muſqueteers, who were to diſpatch them. Sir Charles Lucas was fixed upon to be the firſt to ſuffer, and being placed for that purpoſe, he ſaid, "I have often faced death in the field, and now you ſhall ſee I dare die." Then he fell upon his knees, and after having continued a few minutes in that poſture, roſe up with a chearful countenance; and opening his doublet ſhewed the Soldiers his breaſt, then ſetting his hands to his ſides, called out to them, "See, I am ready for you; now, Rebels, do your worſt:" At the pronouncing of which words they fired, and ſhot him in four places, ſo that he fell down dead.

Sir George Liſle, who during the execution had been carried a little aſide, being brought to the ſame place, and viewing the dead body of his friend, which then lay bleeding on the ground, he kneeled down and kiſſed him, praiſing his unſpotted honour. Then, after ſome filial expreſſions of duty to his father and mother, and recommendations to ſome other friends, turning to the ſpectators he ſaid, "Oh! how many of your lives here have I ſaved in hot blood, and muſt now myſelf be moſt barbarouſly murdered in cold blood? But what dare not they do, that would willingly cut the throat of my dear King, whom they have already impriſoned; and for whoſe deliverance, and Peace to this unfortunate nation, I dedicate my laſt prayers to Heaven." Next, looking thoſe in the face who were to execute him, and thinking they ſtood at too great a diſtance,

[I] Upon that, the confined Lords and Gentlemen deſiring that no man might be a particular ſufferer in ſo general a cauſe, called up Capt. Cannon an Officer of the enemies, and intreated him to haſten to the council of war, and deſire them in the behalf of the priſoners, that they would not make thoſe Gentlemen, they had taken from them, any greater ſufferers than they intended to all; who being all equally concerned in condition, deſired alſo to be ſo in ſuffering. he deſired them to come nearer. To which one of them ſaid, "I'll warrant you, Sir, we'll hit you:" But he anſwered ſmiling, "Friends, I have been nearer you, when you have miſſed me." (p) And ſo, after a ſhort prayer upon his knees, he roſe up and ſaid, "Now, traytors, do your worſt." Whereupon they ſhot him dead [K].

Sir Bernard Gaſcoigne, or Guaſconi, a Florentine, was alſo ſentenced to death by the council of war. But was reprieved; for which ſome reaſons are aſſigned by our Hiſtorians [L], but not I think the true one.

The bodies of the two Knights were conveyed to St. Giles's church in this Town, and privately interred together in a vault under the North iſle of that church, belonging to the noble family of Lucas. But their Funerals were afterwards ſolemnized in a magnificent manner, on the 7th of June 1661 (q). And, about the ſame time, a black marble-ſtone was laid over the Vault, with this inſcription, cut in very deep and large characters;

Let us now return and enquire what became of the reſt of the Priſoners.—The Lords and Gentlemen, according to the Articles, were drawn to the King's-head, and thruſt into one room; from whence if any did but ſtep out, he was immediately ſtript ſtark naked by the unruly ſoldiers. About nine o'clock in the evening, Commiſſary-general Ireton, Col. Whaley, and Col. Ewer came to them [N], and ſaluting the Lords, ſaid, "They were ſent to them from the General and the reſt of the Gentlemen, to tell them, that now (for they ſuppoſed it was not unknown what had been done) he did by them give an aſſurance, of what before they held doubtful, fair Quarter as priſoners of war." But the Lord Capel bluntly told them, "They ſhould have given the General more thanks, if he had ſaved the lives of thoſe two Knights whom they had already executed, than for the Grant of their own." Adding, they ſhould do well to finiſh their work, and execute the ſame rigour upon the reſt: Upon which two or three ſuch ſharp and bitter replies paſſed between him and Ireton, as were thought to have coſt Him his life a few months after (r). That evening, the Lords and ſome other Gentlemen were conducted to Mr. Warren's houſe overagainſt the King's-head; where they remained till the Tueſday following, when the Earl of Norwich, and Lord Capel, were ſent priſoners to Windſor-caſtle: and the reſt of the moſt conſiderable amongſt them diſperſed about, and tranſmitted to ſeveral priſons, as contrary and far diſtant from their own homes as they could contrive. Of the remainder of the Gentlemen and Officers, a certain number was diſtributed to every Regiment, to ranſom themſelves: and moſt of whom afterwards, as they were able, and according to the civility of thoſe they were diſtributed to, bought their liberties, and returned home. As for the inferior Officers and private Soldiers, when they were drawn from their Line, they ſhut them up in the Churches, placing guards over them; and gave free liberty to their foot-ſoldiers to go in and pillage them: ſo that in a very ſhort time there were very few left with any clothes, and hardly ſhirts on. In that miſerable condition, they marched them away in a moſt violent and laſting rain; dragged them from place to place in the country, lodging them in churches, and ſuch places, till many of them ſtarved; and ſeveral, that could not march by reaſon of faintneſs, they piſtoled in the highways: and finally ſome they ſold to be tranſported into foreign countries from their wives and children.

General Fairfax having thus made himſelf maſter of this Town, and in ſome meaſure ſatiated his revenge, ſent, on the 29th of Auguſt, a canting account of his Succeſs to the Earl of Mancheſter, Speaker of the Houſe of Peers; by ſome Expreſſions wherein, he ſeems to doubt, whether he had not, by the haſty execution of the two Knights, prejudiced the Honour and Juſtice of Parliament [O].

The hurt done by his means to the whole Town in general was inexpreſſible: But I find in particular, that the following number of houſes were burnt down, &c. in ſome of the pariſhes, during the Siege.

In St. Mary's at the walls,		51 burnt and ruined.
In H. Trinity,	——	32 burnt and deſtroyed.
In St. Martin's,	—	5 pulled down.
In St. James's,	—	28 burnt.
In St. Botolph's,	—	53 burnt and ruined.
In St. Giles's,	——	17 burnt.

[K] Mr. Whitelock obſerves, That they both died with very much courage, p. 333.—There was for ſome time a vulgar notion, that the Graſs would not grow where theſe two Gentlemen were executed: But that was owing to the great reſort of people to ſee the place. It is now covered with graſs equally with the reſt of the Caſtle-Bailey.

[L] See Lord Clarendon, ibid. and M. Carter, p. 197.

[M] There is a Tradition among us, That Geo. Villiers Duke of Buckingham, who had married the Lord Fairfax's only daughter, finding that this Epitaph reflected upon his father-in law's memory, he applied to King Charles II. to have it eraſed. Whereupon the King mentioning it to the Lord Lucas, his Lordſhip ſaid, He would readily obey his Majeſty's command, provided his Majeſty would be pleaſed to permit him to put in the room of it, "That Sir Charles Lucas and Sir George Liſle were barbarouſly murdered for their Loyalty to K. Charles I. and that his ſon K. Charles II. ordered this memorial of their loyalty to be eraſed." Whereupon, it is ſaid, the King ordered the Epitaph to be cut in as deep as poſſible (as it is) inſtead of being eraſed.

[N] The Lord Clarendon ſays, the Lord Fairfax went with them, which is not probable. I chuſe to follow the account of Quarter-maſter-general Carter, who was in the number of the Priſoners.

[O] His letter was as follows, "My Lord, I have herewith ſent you the Articles, with the Explanations

And, not ſatisfied with the Breaches his Batteries had made in our Walls, he ordered ſome parts of them to be further demoliſhed, that the place might not hereafter be able to make any manner of defence [P].

Moreover, to excuſe the Town from being plundered, he impoſed upon the Inhabitants, who had already too much ſuffered, an exorbitant Fine of 14000 l. of which he was ſo very generous as to abate 2000 l. Ten thouſand pounds of it he divided amongſt his Army [Q], and two thouſand pounds were diſtributed by his order among the poor and ſufferers in the ſiege [R]. Half of this ſum was laid upon the Dutch Congregation; which they greatly complained of, as exorbitant and unequal [S]: And they expecting, for their Dutch poor, half of the 2000 l. allowed by the Lord Fairfax for the ſufferers in the ſiege, they could at laſt, and with ſome trouble, get of the Town but 100 l. (t).

Such was the End of this unhappy Affair, which ſhattered and demoliſhed a great part of "ſo eminent a Town" as this, as the Lord Fairfax called it at his firſt coming (u): Deprived it of the Advantage of the reſidence, neighbourhood, beneficence, and protection of the conſiderable Families of Lucas, and Sir Harbottle Grimſton, by deſtroying their Seats: Brought the Trading part, nay almoſt all the Inhabitants of it, into inexpreſſible poverty and diſtreſs; and plunged them into calamities, from which many were never able to recover themſelves. Happy would it have been for Colcheſter, if the Royaliſts had not bent their courſe this way, or had dealt with a more expeditious or generous enemy than Fairfax! The Harm he occaſioned to this Town by the formal and tedious manner he took to beſiege or block it up, will render his Name among us for ever odious and deteſtable [T].

§. 8. THIS poor and unhappy Town, thus brought under the Tyranny of an Army, the moſt undeſirable of Maſters, and what is worſe, of an Army of Enthuſiaſts, was many ways oppreſſed, and loaded with immenſe Taxes, which, from the Surrender of the Town to Oliver Cromwell's being inveſted with the Protectorate, i. e. in about five years (w), amounted to above 16000 l. [U].

The perſons pitched upon for this example were, Sir Charles Lucas, and Sir George Liſle, in whoſe Military execution I hope your Lordſhips will not find cauſe to thinke your Honour or Juſtice prejudiced. As for the Lord Goring, Lord Capell, and the reſt of the perſons rendred to mercy, and now aſſured of Quarter; of whoſe names I have ſent your Lordſhips a particular Liſt, I doe hereby render to the Parliaments judgement for further publique Juſtice and Mercy to be uſed as you ſhall ſee cauſe. [S] In a petition to the Mayor, Aldermen, and Commiſſioners for levying this fine, they repreſented, "That many of them had loſt the chief, and many a great part of their eſtates; partly by firing, partly by ſcattering abroad of their commodities in the country, where their workmen and ſpinners had made ſale of them: alſo the Poor of their Congregation were encreaſed to a great number, and their neceſſities very great." [T] As he was accuſed by Sir George Liſle, and many others afterwards, of murdering Him and Sir Charles Lucas in cold blood, I was in hopes he would have vindicated his conduct in that particular better than he has done in his Memorial: which the Reader will be pleaſed to conſult, p. 121. &c. Only I ſhall obſerve, that he ſays there, the Beſieged were compelled after four Months cloſe Siege to ſurrender; which is a great miſtake; for it was neither 4 nor 3 months, being only from the 13th of June to the 27th of Auguſt. He adds, they were compelled to a Surrender upon Mercy; — and delivering upon Mercy, is to be underſtood that ſome are to Suffer, the reſt to go Free. This is a ſtrange kind of Mercy; Military Mercy! —— Theſe other words of his alſo deſerve animadverſion: "But Sir "Charles Lucas, and Sir George Liſle, being mere Sol-"diers of Fortune, and falling into our hands by chance "of war, were executed; and in this I did nothing "but according to my Commiſſion, and the Truſt re-"poſed in me." What his Commiſſion was, who knows? why did he not give order it ſhould be made publick, for his own vindication? —— But what doth he mean by a Soldier of fortune? Is it not a Swiſs; a perſon that has nothing but his Sword to depend upon? which was not the caſe of Sir Charles Lucas in particular; for he had a fortune of his own, the Horkſley-eſtate &c. and was heir to the Honour and Eſtate of his brother, John Lord Lucas. [See below, Book II. p. 20, 21. and Lord Clarendon's Hiſtory, book xi.] And therefore this is great want of Knowledge, if not worſe.—Obſerve further, that He ſays nothing there of Sir Charles's being his priſoner upon parole: which would have been a better reaſon for executing him, than any that appears. On which account, that particular may juſtly be looked upon as a falſehood. Concerning Sir Charles's Moderation during the Siege, See Mr. Whitelock, p. 318.

For all theſe ſufferings this Town doth not ſeem to have been ſpecially conſidered at the Reſtoration of K. Charles II, tho' ſome of its members were rewarded and preferred.

The dreadful Plague, which raged in London in the year 1665, began to appear in this Town the 14th of Auguſt 1665; where it continued till the 7th of Decemb. 1666; during which time there died of it 4731 perſons, according to the following liſt:

The higheſt number in any one week, was from the 15th to the 22d of June 1666, it then amounting to 195.

During this great affliction and diſtreſs, ſeveral methods were uſed for the relief and aſſiſtance of the Poor, and ſums of money ſent down here from divers quarters [W].

In the latter end of K. Charles IId's reign, namely June 23, 1684, this Town was deprived of its Charter, in a wicked and arbitrary manner, by the pretended Surrender of ſome tools and ſycophants; who, under the ſpecious names of "a teſtimony of their duty "and loyalty, agreed to lay the Charter of "this corporation at his Majeſty's feet, and "then humbly to beſeech his Majeſty, to con"firm the antient Cuſtoms and Preſcriptions of "this Burrough, and to regrant them ſuch "Privileges as his Majeſty in his princely wiſdom "ſhould think meet (x)." Accordingly they were new-modelled by a new Charter of the 8th of November the ſame year: And further new-modelled afterwards by the Charter of K. James II, Sept. 15, 1688 [X], who placed and diſplaced the officers and members thereof, by his Mandates, at pleaſure (y). In 1693, K. William and Q. Mary, (in effect annulling theſe two laſt) did abſolutely reſtore and confirm the firſt Charter granted by K. Charles II, Auguſt 3, 1663, with a few additions; reſtoring and confirming, at the ſame time, to the Mayor and Commonalty and their ſucceſſors, all manors, meſſuages, rents, lands, tenements, meadows, paſtures, commons, fairs, preſcriptions, liberties, franchiſes, &c. granted and confirmed to the ſaid Mayor and Commonalty, or their predeceſſors, by any of the Kings of England. Under this Charter thus confirmed they acted, down to our times. But, through a very great and criminal neglect, no due care was taken,

A weekly collection was alſo made on Sundays in every church in London, by order of his Majeſty, of which this Town received 1311 l. 10 s. There was likewiſe 108 l. a month taxed upon the County five miles round this Town, for the ſame uſe: And the Juſtices made an additional order for 250 l. a month for three months, on Lexden, Dunmow, and Hinckford diviſions. in Elections, to have a due majority according to Charter. At length ſome incautious Methods having given occaſion to vexatious and oppreſſive Proſecutions, in order to make this Burgh thoroughly dependent, great advantage was taken of the undue manner of Elections thus long uſed. And Informations, in the nature of Quo-warranto's, having been thereupon brought againſt the Mayor and the Aldermen then living, they diſclaimed, upon record in the King's-bench, April 6, 1742, their Rights of acting as Aldermen. But all was ſet right by the late new Charter; including a Confirmation of the former ones.

CHAP. IV.

§ 1. The Trade of this Town.

IN ancient Times, ſuch was the Indolence or Unſkilfulneſs of the Natives of this Iſle, that they employed themſelves very little in Manufactures; ſo that even our Wool, the ſtaple-commodity of England, was exported to the oppoſite Continent, and wrought by the Flemings, and other neighbouring nations.

However, there was ſome little work'd here even in the time of K. Henry III, as appears by Statute 9 Henr. III. c. 25. which injoyns, that there ſhould be " one breadth of died " Cloth, ruſſets and haberjects, that is to ſay, " two yards within the liſts." And alſo in the beginning of K. Edward the Third's reign, a ſtatute (2 Edw. III. c. 14.) limits the meaſure and aſſize of Cloths of ray and of colour. Which is a proof of ſome being then made in this kingdom.

So long as our Engliſh monarchs were poſſeſſed of large Provinces in France, as Normandy and Guienne, the exportation of our Wool thither, and from thence unavoidably into the adjacent Territories, was permitted, or connived at, at leaſt: as was alſo the importation of their Goods here, to the great prejudice of this Nation. But when that wiſe and powerful Prince, K. Edward III, came to contend with Philip de Valois for the Crown of France; in order to deprive the French of that inexhauſtible Source of Strength and Riches, our Wool and the Goods manufactured of the ſame, He cauſed it to be enacted, That it ſhould be felony to carry any Wool out of the realm (z); That none ſhould wear any cloth but ſuch as was made in England; That no Merchant ſhould bring or cauſe to be brought, privily nor apertly, into England, Ireland, Wales, and Scotland, any Cloths made in any other places. And by another Statute (a), He gave great encouragement to foreign cloth-workers to come and ſettle here. In 1353, for the better keeping of our Wool within the realm, the Statute of Staple was made; the ground of which, as the preamble ſets forth, was, " for the damage which had notoriouſly come as well to the King and to the great men, as to the people of the realm of England and of the lands of Wales and Ireland, becauſe that the Staple of Wool, Leather, and Wool-fells of the ſaid realm and land had been holden out of them; and alſo for the great Profits which ſhould come to them, if the Staple were holden within the ſame and not elſewhere, It was enacted, That the Staple of Wool, Leather, Wool-fells, and Lead, growing or coming forth within the ſaid realm and lands, ſhould be perpetually holden,——For England, at Newcaſtle upon Tine, York, Lincoln, Norwich, Weſtminſter, Canterbury, Chicheſter, Wincheſter, Exeter, and Briſtow:——For Wales, at Kaermerdyn:——And for Ireland, at Dublin, Waterford, Cork, and Drogheda."

From this period therefore may be dated the Riſe and Beginning of the Woollen Manufactures in this Kingdom: which have been encouraged and regulated ſince by ſeveral Statutes, from the 25th of Edward III to the 7th of K. George II, as appears by the Statute-books.

This Town had an early ſhare in thoſe Manufactures. For we find Wooll-mongers, Card-makers, Combers, Clothiers, Weavers, Fullers, Dyers, in the reigns of K. Edward III. and Richard II. (b) mentioned in the Oath-book, and the Court-Rolls; all plain proofs of the Clothing-trade here: Which extended itſelf into the neighbouring Towns and Villages, as Coggeſhall, Dedham, Langham, and Eaſt-Bergholt.

When the Dutch, and with them the Trade of Bay and Say making, were firſt introduced into this Town, will appear by theſe two authentic Letters. " The Bailiffs of Colcheſter to the Privy Council, ſignifying the arrival of certain Dutchmen from Sandwich unto Colcheſter.

1570 1° Auguſt.

To the Right Honourable our ſingular good Lords the Queens Majeſties moſt honourable Privy Counſel, Theſe be delivered.

" In moſt humble wiſe, Right Honourable, our ſingular good Lords; Whereas of late a number of Dutchmen have come to this Town of Colcheſter, about Eleaven Houſeholds, to the number of 50 Perſons ſmall and great, where they made their abode longer time than other Strangers have beeen accuſtomed. Wee therefore called before us certain of the beſt of them, and required to know the Cauſe of their coming, and ſo long tarrying there; Who anſwered, That they were Part of the diſperſed Flock, of late driven out of Flanders, for that their Conſciences were offended with the Maſſe: And, for fear of the Tyranny of the Duke D'Alva, to ſave their Lives, and keep their Conſciences, they came into this Realm for protection. And ſaid, they came from Sandwich, where for that divers others of their Countrymen came lately over, they thought good to give them place; and to ſee, if they could place themſelves conveniently in this Town, and to that end they made requeſt unto us. And further they ſaid, that there were more of their Company at Sandwich, which, together with theſe, are to the number of Two hundred Souls, that minde alſo, if they may be permitted, to come hither to inhabit alſo: which perſons are of ſuch Sciences as are not uſual with us, but weave ſackcloth, make needles, parchment, weavours, and ſuch like. So that they minde not (as they ſay) to uſe any kinde of Exerciſe that ſhall be any hinderance to any artificer, or man of occupation here. And this they offer, to bee obedient to all the Lawes of the Land, and Civil Conſtitutions of this Town. But we dare not preſume to give them ſuch Licens of ourſelves, although the appearance ſhew, that great Proffit might ariſe to the common Eſtate of this Towne greatly decayed; as in Re-edifying of the ſame, and in many other ſpecial cauſes, which to recite unto Your Honours ſhould be over-tedious. And therefore we have given them friendly Entertainment, untill that we might ſignifie the ſame their Requeſt unto Your Honours. In which wee moſt humbly beſeech Your Lordſhips to advertiſe us, what Your Honourable Pleaſure is that we may do herein: which known we ſhall willingly accompliſh. And this we cannot but greatly commend the ſame Strangers unto You; for ſithence their firſt coming hither, we finde them to be very Honeſt, Godly, Civill, and well-ordered people; not given to any outrage or exceſs. Wherefore, if any ſhould be allotted to be in this Town, we would rather chuſe theſe, and ſuch as they ſhall commend, than any other. But That we refer to your Honourable direction, as well for the Perſons as the Number that You will aſſigne. And thus fearing to be over-tedious, we moſt humbly take our Leave of your Honours.

What Anſwer the Privy Council then returned, I could not find; but, ſome months after, that honourable Board ſent the following Letter relating to them.

To our loving Friends the Bayliffs and Aldermen of the Town of Colcheſter.

"After our hearty Commendations: Underſtanding by Your Letters, That the Strangers of the Low-Countries, who are fled hither for refuge, in this Perſecution for Religion begun in their Countries, and have now dwelled amongſt You in your town of Colcheſter a certain time; do behave themſelves ſo quietly amongſt themſelves, ſo conformably to the Laws of God, and obediently to the Laws and Statutes of the Realm, and ſo gratefully unto you, that they have deſerved ſuch commendations. As ye do acknowledge your Towne to be benefited by their being there, we are right glad that we firſt commended them unto you; and cannot but allow their conformity, your gentle handling of them, and the Concord betwixt you, the which we truſt God will encreaſe with his benifits towards you: And we pray you ſo to continue towards them as ye have begun, that ſo long as the ſaid Strangers ſhall ſo well follow their honeſt Trades and Exerciſes, to maintain themſelves by their labour, according to God's Commandments and the Laws of this Realme, and ſhew ſuch Quietneſs and Obedience, as they hitherto have done, ye do aid and help them in all things which may be commodious for them; and ſuffer them to enjoy ſuch Traffique in buying, ſelling, planting, and other labouring, as hitherto you have done, and as ſhall not be contrary to the Laws and Statutes of this Realme. And if any ſhall goe about to moleſt or vex them wrongfully, we pray you to aid and aſſiſt them, and to ſee the wrong amended with ſo much ſpeed as ye may: Thus we bid you well to fare.

Being thus admitted and ſettled here, they carried on their buſineſs with pleaſure, alacrity, ſucceſs, and ſafety, under the protection of that great Encourager of Trade Q. Elizabeth [Y]; and her wiſe Miniſters Sir Francis Walſingham, the Lord Burleigh, and the Earl of Saliſbury: who found it neceſſary to cheriſh, ſupport, and protect them, many times, againſt the natural Jealouſy of the rude and meaner Inhabitants of theſe parts; which were often moleſting them, or refuſed to ſubmit to their Rules, and the Conſtitutions eſtabliſhed by them, and allowed by the Queen and Privy Council, for the better carrying on their buſineſs.

K. James I. extended alſo in a moſt particular manner his Care and Protection to theſe uſeful Members of Society; who brought in an univerſal Induſtry, and by whoſe reſidence here, not only the Inhabitants, but alſo, "the whole State of the Town in general received great benefit and advantage: by their being the occaſion to maintain great numbers of people at [Y] The Town ſeemed to be fully repleniſhed with them in the year 1580. For on the 17th of October that year, at an Aſſembly, it was ordered "That whereas there were a great number of ſtrangers inhabiting within this Town, and ſuppoſed to be more than the Town could well ſuſtain and bear, that from thenceforth there ſhould be no more Strangers ſuffered to inhabit within this town, or the Liberties of the ſame, but ſuch as ſhould be of the Congregation, whereof the Elders ſhould make a book, and deliver to the Bailiffs, and the ſame to be entred by the Clark; and all ſuch as were not then of the Congregation, to be avoided the Town before the nativitie of Chriſt next enſuing; upon pain of 20 s. a week on every owner of a houſe, where any not of the Congregation ſhould inhawork [Z], and by conforming themſelves to all orders of Government, both for contributions to payments, and all other neceſſary Duties. Yet ſuch was the Unthankfulneſs and Corruption of ſome of our Engliſh weavers, that they not only carried Complaints againſt them to the Privy-Council; but alſo indicted and preſented them at two ſeveral Quarter-ſeſſions of the peace here, for aſſembling themſelves in a Company and Congregation in their Hall without the King's Subjects, and there making Orders and ſetting Fines upon his Majeſty's ſubjects, contrary to ſtatute 21 Henr. VIII. And alſo for uſing partiality and unjuſt dealing in their ſearches and orders concerning the New-Draperies (c)." So that the Privy-Council were forced to interpoſe, in their Letter of December 31, 1603; as did alſo, by virtue of the ſame, Sir Thomas Lucas Kt. Edward Waldegrave Eſq; and Henry Oſborne, one of the Bailiffs of this Town, in an order of February 18, 1605, wherein they injoyned, That the ſaid Indictments and Preſentments ſhould be no further proceeded in; nor the ſaid Strangers from henceforth in any ſuch ſort moleſted.

Moreover, for their greater eaſe and ſecurity, K. James I. granted them his letters patent, Octob. 17, 1612; wherein he ſays, That the "privie Counſell being dulie informed by the Juſtices, Bayliffs, and other Magiſtrates of the Towne of Colcheſter, howe beneficiall the Strangers of the Dutche Congregacion had been and were unto the ſaid towne, as well in repleniſhing and bewtifieing of it, as for their Trades which they daylie uſed there, ſetting on work manie of his poore People and ſubjects both within the ſaide Towne and in other Townes and Places thereabouts, And alſoe of the orderlie and peaceable Government of their Congregation for matter of Religion, withoute Noveltie, Diviſion, or Scandall, Did upon his Pleaſure ſignified in that behaulf, by order of the 7th of Auguſt 1612, eſtabliſhe and confirme unto them all Privilege, Liberties, Immunities and Freedoms contayned as well in dyvers former orders as uſed and tollerated unto them for manie yeares in the raigne of the late Q. Elizabeth, and ſince: And now, the better to ſtrengthen and teſtify the ſaide Order, and to ſuppreſſe all Diſturbances and Moleſtations offered, or that might bee offered, unto the ſaide Strangers of the Dutch Congregacion in Colcheſter by anie factious or troubleſome perſons, and for the more free and quiet uſing of their Trade and Government in all reſpects and to all intents and purpoſes; His Majeſty did, for himſelf, his heires and ſucceſſors, ordeine, conſtitute, and eſtabliſhe, That all Strangers of the Dutch Congregacion in the towne of Colcheſter then being, ſhould and might from henceforth peaceablie and freelie uſe their Trade of Bay and Say-making and other forreine Draperies, and alſoe enjoye all ſuch Privilidg Liberties and Immunities, and ſhould be permitted to uſe their Aſſemblies and Congregacions in as free, large, and ample manner as had been heretofore practiſed, tollerated, or allowed unto them in the time of Q. Elizabeth, or at any time ſince. And that noe Information ſhould be accepted againſt them, or anie of them, in anie courts or places of juſtice, for or concerning the exerciſe or execution of anie the premiſſes. And that all Informations, Indictments, and Preſentments preferred againſte them or anie of them heretofore for the cauſes aforeſaid ſhould be preſentlie diſchardged, and the names of ſuch Informers and other perſons as ſhould preſume hereafter to moleſte them in anie thing confirmed unto them by theis preſents ſhould be preſented unto the Privie-Councell; whereof the Bayliffs and Aldermen of Colcheſter were to take notice, and to ſee the ſame preciſelie and carefullie performed for ſo much as concerned them and everie of them in their ſeveral places and authoritie. Further, his Majeſty, for himſelf, his heires, and ſucceſſors, did give, graunte, and confirme unto the ſaid Strangers of the Dutch Congregacion then being, and to all and everie ſtranger and ſtrangers which at anie time hereafter ſhould be, inhabitt and reſide within the precincts of the ſaid towne of Colcheſter, and bee admitted of the Dutch Congregacion there, That they and everie of them ſhould and might have, holde and enjoye free Lycence, Libertie, and Authoritie to continue and inhabitt, and to uſe and exerciſe as well their Trade of Bay and Say makeing and other forraine Draperies, with theire accuſtomed Meetings, and Orders for the avoyding of all fraudulent Dealeings therein requiſite for the upholding of the Goodneſs, Eſtimacion and Creditt of the Stuffs made by them, As alſoe their Orders in theire Church and Aſſemblies there, tending to the good Governement of the ſaid Congregacion, in as free, large and ample manner in all reſpects and to all intents, conſtructions, and purpoſes as heretofore they had uſed, and had been tollerated and allowed unto them."—But no further (d).

After that, though there were often ſmall Differences between them and the Natives, yet they carried on their Trade with ſufficient Quietneſs, and great Succeſs and Advantage both to themſelves and the Town [A], and many got conſiderable fortunes.

[Z] This brought ſo much Employment for the Poor of this Town in the Wool-buſineſs, that 21 Janu. 1590-1, it was ordered at an Aſſembly, That the Lady Judde her hundred pounds ſhould be laid out in Wool for one whole year, and delivered to the Poor of the town, for ſpinning, carding, combing, &c. That the ſaid Poor ſhould of the ſame work ſpin but ſix knots of bay-yarn and the bay-warp, and ſeven knots of the Bay-woof of the yarn. And after Michaelmaſs-day 1591, none of the Poor to go a begging within the ſaid town or Liberties, without the ſpecial licenſe of the Bailiffs and four Aldermen,——and to be given to none but ſuch as were not able to work.

[A] In 1609 the Town was ſo populous and full of Inhabitants, that there was not one Houſe to be had at any

From the year 1617, till about the year 1716, they uſed to pay the Chamberlain of this Town 30*l.* 50*l.* and even as high as 90*l.* per ann. for the Bay and Say Hall, with the Seal; and 60*l.* as a foreign Fine.

Among other wiſe regulations to keep up the Goodneſs and Reputation of their Manufactures, they had this ſtanding rule, That all Bays ſhould be ſearched and ſurveyed at the Dutch Bay-Hall, by ſworn Searchers maintained by their Company; and, according to the content and goodneſs of the ſaid Bays, they were Sealed, whereby the Buyer or Merchant might know the length and goodneſs of every Bay. As ſoon therefore as every piece was finiſhed, it was carried raw, directly from the loom, to an apartment called the Rawhall; where it was halled and drawne over, or viewed and examined by proper Officers, and if it was not well and truly made, the maker was boted [B] or fined. Then, after it had been roughed, fulled, ſcoured, and thicked, it was carried, under a certain penalty, to another apartment called the White-Hall, to be again viewed and ſearched, that it might appear whether the ſame were well and ſufficiently ſcoured and thicked. Within 21 days after, it was to be brought and ſhown again at the White-hall, and receive its final ſentence. And if any default was in the Maſter, for not allowing ſufficient materials, or uſing bad ones; or in the workmen, during the manufacturing, they were accordingly fined, and the fines conſtantly levied.

For the better management of theſe ſeveral articles, they had the following Officers (beſides the Governors and Aſſiſtants of the Dutch Bay-hall) choſen yearly at Chriſtmaſs, and ſworn in on the 1ſt or 2d of January; who inſpected the Bays from the loom to the time of finiſhing them for the market, viz. 6 printers in the loom: 15 Raw-hallers: 12 White-hallers: 1 Meaſurer, and his Aſſiſtant: 2 High-meaſurers: 1 Hall-keeper, and Book-keeper, both of the raw and white-hall, and 1 Hall-keeper's aſſiſtant: 3 Hall keeper's aſſiſtants for ſtamping: a Bayliff and his aſſiſtants, five in number: 10 Searchers of the Tenters: 3 provers of the Bays.—The laſt that were ſworn in, were January 1, 1727-8 (e).

The manner in which theſe ſeveral Officers paſſed ſentence on Bays, was, by affixing to them proper Seals. For the better explaining of which, it muſt be obſerved, That there were Four ſeveral ſorts of Bays made in Colcheſter, which were allowed to be ſealed, viz. Rents, Cuts, Crowns, and Croſſes: and different leaden Seals were affixed to each, to ſhew what ſort they were of. A Rent (ſo called becauſe both the Selvages were rent off) had two leaden ſeals. A Cutt (ſo called becauſe one end was cut ſloping) had three ſeals. A Crown-bay, being the moſt common ſort, had four ſeals. A Croſs-bay, which was the beſt ſort, had five broad leaden ſeals, whereof one was the ſame that was affixed to all ſorts, the other four only to Croſs-Bays. Of the four broad leaden ſeals affixed to the Crown-Bays; one had on the one ſide, three crowns without the croſs, and this inſcription in letters reverſe Dyts Colceſtr Baye: on the other ſide a Griffin, with an inſcription: This was commonly called a Letter-ſeal, and was affixed to all ſorts of Bays. The other three Seals had the three Crowns, and this inſcription, Dyts Colceſter Crone bay round it, on one ſide; the reverſe a Griffin with the inſcription juſt now mentioned, round. All theſe Seals were marked 1571.

As to the five broad leaden ſeals affixed to the Croſs-Bay; one was the ſame as the firſt mentioned for a Crown-Bay. The other four had on one ſide three Crowns and a croſs-ragulé, with this inſcription Dyts Colceſter 100 Croſs 1571. Reverſe a Griffin.

There were, beſides, the Aulnage-ſeal, and ſome other ſmall ones. The latter were ſtamped while the Bay was in working, in the Weaver's, Miller's, or Rougher's hands: But the broad Seals were not affixed till judgment was paſſed on the Bay, whether it was a Croſs, Crown, Cut, or Rent: And there was about 30*s.* difference in their values. Four of theſe ſmaller Seals were put upon every Dutch Colcheſter-Bay, whether Croſſes, Crowns, Cutts, or Rent-bays. One was a print for a 100 Bay; upon the lead 100. The ſecond for the Haller of Raw-Bays, to ſet the forfeiture of the weaver, for making bad workmanſhip. The third, for the ſealers of the white Bays to imprint their ſentence. The fourth for the meaſurer of the Bay, to print the length of it; i. e. how many ells long it was: And ſo no notice was taken of it in buying or ſelling, but only for the length.

Of which fines, all thoſe that accrued from the Engliſh Bay-makers, were paid, by the Governors of the Dutch Hall, into the hands of the Bailiffs or Mayors of this town, for the benefit of the Engliſh poor in the ſeveral pariſhes; and diſtributed amongſt them generally in cloth. A great loſs to the preſent Poor!

The Bays being ſold upon the credit and bare inſpection of the Seals, without opening the packs, and examining the Length and Goodneſs of them; the exacteſt care poſſible was taken, to prevent all undue practices, and when diſcovered to puniſh them. By this laudable Diligence of the Governors and their Officers, the Bay-trade kept up its reputation for many years, as well, or better than any other Trade whatſoever.

But theſe Seals were, as early as the year 1588, counterfeited by the Bay-makers at Halſtead (f), and afterwards in London (g); and even falſifyed in this very Town, i. e. taken from the Croſs-Bays, and affixed to ſome of the meaner ſorts. Which, together with the negligence of the Officers, [" to the ſcandal " of the whole Nation, and great prejudice to " this Town,"] procured ſharp Reproofs from the Privy Council in 1635 (h).

The Act, 12 Car. II. for the regulating of the Trade of Bay-making in the Dutch Bay-Hall in Colcheſter; prevented in a great meaſure all fraudulent dealings therein, and it maintained its credit ſeveral years after. So that we are told, it brought a return here of 30,000*l.* weekly (i): but it is more certain, that 1000 or 1200 Bays at leaſt were made weekly here, even within the memory of man [C]. This Trade was firſt moſt ſenſibly hurt by our Wars with Spain, eſpecially by Q. Anne's Wars, more glorious than profitable to England. By which means, and other diſagreeable concurrent cauſes, the Dutch Congregation not being able to carry it on, diſſolved themſelves in 1728 [*]. But 'tis undeniable, that it was Queen Anne's Wars which gave it the fatal blow. Since which, beſides what the French have ſtolen from us, it is removed in a great meaſure into the Weſt and Northern parts of this Kingdom, where Proviſions are cheaper, the poor more eaſily ſatisfied, and Coals are very plentiful. However, we have not been all along without ſome tolerable ſhare of it, though a Spaniſh war always hurts us extremely. But, upon the re-eſtabliſhment of a general Peace it is now greatly flouriſhing again: And it is hoped, that the immenſe Quantity of Riches, which Trade cauſes to flow into this Nation; will be uſed with Thankfulneſs, Humility, and Prudence; employed in the general Good of the Public; and not degenerate into the moſt criminal Luxury, Arrogance, Selfiſhneſs, and Diſſipation; the too natural Effects of Over-abundance.

Some inconſiderate people have indeed been wiſhing that it were entirely out of the place: But herein they neither ſhow their Judgment, nor Affection to this Town. For, in that caſe, the Workmen would remove with it, and not ſtay here and ſtarve. And then what would become of our Houſes? Muſt they not be taken down, as too many have been ſince the decline of Trade; and what an ineſtimable loſs would that be both to the public and to private perſons? To the latter, whoſe only ſubſiſtence, in many inſtances, depends upon the Rents of thoſe Houſes: And to the Public and our Royal Maſter, which would be very great loſers in the Taxes.

Moreover what would become of the great Quantities of Proviſions, which through God's goodneſs plentifully grow all around; and by proper encouragement, and a quick conſumption, are induſtriouſly cultivated, and brought to our markets? There would then be an end of them. The Rents of our lands would fall; univerſal Poverty would enſue; and this flouriſhing Town would be reduced to a deſpicable village.

And not only this Town, but alſo the greateſt part of this noble and populous County, of which the poorer ſort are almoſt univerſally employed in Spinning the Wool, would be reduced to inexpreſſible ſtreights and miſery: For what Employment could be immediately ſubſtituted in its room?

Suppoſing the generality of our numerous Poor were to ſtay here, and inhabit our Houſes; yet how would they be employed, or live, till ſome other buſineſs was eſtabliſhed among us; and how long might it not be before they could learn it, or before it could turn to a tolerable account?

The Riches of a Kingdom, and of every part of the ſame, conſiſt in the Number of People. And there they will always throng where there is Buſineſs and Wages. Therefore, the way to bring Riches and Plenty in this place, is, Not to take all baſe methods imaginable to [C] April 30, 1638. It was ordered at an Aſſembly, That no Bay-maker within this Town or the Liberties, ſhould at any time, after the laſt day of June next coming, make above Threeſcore pieces of Hall-Bays in one quarter of a year. (Book of Aſſemblies.) And a By-law, made by the Governors of the Dutch Bay-hall in 1711, enjoyned, That no Bay-maker in Colcheſter ſhould rough, either by themſelves or any of their own family, above 130 Bays in any one quarter of a year; nor make, or cauſe to be made, above 234 Colcheſter-Bays in any one quarter of a year.

[*] While that Congregation ſubſiſted here, they had Miniſters, whoſe names follow. Joannis Meggrodine, Jonas Prooſt, Tho. Cole, Joannis Ruiting, Joan. Hue, Samuel Biſchop, Joan. Smit, Joan. Voſburg, Adrian Hoyer, Samuel Treſel, Jacobus Harding, Peter Cornelius Schrevelius, Martinus Vanderwint. For ſome time they had the uſe of St. Giles's, and then of All-Saints Church: And at laſt had a Chapel of their own, in St. Mary's lane, in part of the late Mr. Geo. Gray's houſe, now Mr. Theoph. baniſh Trade from hence; but to uſe all honeſt and proper means, nay to ſtrive to the utmoſt, to make it flouriſh: which may be done by Sobriety, Contentment, and due Diligence on one hand; and by Juſtice, Humanity, and not an immoderate Greedineſs of Gain, on the other.

Bating the pernicious Conſequences which Dr. B. Mandeville hath drawn from ſome Maxims laid down by him, Nothing can certainly be more true nor uſeful than his general Doctrine, That the perſon who employs moſt hands is the greateſt Friend and Benefactor to Society: And ſuch are our Bay-makers, and all Manufacturers of wool. So that they are infinitely more to be valued, cheriſhed, and encouraged, than ſuch Dealers, or rather Corrupters, as are only ſubſervient to people's Luxury and Pride, which line the ſtreets of every Town, and manage their buſineſs, though never ſo profitable, only with three or four hands.

§. 2. Other incident matters: Market-days, Fairs, &c.

KING Richard I. enjoined, in his Charter, That Colcheſter-market ſhould not be hindered by any other Market, but that the Markets and Cuſtoms here ſhould remain in the ſame ſtate as when they were confirmed upon the oath of the Burgeſſes of Colcheſter, before the Juſtices itinerant of K. Henry II. But no notice is taken, on what day, or days, Colcheſter-market was then held.

At preſent we have Three Market-days in every week, viz. on Wedneſday, Friday, and Saturday; and one on every ſecond Tueſday. By whom the three firſt were granted is unknown, but K. William III. granted the laſt in his Charter [D]: And a Wool-market was alſo held weekly on that day, for many years.

Saturday is the moſt conſiderable Market-day [E], being for Meat [F], and all manner of proviſions, and none is better furniſhed on that day; though it was yet plentifuller, while the Town was more populous. The ſame day, and Wedneſday, is for Fruit, Fowls, and all country goods: As the latter, and Friday, uſed to be the beſt Fiſh days. But now there is not ſo great a certainty: for Fiſh is almoſt daily brought to market from Maningtree and Wivenhoo, as it is caught.

Anciently there ſeemed to have been a Market held here every day [G]: and very great care was taken, that no Markets in the neighbourhood ſhould interfere with, or hurt this [H].

July 31, 1529. It was ordered, that from thenceforth the peaſe and root-market, with the onions, garlick, and cucumbers, and other garden ſtuff and wares, ſhould be holden and kept from the Lyon-ſign downward towards St. Nicolas church, and in no place elſe. Renewed March 9, 1620 (k). And it hath continued thereabouts ever ſince.

June 18, 1660. The Fiſh-market was ordered, after the 14th of July following, to be kept in Wire-ſtreet. But, in July 1697, a convenient Structure was ordered to be erected for a Fiſh-market, by the ſide of the Butchers ſhambles; where it hath been kept ever ſince (l).

Before Shops were daily kept open, and ſo well furniſhed as they are now; moſt Things were bought at Fairs, as is ſtill practiſed in Germany, and not to be had elſewhere, or at any other time; ſo that in K. Henry the IId's time, ſome of his children's clothes were bought at Wincheſter-Fair [I]. And this is what rendered Fairs ſo conſiderable, and ſo much deſired as a very valuable Grant or Favour.

We have five Fairs in this Town; viz. one in April; one in June; two in July; and one in October.

1. That in April, is comprized in the following clauſe of the Charter of Incorporation of the Taylors of this Town, granted by K. William III. Decemb. 15, 1699.—"And further We do grant to the Mayor and Commonalty of the Burrough and Corporation of Colcheſter, and their ſucceſſors for ever, That he the ſaid Mayor and his ſucceſſors may hold and keepe yearly for ever one Fair or Mart in a certain place within the Burrough aforeſaid neare St. Annes in the pariſh of St. James,—for the buying and ſelling of all and ſingular live cattle, goods, wares, and merchandizes. [E] Nov. 1, 1653, At an Aſſembly, it was ordered, That Mr. Mayor and Mr. Greene ſhall do what in them lieth, for the altering of the Market of this Town from the Saturday to the Friday:" For which no reaſon is aſſigned. Probably it was at the inſtance of the Sabbatarians.

[F] Beſides what is killed in the Town, there is a great deal brought in by the Country-Butchers all around. By an order of Aſſembly in 1574, they were allowed to ſtay only till 2 o'clock in the afternoon from All Saints to Eaſter, and till 4 the reſt of the year. But Sept. 23, 1617, their time was enlarged to 5 o'clock in the afternoon from All Saints to Shrove-tueſday, and till after 7 the reſt of the year. Ever ſince 1656, they have been allowed to ſtay, from Michaelmaſs to Lady-day, till 8: and the reſt of the year till 9. In 1623, there were but 14 country-butchers ſtalls, let for 18*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* per ann. But January 13, 1697-8 the Butchers ſtalls were lett to Jacob Johnſon for 60*l.* a year, and a fine of 265*l.* And Sept. 17, 1739, to Nicholas Lues at 55*l.* per ann. Apr. 5, 1670, they were ordered to be removed every Saturday night by 12 o'clock, under a penalty of 10*s.*—June 12, 1660, the ground in the High-ſtreet for the Market-place, from the White-hart to the Red-Lion, and on the other ſide from the Library to the Motehall, was leaſed to Joſeph Brand, for 40*l.* per ann. (Book of Aſſemblies.)

[H] In the Charter to the College of Higham-ferrers for the manor of Fyngerynghoo, it is expreſly provided, That no common Market for victuals or any other merchandiſe, ſhall be kept in that vill or manor, &c.

continue for the Wedneſday, Thurſday, and Friday then next following. 'Tis vulgarly called the Taylors Fair.

2. The Fair in June, or Midſummer-fair, was granted, among other gifts, to the Abbot and Monks of St. John's, by Eudo founder of that Abey [K]. It laſted anciently four days, viz. June 23, 24. (St. John Baptiſt's Day) 25, and 26; but now continues only One day, viz. July 5. 'Tis held on St. John's Green, and the Lord of Monkwic maner preſumes to take the profits of the ſame; but the Corporation ſeems to have the beſt right to them [L]. If not, then I think the owner of the ſite of the Abbey.

3. The next Fair (the firſt in July) was granted by K. William and Q. Mary, in their Charter to this Corporation anno 1693. It began the 12th, now the 23d day of July, and continues the two whole days next following [M]. But if the ſaid day of July happens to be on a Sunday, then the fair begins on the Monday, and laſts the two days following: If the 23d of July falls on a Friday or Saturday, the fair begins on the Thurſday immediately foregoing, and laſts three days, as is already ſaid. It is held in the ſame place near St. Anne's, as the other juſt now mentioned; and is called the New Fair.

4. The other fair in July, was granted by K. Richard I. Decemb. 8, 1189, to the Lepers of St. Mary Magdalene in Colcheſter (l). It uſed to laſt two days, namely, the vigil and the day of St. Mary Magdalene, July 21ſt and 22d, but now only one; which, ſince the alteration of the ſtyle, is Auguſt 2. 'Tit kept on Magalengreen. The Maſter of the Hoſpital there receives the profits of it.

5. The fair in October, or St. Dennis's-fair, was granted to this Corporation by K. Edward II. in his Charter, dated Febr. 4, 1318. He directed, it ſhould laſt, the eve of St. Dennis, St. Dennis's day [Octob. 9.] and the ſix days following [N]. And ſo it continued till 1635, when ſome of the Burgeſſes having inſinuated to K. Charles I. that it would be an advantage to this Town, to have that fair reduced to four days: He ordered , in his ſecond Charter dated July 9, that year, That it ſhould continue four days only, namely, the eve and the day of St. Dennis, and the two days immediately following. It is kept in the North-ſide of the High ſtreet, from the Exchange to the Market-croſs, where booths are built for that purpoſe: But, by an order made about it in 1563, it appears, That it began then "benethe Berye-feild-gate, and extended upwards to the farther corner of the Corne-markett, by the towne-well [or K. Coel's pump] and ſo downeward to the other ſide towards the pyllorye, on both ſides of the waye:" The firſt day is a fair for live cattle, kept in Berye-field. Anciently, the Sunday after St. Dennis's day, corruptly called Pardon-Sunday, was accounted the chief day of the fair; but, at an Aſſembly 17 March 1577, it was ordered, That St. Dennys day ſhould always be the chief day, except it fell upon a Sunday, and then the Monday after to be the chief day of the Fair (m). Since the alteration of the ſtyle, this Fair begins the 20th of October: and in the Charters of K. Charles I. and of K. William and Qu. Mary was limited to four days only, as it is alſo in the laſt Charter.

§ 5. Biſhops of Colcheſter: Viſcounts; Taxes.

By ſtatute 26 Hen. VIII. c. 14. Colcheſter was one of thoſe Towns which were to be taken and accepted for ſees of Biſhops Suffragans to be made in this realm. There never were but two conſecrated for this place; namely, 1. William Moore, Rector of Weſt Tilbury and Bradwell juxta mare, and Vicar of Walden; conſecrated Octob. 20, 1536, and died in 1540 (n). 2. John Sterne, B. D. Vicar of Witham, conſecrated Nov. 12, 1592. He died in Febr. 1607 (o).

As to Eccleſiaſtical Juriſdiction, this Town is under the government of the Biſhop of London; and gives denomination to one of the Five Archdeacons of that ſee, whoſe Archdeaconry comprehends the Deanries of Colcheſter, Lexden, Tendring, Witham, Samford, and Newport. The preſent Archdeacon is the Rev.

It hath alſo given the Title of Viſcount to the noble Families of Darcy of Chiche, and Savage. For, July 5, 1621. Thomas Baron Darcy was created Viſcount Colcheſter, [with a grant of 8*l.* out of the Fee-farm of this Town] to him and the heirs male of his body: and, for default or ſuch iſſue, with remainder to Sir Thomas Savage of Rock-ſavage, Bart. who had married his eldeſt daughter Elizabeth; and to their joint heirs. The ſaid Thomas Lord Darcy was alſo advanced to the title of Earl Rivers, Nov. 4, 1626. And dying Feb. 21, 1639, was ſucceeded in his titles by his grandſon John Savage: who was ſucceeded therein by his two ſons, Thomas, and Richard, one after the other. Thomas died in Septemb. 1694, and Richard Auguſt 18, 1712, both without iſſue-male: ſo that the title of Viſcount Colcheſter is extinct.

I have not enlarged upon the Taxes raiſed upon this Town, with the reſt of the Kingdom, in early times, becauſe they continued much the ſame for a long while. They were levied by Tenths and Fifteenths. This Burgh, with the four Hamletts, was taxed to a Fifteenth, and a Tenth, at 26*l.* 2*s.* 9*d.* [O] which was a fixed and certain ſum. In the 37th of Q. Elizabeth, zabeth, each pariſh paid towards that ſum according to the proportion below [P]. When a large ſum was wanted, ſeveral Tenths and Fifteenths were granted at once, to be levied within two or three years, &c. A Subſidy was of a different nature: for it was laid upon Lands, Goods, and Polls, without fixing the whole to a certain ſum [Q]; and ſeems to have been a Fifth. A Subſidy upon the 16 pariſhes here, in the 37th of Queen Elizabeth, produced 227 l. 10 s. 8 d.

At preſent the Land-tax charged upon this Town and the Liberties, at 4 s. in the pound, is 2845 l. 6 s. 3 d. And conſidering the want of the Aulnage, which was rated at 400 l. per ann. &c. and the great fall in the Rents of the Houſes, it is extremely difficult, to raiſe that very large ſum. In Queen Elizabeth's Subſidy-Acts, 6000 l. was allowed "in relief, comfort, and diſcharge of the poore Townes, Cities, and Broughs of this realme waſted, deſolate, or deſtroyed, or over greatly impoveriſhed." And there appears no good reaſon, why the ſame Favour ſhould not be extended to this and other decayed Towns.

CHAP. V.

§ I. Privileges, and Charters.

COLCHESTER having always been a very conſiderable Town, we may reſt aſſured, That it ever merited and obtained the Regard and Favour of our Sovereigns; and that they granted it from the firſt ſeveral large Privileges and Immunities. What they were in the Saxon and earlieſt times, we can give no certain account, for want of Records. We muſt begin therefore after the Norman Conqueſt. In the reigns of K. Henry I. and II. they had Conſuetudines Aquæ & Ripæ ex utraque parte, the Cuſtoms of the water and of the banks, or wharfs, on each ſide. And their Markets and Cuſtoms were confirmed in the reign of King Henry II. by the Juſtices itineraut, upon the oath of the Burgeſſes of the Town (p). But the firſt of our Kings who ſettled and confirmed their Liberties and Privileges by Charter, was K. Richard I. For, in his Charter, dated Decemb. 6. aº 1189. 1º regni, He granted and confirmed to his Burgeſſes of Colcheſter, liberty to chuſe Bailiffs from among themſelves whom they would; and a Juſtice to hold pleas of the Crown, and to plead them within their own Burgh: Ordaining, that they ſhould have no Juſtice but of their own chuſing: And not plead any matter out of the Walls of their Burgh: Be free from Scot and Lot, Danegeld, and fine for Murder [R]; And whenever [or whereſoever] they were ſummoned before the Juſtices itinerant, they might be acquitted by four creditable men of the Burgh: And none of them ſhould clear themſelves by duel. If any of them was impleaded in a plea of the Crown, upon making oath that he had been indicted in the Burgh, he ſhould be diſcharged: That none of the Royal family, or any other, ſhould be lodged, by force, or by the Marſhall's appointment, within the walls of the Burgh: That they ſhould be exempt all over England, and the Seaports, from Toll, Laſtage, Paſſage, Pontage [S], and all other cuſtoms [or duties] at all times and in all places: And that none of the Burgeſſes ſhould be amerced in a pecuniary ſum, unleſs for their weere [T]: viz. a hundred ſhillings, in their Hundred [court] or at any other plea, within the Walls of the Burgh; the ſaid amerciament to be laid [or moderated] by the oath of the foreſaid Burgeſſes, and that he be no more moleſted. Alſo, that they ſhould have all their lands, debts, and ſecurities, whoever owed them: And if any perſon took toll or cuſtom from them, the Burgeſſes ſhould take from that city, burgh, or town, in which the toll or cuſtom had been taken, as much as the Burgeſs of Colcheſter had given for toll, or according to the damage he had ſuffered thereby. [R] By Scot and Lot are to be underſtood public Impoſitions, or Contribution.—Danegeld, was a Sum paid at firſt to the Danes, to leave England in quiet. (See above, p. 144.) But it was afterwards a Tax, continued even after the conqueſt. Eſſex paid to it 252 l. 6 s.——Murdrum, was a fine, or pecuniary puniſhment, impoſed upon a place where a murther was committed; or for not producing the Murtherer, if he was fled there.

[S] Laſtage, a liberty for men to bring their Goods to fairs and markets, or to carry them where they pleaſed; paid by the Laſt.——Paſſage, money paid for paſſing to and fro, of perſons or goods, in common ſhores, landing places, &c.—Pontage, toll paid for paſſage over Bridges, with horſes, carriages, &c. or under them, with boats and ſhips.

who owed them [the Burgeſſes of Colcheſter] any thing ſhould well and fully pay it, or legally prove at Colcheſter, that they ought not to pay it. "And if they refuſed to pay it, "and did not come to Colcheſter to prove "they owed it not, the Burgeſſes to whom "any thing was due ſhould take a diſtreſs "from that County in which the Debtor dwelt, "until he ſatisfied the debt, or proved at Col- "cheſter by due courſe of law that he owed "nothing" [U]. No Foreſter ſhould have power to moleſt any man within the Liberty, but all the Burgeſſes might hunt within the Liberty of Colcheſter, the fox, the hare, and the polecat [W]: And they ſhould have their Fiſhery from the North-Bridge as far as Weſtneſſe: And from North Bridge to Weſtneſſe (whoever poſſeſſed the lands adjoyning) the ſaid Burgeſſes ſhould have the Cuſtoms of the water and banks on both ſides, to enable them to pay their fee-farm, as they enjoyed them in the time of K. Richard's father and grandfather: And that Colcheſter-market, ſhould not be hind'red by any other market, but that their Markets and Cuſtoms ſhould remain in the ſame ſtate as when they were confirmed upon the oath of the Burgeſſes of Colcheſter, before the Juſtices itinerant of King Henry II.

Theſe great Privileges have been, at divers times, wholly and entirely confirmed by the Charters of ſubſequent Kings; namely, of Hen. III. Edward II. Edward III. Richard II. Henry IV. V. and VI. Edward IV. Henry VII. and VIII. Edward VI. Mary I. Elizabeth, K. James I. and the firſt Charter of K. Charles I. And thoſe ſeveral Princes did not barely confirm them, but moſt of them made thereto very conſiderable Additions.

For, K. Henry III. granted to the Burgeſſes of Colcheſter, That they and their heirs for ever ſhould have the Return of all Writs, in matters concerning the Liberty of this town.

K, Edward II. allowed them the full and free Enjoyment of ſuch Liberties, contained in their Charter, as they or their predeceſſors had not hitherto enjoyed: without any moleſtation from himſelf, or his heirs, his Juſtices, Eſcheators, Sherifs, or any other his officers. Moreover, he granted the Burgeſſes of this Burgh an exemption for ever, from murage, picage, paage [X], and all other impoſitions on their Goods and Merchandiſes, throughout the Kingdom and other his dominions, and in all ſea-ports. And that none of them ſhould plead, or be impleaded without the Burgh, for any pleas, aſſiſes, or plaints; nor for any lands or tenements within the Burgh or its Liberties; nor for treſpaſſes, or contracts made within the ſaid Burgh or Liberties of the ſame: And that whenever any Aſſizes, or Inqueſts were holden, for any tenures, treſpaſſes, contracts, or felonies committed within the Burgh aforeſaid, or its Liberties, They ſhould not be made or holden by Foreigners, but by Burgeſſes of the Burgh; unleſs the affair concerned the King, his heirs or officers, or the community of the Burgh. He alſo granted, That the foreſaid Burgeſſes, and their heirs and ſucceſſors for ever ſhould have in that Burgh one Fair every year to laſt eight days, namely, the day before St. Dennis, on St. Dennis's day, and the ſix days following; with all liberties and free cuſtoms belonging to ſuch a Fair: unleſs the Fair is a hindrance to other neighbouring ones.

K. Edward III. K. Richard II. and K. Henry IV. were content with eſtabliſhing our Privileges, without enlarging them.

K. Henry V. confirmed them, with the folloving Additions. That, for the greater ſafety of the Bailiffs, Burgeſſes, and Commonalty of this Town; and for avoiding all Ambiguities and Diſputes concerning the Liberties and Franchiſes aforeſaid; which might ariſe, either by wilfully miſtaking, or miſunderſtanding without deſign, ſome obſcure expreſſions in the Charters above-mentioned; therefore that the ſaid Bailiffs, Burgeſſes, and Commonalty, and their heirs, and ſucceſſors, ſhould have cognizance of all manner of Pleas concerning lands, tenements, rents and ſervices ariſing or happening within the Burgh, or the ſuburbs and liberties of the ſame: as well concerning Pleas of Aſſize of Novel Diſſeiſin, Mort d'Anceſter, Rediſſeiſin, Certifications of Aſſizes and Attaints, as of all other Pleas real: And alſo of Pleas of Debt, Treſpaſs, Covenant, Detinue, Account, and all other Pleas perſonal whatſoever, within the Burgh aforeſaid, the ſuburbs, or liberties of the ſame; To be holden in the Motehalle of the Burgh, before the Bailiffs for the time being, as well in the preſence as in the abſence of the King and his heirs.——And likewiſe to have the executions of the ſaid Pleas. And that the foreſaid Bailiffs and their ſucceſſors ſhould have the cognizance of all the Pleas aforeſaid; and that the ſame Pleas, before what Juſtices ſoever, or howſoever, begun, ſhould be proſecuted, determined, and finiſhed in the Court at the Motehalle of the Burgh aforeſaid, before the Bailiffs, and their ſucceſſors.

K. Henry VI. without annulling any clauſe of the foregoing Charters, confirmed thoſe parts of the Charters of Richard I. Edwward II. and Henry V. which did moſt eſpecially relate to the Election of Bailiffs, and a Juſticery; the holding of pleas within the Burgh; and Aſſiſes and Inqueſts by Burgeſſes, and not by Foreigners; and the hearing and determining all Pleas both real and perſonal, belonging to the Burgh and the Liberties, within the Motehall. —— But, becauſe the Grants of former Kings denotes the fine that uſed anciently to be laid upon a perſon who had committed murder. For, among our anceſtors the Saxons, moſt crimes were puniſhed with mulcts and pecuniary fines. (See the Saxon Laws, of Dr. Wilkins's edit. p. 3. nº 21.) So that I take this paſſage to mean, That if any of the Burgeſſes had committed murder, he ſhould be indicted for it no where elſe but at a Hundred, or any other Court within the Burgh, and be fined the uſual ſum of 100 ſhillings.

[U] This clauſe was excepted in the ſubſequent Charters.

[W] This Privilege the Burgeſſes had before by grant of K. Henry II. Cartæ antiq. in Turri Lond. N. N. 53.

[X] Murage, a duty collected [upon carts or horſes coming through a town] for building or repairing the walls thereof.——Picage, money paid for breaking up the ground to ſet up booths, ſtalls, &c. in fairs.——Paage, is ſuppoſed to be the ſame as paſſage, which ſee above note [O].

were not ſufficiently clear and expreſs, either for want of proper words, or through the obſcurity of thoſe uſed, He made the following explanations. That the Liberty, Suburbs, and Precincts of the Town of Colcheſter, which were not ſpecified in former Charters, ſhould extend throughout the ſaid Town of Colcheſter, and the ſeveral Hamletts of Lexden, Mile end, Grinſted, and Donyland, adjoining to the ſame town of Colcheſter; and from Northbridge as far as Weſtneſſe; the foreſaid Burgeſſes, and their predeceſſors Burgeſſes, of the Town of Colcheſter, having peaceably, and without interruption, uſed and enjoyed the ſaid Hamletts as parcel of the Liberty, Suburbs, and Precincts of Colcheſter aforeſaid, from time immemorial. Alſo, that the Bailiffs of the ſaid Town of Colcheſter for the time beig and their Succeſſors might hold in the Motehall of that Town, before themſelves, all kinds of Pleas, and all manner of Actions real, perſonal, and mixt, Suits, Plaints, and Demands, moved or to be moved within the ſaid Town, or within the Liberty, Suburbs, or precincts, of the ſame; as well concerning any Lands, Tenements, Rents, Services, and other Poſſeſſions whatſoever, within the ſaid Town, or the Liberty, Suburbs, or precincts of the ſame; as touching Debts, Detinue, Account, Covenant, and all manner of Contract for above Forty ſhillings, or under: and all manner of Treſpaſſes, by force of arms, or otherwiſe committed; and all manner of offences and injuries not amounting to felony, done within the ſaid Town or the Liberty Suburbs, or Precincts of the ſame, or any way happening, unleſs they concerned the King or his heirs, or the Bailiffs or Commonalty of the Town. And that the Bailiffs and Burgeſſes ſhould have, levy, and receive with their own hands, and for their own proper uſe, all manner of iſſues, forfeitures, fines, and amerciaments adjudged or ſet before them, in all ſuch pleas, actions, ſuits, plaints, and demands, happening within the Town of Colcheſter, or within the Liberty, Suburbs, or Precincts of the ſame. Alſo, That the Burgeſſes of the ſaid Town ſhould plead and be impleaded, within the ſame Town and not elſewhere, before the Bailiffs, for all the Pleas aforeſaid. Moreover, he granted to the foreſaid Burgeſſes their heirs and ſucceſſors, That, yearly, at the time of the election of Bailiffs for the Town of Colcheſter according to ancient cuſtom, they might chuſe Four of the moſt worthy and diſcreet perſons of the ſame Town, to be, jointly with the Bailiffs for the time being, Juſtices of the Peace for one whole year from the time of ſuch Election, within the ſaid Town, and the Liberty, Suburbs, and Precincts of the ſame. And that the ſaid four Men, and the Bailiffs, Five, Four, Three, and Two of them, ſhould be Juſtices of the Peace in that Town, and in the Liberty, Suburbs and Precincts thereof. And the Juſtices for the time being, Five, Four, Three or Two of them, to have full correction, puniſhment, power, and authority, of knowing, enquiring, hearing, and determining all things and matters, as well concerning felonies, treſpaſſes, miſpriſions, and extortions, as of all other cauſes, quarrels, and miſdeeds whatſoever within the ſaid Town, and the Liberty, Suburbs, and Precincts of the ſame, for the future howſoever happening; as fully and amply as the Juſtices of Peace; and the Juſtices appointed to hear and determine Felonies, Treſpaſſes, and other Injuries; and the Juſtices who are to take care of weights and meaſures, hunters, ſervants, labourers, and artificers, have, in any county or place in this kingdom of England. And that no Juſtice of Peace in the County of Eſſex, or in any other county or place in the kingdom of England: but only the ſaid four men and the Bailiffs, Five, Four, Three, or Two of them, ſhould have power to correct, enquire, hear, and determine any thing done within the Town of Colcheſter, or within the Liberty, Suburbs, or Precincts of the ſame [Y]. Moreover, that the Bailiffs and Burgeſſes of the ſaid Town, and their ſucceſſors for ever, ſhould have all Fines, Iſſues, Forfeitures, and Amerciaments whatſoever, ſett by the ſaid Juſtices of the Peace within the Town aforeſaid, and within the Liberty, Suburbs or Precincts of the ſame; and the goods and chattels of all Felons, Fugitives, and Out-laws, and of all perſons condemned and in what manner ſoever convicted, as the ſame goods ſhould happen to be found in the Town aforeſaid, or in the Liberty, Suburbs, and Precincts of the ſame: And likewiſe the goods and chattels of all perſons that lay violent hands on themſelves, whereſoever found within the ſaid Town, Liberty, Suburbs, or Precincts of the ſame. And if any perſon ſhould commit a Treſpaſs for which he ought to loſe life or limb; or flies and will not abide judgment; or was guilty of any other offence for which he ought to loſe his chattels; whereſoever juſtice ought to paſs upon him, either in the King's Court, or in any other Court; all his goods and chattels thereby loſt and forfeited to the King, ſhould belong to the foreſaid Bailiffs and Burgeſſes, and their Succeſſors for ever; who might ſeize and take poſſeſſion of the ſaid chattels, within this Town, or within the Liberty, Suburbs, or Precincts of the ſame, for the uſe and behoof the Bailiffs and Burgeſſes of this Town, towards their ſupport, and the payment of the large Fee-farm which they pay to the Crown; without any diſturbance or impediment from the King, or his heirs; his Juſtices, Eſcheators, Sheriffs, or other his Bailiffs or Officers whatſoever.——He granted, moreover, that it ſhould not be lawful for the Steward, and Marſhall, or Clerk of the King's Houſhold, or his Admiral, to enter or come into the Town of Colcheſter, or in the Liberty, Suburbs, and Precincts of it, And, that the Bailiffs thereof ſhould have full power and authority, to enquire of all matters concerning the office of Clerk of the Market, that ſhould happen within the ſaid Town, or the Liberty, Suburbs, and Precincts of the ſame [Z].

K. Edward IV. not to be outdone by his Competitor, granted this Town a very full, long, and ample Charter; wherein, after confirming the Charters of King Richard I. Henry III. Edward II. Edward III. and Richard II. He ſays, that the Bailiffs and Burgeſſes of the Burgh of Colcheſter had repreſented to him, That although they and their predeceſſors, from time immemorial, had held and enjoyed all the Suburbs of that Burgh, and all the Hamletts of Lexden, Milend, Grenſtede, and Donylond, thereto adjoining; and all the Water or River from North-bridge to Weſtneſſe, together with the Banks on each ſide of the ſame water within the Liberty and Precinct of the ſaid Burgh; and that they at that time did hold, and their predeceſſors had held, all and ſingular the Liberties, Franchiſes, and Immunities aforeſaid, freely, peaceably, and quietly, ever ſince the making and confirming the Charters beforementioned; yet they were in fear, that in time to come they might be diſturbed in the poſſeſſion of the Liberties and Precinct within the Hamletts, Water and Banks, and the Liberties, Franchiſes, and Immunities aforeſaid, or ſome of them; on account of the ambiguity, obſcurity, and difficulty of ſome words and general expreſſions uſed in the Charters aboveſaid, or for want of a due explanation of thoſe words; and eſpecially becauſe it was not expreſly declared in thoſe Charters, How far the Liberty of this Burgh extended; which might hereafter occaſion trouble and vexation. Therefore his Majeſty, conſidering that the Burgh of Colcheſter was one of the ancienteſt Burghs in the Kingdom of England; that it was ſeated near the Sea-coaſts, to oppoſe the attempts of his Enemies that were diſpoſed to invade the kingdom; and remembring the very great faithfulneſs and loyalty of the Burgeſſes of that Burgh both to himſelf and his predeceſſors, Kings of England.——He ratified and confirmed the Charters of Grants aforeſaid, and every part thereof, and the ſtate, title, and poſſeſſion, which the foreſaid Bailiffs and Burgeſſes had in the Liberty and Precinct of and in the Hamletts, Water, River, and Banks aforeſaid; in the ampleſt manner doſſible.——Allowing them the full enjoyment of thoſe Franchiſes, Liberties, &c. though they had not hitherto fully enjoyed them, or had abuſed them, or any of them. Moreover, he made them the following gracious Conceſſions; That the Bailiffs and Burgeſſes of this Burgh, and their Succeſſors, conſiſting of two Bailiffs, and one Commonalty, ſhould for the future for ever be one perpetual Body and Commonalty in name and in deed, and have perpetual ſucceſſion: And incorporates them by the name of Bailiffs and Commonalty of the Burgh of Colcheſter; by which name, he declares them capable of purchaſing lands, and tenements, &c, to hold to them and their ſucceſſors for ever. And by the ſame name to plead and be impleaded in any of the King's courts; and to have and enjoy all and ſingular the liberties and franchiſes, comprized in the foregoing charters, as the Bailiffs and Burgeſſes, or the Burgeſſes of this Burgh, had enjoyed them before. He alſo authorizes them to uſe a Common Seal, for the affairs of their Burgh. And, in order to remove all manner of ambiguity, doubt, or difficulty concerning the Four Hamletts, and the Fiſhery; he granted to the Bailiffs and Commonalty and their ſucceſſors for ever, the ſaid Four Hamletts of Lexden, Milend, Grynſted, and Donylond, and the Water and River from the North-bridge of this Burgh as far as Weſtneſſe, together with the Banks on each ſide of the ſaid river, and all the Creeks adjoining and belonging to the ſame water, within the Precinct aforeſaid, as parcel of the Liberty of this Burgh: ſo that no perſon, of what degree or condition ſoever, might, without the will and licence of the Bailiffs and Commonalty and their ſucceſſors, make wharfs or cranes on the banks of the river or places aforeſaid; or wears, kidells, and engines for catching of fiſh; or fiſh in the ſame water: or preſume to ſell or buy any merchandiſes, in veſſels coming up the ſaid water, (proviſions only for people's houſholds excepted,) but at the New Hyth, upon pain of forfeiting the merchandiſes, and the veſſels or boats wherein they ſhould be bought or ſold. Moreover, he granted to the Bailiffs of this Burgh, to have the Return of all the King's writs and precepts, as well of aſſize of mort d'anceſtor, certificate of darrein preſentment, attaints, and all others, concerning the King, or any other perſon whatſoever; and the execution of the ſame, at the King's, or any other perſon's, ſuit, to be proſecuted within the Burgh, Liberty, and Precinct aforeſaid: ſo as that no Sheriff, or Coroner, except the King's Coroners to be choſen by the Bailiffs and Commonalty of this Burgh, nor any bailiff or other officer whatſoever, ſhould enter the Burgh, Liberty, and Precinct, aforeſaid, to execute any writ, precept, or mandate, though they concern the King's perſon, or any other; but the execution of them ſhall be in the Bailiffs, Coroners, or other officers of this Burgh for the time being. Likewiſe, that the Bailiffs of this Burgh ſhould have for ever the cognizance of all pleas, real, perſonal, and mixt, and others whatſoever concerning lands and tenements within this Burgh and Liberty: And of pleas of aſſize of novel diſſeiſin, &c.——in the manner granted before in the Charters of K. Henry V. and VI.——and of all other pleas whatſoever ariſing, or that ſhould ariſe, within the Burgh, Liberty, and Precinct aforeſaid; or before any of the King's Courts, whether of Chancery, Exchequer, Common-Bench, Juſtices of Aſſize, or other the King's Juſtices and Officers whatſoever; All which pleas the Bailiffs of the Burgh aforeſaid ſhall hold and determine, in the Moothalle of their Burgh. Alſo that they ſhould hold in the ſame Moothall a Court every week, on Mondays and Thurſdays: And hear and determine in that court all perſonal pleas, by Plaint before the Bailiffs: and the perſons, againſt whom ſuch plaints ſhall be brought, to arreſt, and their goods and chattels within the Burgh to attach and commit their bodies to priſon. And to hold and determine, in the aforeſaid court, all other pleas of lands and tenements, on Mondays, from fortnight to fortnight; and pleas of pie-powdered court; and to paſs judgments, and cauſe executions to be made thereupon, in the manner and form before accuſtomed in the Burgh. Moreover, that the Bailiffs and Aldermen for that time being, and the Sixteen Burgeſſes elected by them after the uſual manner [A], together with Sixteen other diſcreet and honeſt Burgeſſes of this Burgh, namely, Four out of each ward, choſen by the foreſaid Bailiffs and Aldermen, &c. ſhould be the Common Council of this town: which Common Council might make, from time to time, reaſonable Ordinances and Conſtitutions for the Advantage and Government of the Burgh, and put them in execution: and likewiſe alter and revoke them whenever they ſhould think it for the better. Alſo, that they might aſſeſs reaſonable taxes, or tallages, upon the goods, rents, trades, and merchandiſes, of all perſons dwelling within this Burgh and the Liberty and Precinct of the ſame, according to each perſon's ability: and levy them by reaſonable diſtreſs, compelling ſuch as refuſed to pay, (if need be) by arreſt and impriſonment, without any obſtruction from the King or his officers. To the Bailiffs alſo and Commonalty was committed the Aſſiſe of bread, wine, and beer; the Aſſay of weights, and meaſures, within the Burgh, Liberty, and Precinct aforeſaid: in as full and ample a manner as the Clerk of the market of the King's houſhold might perform the ſame; ſo as that neither the ſaid Clerk of the market; nor the Admiral of England, his deputy, or officers; nor the Steward or the Marſhal of the King's houſhold, or their ſervants, might come into the Burgh, Liberty, or Precinct aforeſaid, by land or by water, to diſcharge or execute any thing belonging to their office; but if they ſhould attempt it, then it might be lawful for the Bailiffs and Commonalty of this Burgh, to reſiſt, and not permit them upon any account to exerciſe any part of their office, without impeachment from the King, or any other perſon whatſoever. Further, he granted, That the Bailiffs of this Burgh for the time being, and ſome Lawyer [B], and four Burgeſſes, to be choſen in the ſame manner as the Bailiffs, ſhould for ever hereafter be, jointly and ſeverally, Keepers of the Peace; and authorized, to enforce the obſervance of ſeveral ſtatutes [C], for the quiet and good government of this Burgh, and Liberty of the ſame; and to chaſtiſe and puniſh all offenders againſt thoſe ſtatutes, according to the form therein preſcribed. Likewiſe to oblige all perſons that threaten miſchief to any one, to give ſufficient ſecurity for their good behaviour, and to impriſon them till they have given ſuch ſecurity. Moreover, that the ſaid ſix, five, three, and two of them, (whereof the Lawyer to be always one) be Juſtices, to inquire, upon the oath of honeſt and legal men of the Burgh and Liberty aforeſaid, of all manner of felonies, treſpaſſes, foreſtallers, regraters, and extortions whatſoever, committed within this Burgh, Liberty, and Precinct and of all other matters and things done within the ſame, which fall under the cognizance of the Keepers of the Peace of any county in England, by virtue of any ordinance or ſtatute, according to the law and cuſtom of this realm: ſo that all writs, precepts, and mandates concerning the premiſſes, be directed to, and executed by, the Officers of the ſaid Burgh, and not the Sheriffs or Coroners of the county of Eſſex; who ſhould no way intermeddle therein, nor come into this Burgh, Liberty, or Precinct, to execute any writ or precept, in any manner whatſoever. And, as an help towards the payment of their Fee-farm, King Edward granted moreover to the Bailiffs and Commonalty and their ſucceſſors for ever, all fines, profits, ranſoms, amerciaments, loſt goods and forfeitures; ariſing, or ſet, by the Bailiffs, Keepers of the Peace, and Juſtices within the ſaid Burgh; and all forfeitures and amerciaments impoſed upon any of the inhabitants of this Burgh, in any court whatſoever; and all the goods and chattels, within this Burgh, Liberty, and Precinct, of perſons convicted of treaſon, felony, contempt, treſpaſs, or other action at the ſuit of the King, or any other whatſoever —— In as full a manner as in the Charter of King Henry VI. —— Finally, this Charter concluded with theſe very great Privileges; That no perſon dwelling and reſiding within this Burgh, Liberty, and Precinct, ſhould be put or impanelled, againſt his will, in any Aſſiſes, Inqueſts, Attaints, or Recognizances whatſoever, out of the ſame Burgh, Liberty, and Precinct: nor be appointed aſſeſſor, taxer, or collector, without the ſame, of Tenths, Fifteenths, or other tallages, impoſitions, or ſubſidies whatſoever, granted to the King or his heirs, or of any part thereof; or collector of a reaſonable aid to make the King's eldeſt ſon a knght, or marry his eldeſt daughter: nor be choſen Conſtable, or Bailiff; or compelled to bear any other office or employment againſt his will, out of the Burgh, Liberty, and Precinct aforeſaid. And be no way liable to any fine or forfeiture, for refuſing to take upon him thoſe offices.

Theſe very great Privileges have been confirmed by the ſubſequent Charters of K. Henry VII. K. Henry VIII. K. Edward VI. Queen Mary, Q. Elizabeth, K. James I. and the firſt Charter of K. Charles I. [D].

K. Henry VIII. in his Grant of Kingeſwood or Kingeſwood-heath, to the Bailiffes and Commonalty of this Town, made them alſo theſe gracious Conceſſions: That none of the Bur-

IV. concerning Liveries, &c. Statute 2 Hen. V. againſt the Lollards. And Statute 3 Hen. V. againſt clipping, waſhing, and filing money.

[D] The charges of this firſt Charter of K. Charles, were 44 l. 5 s. In 1633, there was a Quo-warranto geſſes of the Burgh of Colcheſter, dwelling within the ſaid Town or Liberty of the ſame, ſhould be Sheriff or Eſcheator of any County within the realm of England: And, if named or choſen, that they might refuſe to execute thoſe offices, without any moleſtation or puniſhment. Alſo, that the ſaid Bailiffs and Commonalty, and their ſucceſſors, ſhould have, and chuſe from amongſt themſelves, within the liberty and hamletts of this town, two Coroners, as they had anciently uſed to have; which Coroners ſhould have and exerciſe the ſame power and auctority within the Town aforeſaid, and the Liberty and Hamletts of the ſame, as the Coroner of Eſſex, or of any other county in the realm: And that the Coroners of the county of Eſſex ſhould by no means preſume to come and perform any thing belonging to their office, within the ſaid town or burgh, and the liberty and hamletts thereof. The Bailiffs, aud Commonalty, and their ſucceſſors, to have all the iſſues, fines, amerciaments, forfeitures, and other profits whatſoever, ariſing from, or belonging to, the office of Coroner.

The ſecond Charter of K. Charles I. dated July 9, 1635, was in a manner a quite new Charter. It begins with obſerving, That Colcheſter is one of the ancienteſt Burghs in the realm of England, and conveniently ſeated near the Sea-coaſt to oppoſe ſuch enemies as would invade the kingdom; That it is large and populous, containing four wards, and inhabited by Burgeſſes induſtriouſly employed in the woollen manufacture and merchandizing; who enjoy great Liberties and Privileges, as well by preſcription and cuſtom, as by the charters and letters patent of ſeveral Kings and Queens of England: And had upon many occaſions, and lately, ſhown themſelves grateful and loyal. Then, after juſt mentioning the Charter of K. Richard I. which empowered them to chuſe two Bailiffs; and that of K. Edward IV. which incorporates them by the name of Bailiffs and Commonalty; His Majeſty grants and declares, that Colcheſter ſhall for ever hereafter be and remain a free Burgh of itſelf, through all its ancient Bounds and Limits: And incorporates the Men and Free-burgeſſes, and Bailiffs and Commonalty of the ſaid Burgh, and their ſucceſſors for ever, by the name of Mayor and Commonalty of the Burgh of Colcheſter in the county of Eſſex; ſettling their government in the following order: That they ſhould have a Mayor, and 9 Aldermen beſides: 16 Aſſiſtants; 16 Common-council-men (4 out of each ward) a High Steward, and a Recorder, both for life; and a common Clerk, during the Recorder's pleaſure. The Mayor to be annually choſen by the Free-burgeſſes, or the greater part of them, on the Monday next after the decollation of St. John the Baptiſt [Auguſt 29] in the manner related below § 5. of this chapter, and to be ſworn on Michaelmas-day. In Elections, the Mayor to have a double or caſting vote. He, and the reſt of the officers, to appear in their proper gowns, on Sundays, and other ſolemnities. To hold Aſſemblies in the common Hall, and make good, ſound, honeſt, uſefull, neceſſary, and reaſonable Laws, Conſtitutions, Orders, &c. and put them in execution, levy fines, &c. The Mayor, Recorder, laſt year's Mayor, and two other Aldermen annually choſen, to be Juſtices of peace; and To hold quarterly Seſſions of the peace. The Mayor and Recorder to hold weekly Courts on Mondays and Thurſdays. And the Mayor and Commonalty to have cognizance of pleas of debts and offences within the Burgh belonging to the Admiral's juriſdiction, and to hold a Court every Thurſday to hear and determine thoſe pleas; But the Admiral of England, or his Deputy, to have the liberty of coming into the Burgh, to take care of his debts, and other concerns of the Admiralty. He orders alſo, that no perſon ſhould ſell Beer without licence; and That a Perambulation ſhould be taken yearly of the bounds and limits of the Burgh; that they might not be forgotten; and to prevent diſputes. And he confirms the Cuſtom, Preſcription, and Liberty, from time immemorial uſed in this Town; viz. That if any Foreigner, not free of this Burgh, buys or ſells any goods or merchandiſes, otherwiſe than by wholeſale, within this Burgh, Precinct, or Liberty; thoſe Goods ſhould be ſeized, appraiſed, and converted to the uſe of the whole Commonalty of the Burgh, unleſs the owner of thoſe goods redeems them. His Majeſty makes this further Grant to the Mayor and Commonalty, and their ſucceſſors, That no Foreigner [F] ſhould for the future uſe any meſtery, occupation, or manual trade within this Burgh, and the Liberty and Precinct of it; nor buy or ſell within the ſame (except in the Fairs, and at Fair-time) any merchandiſes or goods, unleſs victuals by retail; and that either the buyer or ſeller be a free burgeſs.—The reſt is a general confirmation of all and ſingular the Hamletts, Commons of Paſture, Fairs, Markets, Fiſheries, &c. and all other Liberties and Privileges whatſoever, comprehended in the former Charters of K. Hen. VI. Ed. IV. &c. [G].

The firſt Charter of King Charles II. dated Auguſt 3, 1663, is in all points the ſame as this laſt, except as to the nnmber of Officers, brought againſt it; upon which they petitioned for, and obtained, this ſecond Charter.

[F] By a Foreigner is to be underſtood one who is not free of this Burgh. And that ſuch, if they carried on any buſineſs within this Town or the Liberties, without the Licenſe of the Bailiffs and Commonalty, and paying ſome acknowledgment; have been conſtantly proſecuted and fined, is moſt undeniably plain from our Records, even from the Times of K. Edward II. to the year 1739. Rot. 4° Edw. II. rot. 6, &c.) and enforced by a By-law March 27, 1712, confirmed the 29th of the ſame month by Sir Tho. Parker, and Sir John Powell. Nothing is more plainly or unqueſtionably evident, than a conſtant ſeries of payments made under the name of Foreign-fines, to the Chamberlains, for a very great number of years. Notwithſtanding which, this ancient Right was, through a very unaccountable management, lately given up, and diſcountenanced. But ſo ſtrictly was it kept up in Q. Elizabeth's time, that Sept. 13, 1599, It was ordered, That every foreiner that ſhould occupy any trade within the towne of Colcheſter, as well Engliſh as ſtrangers, to make a diſtinction between the Freemen of the towne and the foryners, ſhould erect and ſett up, all the length of their Shopp before their windows next the ſtreet, a lattice half a yard in height at the leaſt, upon pain to forfeit for every default thorein 10 s. and beſides to have their ſhop-windows put by (Book of Aſſemblies.) But the Common Law diſallows of all ſuch kinds of Reſtrictions.

[G] The Protector Ol. Cromwell, and his ſon Richard, granted alſo Charters to this Town: but I have not been able to find them. (See Aſſembly-books.)

which are thus ſettled therein: 12 Aldermen, including the Mayor; 18 Aſſiſtants: and 18 Common-council-men.

Upon the unlawful ſurrender in 1684 [and, what is worſe, made by perſons who knew all the ill conſequences of it] (q), a ſecond Charter was granted by K. Charles II. with theſe alterations: A Mayor and 11 Aldermen; 15 Aſſiſtants, and 15 Common-council-men, were appointed: and the Mayor to be choſen only by the Aſſiſtants and Common council. Eighteen, or more of them, impowered to make By-laws, &c. All Elections to be made, of perſons which within ſix months at leaſt before their nomination had received the holy communion; and, before they were ſworn in, to take the oaths of Allegiance and Supremacy, and ſubſcribe the Declaration in the Act for regulating corporations: Every election of Mayor, &c. made contrary to theſe directions, to be abſolutely void. His Majeſty alſo reſerved to himſelf, his heirs, and ſucceſſors, a Power, from time to time, and at all times, to remove, by Order of Privy Council, any officers; and the Mayor, Aldermen, &c. thereupon to proceed to a new Election.—— The reſt is almoſt litterally the ſame as his firſt Charter.

K. James II. in his Charter, dated Sept. 15, 1688, not only omits all the clauſes, which obliged the Officers here elected to receive the ſacrament, and to take the oaths of ſupremacy, &c. But he expreſly diſpenſeth with their taking the ſaid oaths, and receiving the ſacrament. And moreover, He abridges the number of Officers to 10 Aldermen, including the Mayor; 10 Aſſiſtants; and 10 Common-council-men. Impowering Fifteen or more of them to aſſemble in the common-hall, and make By-laws. And he reſerved to himſelf, his heirs, and ſucceſſors, full Power and Authority, to put in or remove at pleaſure, by order of his Privy-council, any officer, or officers: And to put in, by Mandate, any perſon in the room of thoſe ſo removed, or dead.—Bating theſe exceptions, He confirmed all the other Privileges, and Liberties, &c. of this Burgh in as ample a manner as they were confirmed by his predeceſſors [H].

At the Revolution, this Burgh was reſtored to its ancient Liberties; and upon the Attorney-General's Report, of the undue and ineffectual meaſures taken about the pretended ſurrender in 1648; K. William and Q. Mary, by their Letters Patents in 1693, reciting word for word the firſt Charter of K. Charles II. did abſolutely and amply renew and confirm it; with the addition of the Fair, and Tueſday-market abovementioned [I]. Under this Charter, the Corporation continued to act till 1741, but the officers not having been duly elected according to Charter, and vexatious proſecutions being brought againſt ſome of them, the reſt diſclaimed upon record in the Courts at Weſtminſter. From that time the Charter was loſt, or lay dormant, till 9 Septemb. 1763, when a New one, or a Renewal of the former ones, paſſed the Great Seal. It is almoſt literally the ſame as the Charters of K. Charles II. and K. William and Q. Mary; and therefore we think it unneceſſary to inſert it here, eſpecially as it is in print, and may be purchaſed for one ſhilling.

Such are the great and ample Privileges, Liberties, and Immunities granted at divers times to this Burgh, by the gracious Munificence of the Kings and Queens of this Realm; and allowed and acknowledged not only by the Courts at Weſtminſter, but alſo in other places, and upon the moſt important occaſions [K].

But, beſides theſe Privileges obtained by Grant and Charter, Colcheſter alſo enjoys ſome by Preſcription and Cuſtom; viz.

1. To be a Hundred or Liberty of itſelf. Accordingly a Hundred-court uſed to be very anciently held here (r): As as alſo a Lawe-hundred-court, which in time gave place to the Quarterly Seſſions of the peace.

2. A Femme covert may convey her Eſtate, within this Town, by Deed; being firſt ſolely and ſecretly examined before the Mayor, and declaring her conſent; without paſſing a Fine. But both the Deed and her Examination muſt be enrolled in the Mayor's court.

3. By ancient uſage, before any direction, or even the leaſt mention, in any of our Charters about Aldermen, Common-council, &c. i. e. in the 46th of Edw. III. and in the 6th of K. Henry IV. &c. the Free-burgeſſes were wont to elect 7 or 8 Aldermen, 2 Chamberlains, 1 Town-clerk, 4 Claviers, (i. e. keepers of the keys of the Town-cheſt,) 2 Coroners, and 16 of the Council of the Town (s). How far that uſage may go towards a Cuſtom or Preſcription, let the learned judge.

4. A Free-burgeſs of Colcheſter could not only bequeath by will what he had purchaſed; but alſo this Town had anciently the Probate and Inrolling of wills; eſpecially when the lay-fee, or eſtate therein bequeathed or deviſed, lay any where within the Liberties of Colcheſter. And, in order to prevent frauds, this very commendable method was uſed: Proclamation was made in full court, that if any perſon had objections to make againſt the proving of that will, he ſhould come and make them known at the next court. If no body then appeared, and objected againſt it, the will was proved [L]. They began to ceaſe being proved here about the years 1550, or 1560 (t).

mentioned deſerve a more particular notice; eſpecially the Royalty of the river Colne.

As early as the reigns of K. Henry the firſt and ſecond, we find, That the Burgeſſes of this town had the Cuſtoms of the water, or river, and of the banks of the ſame on both ſides, from North-bridge to Weſtneſſe, whoever poſſeſſed the lands adjoyning. Theſe were confirmed to them by K. Richard the Iſt's Charter; who alſo was moſt graciouſly pleaſed to grant unto the Burgeſſes the Fiſhery from the North-bridge as far as Weſtneſſe. And this valuable Privilege hath been moſt amply and fully aſſured, explained, and confirmed by the ſubſequent Charters, eſpecially thoſe of K. Edward IV. &c.

This Fiſhery doth not include only the plain courſe of the river Colne, or water, but all the Fleets and Creeks it runs into, or that have an inlet or outlet therein; namely, Pyefleet, Braſlett, or Bracefleet, Barnfleet, the North and South Gedens (Geedons or Geatons) the Paddock or Parroc, Skibhope, &c. that is, the whole Colne-water (as it is uſually called) from the North-bridge here, down to Weſt-Neſſe, upon the Warehead or Wellet-bar below Merſea block-houſe.

A very exact menſuration, or ſurvey, was taken of this Colne-water, from North-bridge to Weſtneſſe, on March the 14th, 15th, 18th, 28th, and April 1ſt, May 2d, 3d, 4th, and 6th, 1703, of which the particulars are given below from the Town-Records [M]. And by an infinite number of Records, and other Papers I have peruſed, it appears, That the Commonalty of the Town of Colcheſter are duly and legally intituled to the ſole, ſeveral, or ſeparate Fiſhery in the ſaid river or water of Colne, extending itſelf from the North-bridge of this Town unto the Neſſe point, commonly called Weſtneſſe, in or near the pariſh of Chich St. Oſith: And have ever had the full and ſole right of Fiſhing in the ſaid water or river, and all the Creeks and waters thereunto belonging, excluſive of all other perſons whatſoever without their licenſe and authority: And have, and ever had, the full, ſole, and abſolute Power to have, take, and diſpoſe of to their own uſe, in ſuch a manner as they ſhould think proper, all Oyſters, and other Fiſh, within the ſaid River or Water [N].

For the better preſervation of this valuable Right, Courts of Admiralty or Conſervancy have been held almoſt every year in Colne-water, between the flowing and ebbing of the ſea to full tide; wherein all offences committed between North-bridge and Eaſt-Merſea-ſtone, have been preſented by a Jury, and the offenders amerced. We have, among the Town-records, accounts of ſuch Courts holden from the time of Philip and Mary down to the year 1730 [O].

There are ſome Pariſhes adjoyning to this Colne-water, whoſe Inhabitants are admitted, upon Licenſe from the Mayor and Water-bayliff, to fiſh, and dredge Oyſters in this water. The pariſhes are Eaſt-Merſea, Chich St. Oſith, [O] In thoſe which were held in the time of K. Philip and Q. Mary, there is mention of Weſtnas and Eſtnas; and of the Gedens. (Art. 17. 29. 53.) And the ſubſtance of the Preſentments made in them all is, For Dredging without licenſe; and at unſeaſonable times: For carrying away the brood, cultch, and ſpatt, or deſtroying the ſame: For dredging oyſters in Pyefleet, and Paſsfleet: For catching and ſelling fiſh under ſize, ſmall or underſized oyſters: For fiſhing with unlawful nets: For working with two dredges: For employing more than two dredges at one time in a boat, againſt the cuſtom of the town: For taking in an arm belonging to the river Colne; and Barn-fleet, Parsfleet, the Geatons: For encroaching upon the Admiralty of Colcheſter, and engroſſing of gravel: For erecting a key within the royalty of Colcheſter, &c. The offenders were amerced, ſome as high as 5 l. and the Fines levied, as appears by the Extracts, Chamberlains Accounts, &c.

Brightlingſea, Arlesford, Wivenhoo, Lagonhoo, Fingringhoo, and Eaſt-Doniland [P]. And no Licenſe ought to be granted to any perſon, but what is free of the trade, and whoſe full reſidence and legal ſettlement is in one of thoſe pariſhes as uſual (u).

In March or April yearly, Proclamation is or ought to be made on the river, near Merſeaſtone within the juriſdiction of the town of Colcheſter, That the river Colne is ſhut, and all perſons forbid and forewarned to dredge, or take any Oyſters out of the ſaid River, or the Creeks thereto appertaining, on any account whatſoever, before the feaſt of St. Mary Magdalen [July 22.] and then to come in and take Licenſes: ſome ſingle, and others double.——This is called Setting the Colne. And none are permitted to fiſh or dredge without thoſe Licenſes [Q].

To ſecure further this valuable Privilege, an Act of Parliament was obtained in for regulating, governing, preſerving, and improving the Oyſter Fiſhery in the River Colne and Waters thereto belonging.

Treaſure trouvé, wrecks, waived Goods, and deodands in that river, or water, have alſo belonged always to the Corporation (w). And there are inſtances upon record, of money paid to them for Anchorage in the river Colne, againſt Merſey-ſtone, within the liberty of this town (x).

This Royalty of Colne-water being ſo very noble and valuable a Privilege, wicked attempts have been made at divers times to deprive and rob this poor Burgh of it.

The firſt attempt was, in K. Edward IIId's reign, by one Lionel de Bradenham, Lord of Lagonhoo-manor, who incloſed ſome parts of this river, endeavouring to appropriate them to himſelf. Whereupon a Commiſſion being granted to Robert de Herle Lord Admiral, to enquire by a jury into this affair; after ſeveral ſeſſions and adjournments it was adjudged, that all incloſures in this water ſhould be wholly taken away [R]. Enraged at this, the covetous and ambitious L. de Bradenham came and beſieged Colcheſter for a quarter of a year, attempting to burn it, and retained at his houſe in Lagonhoo, ſeveral thieves or robbers as his ſervants, and beſides, cauſed ſome people to be drowned in the river Colne (y). For all which enormities he was fain to ſue for a Pardon; and this affair ſeems to have proved his ruin, for ſhortly after he paſſed away his manor of Lagonhoo [S].

The next attempt upon this Royalty was by John Earl of Oxford, who obtained a Grant of it from that poor weak Prince K. Henry VI. March 4, 1446 (z). But the Corporation not being diſpoſed quietly to part with ſo valuable a Right, conteſted it with his Lordſhip: firſt by a Scire facias in Chancery (a); and, next, in a Tryal, at Weſtminſter (b), in Mi-

Of this we have ſome inſtances in the Books of Aſſemblies, (Aug. 22, 1636, &c.) but I ſhall mention only one, which is very expreſs. "July 3, 1679, Mem' that John Ringe of Eaſt Merſey—and four others—being ſeverally dredging in the river and water of Colne, without the Block-houſe, within the Liberties and Royalties of the Towne and Burrough of Colcheſter, the Water-ſerjeant of the ſaid Towne, by warrant from the Mayor did arreſt their ſeverall Boates in which they ſoe dredged, and brought them upp to the New-Hyth. Whereupon the ſaid perſons appeared before the Mayor and the Aldermen at the Moothall, and humbly beſought them, that their ſaid boates might be diſcharged; which the Mayor (by the Advice of the Aldermen, and upon the ſaid perſons ſubmiſſion to the payment of ſeveral fines laid upon them) was pleaſed to grant; each of the ſaid perſons entering into a 50l. bond, to the Mayor and Commonaltie of the ſaid towne and burrough, that they, nor either of them, ſhould preſume to fiſh within the Liberties or Royalties of Colcheſter, without Lycenſe of the Mayor for the time being.—July 7, John Ryme of Brightlingſea was ſerved in the ſame manner.—July 25, Thomas Pilgrim of Chich St. Oſith was, with his boate taken dredging below the Block-houſe, within the Liberties and Royalties of this Towne. The Water-bayliffe arreſted his boate and brought it to the New-hyth above-mentioned, and there it lay till the 27th of the ſame month. On which day the ſaid T. P. appeared before the Mayor and Aldermen at the Moothall, pretending himſelf to be Fiſherman to the Lord Colcheſter, and to be licenſed by his Lordſhip to fiſh where he did, and brought with him this letter from his lordſhip to the Mayor. "Mr. Mayor, I underſtand by my ſervant and oyſter-"dredger, Thomas Pilgrim, that you have cauſed his boat "that he dredges oyſters with, to be taken away from "him: He is my oyſter-dredger, and I doe deſire you to "reſtore him his boate againe, at the requeſt of your "friend,

"St. Oſith, 27 July 1679. COLCHESTER."

To which the Mayor, by advice of the Aldermen, immediately thus anſwered. "May it pleaſe your Lordſhipp, "Thomas Pilgrim was taken dredging in Colne-water, and "pretends a power ſoe to doe: The place is part of the "Royalties of this Towne, and I hope your Lordſhipp "will have me excuſed, if I vindicate the rights of this "Corporation. If Thomas Pilgrim will ſubmit to a ſatiſfaction for this treſpaſſe, and diſclayme his pretence, I "will doe my endeavour with my Brethren to moderate the "penalty. I am, My Lord, your Lordſhip's moſt humble "ſervant, JOHN RAYNER." Afterwards Pilgrim came in, ſubmitted to a fine of 3l. entered into a bond as the reſt had done, and his boate was diſcharged. chaelmas-term, 27° Henr. VI. when the Jury confirmed the Corporation's Right. The Subſtance of their verdict is given below in the note [T]. Afterwards at an inqueſt of Niſi prius at Colcheſter, before William Yelverton Eſq; one of the King's Juſtices, and his aſſociate William Waites, the Jury decided the point in favour of the Corporation. The Jurors were Symon Neweman, John Cake, John Aunger, John Crullynge, William Stevyn, Thomas Baker, Thomas Leveron, John Wile, John Kinge, John Page, John Prentis, and John Marcell. But ſo mad was the Earl, becauſe he could not obtain his unlawful deſire, that by a very audacious attempt and highly prejudicial to the Engliſh Liberties, he brought an Attaint againſt this Jury: Whereupon a new tryal being obtained, the firſt judgment, or verdict, was affirmed againſt the Earl: And his letters patent were recalled and cancelled [U].

In 1629 and 1630, Sir Roger Townſhend, Lord of Wivenhoo-maner, made another ſtrong attack upon this right of the Fiſhery. But his ill concerted deſigns proved unſucceſsful [W]: And ſome witneſſes then proved, that it was plainly made out, at a court of conſervancy held by Dr. Julius Cæſar in Q. Elizabeth's reign, that the bounds of the Liberties of Colcheſter in Colne-water and the Fleets and Creeks therein, extend as far as Weſtneſs in St. Oſith. To evade which, it was pretended in this and ſome other tryals, that there are two Weſtneſſes: namely, This juſt now mentioned, and another nigher the Town, being the point in Eaſt-Doniland againſt Wivenhoo. But it may be affirmed with certainty, that the Saxon name of Næſe or Neſſe, is never given to any points of land but ſuch as advance into the ſea; as St. Oſith-point or Merſea-block-houſe, and not to projections in rivers. And the paſſage in the note below [X] determines, that it was always underſtood that Merſey-block-houſe lay between North-bridge and Weſtneſſe.

Beſides theſe, there have been ſome, other leſs conſiderable attempts, which have alſo proved ineffectual.

To which let me add, That Colcheſter liberty was always taken to be exempt from Admiral-Juriſdiction. And ſo it was expreſly and particularly acknowledged in the 31ſt of K. Henry VI. the 19th of K. Henry VIII. and in the reigns of K. Philip and Q. Mary, K. Charles I. &c. (c). In the latter's ſecond Charter the Magiſtrates being empowered to hold Admiralty-courts, they have frequently held ſuch, and appointed Stewards with a yearly ſalary; viz. June 17, 1661, Sir Moundeford Bramſton, and October 7, 1700, John Cook, LL. D. (d).

This account of the Fiſhery naturally leads me to ſay ſomething of our Colcheſter-Oyſters. They have been always very much eſteemed and valued. Nay, Sir Aſton Cokain poetically fancies, that they tempted Julius Cæſar to invade this iſland [Y]. However, 'tis more certain, that the right and genuine Colcheſter-oyſters have conſtantly been thought a Preſent fit for perſons of the higheſt quality [Z]. But the unfair tricks plaid by the London Fiſhmongers, who endeavour to engroſs them, and would permit none, if they could, to be vended in that city but what paſs through their hands, have not ſerved to enhance their value or reputation. For they not only mix ſtale and freſh, diſhoneſtly, but alſo put off for them ſome coarſe ones taken at a great diſtance, perhaps on the Weſtern-coaſts. The ſort we moſt eſteem here, is the Pye-fleet, a ſmall thick Oyſter with a tranſparent ſhell, and as full of a tender and delicious meat as it can well hold. But there are ſome other ſorts alſo exceeding good.

The account given by Dr. T. Spratt, of the Generation of Oyſters (e) is, I think, in general, ſo exact as to require little or no addition; and the ſubſtance of it is as follows. "In April and May, and again about Midſummer and Michaelmas, the Oyſters caſt their Spawn, which the Dredgers call their Spat: It is like the drop of a candle, and about the bigneſs of a ſmall ſpangle. This Spat cleaves to ſtones, old oyſter-ſhells, pieces of wood, and ſuch like things at the bottom of the ſea, which they call Cultch. 'Tis probably conjectured, that the Spat in 24 hours begins to have a ſhell. The Oyſters are ſick after they have firſt ſpat; but in June and July they begin to mend, and in Auguſt are perfectly well. The male-oyſter is black-ſick (as the fiſhermen term it,) having a black ſubſtance in the fin: and the female white-ſick, having a milky ſubſtance in the fin." Dr. Liſter accounts the white-ſickneſs to be the milky ſperm of the male; and the other, the eggs of the female newly effuſed in the fins (f). " In the Colne-water, the dredgers are limited to certain times, as is ſaid above, but out of it they dredge all the year round. As they take the oyſters, they gently raiſe with a knife the ſmall brood from the cultch, and then throw the cultch in again to preſerve the ground for the future; unleſs they be ſo newly ſpat that they cannot be ſafely ſevered from the cultch, in which caſe they are permitted to take the ſtone or ſhell the ſpat is upon; one ſhell, &c. having often twenty ſpats on. Theſe ſmall oyſters thus taken they throw or lay into the channel, in places they call their Beds or Layers, where they grow and fatten, and in two or three years the ſmalleſt brood will be oyſters of a legal ſize. And to determine that, there is a braſs-oyſter-ſize always kept by the magiſtrates.

After the month of May 'tis felony to carry away the cultch; and great penalties are laid by the Admiralty court upon thoſe that deſtroy it at any time: The reaſon of which is, becauſe they find, that, if the cultch be taken away, the Ouſe will increaſe, and then muſcles and cockles will breed there and deſtroy the oyſters, they not having whereon to ſtick their ſpat.

What Dr. Spratt ſays, " That the oyſters, " when the tide comes in lye with their hollow " ſhell downwards, and when it goes out they " turn on the other ſide; and that they remove " not from their place unleſs in cold weather, " to cover themſelves in the cliffs," is contrary to matter of fact. For, as R. Bradley well obſerves, they " are never capable of removing " themſelves from their firſt ſtation (g)," but indeed, they ſometimes lye with their hollow ſhell downwards, and ſometimes upwards.

All oyſters are naturally white in the body, and brown in the fins. In order to green them, they put them into Pits about two foot deep in the Salt-Marſhes, which are overflowed only at Spring-tides, to which they have ſluices, and let out the ſalt water until it is about a foot and half deep. Theſe pits, from ſome quality in the ſoil, will become green, and communicate their colour to the oyſters that are put into them in 4 or 5 days, tho' they commonly let them continue there 6 weeks or 2 months; in which time they will be of a dark green. It is very remarkable, that a pit within a foot of a greening pit will not green; and thoſe that did green very well, will in time loſe that quality. So that it is not done by copperas, or other greening ſtuffs, as ſome have imagined: Nor is it more true, as R. Bradley aſſerted (b), that they grow green by feeding upon a ſort of crow-ſilk.

There are three points that ſtill want to be cleared upon this ſubject. 1. Whether the greenneſs of the oyſters is not occaſioned by ſome inſects breeding in the pits, and inſinuating themſelves into the oyſters: which ought to be examined by a microſcope. 2. Whether they are Androgynous, as R. Bradley fancied (for all creatures appear to be male and female)? 3. Whether they are not enabled by the help of the currents and tydes to have ſome motion, and even in ſome meaſure to ſhift their places?

To the Colcheſter-oyſters let me ſubjoin another thing which Colcheſter is famous for, viz. the excellent ſweet-meats made of Eryngo-Roots. They were firſt candied in this town about the beginning of the laſt century by Robert Buxton, Apothecary. His apprentice Samuel Great, continued this buſineſs, and it hath been ever ſince carried on by the latter's poſterity with univerſal liking and approbation.

Out of a due regard for honeſt and induſtrious merit, I took notice in the former edition of the admirable Auricula's raiſed by Henry Stow of Lexden: which the connoiſſeurs allowed to be the fineſt in the Britiſh dominions, if not in all Europe, ſome of them having no leſs than a hundred and thirty-three bloſſoms upon one ſtem. They were tainted and ſpoiled by a fine one, given him by a Gentleman, that had a worm in the foot. But he has been as famous ſince for fine Tulips.

§ 2 Half-year-land.

THERE is another notable Privilege belonging to the Free-burgeſſes of Colcheſter, reſiding within the ſame, of which I have not yet taken notice; That is, the Benefit of commoning in certain Lands round the walls of the Town, from Lammas-day, or Auguſt 12, till the 14th of February. Thoſe lands are ſaid to contain about Five hundred acres [A].

The exact year when this privilege was granted to the Free-burgeſſes, I have not been able to trace out: but am credibly informed, that it was about the 14th of K. Henry II. It appears, that at the time of making Domeſday-book, the Burgeſſes had Fourſcore acres of land, and eight perches round the wall, in common [B]. And that the King's Demeſnes in Colcheſter, were a Hundred and two acres of land, of which ten were meadow; and two hundred and forty acres beſides between paſture and heath; all which was let to farm by the King.

[A] I have been informed by a Gentleman lately deceaſed [Mr. Joſeph Duffeild] who had been ſeveral times Mayor of this Corporation, and was let into all the ſecrets of it, That the Commons were not at firſt ſo extenſive as they are now; but the religious Houſes, and other owners, who had lands intermixed with them, thinking it a great advantage to intercommon with the Free-burgeſſes (when Tillage was not ſo much in uſe as now,) they mutually permitted therefore their Lands to lye open to each other. By which means the Commons were much enlarged by degrees, and the ancient boundaries of them neglected, or forgotten. — That the Religious Houſes, particularly St. Botolph's, had a right of intercommoning in thoſe lands, See Rot. Cur. 8 Hen. IV. rot. 2.—There were anciently ſuch Lammas-grounds in the pariſhes of St. Margaret's and St. Martin's Weſtminſter. See Stow's Survey, b. vi. p. 78. &c. Strype's.

Theſe royal Demeſnes continued in the crown till about the 14th of K. Henry II. when he granted them in fee-farm, with a right of commonage, to the Free-burgeſſes of this town. But they appear to have been again in the crown, in the 1ſt of K. Richard I. (i).

Notwithſtanding the moſt diligent ſearch, I have not been able to find out any ancient orders or regulations about theſe Lammas-commons, as they are called; I mean from the time they were firſt granted till Qu. Elizabeth's reign: So that, if any ſuch regulations were made, they are either loſt or miſlaid. All that appears upon record about them on our Town-rolls, is reducible to theſe ſeveral heads.

1. That this Right of Commoning doth not extend to Lands that are ſown with Grain or Corn [B]: which is a Demonſtration that the owners of thoſe Lands may plough and ſow them; notwithſtanding whatever hath been pretended to the contrary: And ſo it hath been adjudged at the Aſſizes. And, indeed, if the owners might not ſow, or do reaſonably what they pleaſed with them; they would not be Half-year but Whole-year-lands, to the Free-burgeſſes.

2. It appears from our Records, That none but Free-burgeſſes have a Right to common in them. If others do it, they are preſentable, and uſed to be amerced.

3. That they are not to overlay or ſurcharge them: That is, every one is allowed to put in a certain number of cattle, which none ought to exceed without being fined: Nor indeed at any rate. But that certain number is no where mentioned till the 15th of Qu. Elizabeth, as I ſhall preſently ſhew.

4. That thoſe which hold land upon the Commons are intitled to inter-common with the reſt [C].

In the 15th of Q. Elizabeth, viz. A. D. 1573 Aug. 2. a Conſtitution or By-law was made about theſe Commons, at an Aſſembly, wherein it was ordained, "That noe Free-burgiſſe ſhold put upon the Halfe-yere common ground within this Towne to feede but three hedd of greate cattle, or in leiue of everye of the ſaid three hedd ten ſhepe, upon paine to forfett for everye hedd 3 s. 4 d. And everye Forriner to forfett for everye hedd of cattle that ſhold be putt upon the ſaid Halfe-yere common to feede, Fyve ſhillings; which fynes weare apointed to be to th'uſe of the Towne."——To this By-law the following addition was made, Auguſt 6, 1627. "For the better reforming of the abuſes that had hitherto been uſed in the overfeedinge of thoſe half-yere comon groundes, as well by the free-burgiſſes over and above their ſteate, as allſoe by Forryners whoe had noe right to feede the ſame: And that the benefitt theirof cominge might be imployed for the uſe of the poore people within this towne: It was therefore ordered, That the Bailiffs of this towne for the tyme beinge, ſhould, from tyme to tyme, in wrightinge under their hands, nominate and appointe in each of the fower wardes within this towne 2, 3, or 4 free-burgiſſes, to dryve ſuch cattle as ſhould be put to feed upon the ſaid Half-yere common groundes contrarie to the ſaid Conſtitution, and to receive theſe ſeverall ſomes, viz. For everye hedd of cattle of everye free-burgeſſe over and above his three hedd appointed and allowed 3 s. 4 d. and of everye forryner for every hedd 3 s. 4 d. And, in caſe of refuſal of payment of thoſe fynes, to impounde the cattle. The ſaid fynes to be paid by the dryvers to the Bailiffs for the tyme beinge, within ten days after receipt thereof; and to be diſtributed by the Bailiffs and Aldermen, or the more part of them, amongſt the Pore of this Town."

The 15th of the ſame month, It was ordered, That all Hogs and Swine (except boars and ſucking pigs) that were ſuffered to go about the ſtreets and lanes of this Town; or, upon the Half-year common grounds, and did root and tear up the ſoil and graſs, ſhould be impounded; and every owner and owners thereof to pay 6*d.* for each.

But, at another aſſembly, May 25, 1629, theſe, and all other Conſtitutions and Orders made about the halfe-year common grounds, were repealed, and declared void; And a new one was made, importing, "That noe Free-burgiſſe ſhould at anye tyme hereafter betwene the Feaſts of St. Peter ad vincula called Lamas daye, and the Purification of the Virgin Marie, called Candlemas daye, yerelye, put into or upon the ſaid half-yere comon groundes to feede, but only Three hedd of great cattle, or in lieu of everye one of the ſaid three hedd Ten ſheepe; upon paine to forfett for everye hedd, over and above the ſaid three hedd, or ten ſhepe in lieu of every one of the ſaid three hedd lymited and appointed as aforeſaid, the ſome of 2 s. 6 d. And everye forryner to forfett and pay for everye hedd of cattle that ſhall at anye tyme be founde or putt upon the ſaid half-yere comon grounds between the feaſts aforeſaid, the ſome of 3 s. 4 d. All which forfeitures and ſomes of monie ſhould be levied, compounded for, receaved and diſtributed unto and amongſt the poore free burgiſſes of this Towne, their wives, widowes, and children, and not to be diſpoſed, leavied, or diſtributed to or for anie other uſe or purpoſe whatſoever. And for the better reforming the abuſes heretofore uſed in the overfeedinge of the ſaid Half-yere comon groundes, and that the benefitt thereof comeing might be duly employed and diſtributed; It was enacted by the Bailiffs, Aldermen, &c. That the whole Commonalty or Free-burgiſſes, i. e. all manner of perſons houſholders, dwelling within this borough, being ſworne to the King and the borough, and bearing ſcott and lott at all times as occaſion ſerves; yerely, upon the Monday next after the

By two other Conſtitutions, made in Auguſt 1633 and 1635, it was ordered, That there ſhould be a Heardſman choſen out of each ward, to keep and look after the freemen's cattle, in the half-year and whole-year common Ground; and to have for their pains 1 d. weekly, for every head of great cattle, and every ten ſheep they ſhall keep, to be paid by the owners of them (k). Theſe are all the Conſtitutions that have been made at any time about the Commons of this Town.

Some parcels of theſe Commons have been made ſeveral, or whole-year-land, at divers times, particularly the Lands about St. Anne's [E]; and ſome others. By which, and other inſtances among the Town-records, it appears, That the Bailiffs, Aldermen, Common-counſel, and Jury at the law-hundred courts, were enabled to diſcharge theſe lands of common of paſture.

And by certain original articles ſettled by Commiſſioners in 1549, it was ordered, That the Bailiffs, Aldermen, and Common-counſell, ſhall not at any tyme hereafter, alienate or ſell any lands, tenements, or hereditaments, appertaining to this Borough or Corporation, or make ſeverall, or ſell any Common or Commons, &c. without the hole aſſent, conſent, and agreement of the Bailiffs, Aldermen, and Common-counſell of this Town or Borough, or the moſt part of them [F].

This Privilege, as it hath been long managed, is a great hurt to many, and of advantage to very few. For it hinders the farmer from making ſuch due improvements as he might. And it only authorizes ſome of the worſt ſort in general to keep beaſts, for the ſake of a few weeks feed; and to ſtarve them, or to treſpaſs upon their neighbours, the reſt of the year: ſince the Commons are ſo ſurcharged, that the feed is gone in a very ſhort time.

It is alſo of benefit but to a very few, namely, thoſe who keep cattle: which is hardly one free-burgeſs in twenty. Whereas the majority and the poorer ſort do not reap the leaſt advantage from it. For the forfeitures that ſhould be diſtributed among the widows and orphans, are embezzled in a very unworthy manner, as appears by the account of one of the Treaſurers, which I ſhall give for a ſample of the reſt [G]. Beſides, very few of the Treaſurers ever give any account. It has therefore, as I am informed, been propoſed more than once, To let the Freee-burgeſſes leaſe them out to the Farmers for twenty-one years, or a leſs term, ſtill retaining the Property of them: which would raiſe a very conſiderable yearly ſum, that might be diſtributed amongſt the meaner of the Free-burgeſſes, or elſe be applied for the better maintenance of the Poor [H]. And conſidering the height of the Poor-rates in moſt of the pariſhes, and the great numbers of the needy and indigent which can ſcarce be tolerably ſupported; it would be a very great eaſe, and nothing could be more reaſonable. But things of a public nature or advantage are very ſlowly put in execution amongſt us.

There is a much more advantagious and valuable Common belonging to the Town, even a whole-year one, which the Free-burgeſſes ſeem now to ſlight and neglect, viz. Mile-end-heath. But when it was firſt granted to them, they took a particular care to hinder foreigners from commoning there, and alſo that it ſhould not be over-charged (l).

§ IV. Government of the Corporation.

THE moſt ancient Government of this Town, we may reaſonably ſuppoſe, was (like that of the generality of other Corporations) by a Port-grave [N], appointed by the King, ſo long as it continued a royal demeſne, and remained in the Crown. But when it came to be let to ferm to the Burgeſſes [O], particularly by K. Richard I. they were allowed to chuſe for Bailiffs whom they pleaſed out of their own body, and a Juſticier to adminiſter juſtice within the Burgh.

How theſe Bailiffs were elected in that, and the four following reigns, we have no account. But in the 46th of Edward III. ſome ordinances were made (o), by which we learn the manner of their Election, which was thus:

In the firſt place, The whole Commonalty choſe Four ſufficient men [P], and of good converſation, that had never been Bailiffs, one out of each ward [Q]; and being ſworn, they elected Five more out of each ward, that had never been Bailiffs, making up with themſelves Twenty-four: After taking an oath, they proceeded to the election of the two Bailiffs; which was in Michaelmas weeke.

Next they elected eight Aldermen, otherwiſe called Auditors; and two Chamberlains, anciently ſtyled Receivers. And, beſides them, there was a Town-clerk, and Serjeants.

In Michaelmas-week, the ſaid Bailiffs and Aldermen choſe ſixteen of the wiſeſt and moſt underſtanding people in the Burgh, whoſe names were entered on the Court-rolls. And thoſe ſixteen, jointly with the Bailiffs and Aldermen, had the management of the affairs of the Burgh, and made Ordinances and Conſtitutions for the good of the town. They were to meet at leaſt four times a year. And if any of the Burgeſſes had ſomewhat to propoſe, he was to deliver it to the Bailiffs in writing; and receive an anſwer at the next Aſſembly.

This form of Government continued, as far as I have obſerved, till Edward the IVth's reign; who directed in his Charter, That the Bailiffs and Aldermen, and the ſixteen perſons juſt now mentioned, ſhould chuſe ſixteen other perſons, viz. Four out of each ward, to be a Common Council [R]: Which Common Council ſhould have power to make reaſonable Ordinances and Conſtitutions for the good of the Burgh. And alſo, that the Bailiffs for the time being, ſome Lawyer [S], and four Burgeſſes; to be choſen and nominated in the ſame day and manner as the Bailiffs; ſhould be Keepers of the Peace within the Burgh. But, even as high as King Henry IV. upon record (p), they elected alſo four Claviers [or keepers of the keys of the town-cheſt] and two Coroners.

The ſecond Charter of K. Charles I. granted in 1635, made ſome alteration in this form of Government. For it incorporated the men and free-burgeſſes of Colcheſter by the name of Mayor and Commonalty: Directing, that they ſhould chuſe a Mayor and nine other Aldermen, ſixteen Aſſiſtants, and ſixteen Common-counſelmen, a High-Steward, a Recorder, and a common Clerk.

The firſt Charter of K. Charles II. ordered, that there ſhould be 12 Aldermen including the Mayor, 18 Aſſiſtants, and 18 Common-counſelmen. But his ſecond Charter reſtrained the number of Aſſiſtants and Common-counſel to 15 of each.

And King James II. leſſened yet more the number of them, by appointing that there ſhould be but 10 Aldermen including the Mayor, 10 Aſſiſtants, and 10 Common-counſelmen.

But the Charter of K. William and Q. Mary reſtored the ſame number as had been appointed in the firſt Charter of K. Charles II.

The other Officers of this Corporation, were The Steward of the Admiralty-Court: The Water-Bayliff, and Water-Serjeant: The Serjeants at mace, three, and afterwards four in number [T]: The Clerk of the market: Cryer: Ranger: Keeper of the Gaol. And, belonging to the Courts in particular, Counſellors, occaſionally, and 4 Attorneys.

The Mayors, and other Annual Officers, were elected the Monday after the Decollation or beheading of St. John Baptiſt, i. e. the firſt Monday after the 29th of Auguſt. The manner of election was thus: Such of the Free-Burgeſſes as payd ſcot and lot, or the major part of them, in common Hall aſſembled [U], nominated and returned two Aldermen to the bench of Aldermen: who, retiring into the Council, or Record-room, choſe one of the two to be Mayor for the year enſuing.

Next, for the Election, who were to chuſe two Juſtices of Peace, two Coroners, four Claviers, and a Chamberlain: The Free-burgeſſes did elect Four Head-men, one out of each [P] They were afterwards called Headmen. Each of them was to be a free-burgeſs, and an inhabitant of the reſpective wards for which they were choſen; and able to ſpend in lands, tenements, and hereditaments, 4l. a year, or be worth 40l. in moveables. And of every of the Five to be choſen by them, two at leaſt were to be of the Common counſel.

[Q] This Town is divided into 4 wards. 1. Head-ward, comprehends the pariſhes of St. Mary's, Lexden, H. [R] The firſt ſixteen were afterwards named Primum Concilium, and the latter Secundum Concilium, till Aug. 10, 1635, when theſe names were altered into thoſe of Aſſiſtants and Common Counſell; though the name of Common Counſel was uſed before. See Books of Aſſemblies, 30 Oct. 1598, &c.

Walſyngham, Sir Robert Cecil Earl of Saliſbury; Tho. Earl of Suffolk; Henry Earl of Holland; Sir Harbottle Grimſton; Earl Cowper, &c.

[T] There were only three in K. Edward IIId's time (Rot. Cur. 33 Edw. III. rot. 1.) but afterwards four: and a fifth was appointed in 1623, for the Execution of proceſſes and arreſts. They had formerly but 20 s. a year each, and a livery: but in 1731, 5 l. per ann. was ordered to be paid to each quarterly.

Chart. of K. Charles I.

Ward; who being ſeverally choſe and ſworn, nominated for their fellows Five free-burgeſſes out of each Ward: And they being alſo ſworn and aſſembled, (and, making with the Headmen, 24 in number) did elect

Two Juſtices of Peace: Two Coroners: Four Claviers: And a Chamberlain.

They were ſworn on Michaelmaſs-day, and all took the oaths of Allegiance and Supremacy, except the four Claviers.

The new Mayor, and the laſt year's Mayor, were alſo then ſworn Juſtices of Peace: ſo that there were always Four in the Burgh, beſides the Recorder, who was a perpetual Juſtice of Peace by his Office.

The Four Serjeants at Mace were elected on the Tueſday next after Michaelmaſs-day, in the very ſame manner as the Juſtices of Peace, Coroners, &c.

When any Vacancies happened in the Houſe they were thus filled.——If it was in the Common-counſel, the Free-burgeſſes, reſiding in the Town, and paying ſcot and lot, nominated two Burgeſſes; one of which the Mayor, Aldermen, Aſſiſtants, and the reſt of the Common-counſel for the time being, or the major part of them, choſe into the vacant office of Common-counſelman.

If the vacancy was among the Aſſiſtants, the ſaid ſcottant and lottant Burgeſſes, or the greater part of them, choſe one out of the Common-counſel into the vacant office of Aſſiſtant.

If the vacancy was among the Aldermen, the ſaid ſcottant and lottant Burgeſſes, or the major part of them, nominated two of the Aſſiſtants; and the Mayor, the reſt of the Aldermen then ſurviving, the reſt of the Aſſiſtants, not nominated, and the Common-counſel for the time being, or the major part of them, choſe one of thoſe two Aſſiſtants into the vacant office of Alderman.

On the Election-day of Bailiffs and Mayors, there uſed formerly to be a public dinner, for the Houſe, and the Electors. But as it generally ran to great expence, in lieu of it there was a certain ſmall ſum given to each of the electors [W]. However, on Michaelmaſs-day, the new Mayor, then ſworn in, gave a public Entertainment at the Motehall [X].

The Expences of this Government were ſupported by an Income of 500 l. a year, one year with another; ariſing from theſe ſeveral articles:

Reſerved rent in the leaſe of the ſeverals, 120*l.* per ann. clear. [But that eſtate is let to under-tenants for above 382 l.]

The reſt was, in a great meaſure, laid out in taxes, repairs, and other incidents.

For the regular management of the affairs of this Burgh, Courts were always holden in the Mote-hall. At firſt there ſeems to have been no ſtated days for them, as appears in the note [Z]. But the Charter of K. Edward IV. and the ſecond Charter of K. Charles I. directed, That Courts ſhould be held for perſonal pleas, proceſſes, real and mixed actions, &c. on Mondays and Thurſdays in every week: and for pleas of lands and tenements every Monday fortnight. Alſo, for matters relating to the Admiral-juriſdiction, every Thurſday.

And, upon many important occaſions, the Mayor, High-Steward, Recorder, Aſſiſtants, and Common-counſel, were wont to hold Aſſemblies in the Mote-hall; as to elect officers, make by-laws, &c. Five and twenty of them made a full Houſe, and thoſe 25 might make any act, ordinance, conſtitution, &c. in as full large and ample manner and form, and to all intents and purpoſes, as if the Mayor, and all the Aldermen, Aſſiſtants, and Common-counſel were then perſonally preſent (q). But without 25 no act could legally be performed: If there were not ſo many, they were diſmiſſed till a new ſummons [A].

[W] The cuſtom of a public Dinner ſeems to have been altered in 1599, to ſpare the town-revenues; when it was ordered, that, inſtead of it, the Chamberlain ſhould give the Floor 40*s.* for their dinner, and to the Electors 26*s.* 8*d.*—Aug. 6, 1624, he was directed to pay to the Free-burgeſſes of the Floor, 8*l.* to be divided into the four wards: And to the Electors 12*d.* a-piece, viz. 24*s.* and no more, for their dinner; of which it ſeems the Cuſtom had crept in again.—Aug. 29, 1636, he had orders to pay 10*l.* to the Free-burgeſſes for their Election-dinner. But in 1645, it was fixed at eight pence apiece, as it continued ever ſince. (Books of Aſſemblies.)

[X] For thoſe Entertainments they had great quantities of linen, and other conveniencies; and many pieces of plate given at different times, which in 1730 amounted to 298 ounces, but were all then (except a large gilt cup with a cover) laid out in buying a new Mace. (Ib. p. 264.)

[Y] Moſt of the certain Revenues belonging to this corporation, are now mortgaged to the heirs of Mr. Bernard the leſſee of the Severals.

[Z] For I find on the Rolls of K. Edw. I. Placita die Lune, Martis, Veneris, Sabbati; Eſſonia. And on later Rolls, the Entries are thus, Lune querele, Martis, Hundredum, [generally on a Tueſday, ſometimes on Monday] Jovis querele, Curia forinſeca [generally on a Thurſday, ſometimes on Friday] Veneris querele.

[A] Till October 17, 1659, the orders in the Books of Aſſemblies were ſigned by all the Houſe then preſent: But

If any of the Houſe, upon regular warning, did not appear at the Hall; or came after the door was ſhut; or refuſed to undertake the offices they were elected in; ſeveral fines were laid upon them, ſuitable to their degrees [B]; And, under the like penalties, they were obliged to appear in proper gowns at the Courts, and on Sundays and other Solemnities; for the honour of the Town, and for the greater ſtate, regularity, and magnificence [C].

Another piece of grandeur they had, which is now almoſt entirely forgotten: That is, the Bailiffs, and afterwards the Mayor, had a Chaplain, ſtyled the General or Common Preacher, or Lecturer: and the firſt was about the year 1564. He was generally ſome noted Preacher from Cambridge, choſen during the pleaſure of the Bailiffs [or Mayor] and Commonalty; and preſented to, approved, and licenſed by the Biſhop of London. His buſineſs was, to preach on Sundays in the afternoon, Wedneſdays in the forenoon, on the greater feſtivals, and on the faſt and fair days, coronation days, at elections, gaol-deliveries, &c. [D]. The names of them were as follows:

1580. Mr. Geo. Northye of Clare-hall.

1593. Richard Harrys, D. D.

Upon his reſignation, Thomas Ravis, and George Abbot, Biſhops of London, endeavoured to perſuade the Bailiffs, to have the Lecture preached by the Miniſters in the Town; who were "men of learning, integrity, and honeſt converſation; and whoſe maintenance was very ſmall." But the Magiſtrates adhered to their old way. (r).

1609. William Ames, B.D. fellow of Chriſt's Coll. Camb.

1610. William Eyre, B.D. fellow of Emmanuel-Coll. [*].

1619. Francis Liddal, M. A. of the ſame Coll.

1628. Richard Maden, B. D. of Magdal. Coll. Camb.

1631. William Bridge, M. A. of Emmanuel Coll.

1632. Richard Maden, again.

1635. John Knowles, M. A. fellow of Catherine-hall.

1639. Robert Harmer, M. A. of St. John's Coll. Cambr.

1648. William Archer of Halſtead.

1657. Owen Stockton, M. A. fellow of Gonvill and Caius, Coll.

1662. Richard Pulley, Rector of Much Fordham.

1668. Dr. William Cole.

1683. It was ordered to be preached by J. Edwards, W. Skelton, and Joſ. Powell, three of the beneficed Clergymen of this town.

1700. Dr. John Edwards was choſen Lecturer, at a ſalary of 50*l.* per ann.

At length, the office of a General Preacher dwindled into a few Sermons, preached by ſome of the Clergy in the Town, at the election and ſwearing of a Mayor, &c.

There are ſtill Lectures here on Sundays, preached by ſeveral Miniſters; but they are wholly ſupported by contributions.

SECT. V.

COLCHESTER is a Borough by Preſcription, and hath ſent Members to Parliament, upon record, even before the City of London itſelf: namely, from the 23d of Edward I. to the preſent Times [E]. All our charters are entirely ſilent as to the Elections of Burgeſſes; not the leaſt word being ſaid in them upon that point. The Returns were formerly indorſed on the Sheriff's Precept [F]; but, ever ſince Statute 23 Hen. VI. c. 15. have been made by Indenture between the Bailiffs (and of late between the Mayor) and the Sheriff of the County. Anciently, the Bailiffs ſealed one part with their own Seals (s), or with the Seal of their office (t): But, April 19, 1660, it was agreed, That the Indenture ſhould be ſealed with the common Seal of the Mayor and Commonalty (u); in whoſe names the Returns have been made ever ſince.

The Right of Electing the Repreſentatives for this Burgh, is in the Mayor, Aldermen, Common-Council, and Free-Burgeſſes, not receiving alms (w). Three ways there are, by which theſe Free-Burgeſſes acquire their Freedom, or Right of voting. Namely, 1. By Servitude; that is, By being legally bound to, and duly ſerving a ſeven years apprenticeſhip with a Free-burgeſs; and, at the end thereof, being ſworn and admitted before the Mayor it being found inconvenient, to ſpend a great deal of time in calling the ſeveral Gentlemen of the Aouſe to ſubſcribe their names, and ſcruples often ariſing concerning ſome Gentlemen ſubſcribing orders when their particular votes were to the contrary; Therefore it was ordered, That the Town clerk's name ſubſcribed to the Orders ſhould be as authentic and valid, as if they were ſubſcribed by every particular Gentleman of the Houſe. (Book of Aſſemblies. See May 20, 1660.)

[D] Their Maintenance at firſt was by Subſcription: but, in 1576, a Salary of 40*l.* per ann. payable quarterly by the Chamberlain, was ſettled upon them. In 1593, it was increaſed to 100 marks, viz. 50*l.* by patent, and 16*l.* 13*s.* 4*d.* by Subſcription. To that, in 1610, an addition of 10*l.* was made for a houſe. In 1620, the ſalary was raiſed to 100*l.* beſides the 10*l.* for a houſe. In 1662, it was reduced to 50*l.* but in 1663, an addition of 10*l.* was made thereto; and in 1668 another addition of 10*l.* (Books of Aſſemblies.)

and Common-Council, or one Alderman, paying 3*s.* 4*d.* to the Chamberlain, and 2*s.* 2*d.* to the Town-clerk. 2. By being the Son, or Deſcendent, of a Free-Burgeſs: This Deſcent is ſeldom, or never, traced higher than the Grandfather [G]. The 3d manner in which the Freedom of this Burgh is acquired, is, By being created a Free-burgeſs, though a Foreigner; that is, though not entitled thereto either by Birth or Service. This is a thing that hath been often practiſed: For there are in the Court-Rolls, in the Oath-book, and in the Books of Aſſemblies, numberleſs Inſtances of Foreigners admitted to their Freedoms, either for certain ſums of Money, or for Honour, or Services done to the Corporation.

Theſe Freedoms uſed to be conferred in the moſt public manner, at the Hundred, Lawe-hundred, and other Courts (x). But, in the laſt Century, the Mayor having, of his own authority, without conſent of the Common-Council, preſumed to make Foreigners free; In order to reſtrain that pernicious cuſtom, it was ordered at an Aſſembly, Octob. 16, 1654, That, from henceforth, no Foreigner ſhould be made a Free-burgeſs of this Town, Directly or Indirectly, nor any other, but only thoſe that were born free; or, by being bound apprentice, ſhould by their ſervice deſerve their Freedoms; without the conſent of the greater part of the Mayor, Aldermen, Aſſiſtants, and Common-Council. This method was ſo ſtrictly obſerved, that in 1694, Alderman Mott was disfranchiſed for ſeveral miſdemeanors; and, among the reſt, for making a perſon free without conſent of the Common-Council (y). And, July 6, 1697, the above Order was inforced, by another, which enjoyned, That no Perſon being a Foreigner, and not having a Right to his Freedom, ſhould be admitted a Free-burgeſs of this Town, without the conſent of the Free-burgeſſes aſſembled in the Common-Hall, or the major part of them (z). But, notwithſtanding this Order, Mr. John Raynham, Mayor, in 1705, two days before the Election of Repreſentatives for this Borough, admitted ninety-ſix Foreigners to their Freedoms, of his own authority; and ſwore them in privately without the Town-Clerk, who ought to ſwear Freemen publickly in the Moot-hall. Therefore in the controverted Election, in 1710, they were diſallowed by the Committee of the Houſe of Commons, who then reſolved, "That the "Mayor of the Borough of Colcheſter cannot "make Foreigners free of the ſaid Borough, "without conſent of the majority of the Al-"dermen and Common-Council (a)." However, the then Government of the Corporation being deſirous to preſerve theſe Freemen at any rate; At an Aſſembly, of the Mayor, Aldermen, Aſſiſtants, and Common-Council, July 17, 1711, they repealed the above-mentioned order of July 6, 1697; and, in the order made for that purpoſe, recited, That, "whereas of late years diverſe perſons had been ſworn and admitted Free-Burgeſſes of this Borough, ſome for Money paid to and for the uſe of the Mayor and Commonalty, and others in reſpect of ſome honour and ſervice done or to be done to and for the Corporation, without any antecedent Right, either by Birth or Service, contrary to the above-repealed order; ſo that great controverſies had ariſen, and were like hereafter to ariſe and continue by reaſon thereof: For the preventing of which, and preſervation of the peace and tranquillity of the Town for the future, They ordered, and enacted, That all and every perſon and perſons whatſoever that had been admitted and ſworn Free-burgeſſes of this Borough, by or before any Mayor of this Town for the time being, contrary to the order aforeſaid, and ſhould again take the uſual Oath of a Free-Burgeſs before the Mayor for the time being, ſhould be adjudged, deemed, and taken as duely admitted and ſworn: And, they declared them Free-burgeſſes of this Borough to all intents and purpoſes whatſoever, any order, uſage, act, omiſſion, proviſion, or reſtriction to the contrary in any wiſe notwithſtanding: But, that the ſwearing and admitting ſuch number of perſons to be free of this Town, as within ſome years paſt had been, might not be brought into precedent for the future, They further ordered, enacted, and declared, That if at any time or times hereafter, any perſon or perſons whatſoever were admitted or ſworn Free-Burgeſs of this Borough, having no antecedent Right thereto, either by Birth, or actual ſervice as an apprentice by Indenture, according to the good old cuſtom, ſuch ſwearing and admiſſion ſhould be ipſo facto void.——Moreover, that no perſon whatſoever ſhould be admitted and ſworn a Free-Burgeſs of this Borough in any other place than the Common-Hall of this Town; nor, before ſuch perſon had attained the full age of one and twenty years; unleſs by ſpecial order of the Mayor, Aldermen, Aſſiſtants, and Common-Counſell, in council aſſembled."

Soon forgetting the Clauſe of this Order, wherein they declared, "That, if, at any time "hereafter, any perſon whatſoever were ad-"mitted or ſworn a Free-Burgeſs of this Bo-"rough, having no antecedent Right thereto, "either by Birth, or actual Service, —— ſuch "ſwearing and admiſſion ſhould be ipſo facto "void;" at an aſſembly of the Mayor, Aldermen, Aſſiſtants, and Common-Counſell, to fill up the Houſe [H], after the filling up a few places, the Free-Burgeſſes then remaining came to the following Reſolution. "That the Freedom of this Borough might be ſold to ſuch perſons, as by the Committee of the Mayor, Aldermen, Aſſiſtants, and Common-Counſel, [H] That is, the Vacancies in the Aſſiſtants, &c. The Aſſembly ſummoned for this purpoſe, was only of the Burgeſſes paying Scot and Lot; and not of the Burgeſſes at large.—And this is ſaid to have been a contrivance to ſerve the purpoſe of the enſuing Election to Parliament, on the 24th of Auguſt following.

or Five at the leaſt, ſhould be agreed with, for raiſing Monies for defending the Rights, and defraying the neceſſary Charges, of the Corporation." Accordingly ſeventy-two Freemen were admitted, for ſuch ſums of money as by the Committee aforeſaid were agreed on. But, May 6, 1714, upon the Petition of William Gore and Nicolas Corſellis, Eſqrs. complaining of an undue Election and Return for this Borough, the Committee of the Houſe of Commons diſallowed of the Foreigners made Free in 1705, and 1713, and reſolved, "That the Right of making Foreigners (not having a Right of Freedom by Birth or Service) Freemen of the Borough of Colcheſter, is in the Mayor and Free-Burgeſſes of the ſaid Borough in Common-Hall aſſembled." And this is the laſt Reſolution of the Houſe of Commons: Notwithſtanding which, thoſe new admitted Freemen, and their deſcendents, have voted ever ſince.

When the Government of this Corporation came into other hands, it was thought neceſſary to create a number of Honorary Freemen, in order to counterballance the Foreigners admitted in 1705, and 1713. For that purpoſe, October 31, 1728, "at an Aſſembly of the Mayor, Aldermen, Aſſiſtants, Common-Counſel, and Free-burgeſſes, in order to fill up the vacancies of the Houſe; it was ordered and agreed by the Mayor and Free-Burgeſſes, That a number of Freedoms ſhould be ſold to raiſe a fund for defending the Rights and Privileges of the Corporation; and a Committee was appointed to aſcertain the number and names of the perſons to be admitted, and to agree with them for the ſums they ſhould pay at their admittance (b). In purſuance of which Eighty-three Freemen were made; and about ninety ſince.

The regular way of making Foreigners free, is, To call a common Floor, which conſiſts of above Fifteen hundred Free-burgeſſes, who are ſummoned by Proclamation made by the Serjeants in the ſeveral Wards, by order of the Mayor. If the Free-Burgeſſes give conſent, in a common floor, to the admitting any particular Foreigners, they may be admitted by the Mayor, and are good and legal Freemen.

The Sums of Money paid by Foreigners for their Freedoms, at different times, have been various, as appears in the Note [I].

Upon the whole, by obſerving the great numbers of Free-Burgeſſes created almoſt every year, (which are entered upon the Rolls, and in the Oath-book) born in the moſt diſtant parts of the Kingdom, and even beyond ſea; it is moſt probable, that they were not created for the ſake of their Votes, but that it was at their own motion, and earneſt deſire, for the ſake of the great Privileges and Immunities which a Free-Burgeſs of Colcheſter was antiently entituled to by Charter; namely, Exemption, all over England and the Sea-ports, from Toll, Pontage, Murage, and all other Duties and Impoſitions on their Goods and Merchandiſes [K].

It appears by ſeveral Inſtances, particularly in the Reign of King Edward III. That every Man born and baptized in this Borough had a Right to be Free of the ſame [L]: ſo that Birth, whether the Father was a Free-burgeſs or no, was then a Qualification for Freedom, though it might not be the only one.

There are alſo ſeveral Inſtances of Freemen disfranchiſed, or deprived of their Freedom, on account of ill-behaviour (c).

The Subſtance of the Oath taken by a Free-Burgeſs at his Admiſſion, in the earlieſt Times, was [M], That he would be faithful to his Majeſty N—— and his heirs, as to life and limbs; and alſo maintain and promote the intereſt of the Burgh of Colcheſter with his body and goods; that he would faithfully keep the

OF

BOOK II.

Containing a particular Account of the Place.

The ſeveral Pariſhes in Colcheſter.

THE whole Town, with the Liberties, is divided into Sixteen Pariſhes; whereof Eight are within the Walls; Four without; and Four within the Liberties. The Pariſhes within the Walls [A], are St. Mary's, St. Peter's, St. Runwald's, St. Martin's, Holy-Trinity, St. Nicolas's, All Saints, and St. James's, : Without the Walls; St. Botolph's (of which a little part lies alſo within the Walls) St. Giles's, St. Mary Magdalen's, and St. Leonard's, or the Hyth: And within the Liberties; Lexden, St. Michael's Mile-end, Greenſtead, and Bere-Church, or Weſt Doniland.

When the Diviſion of theſe Pariſhes was made, and the Churches built, we have no certain account.

That of St. Peter's was in being at the time of William the Conqueror's Survey (a); and the reſt were undoubtedly erected about the Xth or XIth Centuries, when the pious inclination of building Churches chiefly prevailed; or very probably ſooner, as This hath been always a conſiderable Town. Thoſe belonging to the Religious Houſes were not built till thoſe Houſes were founded, that is till about the XIIth Century, and ſome later.

The Chuches are moſtly built with old Roman Bricks, and the rubbiſh of other ancienter edifices; and are in general but mean, except St. Mary's and St. Peter's, newly rebuilt, and St. James's, which is ſpacious, and regular, and handſome on the inſide. That belonging to St. John's Abbey was large (b) and undoubtedly elegant; but not the leaſt foot-ſtep of it remains at this day: Nor is it known exactly where it ſtood, except by tradition. That of St. Botolph, now lying in ruins, was very large (c), and the weſtern front adorned with a great deal of neat workmanſhip, and with two Towers at the north-weſt and ſouth-weſt corners: Both, the great weſtern door, and the arches between the pillars, ſtill ſtanding, are in the right Roman ſemicircular form, not in the Gothic taſte. The Steeple of All-Saints Church is very neatly built with flints. That of St. Mary's might have been made much better and handſomer than it is, by erecting a neat Spire on the top of the Tower, which would have had a good effect, and been ſeen at a great diſtance. But the work falling into clumſy hands, it was made both heavy and as ugly as poſſible.

Of the Livings in general.

As the Churches are mean, ſo is likewiſe the maintenance of the Clergy. In the times of Popery, the fees for Confeſſions, Obits, Exequies, Soul-maſſes, and ſuch other Perquiſites and Offerings, which were then bountifully and readily paid, afforded the Incumbents a ſufficient, nay a plentiful maintenance; and withal conſidering their obligation to remain unmarried, they lived well, even though their certain allowance was ſmall (d). But thoſe ſeveral Advantages falling off at the Reformation, which removed their ſuperſtitious foundations: And moſt of the Pariſhes in this Town having but very little land, whereof Tithes can ariſe; (ſome of that, too, Tithe-free [B]) and no other Fees or Perquiſites

[A] By the Pariſhes within the Walls, I mean thoſe whoſe Churches ſtand within the Walls. But the Bounds of moſt of them are not confined therein, but extend without, and even run a conſiderable diſtance into the Country.

[B] Particularly the Lands wherewith the Chapel in the Caſtle was anciently endowed. (See above, in the account of the Caſtle, Book I. Ch. ii. § 2.) And the Site of St. John's Abbey, &c.

left, but ſuch as accrue from Marriages and Burials [C]; by that means, moſt of the Livings are become ſo inconſiderable, that One is worth but 25*l.* a year certain; another 15*l.* another 9*l.* another 6*l.* 10*s.* and finally another but 20*s.* [D]. But theſe three laſt are augmented.

Several methods have been attempted, at different times, to remedy this inconvenience, and render thoſe Livings a tolerable maintenance. One hath been, by endeavouring to unite ſome of the Pariſhes together. Thus we find, that January 23, 1580, it was agreed at an Aſſembly (e), " That the Pariſhes within the Li-" berties of Colcheſter ſhould be united into " Syxe or Fyve Pariſhes, ſo as the Bailiffs and " Commonaltie might have the Preſentation " after every Vacation; and yf by Councell that " might be obteyned, then a Byll to be pre-" ferred into the Parliament-houſe at the charge " of the Towne, otherwiſe not to deale there-" in."

And, April 13, 1658, a Committee was appointed to conſider and adviſe about the uniting of the Twelve Pariſhes within this Town and the Suburbs thereof, in reference to the maintenance of Miniſters.

Again, June 28, 1660, It was ordered, That the Twelve Pariſhes within this Town and the Suburbs, might by the Parliament be united into Four Diviſions, viz. St. Peter's, St. Runwald's, and St. Martin's in the firſt Diviſion; St. Mary's at the Walls, Holy Trinity, and St. Giles's in the ſecond; St. Nicolas, All Saints, and St. James in the third; And St. Leonard's, St. Mary Magdalen, and St. Botolph's into the fourth: And that the Recorder ſhould be intreated to move the Parliament for the uniting of the ſaid Pariſhes reſpectively as aforeſaid; and to give directions what was neceſſary in or about the attaining thereof (f). But this deſign came to nothing.

Another method taken, to raiſe a tolerable maintenance for the Clergy of this Town, hath been by a Rate upon Houſes and Stocks. Thus we find, Feb. 23, 1646, it was ordered (g), " That all and every the Tenants, Farmers, " or Occupiers of Meſſuages and Tenements " within this Towne and the Liberties thereof, " (that had not Lands belonging to them which " paid Tithes) ſhould yearly pay and allow after " the rate of Twelve-pence in the pound, ac-" cording to the Rent they paid for their houſes, " towards the maintenance of ſuch godly or-" thodox Miniſters that ſhould preach the word " of God, and adminiſter the Sacraments, ac-" cording to the Laws of this realm, or ordi-" nances of parliament: and that the Mayor " ſhould write to the Recorder, to entreat him " to procure an Ordinance of Parliament for " the confirming thereof." Accordingly an ordinance paſſed in 1650 (h), intituled, An Act for the more frequent preaching of the Goſpel, and better maintenance of the Miniſters in the Town of Colcheſter; wherein it was enacted, " That it ſhall and maie be lawful to and for " the Mayor, Recorder, Aldermen, and Com-" mon-Council of the ſaid Town of Colcheſter " in Common-Council aſſembled, to have power, " and by the ſaid Act authorized, from time to " time to tax, rate, and aſſeſs, not exceeding " the yearly ſum of Six hundred pounds, upon " the Rents, or true yearly value of all Houſes, " Shops, Ware-houſes, Cellars, Stables, and all " other Lands and Tenements whatſoever with-" in the ſaid Town and the Liberties thereof, " excepting the four Hamlets of Lexden, Mile-" end, Greenſtead, and Bere-Church, the Tax " not to exceed One Shilling per ann. in the " pound, as the ſaid Houſes, Shops, Ware-" houſes, Cellars, Stables, and other Lands and " Tenements, are or may be worth to be lett " and leaſed yearly: and ſo for every Ten Shil-" lings, Six-pence per ann. And where any " perſon or perſons ſhall be known to imploy " a great Stock in trade, the ſaid Mayor, Re-" corder, Aldermen, and Common-Council, " ſhall and may, and are by the ſaid Act au-" thorized to aſſeſs ſuch perſon or perſons for " his or their ſtock employed as aforeſaid, for " every Hundred pounds, Three Shillings and " Four-pence."

By virtue of this Act, the Mayor, Aldermen, and Common-Council, made a Rate, or Aſſeſſment, on the Houſes and Stocks, &c. according to the proportions above-mentioned (i): Thoſe Rates were collected by ſome of the Inhabitants in each pariſh, and the Money depoſited into the hands of a Treaſurer, who paid, quarterly, the ſum of One hundred pounds a-piece to four Miniſters, appointed to officiate in the whole Town (k). But this proviſion ceaſed, or was ſuppreſſed at the Reſtoration.

At an Aſſembly, October 7, 1700, it was agreed, That Six-pence in the pound ſhould be laid upon Houſes in this Town, towards the maintenance of Miniſters in the ſaid Town; but it did not take effect.

The only effectual Augmentations to the Livings in this place, and the moſt likely to laſt, are owing to the munificence of Mr. Henry Batchelor of Colcheſter, yeoman; and the Rev. Mr. Moſes Cook, late Rector of Hedingham-Sibill, in this County. The former, by his Will bearing date Feb. 3, 1646-7, " bequeathed to " three Preachers in Colcheſter, the ſum of " Threeſcore pounds a year, to be equally paid " and divided between them by quarterly pay-" ments, ſo long as they ſhould continue preach-" ing in Colcheſter: Which threeſcore pounds " (as Mr. Batchelor goes on in his ſaid Will) " is to be paid out of all thoſe my Rents and " Profits of all thoſe my Copyhold Lands and " Tenements in South-Minſter and Woodham-" Ferris, by Mr. Thomas Waterhouſe, Mr. " William Aylett, Mr. John Furlye junior, and " William Stilliman, whom I make Feoffees in “ truſt to receive the Rents and Profits of the ſaid Lands, and to diſpoſe of the ſame according to this my Will. And, in caſe any of the ſaid Three Miniſters ſhall dye, or depart the Towne of Colcheſter, and ſhall not inhabite and continue preaching in Colcheſter as aforeſaid, then my will and meaning is, that the ſaid Thomas Waterhouſe, William Aylett, John Furlye, and William Stilliman, or the greateſt part of them, ſhall chooſe any one, two, or three Miniſters in the roome of him or them ſo dying or departing, and not continuing common Preachers in the Towne of Colcheſter: And the ſaid Threeſcore pounds to be devided and payd equally to ſuch Miniſters as ſhall from tyme to tyme be choſen by my ſaid Feoffees, or the greateſt part of them, or their Executors ſhall chooſe, ſo long as they ſhall continue common Preachers of God's word in Colcheſter [E].”

As for the Rev. Mr. Moſes Cook's Benefaction, it is compriſed in the following clauſe of his Will. —— “ I give alſo to my wife the Rents and Profits of the Farm called Huntmans, in Foxearth, during life, and from and after her deceaſe I give and deviſe the ſaid Meſſuage of Huntmans, with all the Barns, Houſes, Stables, Buildings, Yards, Meadows, Lands, Paſtures, Woods, and Wood-grounds thereunto belonging, now in the tenure of George Parſey, to the Governors of the Bounty of Queen Ann for the augmentation of the maintenance of the Poor Clergy, and to their Succeſſors for ever, In confidence that the ſaid Governors will pleaſe to order the Sum of Eight hundred pounds out of their Revenue to be added thereto and laid out for the augmentation of the Rectory of St. James's, with any other three Churches in the large Towne of Colcheſter which the Right Reverend the Lord Biſhop of London ſhall appoint.”

The Pariſhes of St. Peter's, St. Martin's, St. Giles's, and St. Runwald's, do partake of Queen Anne's Bounty; but we ſhall give a more particular account thereof under thoſe reſpective pariſhes.

SECT. I.

St. MARY's at the Walls.

THIS Pariſh took its name from the Church, which is dedicated to St. Mary the Virgin. 'Tis generally called in Records St. Mary's at the Walls, ad murum, or muros; in contradiſtinction to the pariſh of St. Mary Magdalen, and becauſe the Church ſtands near the South-weſt corner of the Walls of the Town.

The Site of it was part of the Barony of the Biſhop of London (l); for which reaſon the Rectory hath been all along in the collation of the Biſhops of that See: And it is ſubject to them, and their Commiſſaries: being wholly exempt from the Archdeacon's juriſdiction, to whom it pays neither Procurations nor Synodals. It ſtands charged 10*l.* for Firſt-fruits in the King's books: And pays 4*s.* 6*d.* to the Biſhop for Procurations, only when he viſits.

The pariſh contains ſixty-two Houſes, Tenements, or Families within the Walls, and 174 without; and runs, Weſt and South-weſt, about a Mile into the Country: but moſt of the land is Half-year ground. The chief part of it lyes within the manor of the Corporation; except what was anciently the Biſhop of London's eſtate; and except alſo the north ſide of Crouch-ſtreet (from the late General Price's Stables to the Spittle or Almſhouſes) that is within the manor of Lexden, and held of the ſame by copy of Court-roll. But two Houſes about the middle thereof, now poſſeſſed by the widow Spencer's heirs have been made free.

In 1692, three hundred and ninety-ſix perſons were rated in this pariſh to the Poll-tax.

The ſtreets and lanes in this pariſh, are, Crouch-ſtreet, Head-ſtreet, except the North-eaſt part from Culver-lane, to the Corner of the High-ſtreet; part of the South-ſide of Culver-lane as far as Mr. Seaman's walk; the greateſt part of Gutter-ſtreet, and of Sir Iſaac Rebow's walk; St. Mary's, and Church, Lanes; Butt-lane, Maldon-lane, except a few houſes in each,

[E] The Lands in Woodham Ferris are not Copyhold, but they pay a Quit-rent of ſix Shillings. They conſiſt only of Nine Acres, on which there is a Houſe and a Barn. The farm goes by the name of Creep-hedge-farm. —— The Lands in Southminſter, known by the name of Leigh-heath, Leigh-houſe, Leet-hine, or Leet-hyth, are Copyhold, at the will of the Lords; (the Governors of the Charter-houſe) and pay a Quit rent of 2*l.* 10*s.* 9*d.* ½. They contain only Seventy-four acres. But the rent of the whole Eſtate is now ſo much fallen, that it doth not amount at preſent to above 35*l.* per annum, which, with repairs, taxes, &c. doth not yield to the Three preaching Miniſters that enjoy it now, above Eight or Nine pounds a year, a-piece, one year with another. —— The Feoffees that have been admitted to the Copy-hold, are as follows. June 26, 1647, William Aylett. May 23, 1670, William Aylett, ſon of the former. June 10, 1671, Tho. Waterhouſe, and John Furlye. —— Tho. Waterhouſe, Richard Daniel, Robert Carr. June 1, 1704, Tho. Ruſe, Benjamin Cock. —— Joſeph Thurſton, Eſquire. May 26, 1730, Benjamin Cock, ſon of the former. June 1740, Daniel Cock, Gent. — Martin, his ſon, the preſent and only Feoffee.

It was ſome time before this Benefaction was ſettled according to the intent of the Giver. For I find the following entries in the Aſſembly-books. Jan. 16, 1653-4, It was ordered, That Mr. Chamberlain ſhould forthwith lay out and diſburſe, towards the charges of the ſuit for the recovering of Mr. Batchelor's gift to the three Miniſters within this Town, Ten pounds, which is to be repaid by the Feoffees upon the receipt of the firſt Rent, after the Gift is recovered. June 2, 1656, It was ordered, That —— ſhall take care and inquire after the buſineſs of Mr. Batchelor's Gift, and to certify the Houſe how the Caſe ſtands, and what they think fit to be done concerning the ſame, at the next meeting of this Houſe. June 28, 1660, It was deſired, That Mr. Recorder be intreated to endeavour to ſettle Mr. Batchelor's Gift upon the Town, ſo that the Rents of the Lands given to the three preaching Mniſters may be diſpoſed of according to the will and intent of the donor.

which are in the pariſh of Holy-Trinity; and the upper Balkon-lane.

The Church ſtands pleaſantly in the higheſt part of the Town; and, as it is now, was rebuilt in the year 1713, and beginning of 1714. The old Church ſtood more in the middle of the Church-yard; the North-wall of it running parallel with that of the ſteeple; which then was at the North-weſt corner of the Church. How it was demoliſhed, you have an account above (m). It remained in ruins till the year above-mentioned; when, at the inſtance of the Rev. Mr. Robert Middleton then Rector, and the encouragement of Sir Iſaac Rebow, Knt. Joſeph Thurſton, Eſquire, and other principal Inhabitants of the pariſh, the repairing of it was undertaken: But this not being found eaſily practicable, it was new built as it now ſtands. The petition to the Lord Chancellor for obtaining a Brief, bears date July 15, 1709 (n) [F]. And the Brief being ſoon after obtained, there was collected on it in the years 1710, 1711, &c. the ſum of 1595*l.* 13*s.* 6*d.* to which were added the Benefactions of the Right Reverend Father in God Henry Compton Lord Biſhop of London, Sir Iſaac Rebow, Knt. his ſon Lemyng Rebow, and Joſeph Thurſton, Eſquires, who gave Fifty pounds a-piece (o). But there were conſiderable deductions [G]. However, the main article, Money, being thus collected together, Mr. John Price, an eminent architect of Richmond in Surrey, was applied to; and he gave in, on the firſt of April 1713, a draught and eſtimate amounting to 1250*l.* but, after ſome abatements and alterations, he agreed for 1154*l.* The Agreement thus made was immediately put in execution; for the work was begun in May 1713, and carried on with ſo much quickneſs and alacrity, that the new Church was opened on the 25th of March following, with divine Service, and a Sermon on Pſalm cxxii. 1. It is a plain neat Church, but not ſo ſubſtantial as ancienter edifices of that kind. The Dimenſions of it will beſt appear by an abſtract of the Eſtimate of the Scantlings and other particulars given in the note [H].

Beſides the ſum of 1154*l.* paid, as above, to the Builder, there was 180*l.* expended in pewing the Church, and repairing part of the Steeple, which was raiſed by a Rate of four ſhillings and ſix-pence in the pound on the inhabitants (p). Paving the Steeple and Alley coſt moreover ſixty pounds eight ſhillings and ſeven pence: which was raiſed by a Rate of eighteen-pence in the pound (q). The marble Font coſt three pounds ten ſhillings, and the Cover to the ſame ten ſhillings (r). Next the Church-yard was levelled, in the year 1714 (s), and handſome gravel Walks made all round the Church, planted on each ſide with lime-trees; which being kept cut, are very ſhady and pleaſant in ſummer: And they being the beſt Walks about the whole Town, were reſorted to by people of the beſt faſhion. The charge of making them, and planting the Trees, came to ſixty-five pounds ſeventeen ſhillings and four-pence (l). In 1729 the ſteeple was raiſed Twelve foot with brick, as it now is; the charge of which with leading, &c. amounted to two hundred thirty four pounds nine ſhillings and two-pence [I], I paſs over ſome leſſer ſums laid out on the Church about the ſame time [K]. There is here but One Bell.

Within the Chapel of St. Thomas the Martyr in this Church (u), a Chantry was founded and well endowed by Joſeph Elianore, in 1348, of which we ſhall give a full account below (w). There belonged to it a little Houſe, of one room above and one below, called the Chapel or Chantrie-houſe; which ſtood adjoining (x) to the North ſide of the Church, in length a-croſs the preſent walk been tween the Church and the Parſonage, and reaching from the place where is now the South-gate of the Parſonage-garden to the North-door of the Church. Some perſons not long ago remembered it ſtanding.

In 1514 there was a Deſign of uniting the Churches of St. Mary's and St. Nicolas, of which You will find an account under St. Nicolas, from Pope Leo's Bull obtained for that purpoſe.

The Parſonage-houſe of St. Mary's ſtands on the North ſide of the Church, directly behind, and in ſome reſpects too near it. But it hath a beautiful Proſpect, on the Weſt and North-weſt, for ſeveral miles into the Countrey. It was, I preſume, beat down, or at leaſt very much damaged during the Siege. The two Parlours, with the two Chambers, and Cloſet, over them, were built at the charge of Mr. Joſeph Powel, Rector. The Weſt end was rebuilt in 1739, by the preſent Incumbent, who hath alſo made ſome other improvements. The Barn ſtood formerly within the Garden, in the very place where is now the Avenue to the Houſe. It was removed to where it ſtands at preſent by Mr. Powell; who pulled down at the ſame time Two Houſes in St. Mary's-lane, adjoining Eaſterly to the little one ſtill ſtanding there, and ranging even with the ſame. The Front of them came out as far as the Pales of the Barn-yard do now, if not further (y).

The Glebe belonging to this Rectory, is in Ten ſmall different parcels, and ſome at a conſiderable diſtance from the others; which is very inconvenient, and renders it not ſo valuable as it would otherwiſe be.

For a Liſt of the Incumbents, I ſhall in this pariſh, as I deſign to do in the reſt, refer the reader to Mr. Newcourt's Repertorium Eccleſiaſticum: Only I ſhall continue his Liſts down to the preſent time, and inſert ſuch particulars as may not have come to the knowlege of that moſt uſeful and induſtrious man.

I intended at firſt to have ſet down, at the end of each Pariſh, an Account of the Monuments and Monumental Inſcriptions in the reſpective Churches: But fearing leſt they ſhould appear tedious to ſome readers; and imagining on the other hand, that a total omiſſion of them might be reckoned a defect: I have therefore choſen to place them together in the Appendix.

In the late Crouched-Friers within this pariſh, formerly reſided the family of Stephens (i). John Stephens, Eſq; Counſellor at Law, and Juſtice of Peace and of the Quorum, died 10 Febr. 1620. His Son, John Stephens, Eſq; alſo a Counſellor at law, died April 28, 1625 (k). The heirs of that family are ſeated at Clower-wall in Glouceſterſhire. The Family's arms, are; Per Chevron, azure and ermine; in chief, two eagles diſplayed or. Creſt, an Eagle towering, or, feeding on a lion's jambe eraſed, Gules.

Harbottle Grimſton Eſq; having bought the ſite of the ſame Houſe, June 22, 1637, of James Barker, made it alſo the place of his reſidence. He was the ſon of Harbottle Grimſton, born at Bradfield near Maningtree in this County, created a Baronet Novemb. 25, 1612, and a Free-burgeſs of Colcheſter in 1625 (l). He was alſo a Knight. Harbottle, the ſon, was bred up to the law, and being choſen one of the repreſentatives for this Burgh in 1639, and 1640, ſpoke vehemently againſt thoſe grievances which were then complained of. But when he ſaw worſe Grievances thruſt into the room of thoſe which had been pretended to be redreſſed with ſo great an effuſion of blood; eſpecially after the murder of K. Charles I. and his Houſe here having been burnt and much damaged during the ſiege, he quitted his place of Recorder of this Town, and went and travelled beyond ſea (m). Afterwards, promoting the reſtoration of K. Charles II. he was choſen Speaker of the Healing Parliament April 15, 1660 (being one of the Repreſentatives for this Burgh, which he continued to repreſent till his deceaſe) and in the November following was conſtituted Maſter of the Rolls; which honourable office he diſcharged with great abilities and integrity, till his death in 1683. The preſent Lord Viſcount Grimſton, is Sir Harbottle's great grandſon, by his eldeſt daughter, Mary, the wife of Sir Capel Luckyn, of Meſſing-hall, Bart. The Arms of Grimſton, are, Argent, on a feſſe ſable, three mullets of ſix points pierced argent, in the dexter chief one ſpot of ermine.

In a very good Houſe, juſt within Head-gate in this pariſh, lived alſo the late Sir Iſaac Rebow. His anceſtors came originally from the Low-Countries, and employed themſelves in the Bay-Trade, and Merchandizing; whereby they acquired a plentiful fortune [N]. On the 27th of March 1693, Sir Iſaac was knighted by King William, whom he had then the Honour to entertain in this Houſe; as he did afterwards on the 29th of October following, and the 19th of October 1700. Sir Iſaac was one of the Repreſentatives for this Borough, in all the Parliaments of K. William, in the four firſt of Qu. Anne, and the firſt of K. George I. He was alſo High-Steward, and Recorder; and died in September 1726. His ſon Lemyng Rebow Eſq; died 6 Septemb. 1717. And one of his grandſons Iſaac Lemyng Rebow Eſq; who had this Houſe, having married Mary, daughter of Matthew Martin Eſq; and dying in 1735, left only one ſon, named Iſaac Martin, born Nov. 28, 1731. The arms of Rebow, are, Gules, two long bows bent and inter-laced in ſaltier, or, ſtringed Argent, between four Beſants, each charged with a fleur de lis, azure.

The learned Phyſician Dr. Gliſſon was alſo an Inhabitant of this pariſh for ſeveral years (n). But he removed afterwards to London, where he died in 1677 (o).

SECT. II.

St. PETER's.

ADJOINING to St. Mary's on the North and Eaſt is the Pariſh of St. Peter's. It begins, on the Eaſt of St. Mary's, at Culver-Lane in Head-ſtreet, taking the North-ſide of that lane as far as Mr. Jerem. Daniel's houſe; And, on the ſouth of the ſame lane, the walk to Mr. Seaman's ſtables, the yards belonging to the White-hart and to Mr. Daniel, and alſo part of Mr. Whaley's.——On the north ſide of the High-ſtreet, it goes as far as the Queen's-head gate-way.—Then at the Weſt end of the High-ſtreet beginning at Mr. Dawes's houſe, it takes in all North-hill;—and Duck lane, as far as Mr. Thomas Woodroffe's houſe excluſively.—Without North-gate; the Middle-burgh, except two Houſes between Water-lane and the river, which are in Lexden;——And all North-ſtreet, or Cow-lane, excepting alſo two tenements on the Weſt ſide which are in the pariſh of Lexden; and at the further end of that ſtreet on the Eaſt, it is parted by a little Lane from Mile-end. The Baulkon-hill, and the Lower Baulkon-lane, are alſo in this pariſh, with a few parcels of meadow, paſture, and garden-grounds, about twenty acres in all.

This pariſh lies in the Manor of the Corporation [O], except Twelve Tenements on the Eaſt-ſide of the Middle-burgh, which are within Lexden-Manor.

Many houſes have been of late, pulled down in this pariſh, as well as in other parts of the town: However, it ſtill contains two hundred and ninety-eight tenements, or families.

In 1692, the number of Perſons rated, in St. Peter's, to the Poll-tax, was Seven hundred and ſeven.

In this pariſh, ſouth of the Church, is the Exchange, anciently known by the name of the Red-row; which, whilſt the Bay-trade flouriſhed amongſt us, uſed to be daily frequented by great numbers of ſubſtantial Merchants: And over it was the Dutch Bay-Hall. On the ſame ſpot, was a Building firſt erected about the year 1369, by one William Reigne, or Reyne; which uſed to pay a Quit-rent of Three Shillings a year to the Town (p). Being grown [O] Though the Manor of the Corporation is at preſent almoſt unknown and loſt; yet I am perſuaded that there is ſuch a thing. At the time of William the Conqueror's Survey, a great part of this Town was a Royal Manor, and there were in it abundance of Burgenſes Regis, who paid Conſuetudinem, i. e. Quit-rents to the Crown, for their Houſes and Lands. [See Domeſday.] In the Firſt of K. Richard I. this Manor was ſtill in the King's hands, as appears by the Great Roll; [Mag. Rot. 1. Ric. I. 2. a. Eſſex & Hertf. and T. Madox's Hiſtory of the Exchequer, p. 486.] And I think he granted it ſoon after to the Burgeſſes, with ſome Liberties and Immunities, for which they agreed to pay a yearly Fee-farm of 42 l. which in thoſe days was a very conſiderable ſum. From that time the Burgeſſes became Lords of the Soil, as far as the King had it before, and could grant it to them. So that "the Manor of this, as moſt other great Towns, is "held from the Crown by the Corporation, by virtue of "ancient Grants," (as the learned Browne Willis, Eſq; expreſſes himſelf in ſpeaking of Bedford, Notit. Parliam. vol. i. 2d Edit. p. 14.) The Bailiffs and Commonalty thus become Lords of this Royal Manor, have granted, for many years, ſeveral parcels of the Soil; to be held at the will of the Bailiffs and Commonalty by the Rod, as is evident from theſe among many other inſtances.

very ruinous, it was repaired, about the beginning of K. Henry VIII's reign, by John Dowalt Prior of the Monaſtery of the Holy Croſs here. In conſideration whereof, the Bailiffs and Commonalty granted it, anno 1517, to that Houſe for ever (q). But, upon the diſſolution of the Monaſteries, it came again into the hands of the Corporation. Archbiſhop Harſnet's Library was at firſt placed at the Eaſt end of it: But, in 1668, the two Chambers wherein it uſed to ſtand (and from whence it was removed in 1664) were lett to Jonas Whale a baker, with the room under the ſtair-caſe, for twenty-one years: Upon condition, that he ſhould take up the floor that was then in the Red-row, and pave it entirely with good and ſubſtantial Purbeck-ſtone. And with liberty to erect a building on the waſte, now taken down. And pay, at the ſame time, ten ſhillings to the Chamberlain, towards ſetting up the King's-Arms in the Red-row, where they formerly were (r).

Near this Exchange, in the High-ſtreet, ſtands a Pump, called King Coel's Pump; which is repaired by ſome of the neighbours, who are thence ſupplied with water [P]. But there is no proof of the Well's being of ſo ancient a date as King Coel.

There was formerly a Water-mill near North-bridge, which is now down (s). Hence we learn the reaſon why Middle-mill was ſo called; viz. becauſe it ſtood between this, and Eaſt-mill.

Thomas Duke of Norfolk had lands in this pariſh in Queen Elizabeth's reign, named Senſdowne (t).

The families of Sayer, and Browne, made anciently a conſiderable figure in this pariſh.

John Sayre, Alderman of this town, died Feb. 14, 1509. John Sayer, his ſon, died in the year 1563 (u). George Sayer, ſon of this laſt, was an Alderman of this Corporation (w); and one of the Bailiffs, in the years 1540, 1546, 1552, 1555, 1559, 1563, 1567. He died 19 May, 1577, poſſeſſed of ſeveral eſtates in this county [Q]. By his firſt wife, Agnes daughter of Thomas Weſtden (which died in Novemb. 1556) he had four ſons and three daughters. His ſecond wife was Frances daughter of Thomas Sammon, by whom he had no children (x).—Richard his eldeſt ſon died in September 1610, having married firſt Alice Spooner, by whom he had one ſon, who left no iſſue: and ſecondly Ellen Lawrence, widow, by whom he had a daughter named Jane (y).—George, the ſecond ſon, who departed this life 3 July 1596, married Roſe, daughter of William Cardinall, of Great Bromley, by whom he had, among other children,—Thomas, ſeated at Bowton in Suffolk.—His younger ſon, Sir George, was of Colcheſter, and Aldham; and dyed in 1630. He married Dorothy, daughter of John Higham, of Norfolk, buried at Aldham, in 1651, aged 84, and had by her theſe ſix children. 1. John. 2. Anne. 3. Suſan. 4. Higham. 5. Francis. 6. Richard.—John Sayer Eſq; the eldeſt ſon, took to wife Heſter, daughter of Robert Honywood of Kent Eſq; and had by her George, who was knighted; and a daughter named Dorothy, married to John Barnaby of Colcheſter. John Sayer Eſq; dying in Auguſt 1658, aged about 70, was buried at Aldham. Sir George Sayer, Knt. his ſon, married Jane . . . . . by whom he had Elizabeth-Charlot, baptized 13 April, 1647, and Eſther, born 29 September, 1650. He dyed 11 July, 1650, and is buried at Aldham, with an epitaph.

The Arms of Sayer, were Gules, a chevron between three martlets, argent. A chief ermine. Creſt, an Arm ſleeved, cuffed, and ſcarfed, or and gules; holding in the hand proper a wolf's head eraſed, vert.

Next, as to the Browne-Family: Stephen Browne of Middleſex, had iſſue, Stephen, Hugh, and Walter. This laſt was ſeated at Higham in Suffolk; and by Eleanor Turner had Thomas Browne of Colcheſter, who married Agnes daughter of John Tuke of the ſame place. His ſon and heir, John Browne, married firſt Florentia daughter and heir of John Chartſey; and ſecondly Helen daughter of William Knightſbridge. By the firſt he had William—Thomas—Richard and John. Clementia—Margaretta—and Catharine, wife of William Symnell.

Richard, the third ſon, was a Knight, and one of the Clerks of the Green-cloth. He ſeated himſelf at Dartford in Kent.

William, the eldeſt ſon and heir, married Margaret daughter of Robert Leeche, by whom he had ſix ſons and two daughters. He died Jan. 20, 1572, and Margaret his wife died the 24th of September following (z). Robert, the ſecond ſon, fixed at Colcheſter, and was twice married; 1ſt. to Anne daughter of George Sayer aforeſaid, Eſq; by whom he had Robert, that died with-

By this his ſecond wife, he had William, his ſon and heir, who married Margaret daughter of John Prettyman of Thorndon in Suffolk, Gent. and had iſſue Robert, who was aged ſixteen in 1634 — and a daughter named Roſa (a).

The Arms of Browne, were, Gules, a Griffin ſejant, or; a Chief indented, or and ermine. Creſt, On a Torſe, or and gules, a Falcon proper, beaked and bellied, or; ſeizing on a fowl's jambe eraſed at the thigh top, or.

The Church of St. Peter's conſiſts of a tyled nave or body, and two aiſles (b). And the Chancel hath a north Chapel. The Tower ſtood between the Church and Chancel, ſupported by large pillars, till 1758, when it threatning ruin to the Church, it was taken down. Then the Church was thoroughly repaired with the help of a Brief; and the Tower afterwards built at the weſt end. In it is a good ring of eight Bells. In the year 1692, this Church was very near being thrown down by an Earthquake, as Mr. Robert Dickman then Vicar, hath noted in the Pariſh-Regiſter [R]. But to return; the Church of St. Peter's is looked upon as the principal in the Town, wherein the Epiſcopal and Archidiaconal Viſitations are held; and where the Mayor and Commonalty go to divine Service, on Sundays, and other ſolemn occaſions [S]. There is in it an Organ, the only one in Town.

This Church was in being before the Norman Conqueſt, or Acquiſition. It was held, in Edward the Confeſſor's reign, by two Prieſts, for a ſmall quit-rent (c): And there were adjoining, or belonging, to it ſome parcels of ploughed land, and meadow, and a mill. But, after the Conqueſt, Robert Fitzralph of Hatinges, claimed three parts of it, and Eudo Dapifer had the fourth (d). In whom the Patronage of it originally was, we do not find. But, after the foundation of St. Botolph's Priory, it was given to that Convent, and continued in their gift as a Rectory till the year 1318. But, in that year, the Prior and Canons petitioned Richard Newport Biſhop of London, to appropriate the ſame to their Priory, ſetting forth, That, by reaſon their profits, penſions, and portions were unjuſtly detained; that more contributions were impoſed upon them than uſual; that the charges of their hoſpitality were immoderate, on account of the great concourſe of people to the town and caſtle of Colcheſter; and by reaſon of the grievous ſcarcity, which, for two years paſt and more, had miſerably afflicted the whole land; they were greatly in debt.—The Biſhop dying before he had conſidered of their petition, they applyed themſelves to Stephen Graveſend, his immediate ſucceſſor; who being thoroughly ſatisfied with the contents of their petition, did, on the 16th of January 1318, appropriate this Church, with its appertenances, to the ſaid Prior and Convent, and their Succeſſors, to be converted to their own uſe, and be for ever poſſeſſed by them, reſerving a power to himſelf to ordain a Vicarage here, and to endow it with a convenient portion according to the revenues of the Church (e). And from thenceforth, the Priors and Canons preſented to it as a Vicarage.

Upon the diſſolution of the Monaſteries, K. Henry VIII. granted to Sir Thomas Audeley, in the year 1536, the ſite of St. Botolph's Priory, &c. and the Advowſons of the Pariſh-Churches of St. James, St. Peter, St. Martin, and Mile-end Colcheſter (f). Sir Thomas gave them to his brother Thomas, who was ſeated at Bere-Church within the Liberties of this Corporation: And the three firſt continued in his poſterity [T] till after 1700, when Henry Audeley Eſq; ſold them to Biſhop Compton, who intended to have ſettled them upon his Biſhopric of London. But not doing it, his Executor, General Hatton Compton, ſold them to Biſhop Robinſon; and St. Peter's and St. Martin's continued in the gift of his widow Mrs. Emma Robinſon, till her deceaſe. The Advowſon of them belongs now to Bowater Vernon Eſq;

Before the Reformation, there was a Chantry in this Church, founded by Richard Heynes: And a Gild of St. John's, called Jeſus Maſſe; of both which an account will be given below (g).

There are two Sermons on Sundays in this Church; and Prayers on Wedneſdays and Fridays, and ſome Holidays, at eleven o'clock: When the Revenues, or the Congregations, were a little better, here uſed to be Prayers every day.

This Church was rated in the King's Books 10*l.* for Firſt-fruits, and 1*l.* for Tenths: From both which it was diſcharged by the Act 5th of Queen Anne (h).

In the year 1574, Nicolas Clere clothier, and William Hall woollen-draper, both inhabitants of St. Peter's, enfeoffed John Pye one of the Bailiffs, Thomas Turner one of the Aldermen of this Town, and ſeveral others, in lands, called Chamberleynes and Sprotts, in the pariſh and feilds of Great Horkeſleigh: and alſo in ſome tenements called Pages, and a croft of land thereto

[R] Memorandum,

That on Thurſday September 8, 1692, there happened about two of the Clock in the afternoon for the ſpace of a Minute or more an univerſal Earthquake all over England, France, Holland, and ſome parts of Germany: And particularly it was atteſted to me by the Maſons that were then a plaiſtering the Steple of St. Peter's in this Town, and upon the uppermoſt Scaffold, That the Steple parted ſo wide in the midſt, that they could have put their hand into the crack or cleft, and immediately ſhut up cloſe again, without any Damage to the Workmen (who expected all would have fallen down) or to the Steple itſelf. Moſt of the Houſes here and elſewhere ſhook, and part of a Chimney fell down on North-hill; and very many who were ſenſible of it were taken at the ſame time with a Giddyneſs in their heads for for ſome ſhort time. In witneſs of what is here related I have hereto ſet my hand.

adjoining, called Pagiſcroft, and a garden called Sprunt's-garden, all in Great Horkeſleigh; and ſaid in one place to contain forty acres or more, though it is not ſo much now;——in Truſt (i). They have been poſſeſſed ever ſince by the Incumbents of this Church; and are now enjoyed by the preſent Vicar (k).

The Vicar hath alſo Three acres of Paſture in King's Meadow; and a field of ten acres formerly called Barbors grove, both lying in Mile-end, given by John Bryan. And an acre of Glebe in North-ſtreet, named the Golden acre: Beſides the little piece without North-gate, on which formerly ſtood a tenement, as mentioned in Mr. Newcourt (l).

In the year 1719 Biſhop Robinſon augmented this Living with 200 l. to which were added 200 l. of Queen Anne's Bounty, of which the Vicar receives the intereſt. Notwithſtanding which, this Vicarage affords no Income proportionable to the Duty. In 1707, it was certified to the Governours of Queen Anne's Bounty to be but 35*l.* per annum certain; the beſt part of which is the endowment of the Lands abovementioned, lying in the pariſh of Great Horkeſley.

On the eaſt-ſide of the Church-yard, and adjoyning thereto, is the Vicarage Houſe, handſomely rebuilt by the preſent Incumbent, the Rev. Mr. William Smythies. There is behind it a little garden.

SECT. III.

St. RUNWALD's.

EASTWARD of St. Peter's, and adjoyning to the ſame in the High-ſtreet, is this Pariſh of St. Runwald's; ſo named from the Church, which is dedicated to that Saint. It is written different ways, as St. Rumbald, St. Rumbold, St. Romwold, or Rumwold (q), and ſometimes St. Runwald.

As this Saxon Saint is not much known, it will be proper to give ſome account of him; and we have none but a legendary one. He is ſaid to have been ſon to a king of Northumberland, by a Chriſtian daughter of Penda king of Mercia. Being born at King's-Sutton, in Buckinghamſhire, as ſoon as he came out of his mother's womb, he cryed three times, I am a Chriſtian. Then making a plain confeſſion of his faith, he deſired to be baptized, choſe his godfathers, and his own name Rumwald. He alſo directed, with his fingers, the ſtanders-by to fetch him a great hollow ſtone for a font, which ſeveral of his father's ſervants tried in vain to bring, as much above their ſtrength; till the two Prieſts, his deſigned Godfathers, did go and fetch it eaſily. Being baptized, he diſcourſed for three days of all the common-places of Popery, and having confirmed the truth of them (as the Legend pretends) he bequeathed his body to remain at Sutton one year, at Brackley two, and at Buckingham ever after. This done, he expired, and was buried in the place of his appointment; but he was chiefly honoured at Boxley, in Kent (r).

To return: This little pariſh, the leaſt in Colcheſter, except St. Mary Magdalen's, ſtands in the heart of the town, and is the beſt ſituated of any for Trade. It begins, on the South-ſide of the High-ſtreet, at Mr. Jeremiah Daniell's houſe mentioned above in St. Peter's, and reaches thence eaſtward as far as the houſe inhabited by —— Hooker. Culver-Lane is its ſouthern boundary.—On the north-ſide of the High-ſtreet, it begins at the eaſt end of Mr. Bernard's houſe, and extends from thence eaſtward as far as the Shoulder-of mutton-Ale-houſe. It hath alſo eight houſes or dwellings in Angel-lane: And five in Magdalen-ſtreet. The whole number of houſes or tenements it contains, is ſixty-two. In the year 1692, two hundred and ſeventeen perſons were rated here to the Poll-tax.

This Pariſh lyes in the Manor of the Corporation; and the Butchers Shambles, and other Buildings erected on the waſte, pay rent or Acknowlegements to the Mayor and Commonalty.

In this Pariſh ſtands the Burgh's Court of Judicature, commonly called the Moot, or Mote, Hall, from the Saxon word mot-heal, a council-houſe, or place of Aſſembly [U]. Here the Courts are held, and all the public affairs of the Town tranſacted, as is related above under book I. Ch. v. § 5. The whole edifice contains, the Mote-hall itſelf; and, north of the ſame, a large room; over which is the Freemens chamber, where Entertainments are made upon Michaelmas-day, when the new Mayor is ſworn in; and meetings are held upon particular occaſions. Out of the large Room below is a leſſer one incloſed, wherein the Records of the Town are kept. Adjoining to it is a Play-houſe.

Partly under, and partly adjoining to this Hall, is the Town-gaol; for the confinement of debtors, as alſo of malefactors. But part of it is now lett into ſhops.

Almoſt oppoſite to this Mote-hall ſtands the Houſe whereon is the famous Date 1090, concerning which ſo much hath been written (s). 'Tis newly rebuilt; and, before it was ſo, the Front was judged to be between two or three hundred years old; but the inner parts were much ancienter, nay reaſonably deemed to be as ancient as the time of Eudo Dapifer [W]; by whom it is ſuppoſed to have been originally built, as well as the Mote-hall. For there were ſeveral arched paſſages in and about it, built in a very ſtrong and elegant manner, which ſhewed not only ſigns of antiquity, but of grandeur. And there are ſome parts of the Mote-hall built in the ſame taſte.

In this pariſh alſo ſtands a Public Building, erected about the year 1590; of which the Upper part was formerly a warehouſe for wool and wool-yarn: And the lower is uſed for a fruit, butter, poultry, and leather-market. In this lower part, till of late years, was held a conſiderable wool-market, on Tueſdays; concerning which an Order, or By-law, was made June 2, 1595; and renewed and confirmed June 23, 1651; January 4, 1680, March 21, 1720-1, and September 29, 1732 (t), but now diſuſed (u).

The Church ſtands inconveniently, and much in the way, in the middle of the High-ſtreet. The Body of it is of one ſmall pace, and built of a mixture of brick and ſtone. But the Chancel is wholly of brick, and ſeems more modern than the reſt. Adjoyning to the Chancel is a north-aiſle, or rather a Chapel; which, we find (w), was dedicated to St. Mary. In the middle of the Church ſtands a little wooden Turret, rough-caſt with hair-mortar; formerly it had a leaded Spire [X], which, being decayed, was taken down. Here is but one Bell. The Church-yard is at a diſtance from the Church, on the Weſt-ſide of Angel-lane.

The Patronage of this Church hath all along been in the family of Tey, or de Tey; which flouriſhed for many generations in divers parts of this County [Y], particularly at Layer-marney and Birch (x). And is now in the worthy owner of Botingham-hall, which was part of the Teys eſtate.

The Rector of this Pariſh had anciently a Parſonage-houſe in North-ſtreet, or on North-hill [Z], as is evident from a paſſage in the Oath-book [A]. And, from a Preſentment in the year 1476 [B], it may juſtly be inferred, that this Pariſh had ſome tenements in the ſame ſtreet. From the year 1544 till 1760, this Church was held by Sequeſtration. For though it was valued at 7 l. 13 s. 4 d. in Henry the Eighth's time, when the General Survey of all the Livings was made, in order to ſettle the Firſt-fruits and Tenths; at preſent it hath nothing certain but the tithes of about ſeven acres of land in the Borough-field, and the intereſt of 600 l. of Qu. Anne's Bounty.

Roger . . . . . . was Rector in 1296 (y).
John . . . . . . was Rector in 1375 (z).
John Faucett, Rector in 1529 (a).
He is by Mr. Newcourt called William.

St. MARTIN's.

WE come next to the Pariſh of St. Martin's; which on the ſouth is bounded by St. Runwald's; on the weſt by St. Peter's; on the north by the Town-wall, and the meadows next to the river which are in St. Nicolas and All-ſaints; and on the eaſt by the pariſh of St. Nicolas. It contains the greateſt part of St. Martin's-lane, and Angel-lane, formerly called Eaſt and Weſt Stockwell-ſtreets: As alſo the eaſtern part of Duck-lane, as far as Mr. Thomas Woodroff's houſe incluſively: And

[Y] Robert de Teye had an eſtate in this pariſh in the year 1356. (Rot. Cur. 40 Edw. III. rot. 6.)

The ſame Robert de Teye, [or rather his Father] had lands in Fordham, Aldham, and Fering. (Inquiſ. 11, 13, and 34 Edw. III. p. 66. and Eſc. 23 Edw. III.)

William de Teye was a Benefactor to the Priory of Lees. (Inquiſ. 13 Edw. III. p. 68.)

John Teye, Eſq; had very great poſſeſſions in this County. (Rot. Cur. 37 Hen. VI. rot. i. et Inquiſ.)

Henry Teye, Eſq; was Sheriff of Eſſex, in the 4th of K. Henry VII. and again in the 16th of the ſame reign, being then a Knight (Fuller's Worthies, in Eſſex, p. 344.) He died Sept. 9, 1510. (Inquiſ. N° 59.)

Sir Thomas Teye was Sheriff of this County, in 1521: As was Thomas Tay, Eſq; in the 24th of Q. Elizabeth. (T. Fuller, as above, p. 345.)

[Z] North-hill was anciently called North-ſtreet, as is undeniably manifeſt from ſeveral Inſtances in the Oath-book, and the Town-rolls.

the Quakers Alley (made within the memory of man) Ball-Alley, and part of Buckleſbury-lane.

The number of houſes, tenements, or families in it, is One hundred and ſeventeen.

In 1692, Two hundred and ſeventy-nine Perſons were rated here to the Poll-tax.

There are not above Four acres of Land in this Pariſh, beſides a few Garden-grounds. By that means the Revenues of the Living are inconſiderable. They conſiſted, till of late, only of the intereſt of 600 l. of Queen Anne's Bounty, which it obtained by rotation; and of ſome voluntary contributions. But with that bounty-money was purchaſed, in 1764, a farm in Ardley; and the Church having been repaired, divine ſervice is performed in it every Sunday. There never was any Parſonage-houſe, or Glebe, belonging to the Rector [*]. In 1691 all the Lands rated in this pariſh to the Land-tax, were,

A Moore of 3 l. }
A Meadow of 3 l. } per annum [C].
Another Meadow of 3 l. }

This Pariſh is within the Manor of the Corporation, from which a few Leaſeholds are held; but anciently ſuch Eſtates were held of the Corporation by Copy of Court-Roll.

Eaſt and Weſt Stock-well-ſtreet in this Pariſh, take their names from a certain Spring riſing in a little Lane between thoſe two ſtreets, called Stock-well, which hath been a common Well from time immemorial (b). In 1670, the Mayor and Commonalty, by their Indenture bearing date Auguſt the 15th, demiſed and granted for five hundred years, at the yearly rent of one penny, to Alice Lambe, Spinſter, that Well or Fountain called Stockewell, ſituate in the common ſtreet and waſte ground in the pariſh of St. Martin's Colcheſter, and ſo much of the waſte ground on the north and weſt ſides of that well, as might be ſufficient for incloſing and fencing in of the ſaid Well for the prevention of danger; To the intent, that the ſaid Alice Lambe ſhould ſet up a Pump in that Well, and permit and ſuffer the Neighbourhood thereabouts to pump and take water there for their neceſſary uſes; they contributing and paying to the ſaid Alice Lambe, her executors, or aſſigns, their competent ſhares and proportions towards the charge and maintenace, and repair of that Well and Pump, and of the fences thereof (c).

The Church of St. Martin's ſtands between Eaſt and Weſt Stockwell-ſtreet, or Angel and Bear-lanes; the Church-yard extending to both. This Church conſiſts of a Nave, and North Iſle, both tyled. The Chancel is only of one ſingle pace. The top of the Belfrey was damaged during the Siege (Fothergill's and Rainſborough's Forts lying that way) and ſtill continues in a ruinous condition. There is in it only one Bell; hanging a little way from the ground. The Living was in Mrs. Robinſon's gift; as may be ſeen under St. Peter's.

Henry Tothe (not Toche as Mr. Newcourt has it) was Rector of St. Martin's in 1327 (d).

Peter Pake, not mentioned by Mr. Newcourt, was Rector of this pariſh in 1329 (e).

Gilbert Moyſe Rector in 1392 (f).

SECT. V.

HOLY TRINITY.

THE pariſh of Holy Trinity is bounded on the weſt, by that of St. Mary's; on the ſouth, by St. Giles's; on the eaſt, by part of the ſame pariſh, and of St. Botolph's, and St. Nicolas's; And on the north, by part of the pariſhes of St. Nicolas, St. Runwald, and St. Peter. . . . . . Culver-lane, from Mr. Whaley's houſe to the Corner of the Lion-walk or Cat lane, is its Northern boundary: As the ſame Mr. Whaley's houſe and garden, and the bottom of the late Sir Iſaac Rebow's gardens, and thence croſs the Town-wall and Gutter ſtreet, as far as the extremity of the late Serjeant Price's gardens, terminate it on the weſt, and part of the ſouth; And, on the reſt of the ſouth, Mr. William Boys's houſe, and yard. Cat-lane, and thence over the Town-wall as far as the ſign of the Leopard, are its eaſtern bounds. So that it contains part of Culver-lane; all Trinity-ſtreet, the weſt ſide of Cat-lane, the lane by the Almshouſes; and part of Sir Iſaac Rebow's walk, of Gutter-ſtreet, of Black-boy-lane, of Stanwell-ſtreet, and of Lodder-lane. It has alſo ſeveral parcels of Land; which, according to the Survey taken of them by the Pariſhioners, and entered in the Pariſh-book, amount to Sixty-nine acres.

In the year 1692, a hundred and eighty-nine perſons were rated here to the Poll-tax.

The preſent number of Houſes or Tenements in this pariſh, is One hundred and fourteen.

It is within the Manor of the Corporation; from which a few Tenements are held by a twenty-one years Leaſe: But anciently they were held by the Rod, in the nature of Copyholds.

The Church, which is dedicated to the Holy Trinity, ſtands in Trinity-ſtreet; and conſiſts of a Body, and ſouth-aiſle, which is alſo continued the whole length of the Chancel: They are both tyled. The Tower is boarded at the top, and hath in it but one Bell.

Bere-Church, alias Weſt-doniland, was many years a Chapel of eaſe to this Pariſh, and the Rectors of Holy Trinity were inſtituted to it with that Chapel annexed. But in the year 1536, the Lord Chancellor Audeley having obtained the Manor of Bere-Church-hall, and fixed his brother Thomas there, was deſirous of converting the Chapel of that place into a parochial Church. For that purpoſe he procured the conſent of William Jaye, then Rector of Holy Trinity, and of the Abbot and Convent of St. John's, patrons both of the Church and Chapel, to ſeparate them one from another; having firſt obtained the King's Licence in order thereunto. And by way of recompence to the ſaid William Jaye (who then averred, he made not Forty-three ſhillings a year of the profits of that Chapel) the Lord Chancellor Audeley ſettled on him, and his ſucceſſors for ever, certain Meſſuage, Lands, and Hereditaments in Ardley and Dedham, or one of them [about Sixty acres in all] called Porters: and a portion of Tythes in Buers St. Mary's, being Ten ſhillings, parcel of the poſſeſſions of the late diſſolved Priory of St. Botolph's (b).

This Church obtained alſo in 1739, the benefit of 200 l. of Queen Anne's Bounty, jointly with 200 l. part of a 1000 l. Legacy left by the Rev. Mr. Brooke, for the Augmentation of five ſmall Livings in the gift of any Biſhop, Dean and Chapter, or College. With thoſe 400 l. and a ſum added by the Rev. Mr. Lidgould the Rector, there was a Farm purchaſed at Walton in le Soken by the Governours of Queen Anne's Bounty, and ſettled for ever upon this Living.

The Patronage of this Church was, and continued in the Abbot and Convent of St. John's till their Suppreſſion. Upon that it came to the Crown, and remained in the gift of the Lord Chancellor, till June 27, 1702; when George Earl of Northampton obtained it (with St. Nicolas and St. Leonard in this Town, and the Vicarage of Ewell in Surrey) from Queen Anne, in exchange for the Rectory of Cherncote, alias Serncote, in Wiltſhire: And, the 19th of December following, conveyed them to his uncle Dr. Henry Compton, Biſhop of London. This good Biſhop, being Viſitor of Balliol-college, had often declared, in the hearing of his nephew and executor General Hatton Compton, that he deſigned to leave thoſe Advowſons to the College; but died without having fulfilled his intent. After the Biſhop's death, the Executor endeavouring to perform what the Biſhop, to his knowledge, intended; did diſcover, that the conveyance of the abovementioned Churches to George Earl of Northampton was invalid and ineffectual, inaſmuch as they were conveyed as Vicariages, being in realities Rectories. This being ſignified to George Earl of Northampton, he obtained a ſecond Grant of Queen Anne, dated May 18, 1713, of the Rectories (not Vicariages) of St. Nicolas, St. Leonard, and Holy Trinity in Colcheſter: And, on the 5th of July 1714, the ſaid Earl, and his kinſman the Hon. Hatton Compton, Eſq; above-mentioned, executor of the laſt Will of Dr. Henry Compton Biſhop of London, conveyed thoſe three Rectories to Balliol College.

After the Church of St. Mary's had been laid in ruins, as is above related; this Church of Holy Trinity was held by Sequeſtration by the Rectors of St. Mary's, and ſerved for a place of Divine Worſhip to both Pariſhes. The Rev. Mr. Middleton held it in the ſame manner, till his deceaſe in 1734. But then Dennis Alanſon, B. A. obtained it from the Crown, and was inducted April 26, 1735. He dying February 4, 1735-6. The Rev.

Charles Lidgould, M. A. Rector of Little Bentley in this County, was preſented by Balliol-College.

John Vivian, M. A. 30 Janu. 1766, per mort. Lidgould. Balliol Coll.

The Rector of this pariſh hath now no Parſonage-houſe. But, from the year 1349 to 1508, the Bailiffs and Commonalty uſed to grant to the Rector of this pariſh, generally during his life, a Meſſuage for his Rectory or Dwelling-houſe, oppoſite to the Church-yard; which was Copyhold, and held of them by the rod, at will; as appears by the entries below, taken from the Oath-book [D]. That Meſſuage, I gueſs, is now incorporated into thoſe brick-houſes which ſtand at the Weſt-end of the Church in Trinity-ſtreet.

This Pariſh had the honor of giving Birth to, and alſo of being the Seat and Reſidence of, the moſt learned Dr. William Gilberd, [E] author of the Book De Magnete, or of the Load-ſtone. And here it will not be improper to give ſome account of that great man. He was the ſon of Hierom Gylberd, Gent. born at Clare, in Suffolk, admitted a Free-burgeſs of Colcheſter in 1553 (o), and ſome time Recorder of the ſame (p). His great grandfather, Thomas Gilberd, born at Hinticliſham in Suffolk, was alſo made a Burgeſs of this Town in 1428 (q). Dr. W. Gilberd was born in the year 1540 (r), and ſtudied in both our Univerſities. Afterwards he travelled into foreign countries; where, probably, he had the Degree of Doctor in Phyſic conferred upon him, for he doth not appear to have taken it either at Oxford or Cambridge. At his return, being famed for his learning, great knowledge in Philoſophy, and admirable ſkill in Chemiſtry, he became a Member of the College of Phyſicians, London; and alſo chief Phyſician to Qu. Elizabeth, who had ſo high a value for him, that ſhe allowed him an annual penſion, to encourage him in his ſtudies. He was alſo chief Phyſician to K. James I. In 1600 he publiſhed his book, De Magnete, magneticiſque corporibus, & de magno Magnete Tellure, Phyſiologia nova, Lond. 1600. fol. 'Of the Magnet, (or Load-ſtone) and 'magnetical Bodies, and of that great Magnet, 'the Earth.' He alſo left in manuſcript, De Mundo noſtro ſublunari Philoſophia nova, i. e. Of our ſublunary World, which was publiſhed at Amſterdam, 1651 4°. from a MS. in the Library of Sir William Boſwell, Knt. He likewiſe invented two moſt ingenious and neceſſary Inſtruments for Seamen, to find out the Latitude of any place without the help of the Sun, Moon, and Stars; made public by Tho. Blondeville at London, 1602, 4°. Dr. Gilberd died Novem. 30, 1603, and was buried in the Chancel of this Church, where there is a Monument for him. By his Will, he gave all his Books in his Library, his Globes, Inſtruments, and Cabinet of Minerals, to the College of Phyſicians, London. His Picture is in the Schools-gallery at Oxford, which ſhews him to have been of ſtature tall, and of a chearful countenance. He had four brothers, Ambroſe——William, a Proctor in the Arches.——Hierom——and George (s).

SECT. VI.

St. NICOLAS.

ST. Nicolas's is the next Pariſh in order after Trinity. It joins to it, and to St. Runwald's, on the weſt; to St. Botolph's on the ſouth; to All-Saints, on the eaſt; and to part of this laſt, and to St. Martin's, on the north.——And it contains Part of the High-ſtreet, and of Culver-lane; Part of Wire-ſtreet, and of St. Martin's-lane; the eaſt ſide of the Lion-walk; the George-lane, and St. Helen's-lane; the Quaker's-yard; and the Alms-houſes in Buckleſbury-lane [F]. In all which there are an hundred and fifty-four houſes or tenements.

By the Terrier taken in 1610, it appears, that there belonged then to this pariſh above twenty-two acres of land: But they have been moſtly invaded by other Pariſhes; ſo that it retains at preſent only a piece in the Lion-walk, and a few gardens in Culver-lane, and St. Helen's-lane.

One Advantage it hath, viz. That ſtanding conveniently, as it doth, in the High-ſtreet; it partakes, with St. Peter's and St. Runwald's, of a greater ſhare of Trade than any other.

In 1692, Three hundred and thirty-three Perſons were rated here to the Poll-tax.

This Pariſh lyes within the Manor of the Corporation; Only two Tenements in St. Helen's-lane, formerly parcel of the poſſeſſions of St. John's Abbey, are held of the Manor of Weſt-Doniland, at the will of the Lord (t).

In St. Helen's-lane in this pariſh ſtands the Chapel of St. Helen, of which we ſhall give an Account below (u).

Not far from it in Buckleſbury lane, ſtands alſo the Preſbyterian Meeting-houſe, which was erected in the year 1693: And the new-built Independent Meeting, near Eld-lane.

There is an Alms-houſe, in Culver-lane in this pariſh, for Four poor perſons, founded and endowed by Ralph Finch; of which you'll have a full account in Book III. ch. 2.

The Church of St. Nicolas ſtands on the ſouth-ſide of the High ſtreet, about the middle of the Town. It conſiſts of a Body, or Nave, tyled, and a ſouth-aiſle leaded. The Tower ſtands about the middle of the Body of the Church, being partly built on the north-wall. In it are Five Bells, and a Clock with a Dial projecting out into the ſtreet, which occaſions This to be vulgarly called the Dial-Church. On the top of the Tower there is a ſmall Bell in a lantern, for the Clock. About ſixty years ago, the Tower being grown ruinous, a workman from London was employed to repair it. Accordingly he began; but, one day, as he was gone to dinner, the Tower fell upon the Body of the Church, and the Chancel, and beat the roof of both in. In 1721, the weſt-end of the Church was repaired, and new-pewed, at the charge of 68 l. But the eaſt-end, and the Chancel, ſtill continue ruinous. A new Belfrey, built with timber and boards painted, was erected in 1729, in the manner deſcribed above, of which the charge amounted to 43 l. (w). There are prayers in this Church daily at three o'clock in the afternoon; and one Sermon on Sundays.

[E] So he writ his name; and not Gilbert, as it is generally written by others. His own Houſe in this pariſh, anciently called Lanſeles, and Tymperley's, or Tympernell's (Old Taxation) is the ſame as Serjeant Price the late Recorder of this Borough lived in, and now belongs to Thomas Clamtree, Eſq; George Horſeman, and Frances his wife daughter and heir of Roger Tymperley, ſold it in 1539 to Richard Weſton, with a croft of an acre and a half, gardens, and 3 rentaries thereto adjoining, lying in Trinity and St. Mary's. Rot. Cur. 31 Hen. VIII. rot. 14.

[F] The particular Number of Houſes, or Tenements in this pariſh, ſtands thus. In the High ſtreet; nineteen on the North, and ſeventeen on the South-ſide, beſides the late Mr. C. Saunders's houſe, now the Rev. Mr. Kilby's. Eleven in Culver-lane, excluſive of R. Finche's Alms-houſes: One in the Lion-walk: Three in the Church-yard: Seventeen in Wire ſtreet, Two in St. Martin's lane: Eleven in the George-lane: Fifty-one in St. Helen's-lane: Eight in the Quakers-yard: And the ſix Alms-houſes in Buckleſbury-lane. That is, in all, a hundred and fifty-four Houſes or Tenements.

This Rectory has been held many years by Sequeſtration, as it is at preſent.

The Rector hath a pretty good Parſonage-houſe in the High-ſtreet, cloſe to the weſt-end of the Church. That part of it which joyns to the Church, and ſtands over the paſſage into the Church-yard, was repaired by the Pariſh in 1695, as appears by an inſcription on the top of that paſſage. Beſides the Rent of this Houſe, the Rector hath at preſent no other certain Revenue, but depends upon Contributions.

There was, in 1514, a Deſign of uniting this Church with that of St. Mary's, as appears by the Note below [G].

SECT. VII.

ALL-SAINTS or ALL-HALLOWS.

THE Pariſh of All-Saints, ſo named from the Church, which is dedicated to All the Saints in general, comes next in order. On the weſt, it is bounded by St. Nicolas's; on the ſouth, by St. Botolph's; on the eaſt, by St. James's, and part of St. Botolph's; and on the north, by Mile-end. It comprehends a good part of the High-ſtreet; namely, on the north-ſide of it, from Mrs. Duffeild's houſe incluſive, to Eaſt-gate, and on the ſouth-ſide of the ſame, from the ſign of the Sea-horſe to Mr. Wegg's ſtable-yard: Moreover it contains part of Queen-ſtreet, and of Culver-lane. The number of houſes or tenements therein, is only a hundred and fourteen, becauſe the Buildings do not ſtand ſo cloſe as in other parts. But it hath ſeveral parcels of Land, in which the quantity of acres returned in the year 1595 was one hundred and ninety-five, and in 1599, an hundred and forty-three.

It is within the Manor of the Corporation, which receives Quit-rents for buildings and encroachments upon the waſte. But ſome houſes in Culver-lane are within the Manor of Shaw's.

In 1692, Two hundred and eighty-eight perſons were rated in this pariſh to the Poll-tax.

The Caſtle is extraparochial, as hath been obſerved above in the Deſcription of it; but it is taxed in this pariſh, together with Sheep's-end field, and the Caſtle-Bailey.

Sir John Shawe, who diſtinguiſhed himſelf by his attachment to the Royal cauſe during Oliver Cromwell's Uſurpation, lived in this pariſh. He was the ſon of John Shawe of Colcheſter, Gent. by Mary his wife daughter of —— Luſkyn, of Ardley (x). Sir John being brought up to the Law, was, at the Reſtoration, made Recorder of Colcheſter; which he reſigned 12 Nov. 1677. In the years 1659, 1660, and 1661, he was choſen one of the Repreſentatives in Parliament for this Borough (y): And died in 1690, aged 73 (z). By his Lady, Thamar, daughter and heir of Samuel Lewis of Royden in Suffolk, Eſq; he had iſſue—Sir John, his eldeſt ſon and heir.—Samuel, who died April 16, 1677.—Thomas, Rector of Greenſtead, and Great Holland: He died May 3, 1692, aged 40.—Jeremy, father of Gabriel Shaw, Eſq; of Thorpe. The daughters were—Thamar—Mary, mother of Joſeph Thurſton, Eſq; late Recorder.—Abigail—Penelope, which died in 1699.——Hannah—and Elizabeth, who died July 16, 1683, aged 19.

Sir John Shaw the younger, was born in 1648 (†); he was called up to the degree of a Serjeant-at-law in 1677, and knighted (a); And died Janu. 13, 1681 (b). His ſon and heir

John Shaw, Eſq; married, about 1677, Anne daughter of Thomas Broom, Eſq; Serjeant-at-law, and had iſſue by her John Shaw, Eſq; Anne, and Thomas. To his ſecond wife he took, in 1703, Jane Leſſingham, widow. He died in April 1708 (c).

John Shaw, laſt mentioned, died without iſſue about 1715. Whereupon the family-eſtate being directed by a decree in Chancery to be ſold, Jane Shaw [formerly Leſſingham] who had ſurvived her huſband, purchaſed the Houſe in this pariſh. And her executors ſold it to Mrs. Elizabeth Corneliſen, widow, who pulled it down, and cauſed a new one to be built at her own expence; which by Will ſhe gave to her Niece, then the wife of Ralph Creffied, Eſq; and married ſince to Charles Gray, Eſq; who hath greatly improved the Gardens, by adding thereto the Caſtle-Hills, &c. Mrs. Gray dying 6 June 1751, Charles Gray Eſq; married, in 1755, Mary eldeſt daughter of Randle Wilbraham Eſq; member of parliament for Newton in Lancaſhire, &c.

In this pariſh alſo (in the houſe, late Alderman Boys's) formerly lived the learned Thomas Skinner, M. D. being then Phyſician to General Monk. He was author of Motus Compoſiti, The Life of General Monk, &c. and was buried at St. Mary's, 8 Auguſt 1679.

[G] A Bull was obtained for that purpoſe from Pope Leo X. by Thomas Wilkinſon Rector of St. Nicolas; who, for the obtaining of it, repreſented——Quod ſi parochialis Eccleſia beatæ Mariæ Virginis ad muros Eccleſiæ Sti. Nicholai uniretur, annecteretur, & incorporetur, ex hoc profecto commoditatibus ſuis non parum conſuleretur; Quare pro parte dicti Thomæ aſſerentis fructus, redditus, & droventus dictæ Eccleſiæ beatæ Mariæ Sex librarum ſterlingorum ſecundum communem exiſtimatione eſſe.——Therefore the Pope granted him the deſired Bull, which is dated Septemb. 15, 1514. It was once in the poſſeſſion of Mr. Thomas Plume, of Maldon. An imperfect Copy of it is among the Collections of Richard Symonds of the Poole in Yeldham, Eſq; Vol. I. fol. 445, which Collections are in the Heralds Office.

The Church ſtands on the ſouth-ſide of the High-ſtreet, near the corner of Queen's-ſtreet. It conſiſts of a Nave tyled, and a North-iſle leaded, which extends the whole length both of the Church and Chancel. At the Weſt-end, there is a handſome Tower, neatly built with flints; in which are five Bells. The ſouth-wall of the Church is built in the Roman, that is the herring-bone, faſhion.

There are Prayers in this Church Tueſdays and Thurſdays at eleven o'clock; and one Sermon on Sundays.

The Patronage of this Church, before the Reformation, was in St. Botolph's Priory. Upon the diſſolution of the ſame, the Advowſon of this Church was granted to Sir Thomas Audeley Lord Chancellor of England, by the King's Letters Patents, dated May 26, 1537. Sir Thomas gave it to his brother Thomas, ſettled at Bere-Church: In whoſe poſterity it continued, till the late Henry Audeley, Eſq; ſold it to Dr. Compton, Biſhop of London; and he ſettled it, with the Rectory of Tendring, upon Balliol-college, Oxon, of which he was Viſitor.

The Pariſh of St. Botolph's, and the ſeveral Portions of Tithes which the Prior and Convent uſed to receive in and about this Town, are united and annexed to this Rectory; (as will be ſhewn under St. Botolph's) which makes it a pretty good Living. By virtue of this Union, the Rector of All-Saints hath the great or impropriate Tithes of St. Peter's in this Town: And, upon the ſame account, two parts in three of the Tithes of ſome Land in St. Mary's at the Walls, called Richbery-hawke, or Harpe, are paid to the Rector of All-Saints, as having the Impropriation of St. Peter's (d).

At the Weſt-end of the Church, there is a Parſonage-houſe in a Garden of about half a rood; the weſt end of which was built by the late Dr. Abbot; and alſo a Stable. But the Barn, and the ſmall Houſe, adjoyning to the Church, mentioned in the Terrier (e), are now down.

Richard atte Schawe was Rector of this pariſh in 1356 (f). And William Roby Rector in 1372 (g).

The firſt is not mentioned by Mr. Newcourt, and the name of the ſecond is written by him otherwiſe than it is in our Records.

SECT. VIII.

St. JAMES.

THE eighth and laſt Pariſh, whoſe Church lyeth within the Walls, is this of St. James's. 'Tis bounded on the weſt by All-Saints, and part of St. Botolph's; on the ſouth, partly by St. Botolph's, St. Giles's, and St. Mary Magdalen's; on the eaſt, by St. Leonard's, Greenſtead, and part of St. Botolph's; and on the north, by Mile-end.

It contains—Within the Walls, The Church; The Houſe of George Wegg, Eſq; his Garden eaſt of the ſame, and part of his Field and Garden ſouth of his ſaid Houſe, formerly called Berryfield: As alſo the Pariſh-Clerk's Houſe by Eaſt-gate. —— Without the Walls, it contains part of More-lane; Eaſt-hill, and Eaſt-ſtreet. In all which, by an account taken in December 1744, there were found to be 314 Houſes and Tenements, and 1056 Souls. [But George Wegg Eſq; has, ſince that, pulled down nine tenements.] It hath alſo two Houſes, and Land, in Magdalen-ſtreet; And ſeveral Parcels of land in divers places, particularly five or ſix acres near Lexden: But the greateſt quantity is on each ſide of Eaſt-hill, and Eaſt-ſtreet, being rich meadow-grounds; and near the Road to Ardley and Ipſwich, paſture and ploughed land. Above ſeventy acres of the Meadows, are Caſtle-land; that is, ſome of the Demeſnes anciently belonging to the Caſtle.

In 1691, One hundred and eighty-eight pounds per annum, Land, were charged in this pariſh, to the King's Tax. And the year following Four hundred and twenty perſons were rated to the Poll-tax.

Part of this pariſh lyes within the Manor of the Corporation, of which ſeveral Tenements, and pieces of ground, are held; and part within the Manor of Shaw's. But three Tenements, formerly belonging to St. John's Abbey, are held of the manor of Weſt-Doniland, by copy of Court-roll, at the Will of the Lord (k).

In this pariſh, juſt without Eaſt-gate, lived Samuel Reynolds, Eſq; who was one of the Repreſentatives for this Borough in the laſt Parliament of K. Charles II. and in the 1ſt and 2d Parliaments of K. William and Q. Mary. He died Auguſt 23, 1694. His heirs have, ſince, parted with the Houſe he lived in; but ſtill had Eſtates in this County, particularly at Peldon, and Little Bentley; which Samuel Reynolds, Eſq; gave to his ſiſter's ſon, the Rev. Dr. Powell, Maſter of St. John's College, Cambridge. The Family's Arms are a chevron, chequy, between three croſs croſſlets fitché.

The Town-gallows ſtood anciently in this Pariſh, even before the year 1378 (l); and there is a field, which to this day bears the name of Gallow-field.

The Church of St. James's, as I have obſerved above, is large, regular, and tolerably handſome. It conſiſts of a Body tyled, and two Side-iſles leaded, which do not reach above half-way the Chancel. At the weſt-end ſtands a ſquare Tower, in which there is only one Bell, beſides that on a Turret at the top, for the Clock to ſtrike upon. Both Church and Tower are built of Roman Brick and Stone. But the Chancel is in a more elegant manner, with a mixture of poliſhed ſtones and flint.

There is one Sermon in this Church on Sundays, and Prayers on Wedneſdays and Fridays at eleven o'clock.

While the Monaſteries ſubſiſted, this Rectory continued in the gift of the Prior and Convent of St. Botolph's. But, upon the diſſolution of that Houſe, King Henry VIII. granted this Advowſon, amongſt others, in the year 1536, to Sir Thomas Audeley Lord Chancellor; who gave it to his brother Thomas Audeley of Bere-Church, Eſq; In his family it continued till after the year 1700, when Henry Audeley Eſq; ſold it to Biſhop Compton, as hath been already obſerved under St. PETER's. Of his Executor it was purchaſed by Biſhop Robinſon, and his Widow, Mrs. Robinſon, ſold it to Samuel Hill, Eſq; who exchanged it, 17 Auguſt 1724, with the Crown, for the Vicarage of Shenſton in Staffordſhire, where Mr. Hill had an eſtate.

The penſion of Ten Shillings per annum, out of the Rectory of St. Michael's Mile-end, mentioned by Mr. Newcourt, (m) hath not been paid for ſeveral years.

The Rector had formerly a Parſonage-houſe on the ſouth-ſide of Eaſt-hill, juſt without Eaſt-gate, where lyes a piece of Glebe belonging to him: but it was beat down during the ſiege. He hath alſo another ſmall parcel of Glebe. But the Caſtle-lands above-mentioned being exempted from Tithes, on account of their paying them anciently to the Chapel in the Caſtle: By that means, this Living is not a tolerable maintenance for a Clergyman. However, it is in the power of the Crown to make it ſo, by annexing thereto either Greenſtead, St. Mary Magdalen's Hoſpital, or Abberton, which are all in his Majeſty's gift.

The 31ſt of October 1699, It was ordered at an aſſembly of the Mayor, Aldermen, &c. That a Petition ſhould be drawn and preſented to My Lord Chancellor, in order that the Hoſpital of St. Mary Magdalen ſhould be put to this Church of St. James; and that Sir Thomas Cooke ſhould be deſired to preſent the ſame to his Lordſhip. But this Petition was either not preſented, or elſe rejected.

John —— was Rector in the 4th of Edward II. (n).
John Wright Rector in 1429 (o).

BOOK II.

CHAP. II.

I Come now to treat of thoſe Pariſhes in Colcheſter, that lye without, but near, the Walls.

SECT. I. Of theſe the Firſt is

St. BOTOLPH's

And it is to be conſidered in a double view; as a Religious Houſe, (which I ſhall do in Chap. IV. of this Book) and a diſtinct Pariſh. Conſidered as a ſeparate Pariſh; it is bounded on the weſt by part of St. Nicolas's, of H. Trinity, and St. Giles's: On the ſouth, by the ſame St. Giles's: On the eaſt, by part of St. Mary Magdalen's, St. Leonard's, Greenſtead, and St. James's: And on the north, by part of St. Nicolas's, All-Saints, St. James's, Mile-end, and Ardley.

What it comprehends, in the Town. —— Within the Walls, is part of Queen-ſtreet, of Wire-ſtreet, and Eld-lane. —— Without the Walls; St. Botolph's-ſtreet, part of Black-boy-lane, of More-lane, of Childwell-lane, and of Magdalen-ſtreet. There is a good quantity of Land in this pariſh; which, as far as appears to me, was originally the Endowment of the Priory, ſuch as Dilbridge, &c. And, as the Prior and Convent did, ſo doth alſo the Rector of All-Saints now, by reaſon of the Endowment which I ſhall preſently mention, receive portions of Tithes from Lands which lye in other pariſhes. The extent of this Pariſh into the Country is pretty conſiderable; and it is alſo very populous, but not ſo much as formerly, when the Trade lay more this way [H]. The preſent number of Houſe-keepers in it, is 409.

In the Land-tax-rates of St. Botolph's, in 1691, above Two hundred and fifteen pounds a year, Land, were charged to the King's Tax:

[H] By a paſſage in the Court-Rolls, 4° Edw. II. (anno 1310.) rot. 3, It appears that the Leather-market was then near St. Botolph's Priory. For Oſbert the Tanner brings an action againſt Thomas de Hadleye, for removing his Stall for ſelling Leather under the Wall of St. Botolph's Priory, the Saturday next after the feaſt of St. Dennis. Perhaps St. Dennis's fair was then held there.

And Five hundred and Six perſons were rated to the Poll-tax, in 1692.

The Manor of Shaw's lyeth chiefly in this pariſh. It was in St. Botolph's Priory till the diſſolution (†); when it was granted to Sir Thomas Audeley, with the reſt of the Priory's poſſeſſions.

Next, it was held, anno 1545, by John Moulton, and William Beryffe in capite (*). ——William Beryffe, Gent. dyed 21 Novemb. 1594, poſſeſſed of this Manor, which he held of the Queen as of her Manor of Eaſt-Greenwich: —William his ſon and heir was then aged 48 (l). He was ſucceeded by his ſon —— William, living in 1634 (m).

It was afterwards in . . . . . Cropley, and . . . . Church.

And in Sir Thomas Davall, and his heirs; the laſt of whom, Thomas Davall, Eſq; dying under age in 1718, the premiſſes came, by virtue of the will of Sir Thomas Davall the younger, who died in April 1714, to Daniel Burr Eſq; firſt couſin to this laſt Sir Thomas, by his mother Rebecca, daughter of Daniel Burr of Amſterdam, merchant (n). D. Burr hath ſold it, not long ſince, with other eſtates, to

Mr. Nath. Garland, a merchant: But all the demeſne lands, and ſite of the Manor, are, or lately were, in Captain Thomas Kilham, of London.

Dilbridge, in this pariſh, formerly belonging to the Prior and Canons of St. Botolph's, is alſo ſometimes called a Manor; and otherwiſe the Grange [i. e. Barn, or Granary] of Dilbridge (o). Upon the diſſolution of St. Botolph's Priory, it was granted by K. Henry VIII. in 1536, to Sir Thomas Audeley Lord Chancellor of England (p). The ſame year, Audeley obtained a licenſe to alienate it to John Chriſtmas; who, in 1552, ſold it to George Chriſtmas, Eſq; and his heirs, and to Edward Markaunt (q). Elizabeth, daughter of George Chriſtmas, became the ſecond wife of John Lucas, Eſq; (r) and brought this Manor into that family. But it ſeems to have come into the preſent branch of it by purchaſe.

In Eld-lane, within this Pariſh, is the Anabaptiſts Meeting-houſe. Near which, in a place named the Red houſe, formerly lived John Baſtwick Doctor of Phyſick, who made ſo much noiſe in the laſt Century. He was born at Writtle in this County, in the year 1593; and entered in Emmanuel College, Cambridge, May 19, 1614, where he continued but a little while. Leaving the Univerſity without a degree, he travelled beyond ſea for the ſpace of nine years, where he ſpent his time between the Schools and the Camp, and was made Doctor of Phyſick at Padua. Upon his return to England, he ſettled in this Town, where he practiſed Phyſick for a while. But ſome Books he publiſhed, diſagreeable to the Court, brought him into very great Troubles. The Reader may ſee a full account of him in BIOGRAPHIA BRITANNICA.

The care of this Church and Pariſh was in the Canons-Regular till their ſuppreſſion; the Inhabitants reſorting for divine ſervice to the Church here, which was Parochial as well as Conventual (s). Upon the diſſolution, its exemption from all ſecular and eccleſiaſtical juriſdiction was aboliſhed, and K. Edward VI. annexed it, April 1, 1550, to the ſee of London for ever; which was confirmed by Q. Mary I. March 2, 1555 (t). And Sir Thomas Audeley having obtained from K. Henry VIII. in 1536, the Priory of St. Botolph's, and the whole ſite of the ſame, with the Rectory, and all its appurtenances (u); did, in conſideration of certain Covenants and Agreements made between him and the Pariſhioners of All-Saints Colcheſter, grant, bargain, and ſell, to the Rector of that Church, and his ſucceſſors for ever, All and ſingular the Tithes of Hay, Wood, Corn, and of any other kind or nature ſoever, within the Town of Colcheſter, or elſewhere; belonging to him, by reaſon of the Diſſolution or Reſignation of the Priory of St. Botolph's aforeſaid. But this matter not being fully ſettled in his life time, he renewed that Grant in his Will, dated April 19, 1544. And, after his deceaſe, Sir Edward North, and Sir Thomas Pope, Knights, Executors of the laſt Will and Teſtament of him the ſaid Lord Chancellor Audeley, jointly with Edmund Marten, Thomas Gynlett, and Thomas Audeley, Eſq; brother of the aforeſaid Lord Audeley; for the greater and more perfect accompliſhment, performance, and execution of the Covenants and Grants above-mentioned; and alſo in conſideration of the ſum of Forty pounds ſterling, paid by Richard Awfilde and William Hutton, Wardens of the Church of All-Saints, to the ſaid Thomas Lord Audeley, in his life-time, in full purchaſe and bargain of the ſaid Tithes; Did give, grant, ſell, and confirm to Robert Plumpton Rector of All-Saints, and his ſucceſſors for ever, all the Tithes afore-mentioned, within the Town of Colcheſter, and elſewhere. This Deed bears date May 14, 1544, and is placed in the Appendix (w).

There was formerly a Chantry in this Church; of which ſee an account in Book II. ch. v.

In this pariſh was born Dr. Samuel Harſnet, Archbiſhop of York in the laſt century. As he was very eminent in his time, and a Benefactor to this Town, it will be neceſſary to give ſome account of him.

He was the ſon of William Harſnet, or Haſnothe [I], a baker, and born in St. Botolph's-ſtreet. The day of his birth is not recorded;

[I] So his name is written in the Regiſter Book of St. Botolph's. The name of Halſnothe was very common in this Town in the Sixteenth Century. William Halſnothe, Gent. is mentioned in 1523. And Tho. Halſnothe born but he was baptized June 20, 1561 (x). Having acquired competent School-learning, probably in this Town, he was ſent to Cambridge, and admitted in King's College, September 8, 1576: From thence he removed to Penbroke-hall, of which he became a Scholar, and was elected Fellow of the ſame, Novemb. 27, 1583 (y). The year following, he took his Maſter of Arts Degree. In 1586, he was choſen Maſter of the Free-ſchool in this Town, which he kept little more than a year and a half (z). On the 14th of June 1597, he was inſtituted to the Vicariage of Chigwell in Eſſex, which he reſigned in 1605 (a). Auguſt 5, 1598, he was collated to the Prebend of Mapeſbury in St. Paul's Cathedral: And Janu. 17, 1602, to the Archdeaconry of Eſſex (b). The 16th of April 1604, he was admitted to the Rectory of Shenfield, in this county (c). He was alſo Rector of St. Margaret's New Fiſh-ſtreet, London, which he reſigned this year (d), In 1605, upon the reſignation of Biſhop Andrews, he was choſen Maſter of Penbroke-Hall; and ſerved the office of Vice-Chancellor the ſame year: as he did again in 1614 (e). He held his Maſterſhip till 1616 (f). In the year 1606, May 16, he had inſtitution to the Vicarage of Hutton; which he reſigned in 1609, as he did alſo his Prebend of Mapeſbury, and Archdeaconry of Eſſex (g). Whereupon Archbiſhop Bancroft, to whom he was Chaplain, gave him, September 28, the Rectory of Styſtead in Eſſex (h). Nov. 13, 1609, he was elected Biſhop of Chicheſter, and conſecrated Decemb. 3, holding his Rectory of Styſtead in commendam with that See (i). In the year 1619, he was tranſlated to Norwich, and confirm'd in the ſame, Auguſt 28 (k). But being one of thoſe who were branded with the name of Arminians, he underwent ſome Trouble from the Puritan Faction; and, May 19, 1624, was accuſed by the Commons, at a Conference, of ſeveral Miſdemeanors (l). Upon the death of George Montaigne Archbiſhop of York, being tranſlated to that Archbiſhoprick, he was elected Novemb. 26, 1628, and confirmed the 23d of January following (m). And, Novemb. 10, 1629. was ſworn of the Privy Council (n). He enjoyed his Archiepiſcopal Dignity but a little while: For he died at Morton in the Marſh, in Glouceſterſhire, in May 1631, in his return from Bath to his maner of Southwell in Nottinghamſhire, and was buried in Chigwell-Church (o). He had founded a Free-ſchool at Chigwell, before his deceaſe (p). And by his Will bequeathed, To the Poor of St. Botolph's in Colcheſter, where he was born, 10 l. — of Shenfield, 10 l.—of Styſtead, 10 l.—And to the Town of Colcheſter all his Library for the uſe of the Clergy of theſe Parts (q).

SECT. II.

St. GILES's.

THE Pariſh of St. Giles's [K], to which we proceed next, is bounded on the north and weſt by St. Botolph's, and by part of H. Trinity, of St. Mary's, and alſo of Stanway: On the ſouth, by part of Layer de la Hay, Bere-Church, and Eaſt Doniland: And, on the eaſt, by the laſt mentioned Pariſh, by the Channel, and the Hyth.

It contains, ——— within the Town, all St. John's-green, part of Lodder's-lane, and of Stanwell-ſtreet, the lane leading from St. John's-green to Hog-lane, and part of Magdalen-ſtreet.—Within the Country it extends a great way, and contains a large diſtrict of Land, moſt of which was part of the demeſnes of St. John's Abbey. In the Land-tax rates of 1691, above Three hundred and twenty pounds a year, Land, were charged to the King's-tax.

Many Houſes have been pulled down in this pariſh; particularly a large range, called the Star-yard from an Ale-houſe there having that ſign. However, it ſtill contains an hundred and ninety-two Houſes, or Tenements.

A Hamlet in this pariſh is called the Old-Hyth [or Harbour] becauſe Wares and Merchandiſes, brought to this Town by water, uſed to be unloaded there, before the river was navigable, or a convenient Harbour made at the New-Hyth, or St. Leonard's (r). As far as I have obſerved, That Harbour at the Old-Hyth muſt have been ſlighted near Five hundred years; and yet, in a Tryal in the laſt Century, one Evidence ſwore, That he had paſſed by a [K] I find it otherwiſe called St. Sepulchre's in ſome Rates; But whether there is ſufficient ground for this appellation, I cannot poſitively affirm.

ſmall boat, up the Channel or Creek, wherein Ships anciently went up to the Old-Hyth (s), which is hardly credible.

A ſmall part of this pariſh lyeth within the Manor of the Corporation; and, among the reſt, St. John's Green, as appears by the Extracts below [L]. But much the greateſt part is within the Manor of Weſt-Doniland, of which I ſhall give an account under Weſt-Doniland.

The Manor of Battleſwick, at the Old Hyth, lyes chiefly in this pariſh. One would be apt to imagine, that it took its Name from a Battle fought near that place. But it was in reality ſo named from the Family of Bataille, who were Lords or owners of it [M]. Roger le Hoppe was poſſeſſed of it, in the year 1312, and Sir Michael Stanhope in 1609 (t). This Manor hath been long in the Godſchall-family, who were originally from this Town. Sir Robert Godſchall Knight, late Lord Mayor of London, enjoyed it: And it is his brother's, John Godſchall, a merchant in the ſame city.

In this pariſh lay the rich and ſtately Abbey, dedicated to St. John the Baptiſt, of which we ſhall give a full account in Chap. IV. of this Book. There is nothing of it remaining, but the beautiful Gate-way, the Garden-walls, and ſome of the Out-offices.

John Lucas Eſq; having purchaſed of Sir Francis Jobſon Knight, the ſite of this Abbey, converted the remains of it into a Seat; and that noble Family having had their reſidence there for many years, within this pariſh, it will be proper to give a particular account of them in this place.

This name is of great Antiquity in this neighbourhood, and often occurs in the Records of this Town. John Lucas of Birch, and Hugh Lucas of the ſame pariſh, are menton'd in the Oath-book under the years 1332 and 1339 (u). John Lucas was a Lawyer here in 1340 (w). And the Will of John Lucas was proved and inrolled in 1348 (x). John Lucas was one of the Bailiffs in the years 1370, and 1371 (y); and owed ſuit and ſervice at the Law hundred Courts (z). And Giles Lucas was one of the Gentry of this County, returned by the Commiſſioners in the year 1433 (a). But the Heralds having derived this Family from the Fitz-Lucas's of Suffolk, it will be proper to lay their account before the Reader. And it is as follows.

1. Edmund Fitz-Lucas, Eſq; 34 Edward III. had to wife Elizabeth daughter and heir of Sir John Morieux. John was his ſon and heir.
2. John Fitz-Lucas, Eſq; lived in 1412. He married Chriſtiana (or Maud) daughter and co-heir of Walter Brampton of Brampton; whoſe arms were, Gules, a ſaltier, between four pole-axes, or.
3. Edmund, or Edward, Fitz-Lucas, 1421, 9 Henr. V. had iſſue.
4. Thomas, ſervant, Secretary, and one of the Counſel to Jaſper Duke of Bedford (b).
5. John Fitz-Lucas 1460, 39 Henr. VI. had iſſue.
6. Thomas Fitz-Lucas of Saxham in Suffolk, Eſq; 1489, 5 Henr. VII (c). He married Elizabeth daughter of —— Keymes of Rayland in Wales; by whom he had three ſons; Jaſper, Henry, and JOHN. And three daughters. —Lettice, wife of John Grenefield of Exeter —— Anne, wife of Thomas Barnadiſton of Ketton. — Elizabeth wife of ——Ayloff of Eſſex. He was ſollicitor to K. Henry VII.

Jaſper Lucas of Saxham, Eſq; the eldeſt ſon, married Margarett daughter and ſole heir of Robert Gedding Eſq; and had iſſue Thomas; and two daughters — Margaret, married to Humphrey Coneſby, — and Jane.

Thomas, the ſon, was of Herringer in Suffolk, and married Mary daughter of Sir Thomas Jermyn of Ruſhbrook in Suffolk, by whom he had Thomas, Clement, and Anne.

Henry Lucas, the ſecond ſon of Thomas above-mentioned, married —— daughter of Edmund Greene of St. Edmunds-bury; and had iſſue Edmund, his eldeſt ſon and heir; who married, I. Frances daughter of Thomas Nevill of Eſſex, Eſq; by Mary, daughter of Sir Thomas Tey of Old-Holt in Birch. The 2d. ſon was John; the 3d. Clement; the 4th. Henry; the 5th. Gabriel; the 6th. Edward. The Daughters were, — Mary, wife of Edw. Sledge of Sumberton in Cambridgeſhire — and Catharine. Edmund's IId wife was Alice daughter of Simon Bradock of Hiſham, or Henham, Suffolk. By her he had Francis, Henry, Thomas, and Martha. He lived at St. Edmundſbury.

7. JOHN Lucas, third ſon of Thomas Lucas and Elizabeth Keymes, was Town-Clerk of Colcheſter, and Maſter of the Requeſts to K. Edward VI. It was he that bought the ſite of St. John's Abbey of Sir Francis Jobſon. He had two wives, I. Mary, daughter of——Abell, by whom he had THOMAS, who was knighted; and Robert, who died without iſſue. His IId wife was Elizabeth daughter of George Chriſtmas. By her he had John — and Margaret wife of Thomas Penny, M. D.

John lived at Ramſey, and married Margaret daughter and heir of Chriſtopher Roydon of Roydon-hall, in Ramſey. By her he had iſſue John, Roydon, Edward, Edmund and Chriſtopher. And three daughters; Elizabeth, wife of Robert Darcy of Tiptre — Mary wife of Edward Bedingfield—and Margaret wife of —— Tillingham.

John Lucas of Ramſey, Eſq; married Margaret daughter of Sir John Bruis, and had iſſue Alexander, Thomas, and Anne.

8. Sir THOMAS Lucas, was Sheriff of Eſſex in the year 1568 (d), and Recorder of Colcheſter about the year 1575 (e). He married Mary, daughter of Sir John Fermor of Eſton-Neſſon in Northamptonſhire, Knight, and had iſſue THOMAS his ſon and heir—John, who dyed unmarried, Septem. 4, 1651. — Anne, wife of Arthur Throckmorton of Powles-Ferrers in Com. Northampton. —— Conſtantia, wife of Roland Lacy of Shipton in Oxfordſhire. And another daughter. He died Auguſt 29, 1611, aged 80. His Lady died July 5, 1613. And they were both buried in St. Giles's Church (f).

9. Sir THOMAS Lucas, the eldeſt ſon and heir, was Sheriff of Eſſex in 1617 (g). He married Elizabeth daughter and co-heir of John Leighton of London, Gent.—by whom he had had, before marriage, a ſon named Thomas, for whom he purchaſed, of the heirs of Robert Ratcliffe Earl of Suſſex, the Manor and Eſtate at LEXDEN, and fix'd him there. Be pleaſed therefore to look for this Branch of the Lucas family under Lexden.

After marriage, he had by her theſe ſeveral children, JOHN, * Charles—Mary, wife of Peter Killegrew—Elizabeth wife of William Walter—Anne—Catharine—Margaret ſecond wife of William Cavendiſh Duke of Newcaſtle [N]. He died Sept. 25, 1625.

10. Sir JOHN Lucas, Knight, the eldeſt ſon and heir, declared very early for K. Charles I. But his deſign being diſcovered, he was rudely ſeized and impriſoned; and his fine Houſe at St. John's plundered by the rabble, in Auguſt 1642 (h). Being releaſed, he did what ſervice he could to his royal Maſter, and was preſent at the Fights at Leſtwithiel, and Newbury, and other battles. In conſideration whereof, he was advanced, January 3, 1644-5, to the degree of a Baron of this realm, by the title of Lord Lucas of Shenfield in Eſſex; with limitation of that dignity, for want of iſſue-male, to Sir Charles Lucas, Knight, his younger brother, and to the heirs male of his body; with remainder to Sir Thomas Lucas, Knight, his other brother and the heirs of his body.—This John Lord Lucas married Anne, daughter to Sir Chriſtopher Neville of Newton St. Lo in Somerſetſhire, Knight, by whom he had a ſon, John, born in 1633, who dyed young; and a daughter, named MARY, who was married to Antony Earl of Kent. See an account of her Deſcendents under Mile-end. Her father procured from K. Charles II. on her own, and her poſterity's behalf, Letters patent dated May 7, 1663, whereby the title of Baroneſs Lucas of Crudwell in Wiltſhire was conferr'd upon her; and the title of Baron Lucas of the ſame place, upon the heirs male of her body: As alſo, that her ſon and heir by the ſaid Earl of Kent; and all other the ſons and heirs (deſcended from her) of the Earls of Kent, ſhould bear the title of Lord Lucas of [N] This Lady lies buried by the Duke her huſband, under a ſumptuous Monument in Weſtminſter-Abbey, with this Epitaph.

Here lies the loyal Duke of Newcaſtle, and his Dutcheſs his ſecond wife, by whom he had no Iſſue: Her Name was Margaret Lucas, youngeſt ſiſter to the Lord Lucas of Colcheſter, a noble Family; for all the Brothers were valiant, and all the Siſters virtuous. This Dutcheſs was a wiſe, witty, and learned Lady, which her many Books do well teſtifie: She was a moſt virtuous, and loving, and careful Wife, and was with her Lord all the Time of his Baniſhment and Miſeries; and when he came home, never parted from him in his ſolitary retirements.

Crudwell. And in default of ſuch iſſue male, that the ſaid Title ſhould not be ſuſpended, but enjoy'd by ſuch of the daughters and coheirs, if any ſhall be, as other indiviſible inheritances, by the common law of this realm are uſually poſſeſſed (i). John Lord Lucas died July 2, 1671, aged 65, and was buried in St. Giles's Church. The Lady Anne his wife died Auguſt 22, 1660, and was buried in the ſame place (k). — This Lord Lucas dying thus without iſſue male, the Title of Lord Lucas of Shenfield, by virtue of the limitation above expreſſed, devolved to Charles, Son and heir of Sir Thomas Lucas of Lexden, Knight. See under Lexden.

* Sir Charles Lucas, younger brother of John Lord Lucas, was bred up to Arms in the Low-Countries under the Prince of Orange; and was one of the beſt Commanders of horſe K. Charles had. He ſignaliz'd himſelf for the royal cauſe in ſeveral places; particularly in the defence of this Town (l); after the taking of which he was baſely ſhot to death, on the 28th of Auguſt 1648, by order of Thomas Lord Fairfax. He died without iſſue.

The Arms of Lucas, are, Argent, a Feſſe between ſix annulets, gules.

The Church of St. Giles's ſtands near the north-weſt corner of St. John's Garden, and behind the ſite of the late Abbey-Church. It conſiſts of a body, and a north-iſle; built of a mixture of Roman-brick, and ſtone, like other old Edifices in this Town. The north-wall is chiefly of flints, and neat. Only the Chancel, and a very ſmall part of the Church, are now uſed for divine ſervice, the reſt lying in ruins. In the room of the Tower, there is a boarded Building, which contains one ſmall Bell. Whether it became thus ruinous by the negligence of the Inhabitants, or through the calamities of the Siege, I find no certain evidence; but I believe it was in the latter.

The ſite of St. John's Abbey, and moſt of its demeſnes, lying in this pariſh, were exempted from paying Tithes; undoubtedly by an expreſs Pope's Bull. For that reaſon, this Living was returned to the Governors of Q. Anne's Bounty to be worth but 30*l.* per annum. But, ſince that, it was ſaid to have been augmented by the Rev. Mr. Francis Powell (m): which it ſeems was a miſtake.

Whilſt St. John's Abbey ſubſiſted, the Abbot and Monks were proprietors of the Tithes and Advowſon of St. Giles, and ſupplied the Cure by their own Members, or ſuch as they appointed. At the ſuppreſſion of the Monaſteries, it paſſed for a Donative, or perpetual Curacy, of which no valuation was taken in the King's books; and ſo it ſtill remains exempt from Firſt-fruits and Tenths. The Tithes, with the Advowſon of this curacy, and the ſite of the Abbey, were granted to John Dudley Duke of Northumberland. But when he gave the ſite of the Abbey to Sir Francis Jobſon, and afterwards obliged him to ſell it to John Lucas Eſq; Jobſon reſerved this Advowſon, which deſcended from him to his heirs. In the year 1587, this Rectory, with its appertenances, was granted to —— Adams, and —— Butler (n) [O]. But this grant was ineffectual. It was lately in the gift of Francis Powell, M. A. the perpetual Curate, or Rector, of the ſame; and is now in Charles Lind, D. D. the preſent Curate, licenſed in September 1749.

There is a Sermon here but once in a fortnight.

SECT. III.

St. MARY MAGDALEN's.

IS to be viewed in a double light, as a diſtinct Pariſh, and an Hoſpital.

I. Conſidered as a Pariſh, it is the leaſt in Colcheſter. For it contains but 58 Houſes, or Tenements, upon Magdalen-green, and in Magdalen-ſtreet. And of Land it hath only about Fifty acres. In 1692, no more than Twenty-eight perſons were rated here to the Poll-tax.

This ſmallneſs of the Pariſh has brought it into very great diſtreſs. For having been always inhabited by weavers, and the poorer ſort of people; many of them become extremely, nay almoſt intolerably, chargeable. So that, April 20, 1694, the inhabitants repreſented, in a Petition to the Mayor and Commonalty, That their weekly Diſburſements to the Poor were 1*l.* 3*s.* 6*d.* and their Extraordinaries often One pound, or Thirty ſhillings a week beſides; and there were but Seven perſons in the pariſh able to pay. They had then Five ſhillings weekly out of Trinity-pariſh: Notwithſtanding which, they petitioned for relief; the Landholders having, for the Quarter paſt, paid to the Poor the full value of their Rents (o). At this preſent time the Poor-rates are Twelve ſhillings in the pound.

On account of the ſame ſmallneſs of this pariſh, there hath not been any Inſtitution or Induction to the Rectory for many years; nay, at no time whatever, as far as I can find.

I proceed therefore to St. Mary Magdalen's Hoſpital.

II. This Hoſpital, deſigned at firſt for the Reception of Leprous [P] and infirm people, was founded, at the command of K. Henry I. [Q] by Eudo his Steward, the ſame munificent Perſon that was the Founder of St. John's Abbey; and dedicated to St. Mary Magdalen. The original Endowment of it was much the [P] It is juſt matter of wonder, that there ſhould be anciently ſo many Leprous people in this kingdom, for whoſe reception and cure Hoſpitals were built in divers parts; and that the Leproſy ſhould be ſo epidemical ſome centuries ago, to what it is in theſe latter Ages. This conſideration hath induced ſome learned Men to imagine, that what was then called the Leproſy is the ſame Diſtemper as is now termed the Venereal Diſeaſe. See Philoſoph. Tranſact. ame as of the preſent Hoſpital; of which the particulars are in the Appendix (p). But it had, beſides, the Tithes of St. John's Abbey, which were diſtributed to the Poor here in a certain Portion of Bread, Beer, and Meat every day (q).

K. Stephen gave them Eighteen acres of land in perpetual alms, out of which they uſed to pay 3*s*. 5*d*. a year, towards the ferm of Colcheſter.—K. Henry II. took them, and all their poſſeſſions into his protection, as thoſe who were of the alms of his grand-father K. Henry I. and confirmed to them Six pounds out of Brightlingſea-manor, which that King had given them. Enjoyning, that none ſhould moleſt them, nor put them upon pleas, except before the King in perſon, or his Juſtices by his order.—K. Richard I. granted them a Fair of two days in the year, namely, on the Vigil, and Feaſt-day, of St. Mary Magdalen, July 21ſt and 22d. He alſo took them, and all they had, into his protection; ordering, That no Brother ſhould be admitted into the Hoſpital, without the conſent and will of the ſaid Lepers. All which Privileges were amply confirmed by K. Henry III. Edward III. Richard II. [R].

But in the time of K. Edward I. Abbot Adam de Campes not only with-held their Tithes and the penſion of vi pounds above-mentioned; but alſo having craftily deſired to ſee their charter, flung it into the fire; took away their common Seal; and compelled them to ſwear obedience to him; and turned ſuch as refuſed, out of their Dwellings. For redreſs whereof the poor Brethren applied to Parliament, and were reinſtated (r).

The Maſter of this Hoſpital was anciently named Prior of the Hoſpital of St. Mary Magdalen (s): and owed ſuit at the Law-hundred Courts (t).

Upon the general Deſtruction of the Hoſpitals in K. Edward the Sixth's reign, This underwent the common fate. However, it doth not ſeem to have been immediately granted away; for, in the year 1558, it was held by Bonner Biſhop of London in free-alms (u). After that, — the Lands belonging to it were ſquandered away, and ſome irrecoverably loſt; and the Chapel of the Hoſpital was totally demoliſhed (w). Q. Elizabeth, in the year 1565, granted the Revenues lately belonging thereto, to Nicaſius Yetſweirt (x), her Secretary for the French tongue, and one of the Clerks of the Signet (y). But K. James I. in order to bring it again to its pious and charitable uſe, Refounded it, in the year 1610, under the title of, The College or Hoſpital of K. James within the Suburbs of the Town of Colcheſter: Reſtoring all the Lands, Revenues, and Poſſeſſions whatever, ſettled at firſt upon it by the Founder: Ordaining, That it ſhould conſiſt of a Maſter, and Five poor Perſons ſingle, or unmarried: That the Maſter ſhould have the Cure of the Souls of the pariſhioners of the pariſh of St. Mary Magdalen in the Town of Colcheſter, celebrate Divine Service there, faithfully preach the word of God, and duly adminiſter the Sacraments either by himſelf or by a ſufficient Miniſter or Curate: And pay each of the ſaid Five poor Perſons Fifty-two ſhillings a year, at the Four terms of the year, by equal portions; viz. Thirteen ſhillings a-piece, at the Feaſts of the Nativity of Chriſt, the Annunciation of the Virgin Mary, St. John the Baptiſt, and St. Michael the Arch-angel. That they ſhould be placed in for life, and choſen by the Maſter, who hath power to turn them out for a reaſonable cauſe. That they ſhould be a Body Corporate, and have a common Seal. That the Maſter, with the Attorney and Sollicitor-general's conſent and concurrence, might make all proper Laws and Ordinances for the better regulation and management of this Hoſpital, and the revenues of the ſame. Finally, the King granted and confirmed to them all the Liberties, Franchiſes, Immunities, Exemptions, Privileges, Lands, Tenements, and Hereditaments whatſoever, which any Maſter and Poor of this Hoſpital had at any time enjoyed. The Viſitor, is the Lord Chancellor, or Lord Keeper of the Great Seal, who puts in the Maſter (z).

The Maſters of this Hoſpital are often mentioned in the Records of this Town, but ſeldom or never by name: And, for that reaſon, it is not in my power to preſent the Reader with a Liſt of them. Only I find, that Simon de la Neylond was Maſter in 1301.

Robert Safare in 1318.
Richard Martyn in 1323.
Will. Peryman, in 1431.
Tho. Skypwith in 1490 (a).
John Wayn, and
John Phelyp, in the year 1515 (b).

Even ſince the Reformation, no compleat Liſt can be given of them. For, in the beginning of our unhappy civil wars, Gabriel Honeyfold, D. D. who was Maſter of it, as well as Vicar of Ardley, had his houſe rifled by the mob of all its furniture; his bills, bonds, and evidences taken away; and not a ſhelf left behind, nor a pin to hang his hat on (c). So that the Regiſter of this Pariſh, and any other memorials belonging thereunto, were then unqueſtionably loſt.

William Wylkinſon was Maſter in 1582 (*).

Robert Newton, D. D. Rector of St. Auſtin's and St. Faith's, London, was the late Maſter. And Palmer Smythies, M. A. Rector of St. Michael's Mile-end, is the preſent Maſter.

The Church of St. Mary Magdalen ſtands on the North-ſide of Magdalen-Green; and is a very ſmall Building, of one pace, tyled. The little Chancel is modern, and built of brick. In the wooden Turret, at the Weſt-end, there is one Bell.

SECT. IV.

St. LEONARD'S: alias, the Hyth.

THIS pariſh is named St. Leonard's, from the Church, which is dedicated to that Saint; and the Hyth, from the Saxon word hyþ ſignifying a Harbour, becauſe it is the Town-Harbour. It is but a ſmall Pariſh; having, on the weſt and ſouth, St. Mary Magdalen's, and part of St. James's, St. Botolph's, and St. Giles's; on the eaſt, Greenſtead; And, on the north, part of St. Botolph's, and St. James's.

This Pariſh is within the Manor of the Corporation, which hath there ſome profitable pieces of Waſte, leaſed out for Coal-yards, Lime-kilns, a Saltcote, &c. that bring in a conſiderable yearly Income to the Mayor and Commonalty.

Three hundred and forty-three perſons were rated here to the Poll-tax, in the year 1692.

And the number of Acres of Land in this Pariſh, returned in 1599, was above Thirty.

There are in this pariſh an hundred and thirty-ſeven Houſes or Tenements.

What renders this Pariſh moſt conſiderable, and brings thither a pretty good Traffick, is the Conveniency of Water-Carriage: For the Channel that comes up to it, opens into the German Sea, and the Tide flows here from five to ſeven feet at a neap, and nine or ten feet at a ſpring Tide; ſo that a Veſſel of about ninety tuns, loaded, can come up with eaſe to the Key [S]. And this is what hath made Colcheſter paſs for a Port, and be honoured as ſuch, tho' the Town is in reality eight or nine Miles diſtant from the neareſt Sea-ſhore. Its Arms as a Port, are a Raven [T], and the chief Magiſtrate, before we had Bailiffs, was named Port-reve, as I have obſerved above.

The Goods brought to this Town by water, were wont formerly to be unloaded at the Old Hyth, as hath been ſhewn under St. Giles's. At what time this old Harbour came to be neglected, and a new one to be made at St. Leonard's, I never could find. But it was before the year 1276: For, the New Hyth is mentioned in ſome Records of that date [U], being the ancienteſt Court-Rolls belonging to this Town that are extant.

This being ſo beneficial an Inlet to Trade, great care was taken to cheriſh and encourage what thus tended to the Good and Advantage of the Town. For that purpoſe, all Endeavours were uſed to keep the Channel clean, and in good repair. What methods were anciently taken for that end, doth not appear upon record. Only an Aid was granted March 4, in the third of K. Edward VI. for and towards the amendment of the Haven, Channel, and Water at the New Heth; which was raiſed on the Inhabitants of the ſeveral Pariſhes in this Town; and amounted in the whole to 197*l.* The higheſt Sum paid by any one perſon, was ten pounds; and the loweſt four-pence. But it ſeems to have been a voluntary contribution (d).

Again, Auguſt 2, 1592, It was ordered at an Aſſembly, That Ten pounds yearly ſhould be paid by the Chamberlain, towards the amendment of the Channel, to Overſeers choſen from time to time, who ſhould lay it out thereon: As alſo the Money received from the Dutch Merchants, for the exportation of Bays, which was twelve pence of every pack; and five pence of every half-pack: And that, the Tueſday next after Michaelmas, four Overſeers of the Channel ſhould be choſen to lay out the Money (e).

Since the beginning of the laſt century, ſeveral Acts have paſſed, for repairing and maintaining the Haven, River, and Channel unto this Town; and for cleanſing and making them navigable. The firſt was November 8, 1623. This Act begins with obſerving, That the Haven, River, and Channel, had of late years been ſo filled, choaked, and ſtopped up between the Hyth-mill and Rowhedge, that Ships could not come up to the accuſtomed landing-place called the New-Hyth, as uſed in times paſt; and was like dayly more and more to decay, if ſome ſpeedy courſe and remedy were not taken for the repayring and amending thereof: And, becauſe the Charge to repaire and amend the ſame was ſo great, that the Inhabitants were not able to perform it, without ſome help from ſuch as ſhould come and trade with ſhipping and merchandiſes, and arrive within the ſaid Haven, River, and Channel: It was therefore enacted, That, for fifteen years next coming, the Bailiffs of the Town of Colcheſter, their Deputies, Officers, and Aſſigns, might receive and take from all perſons coming into that Haven, River, and Channel, with Ships, &c. and ſhould load or unload any Veſſel, or part thereof, either at Rowhedge, or between Rowhedge and the Hyth, particular ſums, mentioned in the Appendix N°. XI.——To be employed for and towards the maintenance of the ſaid Haven, River, and Channel. And,

The Forfeitures levied for not paving, or neglecting to maintain the pavement of this Town, were by this Act appropriated to the ſame uſe.

The next Act for cleanſing and making navigable the Channel, was paſſed in the beginning of the year 1698. By this it appears, That the River and Channel were then ſo filled, choaked, and ſtopped up, between the [S] Ships of greater burthen might come up, was it not for the Narrowneſs of the River, which renders it incommodious for them to wind or turn about.

[T] Theſe Arms are on the Seal affixed to the Foundation Deed of Joſeph Elianore's Chantry; which has round the Raven this Inſcription, SIGIL. CVSTOD. PORT. COLECEST.

[U] It ſeems to have been well frequented even in the ancienteſt Times. For, by an account taken in the 17th of Richard II. of all the Veſſels that arrived at the Hyth, it appears, That from the 9th of July to the 29th of December, anno 1393, there came into that Port no leſs than Seventy-two. MS. penes me.

Hithe-mill and Wivenhoe, and ſuch Points of land in proceſs of time ſo grown up, that Ships and other Veſſels could not come up to the accuſtomed landing-place; by which means the Inhabitants of this Town were put to great charges for the carriage of their Goods between Wivenhoe and Colcheſter; which was not only prejudicial to them, but to all other Traders, and would be yet more injurious to them, if ſome ſpeedy courſe or Remedy were not taken for Repairing, Amending, and Maintaining the ſaid Channel and River, by Clearing, Cleanſing, Deepning and Widening the ſame, and cutting croſs ſuch Point and Points of Land as were ſo grown up as aforeſaid. In order therefore to defray the Charge thereof, it was enacted, That from the 1ſt day of May, in the year 1698, for and during the ſpace of Twenty-one years thence next enſuing, all Merchants, Owners, or Occupiers of any Goods, Wares, and Merchandizes, brought into the ſaid River and Channel; and landed at, or ſhipped from, Wivenhoe or the New-Hithe in Colcheſter, or between either of the ſaid Places; ſhould pay the Duties and Sums following; i. e. For every Bay, Say, or Perpetuane, One half-penny per piece; For every tun of Timber, Six-pence; For every tun of Chalk for Lime, Three-pence; For every tun of paving Stone, Six-pence; For every tun of all other kind of Stones, or of Tobacco-pipe-clay, Aſhes, or Pan-tyles, and for every Chalder of Fullers-earth, or Chalder of Sea-coal, Twelve-pence; For every tun of Oyl, Three ſhillings; For every tun of Wines or Brandies, Five Shillings; and for every tun of all other Goods, Wares, and Merchandizes, not before particularly expreſſed, Two Shillings; And ſo after the ſame rate and proportion for every greater or leſſer quantities.

And in order to make the ſaid Channel and River more convenient, navigable, and paſſable for Ships and Veſſels from Wivenhoe up to the New Hithe, It was further enacted, That it ſhould and might be lawful for the Mayor and Commonalty, their aſſigns and workmen, to cut all the Land and Ground, which the ſaid Mayor and Aldermen ſhould have aſſigned and laid out for ſuch Channel of the ſaid River, not exceeding One hundred foot in breadth; and to make new, or larger, all ſuch Cuts, Trenches, or Paſſages for water, in, upon, or through, ſuch Land or Ground, as they ſhould think fit or neceſſary for the better effecting and carrying on the ſaid Unertaking; making ſatisfaction to the occupiers, and proprietors of ſuch land and ground (f).

By virtue of this Act, the Channel was cleanſed and enlarged between the years 1698 and 1709 [W].

But large ſums having been borrowed upon the credit of the Act, for the more ſpeedy and effectual compleating of the work; which, by reaſon of the Duties falling ſhort, could not be repaid within the twenty-one years: And, particularly, there remaining due to the Executor of William Hewer, late of Clapham in Surrey, Eſq; 1200 l. that could not be diſcharged, nor the Channel effectually repaired and amended, unleſs a farther proviſion was made by Parliament. Therefore, in 1719, an Act was obtained, for enlarging the time granted by the laſt Act, and for making it more effectual. It was to laſt from May 1, 1719, to May 1, 1740. And the Duties thereby granted, were, One Moiety or Half part of the Duties granted by the former Act; charged upon all ſuch Goods, Wares, and Merchandizes, as were in the ſaid former Act mentioned, and no more.

It likewiſe enacted, That all Ships and Veſſels taking Ballaſt in the river Colne, ſhould be obliged to take the ſame of ſuch perſon or perſons as ſhould be from time to time appointed by the Commiſſioners; which Ballaſt ſhould be got in the Channel and not elſewhere.

And, That it might be lawful for the Mayor and Commonalty, or their aſſigns, at any time, during the continuance of this Act, to make and uſe a Track-path, for one or more horſe or horſes, from Wivenhoe to the Hithe at Colcheſter on the one ſide of the River, and from Fingringhoe to the ſaid Hithe on the other ſide, as the ſaid Mayor and Commonalty ſhould think neceſſary; firſt agreeing with the reſpective Proprietors of the Land for the ſame.

Finally, All ſort of Corn or Grain was declared exempt from any Channel-Duty whatſoever, impoſed by this Act.

Some time after, a Lock was erected on the Channel, which was found of very great uſe and ſervice. But becauſe it could not be ſupported, and the Channel be kept cleanſed and fit for Navigation, unleſs ſome further Proviſion were made by Parliament for the ſame; an Act therefore was procur'd, in 1740, for further enlarging the Term granted by the two laſt Acts. After continuing and confirming them for ever (except where altered by this Act) It declared and enacted, That the Duty granted and to be raiſed and continued, by virtue of this Act, ſhall be Three-pence a Chalder, and no more for every Chalder of Sea-coal, and ſo after the ſame rate for any greater or leſs quantity, which ſaid Duty ſhall continue, and be in full force and effect, from the firſt day of May 1740, for and during the ſpace and term of Forty years, and no longer; and no other Duty except the Arrears under the ſaid recited Acts, or either of them, ſhall be raiſed upon any other Goods, Wares, Merchandizes, or Things whatſoever [X].

And to prevent Damage being done to the (f) This Act is printed at length in the Publick Statutes, 9 and 10 Will. III. c. 19.

[W] The Undertaker was Mr. Thomas Coolidge; and Mr. John Wheely the Overſeer. In 1698, Four thouſand pounds were borrowed upon the credit of the Act: And about September 1701, fifteen hundred pounds more were borrowed of William Hewer, Eſq; and John Crawley, Gent. on aſſignment of the Channel-duties. In Auguſt 1707, and July 1708, further ſums of Money were wanting, for compleating and finiſhing the Cleanſing of the Channel, which were ordered to be borrowed on ſecurity of the Channel-duties. When the Work was undertaken, directions were given, That every Floor of Earth ſhould contain eighteen feet.——The Collector of the Channel-Duty at the Hyth was alſo ordered to have 1*s.* in the pound, and the Collector at Wivenhoo 1*s.* 6*d.* in the pound. Books of Aſſemblies.

[X] At the time of the paſſing of this Act, there re-

Lock, or Gates, it enjoined, That none ſhould open or ſhut the Gates of the ſaid Lock, but ſuch perſon or perſons only as ſhould be duly appointed by the Commiſſioners, on pain of forfeiting to the Mayor and Commonalty any ſum not exceeding Ten pounds.

It being found neceſſary, that a further ſum of Money ſhould be raiſed for repairing the ſaid Lock, and making and preſerving the River or Channel more fit for Navigation; by another Act, paſſed in 1749-50, it was enacted, That from May 1750, for the term of 30 years, and from thence to the end of the then Seſſion of Parliament, there ſhould be raiſed and paid for every chaldron of ſea-coal, the further and additional Duty of Three pence a chaldron, over and above the Duty of Three pence before granted; and ſo after the ſame rate for any greater or leſs quantity; and no other duty ſhall be raiſed upon any Goods, Wares, Merchandiſe, or Things whatſoever.

This is the ſubſtance of the ſeveral Acts paſſed at any time for cleanſing and making our River navigable.

As the Duties payable to the Corporation for the Navigation on this River, have always been a conſiderable Article, particular Care hath therefore been taken of what turn'd to ſo good an Advantage. And, firſt, for the better ſecuring of them, It hath ever been a Rule, That all Wares and Merchandiſes imported to, or exported from, this Town, ſhould be loaded and unloaded at Wivenhoo, or the Hyth, and no where elſe [Y]. Next, a Water-Bailiff hath been appointed, many Years, for the more ready and effectual Collecting the Duties of the Channel. As it may be a pleaſure to the Reader, to know what yearly ſum theſe Duties have been lett for at different times, I ſhall give a ſhort account of it in the Note [Z]. A Table of the antient Toll, Cuſtoms, Fees, and Duties, payable, and due to the Mayor and Commonalty of Colcheſter, and their Water-Bailiff; for all manner of Goods, &c. brought unto, and carried from the Port of Colcheſter, by water, was ſettled Octob. 26, 1574, and renewed March 2, 1668-9, is in the Appendix [A].

There is a Cuſtom-houſe here, in which, for the better ſecuring and management of his Majeſty's Revenues, are the following Officers. A Collector: A Comptroller: A Surveyor: Two Land-waiters; one here, and one at Wivenhoo: A Superviſor of the Cuſtoms: and Three Riding-officers: Four Coal-meters, and a Corn-meter.— There belong alſo two Sloops to this Cuſtom-houſe, in each of which are about thirty men.

An Account is given above of the Hyth bridge, and of the Time when it was made (g). Before that, there was only a Foot-bridge, erected about the year 1406 or 1407, by the conſent of the Bailiffs and Twenty-four of the Council of the Town: Who covenanted with thoſe Inhabitants of the Hyth, to whom Liberty was given of building it, That it ſhould not be above eighteen inches wide; and never be made fit for horſe or carts to go over: If it were otherwiſe, or proved any prejudice to this Town, it was immediately to be demoliſhed. And it was to be ſo built, as not to hinder the Navigation up to Eaſt-bridge (h).

There was anciently a Water-mill here, conſiſting of Two Corn-mills, and Two Fulling-ſtocks; which being found a hurt to the Channel, was taken down (i).

The Dukes of Norfolk had formerly an Eſtate in this pariſh, in Houſes and Land (k); ſome of the Houſes were lately in the poſſeſſion of Mr. James Dean.

The Church of St. Leonard's is neat, well proportioned, and well built. It conſiſts of a Nave tyled, as is alſo the Chancel; and two Iſles, which go the whole length both of the Church and Chancel, leaded. The Roof of the Church, and of the Side Iſles, is of exquiſite Workmanſhip. The Roof of the Chancel is wainſcotted, and on the boards are painted the Patriarchs or Anceſtors of Jeſus Chriſt, according to his Genealogy in St. Matthew and St. Luke.

There are alſo handſome old Stalls remaining in the Chancel. On the North ſide of the Altar-piece is this Inſcription. "This Church was re-" paired and beautified, and the Altar-piece "painted in the year of our Lord 1724. Al-" derman Robert Merry, Daniel Cock, Gent. "Churchwardens."

Oppoſite to the Church, ſtands a large Parſonage-Houſe, with a good garden behind it. The Rector hath Three Acres and a half of Glebe; but the Pariſh being ſmall, the certain Profits of the Living are but inconſiderable. The Value of it, as return'd to the Governors of Qu. Anne's Bounty, is but 16*l.* per ann. Conſequently it is diſcharg'd from Firſt-fruits and Tenths.

This Rectory was in the gift of St. John's Abbey 'till the ſuppreſſion of that Houſe; when it came to the Crown. In 1702, Biſhop Compton obtain'd it by way of exchange, as is related above under H. Trinity; And in 1714, George Earl of Northampton, and his kinſman the Hon. Hatton Compton Eſquire, conveyed it, among others, to Balliol-college, in Oxford.

For many years it was held by ſequeſtration; the laſt who held it thus being the Rev. Barnabas Symſon, late Rector of St. James's. After his deceaſe, George Kilby A. B. was preſented thereto by the Crown, and had inſtitution May 21, 1742. Upon his reſignation, Stephen Aldrich B. A. was preſented by Balliol-college, and inſtituted 28 Feb. 1753 [C]. And John Bree, M. A. 1761, upon Ste. Aldrich's ceſſion.

Gilbert de Kelleſhule was Rector of this Church in 1310 (l). He is not mentioned by Mr. Newcourt.

There were two Chantries in this Church before the Reformation; one founded by - - - Barwick; and another by Edmund Harmanſon: Of both which an Account is given below (m).

CHAP. III.

Pariſhes within the Liberty.

HAVING thus finiſhed my Account of the Twelve Pariſhes that are properly within this Town, I now come to deſcribe thoſe Four that are at ſome ſmall diſtance from it, but within its Liberties. They are,

Lexden.
St. Michael's Mile-end.
Greenſtead; and
Bere-Church, alias Weſt-Doniland.

SECT. I.

LEXDEN.

Of theſe Lexden is the largeſt and moſt populous. It ſtands about a mile Weſt from the Town, in the road to London. On the eaſt, it is bounded by St. Mary's, part of H. Trinity, of St. Peter's, and Mile-end: On the north by this latter, and part of Weſt Bergholt: And on the weſt and ſouth, by Stanway, and part of St. Mary's. From whence the name is derived, cannot eaſily be diſcovered. The learned William Baxter imagined, it was ſo called from LEG, that is the 14th Legion quartered here (n). And a Friend fancied, it took its denomination from Lex or Law, beeauſe the Hundred-Court uſed to be held there. But I think both without ſufficient foundation. For, as the termination ꝺen, or ꝺun, is plainly Saxon; the former ſignifying a Valley, and the latter a Hill, both which agree to Lexden; it is hardly credible that the firſt ſyllable ſhould be fetched from the Latin. 'Tis therefore moſt probably a Saxon word entirely. Now as læx, or lex, have no ſignification applicable to this place [D]; and as it is called Leſſendena in Domeſday-book; I conjecture that the Name was formed from læꞅe, a paſture, leſſa or læꞅꞅa, leſs, and ꝺen a valley: Or elſe it may be derived from læc, ſignifying a ſtranger, and ꝺun a Hill [E]; that is, from the Incampments and Fortifications of the Strangers, viz. the Romans, in and about this Place.

However it be; At the time of William the Conqueror's Survey, Leſſenden as it is there called, was only a Berewit [F] i. e. a village or hamlet, in Stanway-Manor, as Leyre alſo was. In Edward the Confeſſor's reign, it contained within 4 Hides, 6 Villans, 10 Bordars, 4 Servants, 4 Carucates, held by the Tenents, and was worth 22 l. At the time of the Survey, it contained 5 Villans, 12 Bordars, 5 Servants, 2 Carucates in demeſne, and 3 belonging to the Tenents; Maſt for 100 hogs, 11 acres of meadow, 2 mills, and 16 ſocmen in 2 hides and 36 acres: Always 2 carucates and a half. And was worth 33 l. beſides 3 l. fine (o).

When it was ſeparated from the capital Manor of Stanway, and made a diſtinct Manor, I cannot learn. But in the reign of K. Hen. II. it was in

7. Robert, who died in 1328.

8. John died Octob. 18, 1361.

9. Walter died in Septemb. 1386.

12. Thomas Ratcliffe Eſq; who had this Manor with her. He died about the year 1440 (r) leaving iſſue

13. John his ſon and heir, very young, and probably under the guardianſhip of Sir Thomas Cobham Kt. For, Sir Thomas preſented to the Rectory of Lexden from the year 1440 to 1461 [K]: about which time his ward, Mr. Ratcliffe, ſeems to have come of age. Becauſe in the 39th of K. Henry VI. he obtain'd a pardon of intruſion, for entring upon the lands of his inheritance without livery (s). Some time after, he was knighted; and in the firſt of K. Henry VII. anno 1485, ſummoned to Parliament, by the title of Lord Fitz-walter (t). But unhappily engaging in a conſpiracy to ſet Perkin Warbeck on the throne, in 1494; he was convicted of high-treaſon, and carried to Calais, where he was ſoon after beheaded. Upon his attainder, this Manor, with the reſt of his eſtates, became forfeited to the Crown (u). But his ſon

14. Robert Ratcliffe was reſtored to his honour, Novemb. 3, 1505. And not only his attainder was reverſed, in 1509, by Act of Parliament; but he was alſo created, July 18, 1525, Viſcount Fitz-walter, and Decemb. 28, 1529, Earl of Suſſex. He died Nov. 27, 1542.

15. Henry, his ſon and ſucceſſor, died Feb. 17, 1556.

16. Thomas, ſon of this Henry, died June 19, 1583. And

17. Henry, brother of Thomas died April 10, 1593. The laſt of this Family.

18. Robert, ſon of Henry, died Sept. 22, 1629, without iſſue (w) [L].

19. Thomas, born, as is aforeſaid, before marriage. He was knighted by K. Charles I. and reſided ſome time here. But, during the civil wars, he was ſequeſtred for Delinquency [i. e. for not coming into the Parliament's meaſures] and the ſtanding Committee of this County acted for him (y). He married Mary, daughter of Sir John Byron, Knt. (z) and had by her, Charles, Thomas and Robert. . . . . . Sir Thomas died . . . . and was ſucceeded in the Manor by his eldeſt ſon

20. Charles, who became Baron Lucas, upon the death of John Lord Lucas, in 1671, according to the limitation above expreſs'd (a). Having no ſeat, he converted a Meſſuage in this pariſh, called the Tenter-Houſe and Lady-yard, [ſeized by his Steward, at a Court holden Novemb. 9, 1676, for want of repair, with four cloſes of paſture adjoyning, containing 15 acres] (b), into a convenient, tho' not a handſome Habitation, and built brick-walls round the Gardens. His Lordſhip married Penelope, youngeſt daughter of Francis Leke Earl of Scarſdale (c), by whom he had iſſue Anne married to . . . . Carey Eſq; to whom ſhe was ſecond wife; and by him mother of . . . Carey, Lord Falkland: (*) and Penelope; which latter, on the 17th of July 1690 (d), was married to Iſaac Selfe of Benacre in Wiltſhire Eſq; and dying Feb. 10, 1701-2, aged 38, after having had ſeven children, was buried in this Church. Her father, Charles Lord Lucas, died in the year 1688, without iſſue male. Upon which the Title came to his brother Robert; who having been bred up to arms, was made Lieutenant of the Tower of London, upon K. James's Abdication; being eſteemed a man of honour, and a lover of his country; and died without iſſue January 31, 1704-5 (e). He never was poſſeſſed of this Manor; for

21. Penelope, Lady Lucas, relict of Charles Lord Lucas, who had an eſtate in it for life, outlived him, and enjoyed it 'till her deceaſe.

A moiety of this Manor being ſettled upon her daughter Mrs. Selfe, and her heirs for ever, the Manor and Eſtate were ſold ſoon after Mrs. Selfe's death; and purchaſed towards the end of the year 1701 (f), by

22. Samuel Rawſtorn of London Eſq; who reſided here; and dying Feb. 17, 1719-20, was buried in the Family-vault at St. Lawrence-Jewry, London. By his wife, Sarah daughter of Thomas Papillon of Acris, in Kent, Eſq; he had iſſue, 1. Jane, married to the Rev. Edward Arrowſmith, M. A. Rector of St. Olave, Hart-ſtreet, London. 2. Sarah, wife of the Rev. Thomas Bullock, D. D. Dean of Norwich. 3. Elizabeth, wife of the Rev. James Kilner, M. A. one of his Majeſty's Chaplains in Ordinary, Rector of Lexden, and Vicar of Toleſhunt-Darcy. 4. Suſannah, widow and relict of John Eldred of Oliver's in Stanway Eſq; 5. Heſter, married to the Rev. William Bree, M. A. Rector of Mark's-Tay, and Tendring in this County. 6. Jerom, who married Anna-Maria daughter of William Turner of Canterbury Eſq; but died without Children. And 7. Thomas.

23. Mrs. Sarah Rawſtorn above-mentioned, having an Eſtate in this Manor for life, enjoyed it 'till her deceaſe, which happened January 13, 1739-40. Upon which it deſcended to her ſon,

24. Thomas Rawſtorn Eſq; the preſent Lord of this Manor; who married Anne daughter of John Fawler Eſq; one of the Commiſſioners of the Navy, by whom he had two daughters —Anne—and Sarah; of which laſt child ſhe died in childbed Novemb. 28, 1746 [M]. Sarah, the youngeſt daughter, is ſince deceas'd. And their father has to his ſecond wife Sophia, one the daughters of Edward Liſle of Crux-Eaſton in the county of Southampton Eſq; a very agreeable family.

Lexden-lodge is the Manor-houſe.

The Lord of this Manor did anciently owe ſuit and ſervice at the Law-hundred Courts of this Town, and was amerced when he did not perform that ſervice (g).

Circumſtances are ſo altered from what they originally were, when Lexden was only a Berewite to Stanway-manor; that the Lord of Stanway-hall-manor doth at preſent owe to this, fine, ſuit of Court, and a pair of gilt ſpurs, or a yearly rent of Six-pence (h).

Belonging to the Lord of this Manor there was anciently a very fine Park in this pariſh; the greateſt part of which lay on the North ſide of the River, oppoſite to the Shepen. How far it extended towards the Eaſt, or Bergholt-road, appears from hence, that the Five acres of land in Lexden, belonging to the Free-ſchool in this Town, were adjoining to the Park-pale (i).

There is another Manor in this pariſh, called Mot's, from a family of that name. About the year 1406, it was in the Spice family of Bocking: Clement Spice held it in 1485 [N]. And afterwards the Sayer family, from the 34th of Henry VIII. (k) 'till 1634, when John Sayer Eſq; conveyed it to James Lemyng of Colcheſter Gent. who married Mary, eldeſt daughter to Sir William Batten Knt. (l). And whoſe daughter Mary being married to Sir Iſaac Rebow, brought this Manor into that family. It was lately in his grandſon Charles-Chamberlain Rebow Eſq; and now in his daughter, married to Capt. Adams. But it is hardly known to be a Manor at preſent.

The Abbey of Waltham Holy-Croſs had ſome Lands in this Pariſh [O] near Sheet-ſtreet; on account of which, the Abbot was obliged to repair part of New-brige (m). After the diſſolution of the Monaſteries, they came into the Sayer-family by grant or purchaſe (n).

There were alſo ſome lands in this pariſh belonging to Heynes's and Barwick's Chantries, which were purchaſed by the Bailiffs and commonalty, at the ſuppreſſion (o); and ſold by them, ſoon after, to Thomas Rich of this pariſh. Some of theſe lands are copyhold, and known by the name of Lower Butlers, containing twelve acres (p). Loveland, otherwiſe Lukins, belonged to the ſame Tho. Rich, and before to Robert Goſſe, and to Thomas Bonham Eſq; now to the Rev. Jeremiah Johnſon.

On the South-ſide of the London road, juſt at the top of Lexden-hill, againſt the hedge that parts Talcoat's eighteen acres from Croſsfield, and almoſt oppoſite to Horſee or Stone-Crouch-lane; antiently ſtood a famous Croſs, built of brick and ſtone, part of the pedeſtal of which was remaining within the memory of man. The reaſon why I take notice of it, is, becauſe 'tis frequently mentioned in ancient Writings, and ſome of them have a particular reference thereto.

Another, named Lamb's-Croſs, in this pariſh, ſtood on the Aldham-road; at the Four ways, of which one leads down to Newbridge.

Finally, Pedders-croſs ſtood on the Heath, at the Turning leading to Goſbeck's.

On Lexden-Heath, partly in this pariſh, and partly in that of Stanway, there are very conſiderable Works and Intrenchments [P], which evidently appear to be Remains of the Caſtra, Caſtella, and Præſidia, mentioned by Tacitus, that were placed abont the ancient Colonia-Camulodunum (q). From Lexden-heath they extend Eaſt, a good way towards Colcheſter; what is called Hollow-lane, adjoyning to the Commons, being part of them. And thence they keep to the London-road, and have ſome parts corre-

We find this eſtate deſcribed as one meſſuage, 160 acres of arable, 10 of meadow, 10 of paſture, 16 of alder, and 2s. 5d. rent, holden of John Lord Denham. Inquiſ. 1 Ric. III.

ſponding, as I am inform'd, on the North-ſide of the River. They croſs again the ſame London-road, at the extremity of the Heath, on the Weſt, and thence proceed Northerly to the place called King Coel's Kitchin, which was part of them. They ſeem to have been continued from thence towards the River; but the culture of the Land hath almoſt defaced them in ſome places.

In the year 1722, they were ſurveyed and meaſured by the Rev. Mr. Thomas Lufkin and Payler Smith Eſq; and their Survey is given below in the Note [Q]. By a Perambulation taken of the Liberties of this Town in 1563, it appears, that theſe Entrenchments went then under the name of Grymes Ditch (r): which is the ſame as is vulgarly given to Agricola's, or Antoninus Wall, in Scotland [R].

The preſent number of Houſes or Families in the pariſh, is about an hundred and twenty. In 1692, Two hundred and Forty perſons were rated here to the Poll-tax.

Lexden Church ſtands on the South-ſide of the London-road, about the middle of the village. It is of one pace, as is alſo the Chancel; and both are tyled. But, on the North-ſide of the Church, there is a little iſle, or chapel, running North and South in length; on the top of which ſtands a clock. At the Weſt-end is a ſpire ſhingled, containing one Bell. This Church is a Rectory, and hath been always appendant to the Manor, tho' ſeveral Preſentations have been made by other perſons than the Lords, as may be ſeen in Mr. Newcourt. In the King's Books it is valued at 12 l.

Thomas . . . . . was Rector here in 1356 (s).

MILE-END.

SECT. II.

MILE-END claims the next place to Lexden, as being the moſt conſiderable of the three Pariſhes within the Liberties of Colcheſter, that remain to be taken into conſideration. The ground of the name, is the ſame as of Mile-end in Stepney-pariſh; namely, becauſe this is a Mile from Colcheſter, as that is from London. In ſome ancient Records it is written Miland (w), and la Mylande (x); but that ſeems to be owing to the Ignorance of the Times.

On the Weſt, this pariſh is bounded by Lexden: On the North, by Great Horſeley, Boxſtead, and Langham: On the Eaſt, by part of Ardley, of

It is of a large Extent, eſpecially from North-Eaſt to South-Weſt, and contains a great quantity of ground. But it being quite a country Pariſh, the number of Perſons charged in it to the Poll tax, in 1692, was but ninety-four. However, many Houſes, or rather Cottages, have been erected in ſeveral parts of it, ſince.

The moſt conſiderable Eſtate in this pariſh, is that which is known by the name of Mile-end-Heath, and the Severals; but anciently was called King's-wood, and King's-wood-heath, becauſe it anciently belonged to the King. A great part of it was a Wood, but is now converted into arable Land, which is properly the Severals; that is Separate, and not common Ground: and the reſt a Heath, as it is now.

It was originally part of the Royal Foreſt, and of the King's demeſnes; and was granted to the Burgeſſes of Colcheſter, either by K. Henry I. or K. Stephen, for a rent or fee-farm of Forty Shillings a year. But, about the year 1168, it came into the hands of K. Henry II. (tho' we are not told upon what account) and, in conſideration of that, an abatement of the yearly ſum of forty ſhillings was made in the fee-farm of this Town (y). After that, it was for ſome time granted to the Keeper of Colcheſter-caſtle, as appears by the Record below [S]. A Perambulation of it was taken in the 26th of Edward I. which is placed in the Appendix (z). Thus it continued in the Crown 'till March 4, 1534-5, when K. Henry VIII. granted it again to the Bailiffs and Commonalty of the Town of Colcheſter, for the Sum of One hundred pounds paid into the Hanaper, and in conſideration that they ſhould neither require nor have any allowance or deduction of the aforeſaid ſum of Forty ſhillings in their fee-farm for the future [T]. His Majeſty, I ſay, granted it to the Bailiffs and Commonalty of this Burgh or Town, under the name of the whole Foreſt, and Wood-land, Paſture, Waſte, Under-wood, Alder-car, Heath, Common, and Aſſert, of Kingeſwood, alias Kingeſwood-heth; and all the Timber and other Trees, Wood and Underwood there growing; with all and every their appurtenances, profits, and advantages whatſoever; lying and being in the Towns, Pariſhes, Hamlets and Places of Mile-end, Lexden, Weſt Bargholt, Boxſted, Horkeſley, Langham, and Ardeley, in the County of Eſſex; and by what name or names ſoever, or by whatſoever bounds, limits, or extents the ſame were known, reputed, called, bounded, or divided, in the Exchequer, or in any other Court of Record; or by whatever Perambulation or Inqueſt found, certified, or deſcribed. With liberty to the ſaid Bailiffs and Commonalty, and their ſucceſſors, to cut down and carry away all manner of Trees, Wood, and Underwood, growing in the ſaid Foreſt and Wood, whenever they ſhall pleaſe. And to have and receive all ſorts of Profits, Liberties, and Advantages, in the ſaid Wood or Foreſt, in as ample manner and form as King Henry and his Progenitors ever did. To have and to hold the ſaid Foreſt and Wood, with their appurtenances, to the then Bailiffs and Commonalty and their ſucceſſors for ever, for the yearly rent of One penny, payable at the Exchequer within a fortnight after the feaſt of St. Michael the archangel, in lieu of all ſervices or demands whatſoever. And with power and liberty to view and perambulate that Foreſt, &c. and its ſeveral members and appurtenances, whenever they ſhall think proper: And to divide, incloſe, and hold them in ſeveralty for ever, as their own proper land, and part of the Liberty of the Town of Colcheſter, without impeachment or moleſtation from the king, his heirs or ſucceſſors, or from any officers of his whatſoever (a). This grant was confirm'd by Act of Parliament.

For ſome years this Eſtate continued in the Poſſeſſion of the Bailiffs and Commonalty; which elected four Woodwards every year (whereof two at leaſt were of the Common Council) to take care of the Timber, and other trees (b). And the poor Free-burgeſſes had ſome of the underwood for firing (c). But, about the year 1576, Qu. Elizabeth ſent her letters to the Magiſtrates of this Town, requeſting, but in effect commanding them, to leaſe King's-wood-heath to Sir Thomas Heneage, Kt. [U]. Accordingly, the Bailiffs and Commonalty granted him a Sixty years leaſe of the inſevered and incloſed part of it, for the conſideration of 100 l. and the yearly rent of 44 l. Reſerving to themſelves the fifteen-ſcore acres, open and unincloſed, that were parcel of the ſaid wood, land, and paſture, lying together, from Braiſwick towards the road leading from Colcheſter to Skypping-ſtreet (d). At the expiration of this Leaſe, ſome of the Free-burgeſſes were againſt Leaſing thoſe Lands again; but, notwithſtanding their oppoſition, they were let to ſeveral perſons (e), particularly June 2, 1656, to Thomas Lucas, Gent. for 80 l. per ann. Finally, Auguſt 6, 1722, they were leaſed to Daniel de Foe, for Ninety-nine years, at the yearly rent of 120 l. and a fine of 500 l. by the name of Kings-wood-heath, or the Severalls: Brinckley-farme: and Tubbeſwick.—The Tenant covenanting to pay all the Land-tax, &c. Dugdale's Hiſt. of St. Paul's, edit. 1716, p. 111.——His Seal affixed to the Leaſe above-mentioned, is, A Greyhound courſant between three rams heads full-fac'd.

Leaſe was afterwards aſſigned to Walter Bernard, Eſq; late Alderman and Sheriff of London, and was ſince in his brother and heir, the Rev. John Bernard Rector of Morton in this County; now in Mr. Wragg, his nephew.

All the Timber that grew upon this Eſtate was felled ſome years ago.

This is the moſt valuable eſtate belonging to the Corporation. If it was let to advantage, and the adjoining Heath and Waſte incloſed by Act of Parliament, it would bring a fine yearly income to the poor Free-burgeſſes, of much more worth and conſequence than their preſent Commons. Inſtead of that, 'tis incroach'd upon on all ſides.

Beſides this Eſtate of King's-wood and King's-wood-heath, there is within this Pariſh the Manor of Eaſt Mile-end and Abbot's Hall ſo called becauſe it formerly belonged to the Abbot and Monks of St. Oſith in this County: and for which they owed Suit at the Law-hundred-Courts of this Town (f). Upon the ſurrender of their Houſe on July 28, 1539 (g), K. Henry granted, the ſame year, this manor, with Mile-end-hall, to Thomas Cromwell afterwards Earl of Eſſex (h). They reverting to the Crown, upon his attainder which happened the year following, K. Henry, 9 April 1544, granted them to John de Vere Earl of Oxford, to hold in capite (i). But they did not long remain in that noble Family: For

1. John Lucas Eſq; died September 13, 1556, ſeiz'd of the Manor of Mile-end with the appertenances, and certain lands and tenements called Monke-downe, held in capite by the 20th part of a knight's fee, and valued at 13 l. 14 s. 8 d. per Annum (k). In this eſtate he was ſucceeded by
2. Sir Thomas Lucas.
3. Sir Thomas.
4. Sir John, created Baron Lucas of Shenfield in Eſſex, January 3, 1644-5 [W].
   His only daughter and heir,
   Mary (created Baroneſs Lucas of Crudwell in Wiltſhire, May 7, 1663) being married to
5. Antony De Grey, Earl of Kent, brought this, with other fine Eſtates, into that family. She died Novemb. 1, 1700, leaving iſſue
6. Henry, who, upon his father's deceaſe, Aug. 19, 1702, became Earl of Kent; and was created, December 14, 1706, Viſcount Goodrich, of Goodrich-caſtle, in Herefordſhire, Earl of Harold in the County of Bedford, and Marquis of Kent: And, April 28, 1710, Duke of Kent. His ſons Antony, Henry, Lucas, and George, dying before him without iſſue, his Grace ſettled his real eſtates upon Jemima, the only daughter and heir of his eldeſt daughter Annabella, who had married John Campbel Lord Viſcount Glenorchy, ſon and heir apparent to John Earl of Broadalbin in Scotland, and died on the 2d of March 1726-7.

This Lady Jemima Campel was married in May 1740 to the Honourable Philip Yorke Eſq; eldeſt ſon to the Right Honourable Philip Baron Hardwick Lord Chancellor of Great Britain; [now Earl of Hardwick;] and created Marchioneſs de Grey. Upon her grandfather the Duke of Kent's deceaſe, June 5, 1740, ſhe and her conſort became poſſeſſed of the Manors of Mile-end, Dilbridge, and Green-ſtead; and of many other noble Eſtates in this and other Counties.

The Rectory of St. Michael's Mile-end was, and continued in the gift of the Prior and Convent of St. Botolph till their ſuppreſſion. Then the Advowſon of it coming to the Crown, K. Henry VIII. gave it, among the reſt of the poſſeſſions of that Priory, to Sir Thomas Audeley, Chancellor of the Court of Augmentation, afterwards Lord Chancellor of England (l), who by Will gave it, in 1544, to his brother Thomas Audeley of Bere-Church Eſq; He did not keep it long; but, before the year 1551, ſold it to John Lucas, Eſq; in whoſe poſterity, ſeated at St. John's Abbey in this Town, it continued for about an hundred and twenty years. From them it deſcended to Antony, and Henry, Earls and Duke of Kent: and is now in the Rt Hon. Philip Earl of Hardwick, and his Conſort the Lady Marchioneſs de Grey, Baroneſs Lucas of Crudwell.

The Church is of one pace with the Chancel, and very ſmall: At the Weſt end there is a little wooden Turret, containing one Bell. It is rated in the King's Books at 07 l. 10 s. 00 d.

John Hetoun, not mention'd by Mr. Newcourt, was Rector of this Pariſh, in 1310 (m).

SECT. III.

GREEN-STEAD,

or corruptly Grinſtead.

THIS is the third of the Out-pariſhes, within the Liberties of Colcheſter. On the Weſt, it is bounded by part of St. Botolph's, of St. James's, the Hyth, and St. Giles's: On the South, partly by Wivenhoe, and Elm-ſtead: On the Eaſt, by part of this latter, and of Ardeley: And on the North, by part of St. Botolph's and St. James's.

The name of it ſeems to be derived from the nature of the place, at the time it receiv'd that appellation; namely, a Green paſture, or uncultivated Place.

II. rot. 8. (n) Rot. 46 and 49 Edw. III. rot. 3. (nn) v. St. Mary Magdal. Hoſp.

[W] See a more particular account of this family under St. Giles's.

There are but Twenty-ſix houſes in this pariſh: For many have been pull'd down in the Street leading to the Hyth. But in 1692, when there was abundance more ſtanding than now, the number of Perſons rated here to the Poll-tax, was One hundred and ſeven.

In Edward the Confeſſor's reign, Godric, a freeman, that is a perſon of note (o), had in this pariſh four houſes with land, four hides, and the Church. But, at the time of William the Baſtard's Survey, it was found that Godric's ſons had left the land in four parts. Two of them the King had; and there, in two hides, were two carucates in demeſne, 3 villanes, 2 ſervants, 24 acres of meadow and marſh, and half a mill: value 40 s. Earl Euſtace had another part; in which there was one hide, the Church, the fourth part of a mill, and of a meadow: Value 30 s. John Fitz-Waleram had the fourth part, with one hide, the fourth part of a mill, and of a meadow: value 30 s. (p).

This Manor, or at leaſt three parts of it, were afterwards in Eudo Dapifer, who ſettled them upon his new foundation of St. John's Abbey, with the Tithes of this whole pariſh (q). But the fourth part of the vill of Greneſtede was given (by whom is unknown) to the Prior and Canons of St. Botolph's, and confirmed to them by K. Richard I. (r). Upon the diſſolution of the Monaſteries, this laſt part was given to the Lord Chancellor Audeley (s).

But the Manor was granted by King Henry VIII, April 10, 1539, to Thomas Cromwell, ſoon after created Earl of Eſſex (t). Upon whoſe Attainder it reverting to the Crown; K. Henry, December 14, 1540, let a Twenty one years leaſe of it to Thomas Barvys, or Barnys, at the yearly rent of 17 l. [X]. And confirmed to Sir John Raynsford, a leaſe of the Herbage and Pannage of Greenſtead Park, demiſed to him by the late Abbot and Monks of St. John's, at 20 s. per annum.

In the year 1557, Bernard Hampton, Eſq; one of the Clerks of the Privy Council, purchaſed of K. Philip and Q. Mary, for the ſum of Four hundred and fourteen pounds ſeven ſhillings and four-pence, the Reverſion of all the premiſſes; viz. of the ſite of the Manor of Greenſtead, and the whole yearly ſum of 17 l. And alſo the whole Houſe, Manor and Park of Greenſtead; belonging to the late attainted Abbot of St. John's. And all the Buildings, Lodges, Deers, Court-leet, &c. in Greenſtead *Pentrice and the ſuburbs of Colcheſter: with all woods, &c. amounting in the whole to the clear yearly value of 43 l. Reſerving to his Majeſty the bells, and lead (except what was in gutters) and all advowſons, &c. To have and to hold the aforeſaid Manor, Park, &c. to the ſaid Bernard Hampton, his heirs and aſſigns, to their own proper uſe for ever, by the 40th part of a Knight's-fee: Paying to the King and his heirs 20 l. per Annum (u).

It did not long continue in this family: For, July 2, 1560, Bernardine (w) [or, according to others, (x) Leonard] Hampton, the ſon, got a Licenſe to alienate all the premiſſes to Laurence Cockſon: Who, Decemb. 18, 1563, ſold them again to Thomas Lucas, Eſq; (y). And they have paſſed, as the Manor of Mile-end-hall, to the Rt. Hon. Earl of Hardwick.

In the grant, or ſale, to B. Hampton, there was included, a Meadow at Eaſt-Bridge, called Eaſt-Meadow, containing Three acres, lately belonging to St. John's Abbey, and leaſed Nov. 29, 1542, to Edward Cole: And Eight acres of Meadow, lying in Whave-Meadow within the Manor of Green-ſtead; and a Field in the ſame pariſh, called Whiten-field, containing Fifteen acres; that had been let July 9, 1544, to John Ryther for 21 years (z). All which I ſuppoſe were conveyed with the reſt of the Eſtate.

The Park above-mentioned, was incloſed by the Abbot of St. John's, in Henry the IIId's reign (a).

The Church of Green-ſtead is of one pace with the Chancel; and both are tyled. At the Weſt-end ſtands a ſquare Tower of brick, containing one Bell.

This Rectory was all along in the gift of the Abbot and Convent of St. John's in this Town, till their ſuppreſſion. It then came to the Crown, and hath ever ſince continued in the gift of the Lord Chancellor, or Lord Keeper of the Great Seal. It is rated in the King's books at 5 l.

John Aecum, not taken notice of by Mr. Newcourt, was Rector of this Church in the year 1320, and Thomas Juſcard, in 1323 (b).

SECT. IV.

BERE-CHURCH, alias Weſt-Doniland,

IS the laſt of the four Out-pariſhes, within the Bounds and Liberties of the Town of Colcheſter. Its name Bere-Church, denotes a Church in the Corn-fields [Y]; And it is called Weſt-Doniland, on account of its ſituation with regard to Eaſt-Doniland. But from whence the word Doniland is derived I am not able to judge: Unleſs it is from the Saxon word ꝺun-lanꝺ, a hilly land or place; of the ſame ſignification as the Downs in many counties. And what ſeems to make it probable is, that it was anciently written Duniland.

It hath on the South, Abberton, and Layer de la Hay; on the Weſt, Stanway; on the North, St. Giles's, and part of St. Botolph's; and on the Eaſt, part of St. Giles's, and Eaſt-Doniland.

This pariſh is within the Manor of Weſt-Doniland. It is very ſmall; for, in 1692, there were but Thirty-five perſons rated therein to the Poll-tax.

Eudo, founder of St. John's, gave this Manor, among others to that Abbey [Z]. And it remain'd in the poſſeſſion of the Abbot and Monks 'till their ſuppreſſion, when it came to the Crown. K. Edward VI, in the year 1547, June 22, granted not only this Manor, but the ſite of St. John's Abbey, and the demeſnes thereunto belonging, &c. to John Dudley Viſcount Liſle and Earl of Warwick, afterwards the Great Duke of Northumberland (c).

Monk-wick was always an Appendage to this Manor. This Monk-wick was a Farm [A], which the Abbot and Monks of St. John's kept in their own hands, to ſupply the occaſions of their Houſe. It continued in their poſſeſſion 'till the ſuppreſſion of the Monaſteries; but, May 29, 1543, K. Henry VIII. lett a twenty one years leaſe of it to Robert Stepnie of Stratford Gent. for the yearly ſum of 21 l. And K. Edward VI. June 22, 1547, granted the Reverſion of the ſame to John Dudley Earl of Warwick, juſt now mentioned; it being then valued at 22 l. 9 s. 7 d. $\frac{1}{2}$. and charged with a Quit-rent of 2 l. 5 s. 11 d. $\frac{1}{2}$ q. (d).

Dudley gave this Manor of Weſt Doniland with Monkwick to

1. Sir Francis Jobſon, who had the care of his children, and to whom he was indebted in large ſums (e) [B]. Sir Francis made it the place of his reſidence, and dying there June 4, 1573, was buried in St. Giles's Church (f).

It was next enjoyed by his two ſons,

2. John Jobſon, Eſq; and
3. Edward Jobſon Eſq;

The latter dying May 28, 1590, left a ſon who died young, Decemb. 6, 1602 (g), and two Daughters,

4. Mary, who was married, in 1610, to George Brook of Aſpall in Suffolk Eſq;—and Elizabeth, that died unmarried 28 May 1592 [C].

After the death of their father Edward Jobſon, his widow was married again, in Feb. 1595, to William Gray Eſq; who preſented in her right to the Rectory of Eaſt Doniland in 1598 and 1610 (h).

About the year 1592, this Manor was purchaſed by

5. Robert Barker Serjeant-at-law, and Town-Clerk of this Borough (i); who dyed 5 April 1618; and continued in his poſterity 'till about the year 1718. Then Henry Barker Eſq; who had married Anne daughter of Matthew Scrivener formerly Town-Clerk, dying without iſſue; this Eſtate, according to the limitation in old Henry Barker's Will, came to
6. Thomas Perry, ſuppoſed to be his natural ſon, and was ſold by him to
7. Knox Ward Eſq; late Clarencieux King at Arms; and is now in his eldeſt ſon and heir.

Beſides this Manor, Sir Francis Jobſon had ſeveral Tithes, and Portions of Tithes, in this

[B] The Family of Jobſon, or Jopſon as it is ſometimes written, was of ſome antiquity in this Town. They ſeem to have originally come from the North; for Tho. Jopſon born at Heſlynton [or Eſlington] Com. Northumberl. was admitted a Free-burgeſs of this Town in 1462. (Oath-book, p. 141. where he is again mentioned in p. 142. 154. 165. He is alſo mentioned in Cur. Rot. 13 & 14 Edw. IV. rot. 13. and Rot. Cur. 1 Ric. III. rot. 19.) He was one of the Chamberlains of the ſame, in 1476. (Rot. Cur. 16 Edw. IV. rot. 1.) And one of the Bailiffs, in the years 1481, 1485, 1487, 1494, 1499. (Liſt of Bail.) His ſon William Jopſon is mentioned in the Oath-book (p. 167). And was an Alderman, and one of the Bailiffs in 1521. (Ibid. p. 183. and Liſt of Bail.) Francis Jobſon, Eſq; is mentioned in the Oath-book (p. 207.) anno 1546; and was a Knight in 1557. (Ibid. p. 219.) What rendered him conſiderable, and procured him great Eſtates, chiefly from the ſpoil of the Monaſteries; was his intermarriage with Elizabeth Plantagenet, third daughter and co-heir to Arthur Viſcount Liſle, natural ſon of King Edward IV. by Elizabeth Lucy, or Jane Shore: For he was not only knighted, but alſo made Maſter of the Jewel-houſe, and Lieutenant of the Tower of London; and appointed one of the Viſitors of the Monaſteries. By this Lady he had iſſue,—John—Edward—Henry—Thomas: and Mary, married to John, ſecond ſon of John Moigne, of Witham in this County.—John Jobſon, the eldeſt ſon, married Elizabeth daughter and co-heir to Sir Richard Pexall of Beaurepair, Eſq; Maſter of the Buckhounds to Q. Elizabeth, by whom he had iſſue Pexall his ſon and heir: and two daughters—one married to Clement Medley of Whitneſt, in Warwickſhire,—and the other, firſt to H. Malby of Roſs in Ireland; and ſecondly, to Sir William Sidley.—Edward, ſecond ſon of Sir Francis, married, 1. Mary Forth, daughter and heir of Edmund Markaunt of Dunham-hall in this County, by whom he had no iſſue: and 2. Mary daughter of John Bode of Rochford, to whom he was third huſband: and had by her Mary and Elizabeth, mentioned above. The Heralds are entirely ſilent, with regard to the iſſue of Pexall Jobſon. F. Sandford and Stebbing, ubi ſupra, p. 452. See alſo J. Collier's Eccleſ. Hiſt. Vol. II. p. 157.

Pariſh; which were confirm'd to him, among other things, by Qu. Elizabeth, in the 2d year of her reign (k).

Bere-Church-Hall is another Manor in this pariſh (l). It was part of the Demeſnes of St. John's Abbey; but the Monks of that Houſe alienated it to Sir Thomas Audeley Lord Chancellor of England, with the Manor of Goſſebecks in Stanway (m); in order to ſtop, if poſſible, his rapacious hands, and to ſave the reſt of their poſſeſſions; but all in vain.

By his Will, dated April 19, 1544, this

1. Thomas Lord Audeley gave the Manor of Bere-Church to his Brother Thomas Audeley Eſq; for his life [D]; and after his deceaſe, to his eldeſt ſon Thomas Audeley (n).
2. Thomas the father died 20 Aug. 1557 (o). As did
3. Thomas the ſon Decemb. 31, 1572 (p).

The next poſſeſſors were,

4. Robert Audeley Eſq; who died Septemb. 27, 1624. Aged 72 (q).
5. Sir Henry Audeley Kt.
6. Thomas Audeley Eſq; eldeſt ſon of Sir Henry.
7. Henry Audeley Eſq; younger ſon of Sir Henry; who died without iſſue Sept. 1, 1714. Whereupon Bere-Church-Hall was put by his widow into the hands of James Smyth, Eſq; who had a mortgage upon it, redeemable however by the Audeley-family. And the ſaid Mr. J. Smyth, by Will, left this, with the bulk of his other great eſtates, to an unborn ſon of Sir Trafford Smith, Bart. his elder brother's eldeſt ſon.

Sir Trafford dyed unmarried in December 1765. Whereupon this, and the reſt of the Inheritance both real and perſonal, deſcended to his next brother the Rev. Robert Smyth's ſon, now Sir Robert Smyth Bart. a worthy young man; who is making great improvements to the Houſe built here by the foreſaid Mr. James Smyth.

This Manor hath now no Tenants.

There was a Park round Bere-Church Hall: But the Houſe itſelf being decayed, hath been converted into a Farm-houſe, and rebuilt. It was plundered of its Furniture in the beginning of the civil Wars (r).

As this was for ſome time a Seat of a Branch of the Audeley-family, I ſhall give ſome account of them here.

And I ſhall begin with Thomas Audeley Lord Chancellor of England, to whom they owed their Riſe, Grandeur, and Riches. This Thomas Audeley was not deſcended from the ancient and noble Family of Audeley, or Aldithley, as might be imagined from the name [E]; but was born of obſcure Parents at Earl's-Colne in this County, in the year 1488 (s). Being brought up to the Law, his firſt preferment was to be Town-clerk of Colcheſter (t); and in the year 1516 he was admitted a free burgeſs of the ſame (u). As he ſo well knew this Town, 'tis no wonder he got ſo much of the Abbey-lands hereabouts. In 1526, he was Autumn-Reader of the Inner-Temple; and, by the Court's influence, Speaker of the Houſe of Commons, in the Parliament that began November 3, 1529 (w): In which ſtation rendring himſelf a thorough Tool to K. Henry VIII. he became ſo great a favourite, that he was conſtituted, in 1530, the King's Attorney for the Duchy of Lancaſter (x); advanced, the ſame year, to the degree of a Serjeant at law, and, November 14, made the King's Serjeant (y): and, ſhortly after, Chancellor of the Court of Augmentation (z). Upon the reſignation of Sir Thomas More, he was conſtituted Lord Keeper of the Great Seal, May 20, 1532, and knighted: and on the 26th of January 1533, declared Lord Chancellor (a). He was very zealous in the diſſolution of the Monaſteries; and obtained from the King, Chriſt-Church Priory near Aldgate, London; St. Botolph's Priory, the Crouched Friers, and other large poſſeſſions in and about this Town; and eſpecially the great Abbey of Walden. Novemb. 29, 1538, he was created Baron Audeley of Walden, and inſtalled Knight of the Garter (b). He died May 8, 1544, aged 56, and was buried in a new Chappel he had erected at Walden. His Lady was Elizabeth, daughter of Thomas Grey, Marquis of Dorſet; by whom he had two Daughters, Margaret, and Mary. The latter died without iſſue. But Margaret was married, 1. to Henry Dudley (a younger ſon of John Dudley Duke of Northumberland, ſlain at St. Quintin in Picardy in 1557) and 2. to Thomas Duke of Norfolk, being his ſecond wife (c); And he had by her, Thomas Howard, created Earl of Suffolk, July 21, 1603 (d); who was Lord Treaſurer of England from 1614 to 1620. This Earl having got immenſe ſums in the beginning of K. James's reign, on account of his great intereſt at Court (e), he built that ſtately pyle near Walden, at the charge of 190,000*l.* (f) which, in honour of his grand-father, he named Audeley-Houſe.

To return to the Audeley-family: Thomas Lord Audeley had two brothers, named alſo Thomas (g). The elder was ſeated at Bere-Church, and died in 1557, leaving three ſons; two named Thomas, and John.

The younger of theſe two Thomas's was ſeated at Goſbecks, and died July 7, 1584. John died July 20, 1588 (h).

[E] Sir William Dugdale rightly ſuppoſes, " he was " not of the family of the old Lords Audley; the Arms " which he bore being totally different from theirs." Baronage, Vol. II. p. 362.

Thomas, the elder brother, was of Bere-Church, and died Decemb. 11, 1572, as hath been obſerved a little before. By Katharine his wife, daughter of Robert Southwell of Wood-riſing in Norfolk [F], he had iſſue Robert, and John; Elizabeth, and Dorothy.

Robert married Katherine, fourth and youngeſt daughter of Edward, Baron Windſor of Bradenham; by whom he had Henry—Robert,—Katharine wife of John Thecher: and Thomas—and Richard, who both died young. Robert, the father, died Sept. 27, 1624, aged 72. And his Lady, Decemb. 15, 1641, in the 74th year of her age (i).

Henry, the eldeſt ſon and heir, was knighted by K. Charles I. and was a ſufferer during the civil wars (k). He married about June 1628, Mrs. Anne Packington, ſiſter and coheir of Humphrey Packington of Chaddeſley-Corbet in the county of Worceſter Eſq; by whom he had iſſue, Thomas his ſon and heir.—Henry, who died young: and Katharine—Mary and Abigail (l). The two laſt died unmarried; and Katharine became the wife of Henry Barker of Monkwick. To his ſecond wife, Sir Henry took Anne Daniell, by whom he had a ſon named Henry. I have not been able to learn the time of his death.

Thomas, eldeſt ſon of Sir Henry, as mention'd above, ſeems to have been a conſiderable acquirer. For, in April 1685, he purchaſed of Mary Yate, &c. the Manor of Heath in Herefordſhire; and, at other times, the Manor of Dagnham in this County of Sir Richard Allibon Kt. and the manor or meſſuage of Goſbacks in Stanway, of Sir Edward Gage Kt. and others. He died about the beginning of the year 1697 without iſſue, and inteſtate: whereupon the foreſaid Eſtates deſcended to his two ſiſters and coheirs. Mary, ſome time after the death of her ſiſter Katharine, filed a Bill in Chancery againſt her ſon and heir Henry Barker: and at length it was decreed, That Mary Audeley ſhould have the Manor of Heath, and Henry Barker the manors of Dagnham and Goſbacks (m).

But Bere-Church-hall, and the paternal Eſtate of the Audeleys, deſcended to Henry, the younger ſon. He was a weak and wicked man, that became a prey to his vices, and to ſome of his retainers that had more cunning than honeſty. After having waſted his Eſtates, he was forced to take ſhelter in the Fleet, where he died a priſoner, Septemb. 1, 1714, having been long parted from his Wife, Elizabeth, daughter of Philip Smith, Viſcount Strangford in Ireland. A friend coming accidentally to ſee him, found he was dead, and juſt ready to be put into a mean coffin, ſuch as is beſtowed on the moſt deſpicable priſoners. But he ſtopping the Burial, and giving notice of it to his widow, ſhe allowed 80*l*. for the funeral; and accordingly he was brought down and buried in this Church, Septemb. 6.

It is obſervable, That there is not any one Heir of this Family in being; at leaſt the moſt inquiſitive ſearch hath not been able to find out any. So unſtable is human Grandeur, ſo ſhort-liv'd all earthly acquiſitions [G].

The Church of Weſt-Doniland, which is but ſmall, was a Chapel of eaſe to H. Trinity; till the year 1536 (as hath been ſhewn under that pariſh) and in the gift of the Abbot and Convent of St. John. But in the year juſt now mentioned, it was ſeparated from H. Trinity; and, even before the ſuppreſſion of the Monaſteries, came into the poſſeſſion of the Audeleys; and of their ſucceſſors owners of Bere-Church-hall. 'Tis only a ſtipendiary Curacy of 14*l*. per annum.

William Frank is called Vicar of this pariſh, in a Taxation, 24 Edw. I. And Theophilus Roberts was Miniſter here about the year 1645, with a ſalary of 20 l. a year (n).

Stephen Aldrich, B. A. is the preſent Stipendiary Curate.

In a Chapel adjoining to the North of this Church, there are ſome good Monuments of the Audeley-family.

SECT. I.

St JOHN's ABBEY.

THIS noble and ſtately Monaſtery was founded by EUDO, Dapifer, Sewer or Steward, to William I. ſurnamed the Conqueror. He was a perſon of great eminence in his time. His father, Hubert de Rie, was a ſervant and favorite to that Prince; who ſent him Embaſſador into England, with a grand retinue, to Edward the Confeſſor, then lying on his death-bed. And he managed him with ſo much dexterity, that Edward appointed William to ſucceed him in the Engliſh throne. For which good ſervice Hubert had the promiſe of the office of Steward of William's houſhold, as ſoon as he ſhould be poſſeſs'd of the Crown. But after his Conqueſt, being apprehenſive of ſome commotions in Normandy, he ſent back thither Hubert, with his three eldeſt ſons, to keep all things quiet there, being perſons in whom he could thoroughly confide (o). Eudo, the fourth ſon, remained in England, in K. William's ſervice, who gave him very large poſſeſſions; viz. Twenty-five Lordſhips in Eſſex, Seven in Hertfordſhire, One in Berkſhire, Twelve in Bedfordſhire, Nine in Norfolk, and Ten in Suffolk (p). Shortly after, he was made Steward of the King's houſhold, in the room of William Fitz-Oſbern. He was very inſtrumental in raiſing William II. to the throne.

[F] She was a bold and turbulent woman, and endeavoured to withdraw her Eſtates in this pariſh out of the bonnds of the Corporation. But, after a long conteſt and law-ſuit, ſhe was forced to ſubmit.

[G] The Armes of Audeley were Quarterly, Or, and Azure, indented, an Eagle diſplayed, Or. On a bend dexter, of the ſecond, between a frette two martlets of the firſt.

For waiting upon the Conqueror, in Normandy, when he lay on his death-bed, he adviſed the young Prince, not to neglect ſo fair an opportunity. Whereupon they two paſſed into England; and perſuaded the Keeper of the Royal Treaſury, then at Wincheſter, to deliver the keys of it to them. Next, Eudo poſted to Dover, Pevenſey, Haſtings, and other Caſtles, along the Sea-coaſt; and made the keepers of them ſwear, not to deliver them up to any one but whom he ſhould appoint: pretending that the King deſigned to make a conſiderable ſtay in Normandy, and would have good aſſurance of the ſafety of his Caſtles, from himſelf his ſteward. Having ſecured theſe important points, he diſcovers the King's death; and thus was William Rufus, by his means and contrivance, quietly placed on the Engliſh throne. For which important ſervice, he became a great favourite of that King, and very conſiderable throughout the Nation. And therefore the ancient and conſiderable Town of Colcheſter, having ſuffered great oppreſſions under the late troubleſome and arbitrary reign of William the Conqueror, deſired to have Eudo for their governor, and to put themſelves under his protection. As ſoon as all things were ſettled, he came down thither; and making a proper Enquiry into grievances, eaſed the oppreſſed, reſtrained the inſolent, and at firſt pleaſed all. Finding, that the lands of the condemned and outlawed lay uncultivated; and, notwithſtanding, the Taxes impoſed upon the town were exacted with rigour, which was a great burden; he obtained a grant of theſe lands, and cauſed them to be cultivated as before, by which means the inhabitants were much eaſed (q). This agreeable Town he made the place of his reſidence; and, as is ſuppoſed, built the Caſtle, the Moothall, and the ancient Houſe oppoſite to it (newly rebuilt) on which is the famous date (r). He reſolved alſo to provide for the wealth of his Soul, according to the ſuperſtitious notion of thoſe Times, namely by founding a Monaſtery. For that purpoſe, he pitched upon a pleaſant eminence on the South-ſide of the Town, where one Siric, a prieſt, had a little dwelling, near which ſtood a wooden Church dedicated to St. John the Evangeliſt, famed for miracles. For, in dark nights, heavenly lights were often ſeen there (as is pretended) and Voices praiſing God heard, when no one was within. It alſo hap'ned, that a certain man, who by the King's command was kept in irons, and maintained by the citizens, being there preſent among many others on the feaſt of St. John, whilſt maſs was ſaying, the bolt of his fetters flew off as far as the fourth or fifth perſon that ſtood by, and the fetters breaking with a noiſe, the man was left looſe. Upon this report, and in conſideration of the pleaſantneſs of the place, Eudo reſolved to build his Monaſtery there. He communicated his deſign to Maurice biſhop of London, who applauded it, and promiſed his aſſiſtance. Accordingly, on the 29th of Auguſt, 1096, the ground was marked out, in the biſhop's preſence, and the workmen were ſet to level and prepare the place. The year following, after Eaſter, Eudo himſelf laid the firſt ſtone. Whilſt the building was going on, the founder deſired his friend and acquaintance Gundulf, biſhop of Rocheſter, a man famous for his piety, to ſend him ſome Monks, to live according to their regular inſtitution in his new Monaſtery. Two at firſt were ſent, and Eudo allowed each of them a ſtipend. But they being too dainty, found fault with their keeping, and returned home. In their place two others were ſent, one of whom named Radulf, was a pious and induſtrious man. He often preſſed Eudo to ſettle revenues upon his foundation; alledging, that it was unfit for monks to live like prebendaries, and to depend upon laymen for their maintenance. Eudo was not then well able to comply with his demand, as being in diſgrace with King Henry I. for having too warmly eſpouſed his elder brother Robert Courthoſe. However, being perpetually teized by the two Monks, he ſettled certain revenues upon them. But the lands lying at too great a diſtance, and the profits not anſwering the charge of collecting, the two Monks quitted again the place after a great deal of jangling and uneaſineſs on both ſides: So that Eudo began to repent, and to wiſh he had never thought of his Monaſtery. But meeting with Stephen Abbat of York, a notable and worthy man, he committed to him the whole care of the Edifice.

Stephen goes back to York, and chuſing out of his own Monaſtery ſuch Monks as he thought fitteſt, and, in number twelve, according to the number of the Apoſtles, beſides one to govern them under the name of Provoſt or Prior, and to be in proceſs of time ordain'd Abbat; he ſent them to Colcheſter. Theſe thirteen perſons were joyfully receiv'd by Eudo, and after their arrival, the building began to be carried on with more vigor than uſual, under the direction of William, a prieſt, nephew to Eudo, who ſpared neither care nor money. In the mean time, the Monks lived according to the ſtrictneſs of their order, ſerving God regularly in the Church, exerciſing hoſpitality, &c. ſo that their good example prevailing, many of the neighbours took the habit of Religion. A few years after, Hugh, one of the thirteen, was choſen Abbat, being a man of ſingular piety, but not of ſo much worldly ſagacity: He was conſecrated by Maurice biſhop of London, about the year 1104. The Offices and the Habitations of the Monks, being on the North ſide of the Church, towards the Town, and on that account too public and noiſy, the Abbat reſolv'd to remove them on the South ſide; and accordingly did. For that purpoſe, the little riſing, or Hill, which ſtood before the Church, was taken down, and brought behind it, to level the Church-yard. Some people claiming part of the ſoil on which the Church was erected, Eudo fully ſatisfied their demand. It was conſecrated the 10th of January, in a very ſolemn manner. At which time it was plentifully endowed by the munificent Founder, and other devout perſons, as we ſhall ſhew by and by. Their Grants were offered upon the Altar. The Monks who came from York, were then either return'd home or dead, except three, namely the aforeſaid Abbat Hugh, and one Walter, and Oſmund ſenior: Yet the number of monks was increaſed to above twenty, all admitted into the order there, and devoutly ſerving God. But Hugh the Abbat having ſome diſputes with Eudo, and fearing leſt the Abbey ſhould ſuffer upon that account, he reſign'd his dignity into the King's hands, and went back to York. As for Eudo, when he found his end approaching, he bequeathed (with K. Henry's conſent, and in his preſence) to his new Monaſtery the Manor of Brightlyngſea, and a hundred pounds in money; likewiſe his gold ring with a topaz; a ſtanding cup with cover adorned with plates of gold; together with his horſe and mule. He died at the caſtle of Preaux in Normandy, and according to his deſire was brought over to England, and buried in his Monaſtery of St John's, February 28, 1120 (s.) His wife was Rohaiſe, daughter of Richard ſon of Gilbert Earl of Eu [H], by Rohaiſe his wife ſiſter to Walter Giffard Earl of Buckingham. They had only one daughter, Margaret, which was married to William de Mandeville; and their ſon and heir, Geoffrey de Mandeville, was Steward of Normandy, and advanced by K. Stephen to the title of Earl of Eſſex (t).

Having thus given an account of the Founder, let us proceed to a more particular account of the Foundation.

This Abbey, dedicated to the honour of Chriſt and St John the Baptiſt (u), was founded, as hath been already mentioned, for Monks of the Benedictine Order [I]. But it entertain'd great numbers of Officers and Servants, and multitudes of Travellers and Poor, who daily reſorted thither; Monaſteries ſerving anciently for Inns as well as Hoſpitals.

At the time of the Diſſolution of the Monaſteries, this noble Abbey, with its large Revenues, was valued at 523 l. 17 s. 10 d. (b), though J. Speed, by a very unaccountable miſtake, makes it but 08 l. 01 s. 08 d. (i).

The Abbey-Church ſtood on the ſouth-ſide of St Giles's Church, and ſouth-eaſt of the Gate-way. It had a large Tower in the middle, adorned with ſeveral Spires: And, at the weſt-end, there were likewiſe ſome Turrets. The Print given of it in the Monaſticon is not true; for it is there repreſented as wholly built with ſquare ſtones, which none of the public Edifices in this Town were. A new Print is therefore given of it here, from an original Drawing in MS. in the Cottonian-Library (k), taken before the diſſolution of the Monaſteries.

I wiſh it were alſo in my power, to lay before the Reader a Plan of this once moſt famous Abbey: but it is ſo totally demoliſhed, that there is not one ſtone of it left upon another. The only Remains that ſerve to ſhew where it once ſtood; are the ſtately Gate-way already mention'd, and of which the Print is here given; one of the Porter's lodges adjoyning thereto: and the Garden-walls, which incloſe about Thirteen or Fourteen acres of ground.

The Abbot was a mitred Abbot; that is, One of thoſe Twenty eight in this kingdom, who had the Honour of wearing a Mitre, and ſitting in the Upper Houſe of Parliament. And he was diſtinguiſh'd by the high Titles, of, By the grace of God; and, By divine permiſſion [B].

The Abbey itſelf was inveſted with very great Privileges. For it had the full Juriſdiction in determining Cauſes in all the lands adjoining to the Monaſtery; and the ſame Honour, Liberty, and Laws, as the Church of St Peter's at Weſtminſter. That is, It was exempt from all Epiſcopal, and other, Juriſdiction: Free from Suits of Counties and Hundreds, from Sheriffs aids, and amerciaments of Counties; from pleas of foreſt, waſte, and regard; from paſſage, pontage, warnage, ſtallage belonging to the King, and burg-peny, aver-peny, ward-peny, Danegeld, and hidage in ſome of their lands; with many other Privileges and Immunities, comprehended in a Charter of K. Richard I. (l).

K. Henry III. granted them, moreover, Free-warren, in all their demeſnes in Wykham and Beryngham in Suffolk; Berlee in Hertfordſhire; Wylee, Brychtlyngeſeye, Eſtdunylonde, Mundon, Picheſey, Laleford, Grenſted, and Takeleghe, in Eſſex, &c. provided thoſe Demeſnes were not within the bounds of the Royal Foreſt (m).

Finally this Abbey had the Privilege of Sanctuary (n).

But the Abbot owed ſuit at the Law-hundred-Courts of this Town, for ſome Lands [C].

The Arms of St John's Abbey were, Gules, a Croſs within a bordure, or; over all, a Carbuncle of eight ſtaves, ſable, fleury argent.

And what their common Seal was, will be repreſented in the Plate of the Seals. But every Abbot had a different private Seal.

Not long after the diſſolution of this Monaſtery, [viz. Auguſt 29, 1544] K. Henry VIII. granted a twenty one years leaſe of the ſite of it [D], to Sir Thomas Darcy Kt. Before the expiration of that leaſe, K. Edward VI. on the 22d of June, 1547, granted the reverſion of it to John Dudley Earl of Warwick, for his ſervice in Scotland and France; whereby, as the Patent aſſerts, he had much impair'd his own eſtate: To be held in capite by the ſervice of a Knight's-fee; it being valued at 8 l. 9 s. 4 d. and charged with a quit-rent of 17 s. 10 d. ½ (o). But the very next month, Dudley conveyed it to Sir Francis Jobſon Kt. (and Elizabeth his wife) to whom, as is related above, he was greatly indebted (p). The next year, Dudley obliged Jobſon, as he ſays himſelf (q), to ſell it to John Lucas Eſq; who accordingly purchas'd it, under the name of the ſite of the late Abbey of St John, 20 meſſuages, 2 dovehouſes, 20 gardens, 3 orchards, 100 acres of land, 15 of meadow, 100 of paſture, 10 of wood, and 7 of marſh, with the appurtenances in Weſt Doniland, Colcheſter, Greenſted, & Wivenhoo, (r). Mr. Lucas converted the remains of it into a Seat, as is obſerved above, under St Giles's; and his poſterity made it the place of their reſidence 'till our unhappy civil wars, when it was plundered; and almoſt demoliſh-

[E] By K. Richard the IId's Letters Patent dated 7 July, Reg. 7. (1383) it appears, that in the twelve years foregoing, there died no leſs than Five Abbats of this Houſe. The words are — Nos conſiderantes, quod Abbatia predicta, que de fundatione progenitorum noſtrorum quondam Regum Anglie, & noſtro patronatu, exiſtit, fuit in manibus dicti avi noſtri, [Edw. III.] & noſtris, per mortem quinque Abbatum ibidem, qui infra Duodecim annos proxime preteritos deceſſerunt.

35. JOHN STROKE (u) Sacriſtary here, was elected by virtue of the King's licence, dated July 20 the ſame year. He reſigned July 20, 1523, or was rather depoſed, for ſeveral grievous Crimes laid to his charge; and ſucceeded by

36. THO. BARTON (w); who was elected Aug. 10, 1523. He died March 25, 1533, and was ſucceeded by

37. THO. MARSHALL (x), Abbat of St Werburgh's in Cheſter, elected June 10, 1534; four or five years after which, for ſome miſdemeanor, perhaps for not coming into the King's meaſures, he was impriſoned in the Tower of London, and attainted of Treaſon Jan. 22, 1538 (y). Whereupon the Convent elected

38. JOHN BECHE to be Abbat in his ſtead. Of whom nothing farther is known, than that he was one of the three Mitred Parliamentary Abbats (the two others being thoſe of Glaſtenbury (z) and Reading) that had courage enough to run the laſt extremity, rather than come into a Surrender, or ſubſcribe to the King's Supremacy; on which account being attainted of High-Treaſon, for treaſon committed 27 Sept. 1538, he was hanged at Colcheſter December 1, 1539 (a) [F].

He was the laſt Abbat of this famous Monaſtery (b), which maintained at the Diſſolution near Twenty Monks; whereof Sixteen ſubſcribed in his Predeceſſor's time, on July 7, 1524, to the King's Supremacy, of which number was John Melford the Prior, John Ros, and fourteen others. In 1553, I find only theſe four Monks poſſeſs'd of Penſions, viz. John Frauncis, Will. Lyppon, Tho. Aunger, and Tho. Barry. Whereof the firſt, Frauncis, had 6 l. 13 s. 4 d. allowed him, and the other three 5 l. each. But, beſides theſe Penſions, here was 1 l. 6 s. 8 d. paid in Fees, and 8 l. 13 s. 4 d. in Annuities, out of the Revenues of this late Convent (c).

SECT. II.

St BOTOLPH's PRIORY.

THE next moſt conſiderable Religious Foundation in this Town, was the Priory of St. Botolph's, dedicated to St Botolph and St Julian.

It was founded, about the beginning of the XIIth century, for Canons regular of St Auguſtin [G], by a monk named Eynulph, or Ernulph (d), who was alſo the firſt Prior.

Theſe Canons were brought into this Kingdom about the year 1109 (e). And this Houſe was the firſt of that Order in England, as appears by the Bull of Pope Paſchal II. directed to Ernulph and his brethren, dated in Auguſt 1116 [H]. Some indeed have affirm'd, That St Gregory's in Canterbury was the firſt, being built by Archbiſhop Lanfranc in 1084 (f); and others have placed them at Noſthel in Yorkſhire (g); or at Trinity within Aldgate London (h). But, as Mr J. Stevens well obſerves (i), this point is fully determined by Pope Paſchal's Bull: who, living ſo near the Time, could not be miſinform'd; or if he had, the Monaſtery in England that had been before it, would have claimed the precedence.

However it be, Pope Paſchal, in his Bull, gives them the pre-eminence above all the Houſes of their Order in England; and inveſts them with authority and juriſdiction over them in general: Impowering them, not only to puniſh delinquents and deſerters, but alſo to govern all others according to their own Rule, and to plant and diſtribute their members in proper places as they ſhould think convenient. Putting, at the ſame time, the Churches of Trinity and St Leonard's in London under their government and obedience. The Bull exempted them likewiſe from all ſecular and eccleſiaſtical juriſdiction whatſoever: And ordained, That after Eynulph's death, the ſucceeding Priors ſhould be choſen by their brother-canons, or the majority; and be conſecrated without fees by the Biſhop of London (or, if he refuſed, by ſome other Biſhop) from whom they were to receive a kind of Epiſcopal office or power [I].

It doth not appear, that Eynulph ſettled on his new Foundation any lands or poſſeſſions, except perhaps the ſite and gardens of the Priory. But it ſoon met with Benefactors, though its Revenues never became very ample. However, they were as follows.

K. Henry I. gave them—the whole Tithes of his royal Demeſnes in Hatfield [Regis, or

[F] There is a Tradition in this place, That the Magiſtrates invited him to a Feaſt, and then ſhewed him the Warrant, and went and hanged him without further warning or ceremony.

[G] This order claims St Auguſtin biſhop of Hippo for its founder, but undoubtedly is of a later date. For we are aſſured from good authority, that it was not till about the Twelfth century, that theſe Canons had the title and the honour of St Auguſtin conferred on them. (Hiſt. des Ordr. Monaſtiq. Vol. II. p. 11, &c. 137) A repreſentation of their habit may be ſeen in the Mon. Anglic. Tom. II. p. 1.

Moreover, he confirmed to them—all the lands they had in Colcheſter and elſewhere; and the third part of the Mill under the Caſtle, called Middle-mill: As alſo the Serjeancy, and all the Lands which they had of the gift of Hugh Fitz-Stephen, with their appertenances. Upon condition of performing this ſervice to him and his heirs, whenever they ſhould make war in Wales; namely, Find one horſe of five ſhillings price, a ſack, and a ſpur, for forty days, at the King's charge.——Finally, he confirm'd to them—Land and Houſes in Canterbury, given unto them by Briſterd and his wife Lunne. Theſe grants are without date, according to the cuſtom of thoſe ancient Times (k).

K. Richard I. confirmed to them the following poſſeſſions. All the alms, tithes, and lands which they had of the fees [Manor, or Eſtate] of William ſon of Robert de Haſtyngges; and of the fee of Salkevill, and of the hameſocna [i. e. the Liberty;] the third part of Middle-mill; and all other lands, &c. which they had in the Town and Hundred of Colcheſter, in Churches, Tithes, Tenements, &c. And likewiſe—the Church of Gamelegeye, holden of the fee of Bologne.—All the lands they had at Colum [Coln] and Layer.—The fourth part of the vill of Greneſtede, with all its appurtenances within the Burgh of Colcheſter and without.—Of the fee of Hugh Fitz-Stephen, the Church of Legra [Layer de la Hay.]—Of the fee of Mandevill, the Church of [Marks] Tey; and the tithes poſſeſſions they had of the fee of Thomas de Mandevil.———Of the fee of Robert de Sakevill, all the lands they had in Fordham.—Land in the pariſh of Wedermundefeld [Wormingford.]—Land in Duniland, given them by Ernald de Curtune.—In Ardley, all the Lands and Alms they held of the fees of Robert Briton, Ralph Martell, Richard de Bovill, Baldwin Wyſchards and Alice daughter of Robert Fitz-Goſceline.—Lands holden of the ſoke of Dedham.—Lands, tithes, and other poſſeſſions in Reymes [Raine] of the fee of Richard de Reymes [L].

In 1398, Thomas Whot and John Hervy gave—3 meſſuages, 242 acres of Land, 17 of meadow, and 21*d*. rent in Peldon, Adburton, and Leyre de la Hay, not held of the Crown, and worth yearly 64*s*. 9*d*. And alſo 1 meſſuage with the appurtenances in Colcheſter holden of the King in free-burgage, worth 2*s*. per annum [M].

The ſame year, John Doreward and John Clerke gave—7 meſſuages, 124 acres of land, 1 acre of meadow, 12 acres of paſture, 5 acres of wood, and 16*d*. rent in Great Teye, [called Trumpington's] (l).

John Doreward gave them, beſides,—2 acres of land, and the Advowſon of the Pariſh Church and Rectory of Chigwell, to find a Chaplain to pray for the ſoul of his father, and of all his anceſtors and benefactors (m).

They had alſo—30 acres of land, and 2 acres wood, called Godehye, in Lexden: Recovered by William de Colcheſtre Prior, in the year 1419 (n).

—Eighteen acres in Monkwykfield (o).

—Thirteen ſhillings rent out of Cokes place (p).

—The Church of Frating: And a portion of Tithes in Mount-Buers (q). [N].

What other poſſeſſions they had, not already mentioned, appears in K. Henry the VIIIth's grant of them to the Lord Chancellor Audeley which comprehended (beſides the ſite of the Priory) the Manors of Blyndeknyghts, Canwikes, and Dilbridge [O], and the Rectories [or impropriate Tithes] of St Botolph's Colcheſter, Leyr de la Hey, and Tey Maundevill; and the Advowſons of the Churches of St James, St Peter, and St Martin, in the town of Colcheſter, and of Mile-end near the ſame: And an annual Penſion of LX ſhillings out of the Priory of Hatfeld-regis;—vi s. viii d. out of Mile-end Rectory;—xxvi s. viii d. It was ſurrendered 20 March, 1535.

The priory ſtood on the South ſide of the Church; but there are hardly any remains of it, except a few Walls that are incorporated into a Brewhouſe, erected on the ſite of the Priory. What number of Canons it contained, we are not able to learn.

The Church was noble and magnificent, and built in an elegant manner, and a good taſte, with fine ſemicircular arches duly proportion'd, and a double row of them in the Body one above another, with impoſts and pilaſters between, and other ſuitable ornaments. How beautiful the Weſtern front was, will better appear from the Repreſentation given of it here, as drawn by my ingenious neighbour Mr James Deane, than from any deſcription I could give. The South-weſt and North-weſt corners were adorned with two ſtately Towers, of which that at the North-weſt was ſtanding within the memory of man. The Dimenſions of this once very fine Church are as follows;

Length of it within the walls, — a hundred and eight feet.
Width of the Nave, between the pillars — twenty five feet and a half.
Width of the South iſle — nine feet, one inch and a half.
Width of the North iſle — nine feet, ſeven inches and a half.
Diameter of the pillars — five feet and a half.
Thickneſs of the Wall, at the great Door — eight feet and a half.

'Till our unhappy civil wars, this Church was look'd upon as the chief in the Town; where the Corporation reſorted in their Formalities on Sundays and other public Occaſions to hear the General Preacher (s). And the great Bell there, was that which was rung every morning and evening, at four and eight o'clock (t). In the time of the ſiege, this Church ſuffered with moſt of our public Edifices; being partly battered down, as ſome ſay by the Royaliſts for fear the enemy ſhould lodge themſelves in it; or, as others affirm, it was done on deſign by the enemy, who had a Battery levell'd that way (u): Which laſt ſeems probable, becauſe the South-eaſt corner is the moſt demoliſh'd.

The Prior of St Botolph's owed ſuit at the Law-hundred-Courts of this Town (w).

by the Lord Chancellor Audeley, in September 1540, to John Golder. Anaſtatia Golder ſold it, in November 1548, to Arthur Clarke; who dyed 26 January 1552, poſſeſſed of the ſite of St. Botolph's Monaſtery, with the Church, and all the houſes, edifices, meadows and paſtures belonging to the ſaid ſite. Thomas Earl of Dorſet, at the time of his deceaſe 19 April 1608, was poſſeſs'd of the ſame; as was his ſon Robert who dyed the 27th of February following: Richard Earl of Dorſet ſucceeding (o). From this family it paſs'd [Q], about the year 1650, to Oliver Hendricx (p); and continued in his poſterity 'till the beginning of this century, when it was conveyed to Oliver Burkin. Of him it was purchaſed, in 1720, by Matthew Martin, Eſq; who gave it to his ſon-in-law Major-general John Price: but it now belongs, with the Gardens and More, to Mrs. Selly.

SECT. III.

The CROUCHED FRIERS.

THIS Houſe was a Convent for Croſſed [or as the old Engliſh word is] for Crouched Friers, of the Order of St. Auguſtin, who were bound to celebrate divine ſervice in the Chapel here; and alſo an Hoſpital for the Reception of Poor people [R].

By whom it was originally founded, doth not clearly appear. But, according to the beſt information I can receive, the Founder of it was William de Lanvallei Lord of the Manor of Stanway: who alſo gave thereto pannage for fatting twelve hogs yearly in his wood of Shrub and Wildenhey, and paſture for two cows [S]. And what ſeems to confirm my opinion, is, That by an Inquiſition taken 16 Rich. II. (q) it was found, that Robert Knivett held then the maner of Stanway of Walter Lord Fitz-walter, by the ſervice of a pair of gilt ſpurs, or Six pence: "to which manor, "as the Record goes on, belongs the Advowſon of the Hoſpital of the Holy Croſs in "the town of Colcheſter" [T].

Sir Robert de Rochford preſented to it in 1332 and 1334, being, as I have reaſon to think, then Lord of Stanway-manor (r). And in the gift of the Lords of the ſame manor did this Houſe continue (with ſome interruption however) even as low as Henry the Eighth's reign. For Thomas Bonham Eſq; then Lord of Stanway-manor, was alſo patron of this Convent (s).

But in the 16th of K. Richard II, (viz. 1392, Aug. 1.) Alexander Pod and Simon Slade of Colcheſter, who had obtained, in 1383, the Advowſon of this Chapel, and four acres of land, from John Stanſtede clerke; granted the ſame to Ralph Algar, Stephen Baronn, and Henry Boſſe; which three laſt gave them, Septemb. 30 the ſame year, to the Bailiffs of this Corporation, as a help towards repairing the Town-walls (t); as is related above (u).

This Houſe underwent ſeveral alterations, and in conſequence thereof came to be known by ſeveral names.

It was at firſt a Convent, or Hoſpital, for regular Brethren of the Order of St. Auguſtin marked with the Croſs; as the Grant, which we ſhall more particularly mention by and by, expreſſes it: And was governed by a Prior (w).

Next, it appears as a Free-Chapel, under the care of a perpetual Warden or Rector (x); tho' it is even then promiſcuouſly called a Chapel and an Hoſpital. But it admits of a queſtion, whether they were not then different, and diſtinctly preſented to [U].

Afterwards we find it called a Church, and in the poſſeſſion of a Rector (y).

When the Gild of St Helen was founded in this Chapel, it was chiefly known by the name of the Gild of St Helen; and both Chapel and Hoſpital became jointly in the gift of the Guardians of that Gild [W]. But to return, Towards the end of K. Richard the IId's reign, this Chapel and Hoſpital were ſo much decayed and neglected, for want of a Warden, and by reaſon of the ſmallneſs of the Revenues, that divine Service could not be perform'd therein, nor the Poor maintained as uſual: In order therefore to encreaſe the Revenues, and to get money ſufficient to do the neceſſary repairs about the Chapel and Hoſpital; an Indulgence was obtained in 1401, or 1402, which being curious and uncommon is inſerted in the Appendix (z).

[R] Mr. Newcourt is miſtaken, when he affirms, that this Houſe was inhabited by ſome of thoſe Croſſed Friers who firſt came to England in 1244. For theſe were more properly Croſs-bearers than Croſſed Friers, as appears by the account given of them by our Hiſtorians. [Dicti ſic, quia Cruces in baculis efferebant. M. A few years after, namely, in 1407, this Chapel and Hoſpital obtained a great acceſſion of ſtrength and riches, by becoming the Seat of the Gild [X] of St Helen. This Gild was founded [or rather founded a-new] (a) by Richard Fodryngrey clerk, Thomas Godſton, Tho. Frаunceys, John Forde, and John Sumpter of Colcheſter; under the name of the Fraternity and Gild of St Helen in the Chapel of the Holy Croſs of Colcheſter. And the Brethren and Siſters of this Gild were impower'd by the Patent, to chuſe every year, if they thought fit, one or two Guardians; to found a Chantry of Five Chaplains in the ſaid Chapel; and to maintain Thirteen Poor Men, to pray for the King, and the Brethren and Siſters of the Gild [Y]. The Chantries of Thomas Godſton, Thomas Frauncis, and Edmund Haverland, entred afterwards into this Gild.

Upon that occaſion, the Crouched Friers ſeem to have been turn'd out of this Houſe, 'till about the beginning of K. Henry VIth's reign, when one Roger Churche, an active man, brought them in again; and producing ſome Papal Bulls, and other evidences, whereby it appeared, That this Houſe was originally founded for Friers of that Order, they were reinſtated therein [Z], through the intereſt of John Earl of Oxford, and James Hubert the King's Attorney, who were their friends. And then the Bailiffs and Commonalty reſtored to them the two Meſſuages, and four acres of land abovementioned [A]; and Roger Churche became their Prior.

The ſame Roger Churche found means to get poſſeſſion of the Lands which had been appointed by Thomas Godſtan, for the ſupport of a Chantry founded by him in the Church of the Holy Croſs, upon granting a penſion to Thomas Mooteham the Chantry-prieſt (b). And afterwards, Decemb. 25, 1509, thoſe lands were appropriated to this Hoſpital, by the Maſters of St Helen's Gild (c).

The Names of the few Priors, which I have been able to recover, are theſe,

John de Wiſton.
Richard de Botyngham.
John Stevyn.
John Quene (d).

Thomas Turnour was Maſter of this Hoſpital (e).

Roger Churche, Prior (f).
John of Colcheſter [Colonie] (g).
John Dowalt.
John Dryver.

Richard Deryks was, I think, the laſt Pryour of the Houſe and Church of the Holy Croſſe and St Elyn within the ſuburbys of the towne of Colcheſter, as it is expreſſed in an old Leaſe (h).

By comparing ſeveral yearly accounts of the Revenues of this Gild, (of which I have one 6° Hen. V. another 11° Edw. IV. another 8° Hen. VII. and another 25° Hen. VIII.) I find, that the Lands and Tenements belonging to the Chapel or Hoſpital in particular, were as follows.

The Gardens, orchards, and other land adjoining to the Chapel and Hoſpital—Eight acres.

Two acres of land with a meadow and other parcels near Maldon-lane, called the Hoſe.

Three acres more of land near Maldon-lane.

One acre in Borough-field.

Crouch-downe, containing Six acres of land near Wyndmill hill—and two acres beſides.

Nine acres of land near the Shrebbe.

Two crofts more near the Shrebbe.

A Garden.

Two Gardens in St Peter's.

Four acres of land in Layer-Breton, near the Church.

Five acres of land in Coptford.

Seven acres in Great Birch, or Eaſt-thorp.

Weſt-field in Great Tay.

Crouchchirche-bern.

A capital meſſuage, weſt of the Chapel, with a piece of ground, &c.

A tenement north of the ſame. And two other tenements adjoining.

Six tenements near Thomas Godſton's Chapel, [which was adjoyning to the Church of the Holy Croſs.]

A capital meſſuage near them, with a well, and a garden.

The Sareſynes [or Saracen's] head, oppoſite to the Church or Chapel of the Holy Croſs.

Two Tenements, called the Bell; and St. Anthonies.

The members of this Gild were, in 1418, Sixty-five in number; and amongſt them were, the Counteſs of Hertford, Sir John Howard, Kt. Sir Gerard Braybroke, Kt. Lady Brockhole, &c. In 1491, the Gild conſiſted of Eighty ſeven members; and, among the reſt, of the Abbot of St John's, John Lord Berners, Robert Cale Rector of Stanway, &c. Compot ejuſd. Gildæ.

Five Rentaries, or tenements in Maldon-lane.
Four Rentaries in Crouch-church-ſtreet.
A tenement and 5 acres in Magdalen-ſtreet.
A tenement on North-hill, and another in the Middle-Burgh, in St Peter's pariſh.

They alſo received ſeveral rents of aſſiſe, or Quit-rents, to the amount of 17*s*. 4*d*.½ per annum, out of the following Tenements, viz. —Eleven new tenements in the pariſh of St Mary's, built on a croft called Lacyes-croft, of which tenements one belonged afterwards to Richard Ram; being on the North-ſide of Crouch-ſtreet, in Lexden-manor.—And out of one tenement in Head-ſtreet; three in Trinity; four in St Peters; three in St Martins; one in St James's; one in Wyre-ſtreet; John Weſton's in All-Saint's; and out of a croft in Lexden, near the rampart of Wylden-heyhyth [B].

As for the Revenues of the Chantries incorporated into this Gild, they are given in the next Chapter, under thoſe reſpective Chantries.

Upon the diſſolution of the Monaſteries, all theſe Lands and Tenements, &c. were valued at the ſmall ſum of 7*l*. 7*s*. 8*d*. And, on the 24th day of April 1542, they were granted by K. Henry VIII, to Sir Thomas Audley Lord Audley of Walden, Chancellor of England, and his heirs and aſſigns; under the title of the ſite of the Houſe or late Priory of the Croſſe-friers near Colcheſter; and all the Church, Belfrey, Cloyſter, and other edifices, and the Church-yard, and all the houſes, buildings, tenements, granaries, ſtables, curtilages, walls, gardens, lands, and tenements whatſoever, adjoining or belonging to the Church or Houſe of the late Croſſed-friers; and the yearly rents, ferms, reverſions, and other profits of the ſame, or parcel thereof, &c. To be held in capite by the 20th part of a Knight's fee, paying every year at Eaſter 2*s*. 8*d*. into the Court of Augmentation (i). This Houſe, &c. the ſaid Lord Chancellor Audeley bequeath'd by will to his brother Thomas during life, and after his deceaſe to his ſecond ſon Thomas: Which latter convey'd it, Octob. 21, 1563, to William Watſon; who dying Decemb. 28, 1571 (k), left it to his daughter Joan, the wife of Arthur Hall. They jointly convey'd it to John Watſon, Octob. 7, 1580; and he granted it, Oct. 1, 1583, to William and Robert Woodward, and their heirs. April 18, 1584, they ſold the ſame to Edward Barker, and Suſan his Wife, for 460*l*. Theſe mortgaged it to the Earl of Dorſet, who in 1613 reconvey'd it to James Barker ſon of Edward. Afterwards it was for ſome time in the Stephens's poſſeſſion. And then it coming again into the Barker-family, they ſold it, June 22, 1637, to Harbottle Grimſton Eſq; and his heirs. It is now in the heirs of the late Jeremiah Daniell Eſq;

This Houſe and Church of the Crouched Friers ſtood in the Suburbs, on the ſouth-weſt of the Town, and on the ſouth ſide of the London road. The Church, or Chapel, was pulled down many years ago [C]. The Houſe was converted into a ſeat of the Stephens's, and afterwards of Sir Harbottle Grimſton: But it ſeems to have been partly new-built, there appearing in it no ſigns of antiquity, except a few windows on the Eaſt-ſide. It was much damaged during the Siege (l); and never became fit ſince for a Gentleman's reſidence. About the beginning of this century it was hired by the Workhouſe-Corporation, and converted into a general Workhouſe for the whole Town. But when they removed into another in St James's pariſh, this was let into Tenements to the poorer ſort of people, which bringing little or no profit to Mr. Daniell, the owner, he cauſed it to be taken down.

The GREY FRIERS.

THE Monaſtery of the Grey-Friers [D] ſtood within the North-eaſt corner of the Walls, juſt by Eaſt-gate, and almoſt oppoſite to St James's Church. It was founded in the year 1309, by Robert Baron Fitz-walter (m), Lord of the manor of Lexden; who, in 1325, entered himſelf into this order and houſe, as a religious votary, in order to ſpend here the remainder of his days (n); but ſhort it was, for he died the ſame year (o). As this order pretends, according to their Founder's rule, not to poſſeſs or make any thing their own; but to maintain themſelves partly by the labour of their hands, and partly with ſuch Alms, in Meat, Drink, and the like, as they ſhall receive by Begging; but not to take Money upon any account, either by themſelves or a third perſon (p); their lands and poſſeſſions will therefore make but a very ſmall figure in this article.

[D] The Grey-friers, ſo called from the colour of their Habit; and otherwiſe named Franciſcans, Friers-minors, Minorites, and Begging-Friers; were founded about the year 1206 or 1209 by Francis of Aſſiſi, an Italian. M. Paris p. 286. Hiſt. des Ordres Monaſtiques, Vol. vii. p. 1. A repreſentation of their Habit may be ſeen in the Monaſticon, and in J. Stevens's Two Additional Volumes, Vol. II. p. 5.

Their original Foundation contained, I ſuppoſe, only about an acre of ground.

But K. Edward II. granted them a void place of 4 acres and a half, contiguous to their Houſe, to enlarge their Manſion: And, the year following, half an acre of ground more, for the ſame purpoſe (q).

The ſame King granted alſo, in truſt for them, to John de Morevillere and Theophania his wife, the manor of Martaigneville in the county of Ponthieu, in Picardy (r).

In 1422 John Pod merchant gave them 8 acr. ½ of land near the head of their conduit: being in three fields then called the Pypefield, 3 acres, Dunſtrete, 3 acres, and Morepyghtell, 2 acres and a half.

K. Edward IV, March 19, 1479, at the requeſt of Robert Wotton, warden of this Houſe, and the brethren of the ſame, granted to theſe Friers and their ſucceſſors, Fifty two loads of underwood (each load drawn by ſix horſes or other cattle) out of his foreſt of King's-wood; to be firſt view'd or ſupervis'd by his Officers: upon condition they ſhould pray for the good eſtate of him and his Queen while they lived; and, after their deceaſe, for their ſouls, and for the ſoul of Richard late Duke of York; and ſhould keep their ſeveral Obits yearly (s).

Theſe are all the Grants which, as far as I can find, were ever made to this Houſe [E]: And therefore there was no account taken of it at the general ſuppreſſion. J. Weever hath indeed ſet it down, as valued at 113*l.* 12*s.* 8*d.* But that valuation doth not belong to it, but to St. Botolph's, which is wholly omitted by that author.

The few Guardians of theſe Friers-Minors whoſe names have occured to me, are theſe.

John Reylegh, in 1419 (t).
Walter Bradenham, in 1458 (u).
Thomas Lexden, in 1475 (w).
Robert Wotton.
John Tynemouth, in 1493 (x).
John Gurdun, in 1536.

After the diſſolution of the Monaſteries, this Houſe did not long continue in the King's hands. For Henry VIII. granted it, July 8, 1544, for the ſum of 430*l.* 10*s.* to Francis Jobſon Eſq; and Elizabeth his wife, and to Andrew Dudley, Robert Hennage, and Richard Duke Eſquires; under the title of the Houſe of the late Friers-Minors vulgarly called the Gray Friers in Colcheſter, with thoſe Houſes and Edifices, called the Old-Hall, the Fermery, and Sir Thomas Tirrell's Lodgings, the Bakehouſe, the Brew-houſe, two Gardens, and a piece of land containing by eſtimation four acres: The whole valued at the clear yearly ſum of 25 Shillings and eight pence. To be held in free ſocage by fealty, and not in capite, at the yearly rent of 2*s.* 7*d.* (y). On the 20th of September 1565, Sir Francis Jobſon being ſeized of the whole, convey'd it to William Watſon. And Jan. 26, 159⅚, William Watſon of Staples-inn Gent. ſold a third part of the ſame to Martin Baſill ſen. and jun. The 20th of June following, Brian Watſon ſon of John brother of William laſt mentioned, conveyed the two other parts to the ſaid Baſills. February the 2d 163⅚, Martin Baſill of Lincoln's-inn, Gent. ſon of Martin Baſill jun. conveyed this eſtate to John Lemynge and Henry his ſon; which latter ſold it, June 20, 1654, to William Peeke. He had only one daughter, Mary, married to Thomas Turgis Eſq. In 1700, Turgis conveyed the premiſſes to Thomas Carpenter, who ſettled them, after his own and his wife's deceaſe, on Tho. Bayes, ſon of Anne one of his daughters, and Joſeph Bayes. In 1740 Tho. Bayes ſold it to Robert Potter Licentiate in Phyſick. Of him it was purchaſed by the Rev. John Hall, who hath built a very handſome houſe, and made good gardens; with other improvements.

SECT. V.

St ANNE's CHAPEL.

THIS Chapel, dedicated to St Anne the mother of the Virgin Mary, ſtands on a riſing ground in St James's pariſh, beyond the river, and on the South ſide of the great Road leading from this town to Harwich.

When, and by whom, it was founded, appears no where upon record (z). But it was in being in the year 1406 (a): Nay, very probably, in the reign of K. Henry III. For in an allocation in the Exchequer during that period, there is an allowance of 15*s.* 2½*d.* made to the Hermit in St James's pariſh (b). Now from ſome preſentments made at the Law-hundred-Courts in this Town [F], we learn, That it was an Hermitage; and had a well near it called Holy well. Which ſerves to prove, that it was the ſame as is mention'd in that Allocation.

Moreover, there is reaſon to conclude,

[E] But as theſe Begging Friers were a very popular order, and in high eſteem with the deluded vulgar on account of their pretended Auſterities, they received very plentiful alms and donations: and had frequent Legacies left them. Robert Pryour, for inſtance, gave them in his will 40*s.* to pray for his ſoul and the ſouls of his benefactors, (Apr. 15, 1463) and ſuch Bequeſts very often occur in ancient Wills. Beſides that numbers of the richer ſort coveted to be buried in their Monaſteries, fooliſhly imagining, that there would be an eaſier paſſage from thence to heaven than out of a common Church yard.

I find it mentioned in K. Henry the VIII's reign as a Gild and Fraternity of St Anne (d): And, October 10, 1579, the Sheriff of Eſſex ſeized into the Queen's hands Wyndmill-field in St James's pariſh, " late parcell of St. Anne's Gild," within the Burgh of Colcheſter: then in the tenure and occupation of the Bailiffs and Commonalty, and late of Thomas Pannel (e).

Gallow-field belonged alſo thereto (f). But what the reſt of its lands and poſſeſſions were, I have not been able to find.

At a Law-hundred-Court, in 1515, the lands adjoyning, and belonging to this Chapel, were made Whole-year ground (g).

The remains of this Chapel are now converted into a Barn.

SECT. VI.

St HELEN's CHAPEL

STANDS in St Nicolas's pariſh, in a lane called from it, St Helen's, and vulgarly and corruptly, Tenant's, lane, but its ancient name was Maidenburgh-ſtreet. This Chapel is dedicated to St Helen, the mother of Conſtantine the Great, a native of this Town, as is ſhewn above.

It is a place of great antiquity, founded originally, as it is ſaid (h), by St Helen; and rebuilt, about the year 1076 (i), by Eudo, founder of St John's Abbey, who gave it to that Monaſtery with fourteen acres of land belonging to the ſame (k): In conſideration of which, and of the Tithes of the Caſtle's demeſnes, the Abbot was obliged to find a Chaplain to officiate every other day of the week in this Chapel. But in the 18th of K. Edward I. this ſervice was found to be wholly neglected, and the Chapel in a ruinous condition, as appears by the Record below [G]. And for fear it ſhould, in proceſs of time, be applied to profane uſes, John de Colcheſter, Rector of Tendring, founded in it a Chantry, in the year 1321, 15 Edw. II. of which an account is given in the next chapter.

Richolda de Coſford's Chantry was alſo founded in this Chapel, as will be ſhewn in the ſame Chapter.

Upon the ſuppreſſion of the Chantries, this Chapel, with its revenues, came by the grant of K. Henry VIII. an. 1539, into the hands of the Bailiffs and Commonalty. And they in 1541, Novemb. 17, ſold it to William Reve, with five Rentaries adjoyning and belonging to the ſame (l). Afterwards, the premiſſes came again into the hands of the Bailiffs and Commonalty; who, Septemb. 25, 1610, granted them to George Gilberde of Colcheſter, Gent. for a ſmall conſideration of 10 l. (m). It was afterwards in one Daniel Caſtle, and has been ſince purchas'd by the people called Quakers, who have turned it into a Meeting-houſe.

Rege & anteceſſoribus ſuis: Idem Abbas dictam celebrationem jam ſubtraxit, & dictam Capellam corrui permittit——quam predictus Abbas ſuſtentare debuit, pro quibuſdam Decimis quas ſingulis annis percipit, & que Decime proveniunt de Dominicis Caſtri Dni. For our Colcheſter Chronicle informs us, That it was dedicated by Roger Biſhop of London, in 1239, on St Katherine's day, Novemb. 25, to the honour of St Katherine and St Helen.

[I] The Indenture bears date at London, 17 January, 15 Edw. II. and the Licenſe in Mortmain, which is in my poſſeſſion, is dated the 12th of July foregoing: for which there was a Fine of Four Marks paid.

one Prieſt to perform divine ſervice daily in St Helen's Chapel aforeſaid, for the health of his ſoul, and of the ſouls of his anceſters, parents, and heirs. He endowed it with the piece of land in which the Chapel ſtood, containing Eight perches in length, and Eight in width; And alſo with Twenty eight acres more of land; and a rent of 40 s. iſſuing out of ſeveral tenements.

He reſerved to himſelf the Advowſon of it during his own life, but ordered that after his deceaſe it ſhould be in the gift of the Bailiffs and Commonalty: On whom he ſettled it by deed, January 2, 1327.

The Twenty eight acres of land wherewith he endowed it, were,

Twelve acres in the field called Edynelonde.
Six at Aylwynemer,
Six at Otyenesſlade, between the land of Ralph Ode towards the Eaſt, and three long acres which the ſaid John de Colcheſter held of the Abbey of St John's towards the Weſt.
One acre and a half and one rood, alſo at Otyenesſlade, near the land of Warin Fitz William.
Two acres and one rood, near Small-lane, which were called Seynte Marie londe, in the ſuburbs of this Town [K].
Of the Forty ſhillings Rent, Twenty iſſued out of three Tenements in St Runwald's; and the reſt, in ſmall parcels, out of divers tenements, &c. in ſeveral pariſhes.

In the year 1416, Thomas Fraunceys gave by will [L] Eight acres of land lying near Edithes land, as an augmentation to this Chantry: upon condition that the Chaplains there ſhould pray for his ſoul, and the ſoul of his wife Agnes.

On the diſſolution of the Chantries, the Revenues of this were granted by K. Henry VIII. 12 November, in the 31ſt of his reign, to the Bailiffs and Commonalty, for founding a Free-ſchool, and other uſes [M]. But none of the Revenues of this Charity were beſtowed upon our Free ſchool. They were ſold by the commonalty to divers perſons, at ſeveral times.

2. Coſford's Chantry, in the ſame Chapel.

Richolda, widow of Richard de Coſford, gave by Will to John de Coſford and Robert Fraunces, in the reign of K. Richard II (n), a Tenement, aad two ſhops adjoyning, in the market-place of Colcheſter; Rents out of other tenements; and Forty acres of land; upon condition, that they ſhould enfeoffe the Bailiffs and Commonalty of Colcheſter with the ſame, in truſt to find one Chaplain to pray daily in St Helen's Chapel for the Souls of the ſaid Richolda, and Richard her Huſband; and for the Bailiffs and Commonalty aforeſaid.

But a Licence in Mortmain not having been previouſly obtained, the Tenents were ſummoned into Chancery, to ſhew cauſe why the Lands and Tenements abovementioned ſhould not be ſeized into the King's hands. They appear'd accordingly, and pleaded, That by the cuſtom of Colcheſter, Lands and Tenements can be deviſed by will; and that the ſaid Richolda had left thoſe Lands and Tenements to Robert Frances and John Coſford by her will. This was tried and found for the defendants.

The particulars of theſe Lands and Tenements, were,

A meſſuage, and two ſhops thereto adjoyning, in the market-place of Colcheſter.

A tenement late John de Holton's.

Seventeen acres of land in the ſuburbs of this town, in a field called Bradeſton, lying eaſt of Lenyardes-lane.

Four acres in the ſame ſuburbs, in a field called Elmefield near the land late Mr. John de Colcheſter's.

Five acres lying in the ſame ſuburbs, in a field called Brockhole near the Greneway [or Maldon-lane.]

A Rent of 5 s. yearly, payable out of five acres lying near the Lord Fitz-wauter's land called Cericheſcroft. [Thoſe Five acres are now called Windmill-field.]

A yearly Rent of 3 s. 4 d. from a ſhop in the market-place, late in the occupation of Mary Fordham.

A yearly Rent of 10 d. from a tenement, formerly John Dedham's, in the market-place [N].

Upon the ſuppreſſion, the premiſſes were given, like the laſt, to the Bailiffs and Commonalty; in whoſe gift the Chantry had been all along bein this town: upon condition, they ſhould find one fit Chaplain, to pray in the Church of St Nicolas Colcheſter, for his ſoul, and the ſoul of Agnes his wife; and for the ſouls of Robert his father, Margeret his mother, and all others whom he was bound to pray for; and alſo of all faithful perſons deceaſed; and for the good eſtate of the Brothers and Siſters of the Gild aforeſaid. He appointed they ſhould pay this Chaplain a yearly ſtipend of ten Marks: And ordered the overplus of the profits of the premiſſes, to be diſtributed among the poor. The duration of this Chantry did very little exceed the hundred years, for which it was originally founded: For, before the year 1533, it was granted by K. Henry VIII to the Lord Chancellor Audeley; as appears by a Computus, or Account, of this Gild, 25 Henry VIII. in my poſſeſſion.

(Rot. Cur. 4 Henr. V. rot. 45.) —— This will was enroll'd in 1416. (Oath-book, p. 96.) — Thomas Fraunceys was often one of the Bayliffs of this Corporation, in the reigns of K. Richard II. & Henry IV. and V. (Liſt of Bayliffs.)

6. Edmund Haverland's Chantry in the Church of the Crouched-Friers.

This Chantry was founded, in purſuance of the Will of Edmund Haverland of this Town, which was enrolled in 1431 (o). He therein bequeathed to the keeper, brothers, and ſiſters of the Hoſpital of the Gild of St Helen, in the church of the Holy Croſs in Colcheſter, and their ſucceſſors for ever, all his Inn, called the Fawcon [W], with all the rentaries thereto annexed, and their appurtenances, ſituate in the market place of this Town, and in the pariſhes of St Peter and St Runwald: Upon condition that they ſhould provide a fit Chaplain, to celebrate divine ſervice for his ſoul, and the ſoul of William Brome, of his father and mother, and other his benefactors, and of all the faithful departed this life [X].

He alſo gave to the keepers of the ſame Gild, the reſidue of the money ariſing from the ſale of his capital meſſuage wherein he dwelt; To be by them laid out in the purchaſe of Rents, for the relief and comfort of the poor reſorting to their Hoſpital, in bread and beer.

Theſe poſſeſſions were granted, like the laſt, to the Lord Chancellor Audeley, and ſold by him to ſeveral perſons; Among whom, it ſeems, the Bailiffs and Commonalty purchaſed Peters-barne aforeſaid.

8. Richard Heynes's Chantry, in the Church of St Peter's.

Richard Heynes, who lived in the reign of K. Edward IV (p), put ſeveral lands and tenements in feoffment to John Wingfield Eſq; William Teye Gent. and Richard Comonde clerk, to find a Prieſt for ever to ſing maſſe in this church, and to pray for the ſoul of him the ſaid Richard (q). The exact time of this foundation I have not been able to diſcover; but find it was before the year 1473 (r). As to the Endowment of it, the particulars were theſe;

A meſſuage and tenement, in Layer de la Hay.

Two crofts of land, called Stones,
A field called Forke-felde, } in the ſame pariſh.

A meſſuage, or tenement, called the Horne: And theſe ſeveral fields—Hornefelde—Olde-Paynes — Hobclarke — Claylande— Jotfelde— and Tryte; in Salcote Virley.

Lands in Eſtethorpe, named Spicers [B].

Lands in Lexden, named Sowles, [or Foules-lowe,] and Thowlande, [or Hole-land, or Pightle] [C], now part of Loves-land.

Twelve acres of land, in St Giles's pariſh, Colcheſter: Sometime in the tenure of Sir Francis Jobſon Kt.

* Lands and tenements in Toleſhunte, held by copy of court-roll of the manor of Bourchiers in Tolſbury.

* A meſſuage or tenement, lying on the weſt ſide of the White-Hart in Colcheſter.

All theſe premiſſes, [except the two laſt articles,] the Bailiffs and Commonalty purchaſed of K. Edward VI. Novemb. 14, 1550. (together with Barwike's Chantry, which we ſhall mention next) for the ſum of 284 l. 5 s. to hold in free ſocage, of the manor of Eaſt-Greenwich; and with liberty to erect a water-mill at the New Hyth (s). But they ſold them all again ſoon after.

9. Peter Barwick's Chantry, in the Church of St Leonard.

Peter Barwick, or Barwike, put ſeveral lands and tenements in feoffment, for the ſuſtentation and maintenance of a Prieſt during the term of ninety years, to ſing maſſe in the pariſh church of St Leonard, and to help to ſerve the cure there (t). The exact date I have not been able to trace out; but find it was towards the end of K. Edward the IV's reign.

The lands and tenements appropriated by him to this uſe, were theſe:

Several meſſuages, lands, tenements, ſhops, &c. in Colcheſter and Lexden; which, at the time of the purchaſe made of them by the Bayliffs and Commonalty, were in the ſeveral occupations of Roger Lyſſe, John Clarke, Tho. Mythe, Robert Donnyng, Geo. Sayer, John Stamp, Grace Cocke, William Abell, John Love, William Horſley, —— Clarke widow, and John Borough (u). [Among the lands, there were eighteen acres in Lexden, called Childe-field, oppoſite to the ſtone-croſs, on the north ſide of the London road (w).]

Barwicks land
Churchefelde } in Colcheſter.

The Prieſts Chamber, and a Garden in St Leonard's.

* A houſe called the Gate-houſe, rented at 6 s. 8 d.

* Another houſe rented at 12 s. per ann.

Theſe two laſt were exempted in the ſale made of the premiſſes to the Bailiffs and Commonalty.

I think the Commonalty does not remain poſſeſs'd of any part of this purchaſe.

10. Edmund

10 Edmund Harmanſon's Chantry, in the Church of St Leonard.

This, the laſt Chantry in this Town, was founded about the beginning of Henry VII's reign, by Edmund Harmanſon, who was then living [D]: And therefore its duration was ſhort. The foundation was for the maintenance of one Prieſt, to ſing maſſe in the Church of St Leonard, and to help to ſerve the Cure (x). After the Diſſolution, the Bayliffs and Commonalty purchaſed the Lands and Tenements wherewith it was endowed; and have kept them ever ſince. They are, A meſſuage—Lime-kiln-field.—Little London —Alms-houſe-field—and Sand-pit-field; containing by eſtimation 20 acres. It was valued in the Survey of Chantrie-lands, 2° Edw. VI. at 100 Shillings.

By examining this account, it appears, that moſt of the Lands in the Borough-fields, and on each ſide of the London-road, as far as the top of Lexden-hill, belonged to the Chantries in this Town.

⁂ Jeſus Maſſe, and St John's Gild.

To theſe Chantries let me ſubjoin a Gild founded in St Peter's church, and called the Gild of St John's (y), or Jeſus Maſſe. Who the founder of it was, I have not been able to diſcover: Nor what Endowment it had; except ſeven acres of meadow in Lexden, now belonging to George Wegg Eſq;—Part of the King's-head-meadows: And a few other pieces of land adjoining, in Lexden and St Mary's. Together with ſome houſes on North-hill. [E].

Robert Pryour, in his Will, dated April 15, 1463, gave this Gild of St John's, holden in the Church of St Peter's Colcheſter, 6 s. 8 d. for finding a Light there.

SECT. II.

Obits, Anniversaries, &c.

OBITS were Maſſes yearly celebrated on the day of any particular Perſon's death, who left ſome appointment for that uſe. They owed their riſe, as the Chantries mentioned in the laſt ſection, to the groundleſs notion of praying for departed ſouls. In moſt religious Houſes, there was a Book called the Obitual or Martyrology, wherein they entered the names of their Benefactors, or of Perſons who had left them Legacies to obſerve yearly their Obit or Anniverſary.

I ſhall here firſt give a Liſt of the Obits in this Town, from the Account, or Survey, taken of them in the reign of K. Edward VI; and then add ſuch as were overlook'd, or, not found out, at that time.

Other OBITS, ANNIVERSARIES, &c.

John Gerold left by Will to his Wife Editha two acres of land, to find a prieſt yearly to celebrate an Annual for his ſoul. Richard de Bercholt and Geffrey de Goodyar being Bayliffs. Without date.

Alice Strange of St. James's, by her will dated in 1409, gave one coverlyth and one iron candleſtick to ſtand before the image of St James in that Church; and alſo a Rent-charge out of her tenement in the ſame pariſh, for keeping an Anniverſary in the Church there, for her ſoul, the ſouls of her benefactors, and of other faithful perſons.

Thomas Fraunceys, by his will dated May 2, 1416, deſired his feoffees, to enfeoffe his daughters Criſtina and Mary, in a yearly Rent of Eighteen ſhillings, out of two Tenements, viz. out of his own Tenement, late his father Robert Fraunceys, Eleven ſhillings; and out of the tenement late John Rekell's, on the Eaſt-ſide of the Tenement aforeſaid, Seven ſhillings: He alſo gave them a Shop, with a Chamber over it, ſituate on the Eaſt-ſide of his capital Meſſuage. To have and to hold, the ſaid Rent and Shop, with the appurtenances, to his ſaid Daughters, and their heirs for ever [G]. Upon condition, that they ſhould cauſe to be kept in the Church of St Nicolas in Colcheſter the Anniverſary of him the ſaid Tho. Fraunceys, and Agnes his wife, alternately in the Church of St Nicolas aforeſaid, and pay yearly, on the day of his Anniverſary, to the Rector of that Church or his Curate, Twelve pence, and to the Clerk Six pence; and expend, in alms to the poor, and other charges, to the ſum of Thirteen ſhillings and Four pence. Moreover, That they find a Lamp for ever, continually burning in the church of St Nicolas aforeſaid, as well by day as by night, before the Croſs there; and alſo a Wax-light to be burning in the Chancel of the Church of St Nicolas aforeſaid, before the image of St Nicolas, at Maſs-time, on ſundays and holidays, to the honour of God, &c. He charges his daughters to take care, that theſe ſeveral things be done for ever. And if there was a failure in any of the premiſſes, he directs, that the Rent and Shop aboveſaid ſhould deſcend to his executors or their heirs, and by them be ſold; and that they ſhould diſpoſe of the money ariſing from ſuch a ſale, for the good of his Soul, &c.

Moreover, he bequeathed to the Prior and Convent of St Botolph's, certain lands and tenements;

[G] Sub conditione ſubſequenti, videlicet, Quod dicte Chriſtina & Maria, & heredes ſui, annuatim, imperpetuum, bene & fideliter teneant Anniverſarium meum, & Agnetis nuper Uxoris mee, quaſi ſub uno adinvicem, in eccleſia Sti Nicholai Colceſtr. antedicte, et quod ſolvant, annuatim die Aniverſarii mei, Rectori ejuſdem Eccleſie aut ejus locum tenenti, duodecem denarios, & Clerico ejuſdem eccleſie pro tempore exiſtenti ſex denarios; ac in diſtributionibus pauperum, & aliis oneribus ibidem certis temporibus ſubeundis, ad ſummam treſdecim ſolidorum & quatuor denariorum. Et ulterius quod inveniant imperpetuum unam Lampadem continuo ardentem in Eccleſia Sti Nicholai antedicta, tam per diem quam per noctem, coram Cruce ibidem jam exiſtente; necnon & unum cereum ardentem in cancella Eccleſie Sti Nicholai antedicti coram ymagine Sti Nicholai ibidem, ad miſſam, continue diebus dominicalibus & feſtivalibus, ad honorem Dei, & mei dicti Thome, & Agnetis uxoris mee, Roberti Fraunceys patris mei, & Margerie matris mee memoriale perhenne. Et que quidem onera omnia & ſingula per me ſuperius expreſſata, volo quod Chriſtina & Maria filie mee, & heredes eorum ſubeant & ſupportent imperpetuum.

ments, lying on each ſide of the road leading to King's-wood, and called Glovers: Upon condition, they ſhould keep his Anniverſary yearly, in as ſolemn a manner as the Anniverſary of one of their Priors; and write his name in their Martyrology. He ordered alſo to the Convent for a repaſt 6 s. 8 d. to the ringers of the great Bells 4 d. and to the poor on that day 8 d. [H].

Edmund Haverland, founder of the Chantry above-mentioned, gave the yearly ſum of 13 s. 4 d. payable out of ſome tenements, to the Prior and Convent of St Botolph's; for keeping his Anniverſary, and that of his father and mother, and of Aviſe his wife, in their Church for ever [I].

Walter Ramyſſen, by his will dated 2 Oct. 1457, bequeathed a tenement in Magdalen-ſtreet in truſt; for keeping his Anniverſary in the Church of St Mary Magdalen for ever [K].

Robert Lardener, Rector of St Mary's at the walls, who died in 1464; gave by will, to John Chriſtmas and others in truſt, a piece of ground in Holmer [or Butt] lane, for the maintenance of two Lights in the ſaid pariſh-church, viz. a Lamp and wax-candle before the great Crucifix, and a Wax-candle in the branch in the chancel, at the time of divine ſervice [L].

John Wygge, by his will, dated the Wedneſday before the Aſſumption of the Virgin Mary, 1499, left a Legacy, for a Light in Green-ſtead-church [M].

In the neighbouring Church of St Leonard's, there was a Light of our bleſſed Lady; for the maintenance of which for ever, ſeveral ſmall Rents were aſſigned, out of 29 different parcels of Lands, and tenements; amounting in the whole to 11 s. 6 d. [N].

There was alſo kept, in the ſame Church of St Leonard's, the Obit of John Day, in purſuance of a clauſe in his will, dated 20 Oct. 1520, which is ſet down below in the Note [O].

The laſt foundation of that kind in this town, was as follows.—Robert Everard, by his will, dated 2 March 1523, ordered, That his feoffees, &c. ſhould ſuffer the Bayliffs of Colcheſter to take and receive the profits of his houſe and lands called the   , which the Clovier dwelled in at Myland within the libertie of Colcheſter; to diſpoſe the money comyng, to keep an Obit of the moitie of the ſame in St Martin's Church in Colc' for the Sowles of Richard Merkes, Tho. Merkes, William Everard, and Katharin his wiff, and of him the ſaid Robert Everard as hereafter followeth, viz. Firſt to the Parſon or Vicar there, or his deputy 8 d. To every Prieſt of the ſame, and none other, 4 d. To the Clerk of the ſame Church, 4 d. To the Sexton of the ſame, for a knell with one bell for the ſpace of two houres after Dirige and Maſs, for his labour and lights, 8 d. And the other moytie to be given to the Gray Friers, to ſing Dirige and Maſs of requiem yearly, as long as the Law of England will ſuffer, — The ſaid Bayliffs and their Succeſſors to have the rule and diſpoſition of thoſe Lands and tenements, having yearly for their buſineſs, 3 s. 4 d.

If any thing were ſpared of the Money bequeathed to St Martin's, it was to be diſpoſed of to the Poor of that pariſh by the Bayliffs, as they thought beſt.

To conclude this Book, we ſhall add, by way of Note, a Verdict concerning a Paſſage into ſome Lands formerly belonging to Joſeph Elianore's Chantery; which may be of very great uſe to poſterity [P].

[H] Item lego Priori & conventui Eccleſie Sti. § I. Gifts and Benefactions to the Corporation, and to the ſeveral Pariſhes.

IT has been all along aſtoniſhing to me, That in ſo ancient, large, and conſiderable a town as Colcheſter, there ſhould appear ſo ſmall, and ſo very few, public Gifts and Benefactions. I can account for it no other way, but That the Monaſteries and the Commonalty were two Gulphs, which ſwallowed all, and would permit nothing to go beſides themſelves [A].

However, ſuch as our Gifts and Benefactions have been at any time, I will endeavour to give a true and exact Liſt of them; which I ſhall chuſe to deliver as much as poſſible in the very words of the original Wills, or other Grants, on purpoſe to render my Account the more authentic.

1. Sir Thomas White's Gift.

Sir Tho. White, Kt. Lord Mayor and Alderman of London, did, in the year 1566, deliver and pay unto the Mayor, or Burgeſſes, and Commonalty of Briſtol, 2000 l. to the intent that they ſhould therewith purchaſe to themſelves and ſucceſſors, Meſſuages, Lands, &c. then of the clear yearly value of 120 l. and more, to continue for ever for the equal benefit and advancement of Twenty four Cities and large Towns in England; in the following manner. Namely, That the yearly ſum of 104 l. ſhould be paid on St Bartholomew's day, at Merchant-Taylor's-hall in London, to the Mayor or Bailiffs of each of thoſe reſpective cities, &c. ſucceſſively; To be lent by each Commonalty, at 25 l. a-piece, to Four of their poor young Freemen, of honeſt fame, for Ten years, without paying any Intereſt. Thoſe perſons to give ſufficient ſecurity for the repayment of the ſaid 25 l. at the expiration of the ten years. Clothiers to be preferred to all others. The odd 4 l. was to be employed by the reſpective Mayors, &c. of each city and town, as they thought good for their care and pains. The firſt payments were made in the following order. After Briſtol,

In the year
1577	to York.	1588	to Lincoln.
1578	Canterbury	1589	Wincheſter.
1579	Reading.	1590	Oxford.
1580	the Merchant-Taylors.	1591	Hereford.
		1592	Cambridge.
1581	Glouceſter.	1593	Shrewſbury.
1582	Worceſter.	1594	Lynn.
1583	Exeter.	1595	Bath.
1584	Saliſbury.	1596	Derby.
1585	Worceſter.	1597	Ipſwich.
1586	Norwich.	1598	Colcheſter.
1587	Southampton.	1599	Newcaſtle.

And the payments have been made ever ſince, in the ſame order [B].

[A] And even of thoſe which we had, ſome are in danger of being loſt. For though expreſs Proviſion was made in our Work-houſe-Act, "That the Work-houſe "Corporation ſhould not have any Power or Authority "over any Alms-houſe or Hoſpital, or any other charitable Gift or Uſe, within this Town or Liberties "thereof, already Given, Settled, or Erected, or to be "at any time hereafter Given, Settled, or Erected, but "that the ſame ſhould be wholly exempted therefrom:" —Yet ſome of the Managers in this Corporation, had the Confidence to take poſſeſſion of the Alms-houſes about this Town, and of moſt of the Gifts and Benefactions; ſome of which being in Money, are, I am afraid, embezzled, if not worſe.

[B] The Eſtates purchaſed with the abovesaid 2000 l. are ſaid to be worth now above 3500 l. per ann. Some

6. Mr Jeremiah Daniell's Gift of Coals to the pariſhes of St MARY's, St PETER's, St GILES's, and St BOTULPH's.

This generous Benefaction cannot alſo better be deſcribed than in the following Clauſe of Mr Daniell's Will, which was dated October 26, 1695. —— "Item, I further give and bequeath to my Nephew Jeremy [Daniell] before-named, All that Field or parcel of Land called Cockerills Croft, with a chaſe way to the ſame belonging, leading to a Pond called Hangman's pond, being by eſtimation Twenty acres or thereabouts, lyeing in St Giles's pariſh in Colcheſter: Upon this condition nevertheleſs, That the ſaid Jeremy his heires or aſſigns ſhall from the time of my deceaſe every yeare yearely for ever diſburſe and lay out the ſumme of Ten pounds of lawful money of England every yeare upon Sea-Coales, and the ſaid Sea-Coales ſoe bought to bee delivered as hereafter followeth, viz, To the Poore people of St Peters pariſh in Colcheſter as many Coales as amounts to the ſumme of Three pounds: To the Poore of St Giles as many as amounts to the ſumme of Three pounds: To the Poore of St Buttolphs as many as amount to Forty ſhillings: To the Poore of the pariſh of St Maries at the Walls in Colcheſter as many as amount to Forty ſhillings. Henry Wilſon, owner of the ſaid tenement and lands, ſeems to have neglected or refuſed to make the uſual payments. But, in purſuance of a Decree in Chancery, made November 9, 1603, he veſted the aboveſaid rent of 13 s. 4 d. in Ten Truſtees, pariſhioners of the pariſh of St Nicolas; viz. But, out of his great affection for the Poor, inſtead of thoſe 20 l. which he was permitted to appropriate to himſelf, on the 21ſt of December 1639, he enfeoffed Harbottle Grimſton Eſq; William Gilbert Eſq; Edmund Pierce LL.D. John Berriffe Gent. John Shaue, and thirteen others, and their heirs, in a Meſſuage upon Eaſt-hill, then divided into ſeveral tenements; In truſt, that, after his deceaſe, they ſhould apply the Rents and Profits of the ſame, (after deducting for ſufficient repairs) to theſe uſes: Namely, diſtribute Sixteen ſhillings yearly, amongſt the Poor of the pariſh of All-Saints, by the hands of the owners of the houſe wherein the ſaid Matthew Stephens and George Gilbert lived, and the Churchwardens of the ſame pariſh: And alſo that they, jointly with the overſeers of that pariſh, ſhould, every Sunday after divine ſervice, give Twelve pence apiece and a penny-loaf to Twelve of the oldeſt and pooreſt perſons of that pariſh: And divide the overplus of the rents and profits aforeſaid, if any were at the year's end, on St Thomas's day, among the oldeſt and the pooreſt people of that pariſh, according to their diſcretion. —But theſe Tenements being deſtroyed by fire, undoubtedly during the ſiege, and there remaining in the room of them only a Toft or void place; the chief Inhabitants of All-Saints pariſh did, on the 10th day of October 1654, let a 99 years leaſe of the ſame to Robert Smith of the pariſh of St James ſaymaker; for a conſideration of nineteen pounds in hand paid, and a yearly rent of One ſhilling, payable every year on Michaelmas-day, to the Churchwardens and Overſeers of the pariſh of All-Saints, in the South porch of that Church, for the uſe of the poor of the ſaid pariſh. 14. Gift to poor Widows, in St. Botolph's and St Giles's pariſhes.

There is a yearly Rent or Annuity of Two pounds Twelve ſhillings, charged upon, and iſſuing out of, a certain Meſſuage, and Lands known by the name of Longs and Londons, containing by eſtimation Forty two acres, lying in Much Totham, Little Totham, and Gold hanger, in this county, or in ſome or one of them; which ſum is payable yearly, at Michaelmaſs, to the Churchwardens of the Pariſh of St Buttolph for the time being: to be by them applyed towards the ſupport of poor Widows of that pariſh for ever.

The like yearly ſum is payable, out of the ſame Eſtate, to the Churchwardens of St Giles's, in this Town, and for the ſame uſe.

It was conſtantly paid out of thoſe Lands, until the year 1734; when one Samuel Cater having purchaſed them of Richard Holland, by Indentures of Leaſe and Releaſe, bearing date on or about the 10th and 11th of February that year, the ſaid Cater refuſed to pay thoſe reſpective Rents and Annuities. But an Information being exhibited in the Court of Chancery, in Hilary-Term 1738, againſt Cater; it was finally decreed by that Court, on the 13th of December 1740, That the Defendant Cater, and all future owners of the ſaid premiſſes, ſhall duly pay thoſe Rents or Annuities from time to time as the ſame ſhall become due [L].

§ 2. Archbiſhop Harſnet's Library.

DR Samuel Harſnet, Archbiſhop of York, of whom I have given an account under St Botolph's, did, by his Will proved June 8, 1631, give to the Bayliffs and Corporation of the town of Colcheſter, all his Library of Books, upon condition that they ſhould provide a decent Room to ſet them up in, that the Clergy of this town, and other Divines, might have free acceſs for the reading and ſtudying of them.

Thereupon our Magiſtrates conſidered of a fit place to put them in; and, Novemb. 3, 1631, agreed, That the Eaſt end of the Chamber over the Red-rowe, called the Dutch Say-hall, was a convenient place, being repaired, to put the Library given by the Lord Archbiſhop of York, and they appointed it for that purpoſe: And ordered the charges of repairing of that room, and making it fit and convenient, to be laid out by the Chamberlain, out of the Town-revenues (b). July 30, 1635, they appointed a Librarian, wherein they ſhewed their judgment, and their value for Books; Ordering, That William Hall Barber ſhould have 40 s. per annum, for the Keeping of the Library, allowed and paid unto him quarterly, by the Chamberlain of the Town for the time being: He therefore entring into a bond of 40 l. for the making good of thoſe Books that ſhould be loſt or wanting, whenſoever he ſhould be called to an account for thoſe books (c) [O].

March 20, 1654-5, Books being then grown uſeleſs when every thing was done by pretended Revelations, this Library, with all the Books therein were mortgaged to the Chamberlain for 50 l. (d).

And, June 7, 1664, for the ſake of the little Rent that could be made of the Room in which they ſtood, It was ordered, That the Library, then at the Red-Row, ſhould be forthwith removed from thence to ſome convenient place in or near the Grammar-ſchool, and a Catalogue taken of all the Books to be kept in the Moot-hall; and the School-maſter to take care of the Books, and be accountable for them (e). They are now in the Caſtle. The moſt valuable Books amongſt them, are the fine Antwerp Polyglot Bible; and Heſychius, with Iſaac Caſaubon's MSS. notes.

To this Library an Addition was made in 1635, by Tho. Hawes, Rector of St Leonard's, who gave ſome Books to the Town (f). And ſome have been added ſince by other benefactors, as Newcourt's Repertorium, &c.

The nobleſt Addition deſigned to be made to it, was by the late Biſhop Compton, who gave Half his Library of Books to the Mayor and Commonalty, for the ſame uſe as Archbiſhop Harſnet's. But ſuch was the Meanneſs and Diſhoneſty of the perſons who then governed this town; that, to avoid the Charge of bringing them hither, which by Water would have been very trifling, this generous Gift was ſlighted and neglected, and his Lordſhip's heir was forced to ſell them.

§ 1. Charitable Foundations.

THE charitable Foundations now ſubſiſting in this Town are but few and inconſiderable; ſo that I have reaſon to begin this Chapter with the ſame complaint as I did the laſt; namely, How ſmall is the Number of them; and to aſcribe it to the ſame cauſe. By charitable Foundations, I mean here ſuch endowed Buildings as were deſigned for the Benefit and Relief of the Poor; as Hoſpitals, or Alms-Houſes. Of this ſort, we have only theſe few, according to the order of time in which they were founded. 1. Ralph Fynche's. 2. John Wenock's. 3. Arthur Winſley's.

1. Ralph Fynche's Hoſpital, or Alms-houſes.

The founder, Ralph Fynche, was a Brewer, and lived at the bottom of the Balkon-hill in St Peter's pariſh, in a houſe now taken down [P]. In his Will, dated 31 July 1552, he deſired his Executors, with convenient ſpeed after his deceaſe, to finiſh up his Houſes and Buildings as he had begun them under one roof, ſtanding in St. Nicholas's pariſh, which he lately built for four Almes houſes for Four Poore folke to dwell in: And that his Executors ſhould make therein Partitions as well in the upper as the lower parts; and likewiſe in the backſides, or yards. So that each of thoſe four Almes houſes might have like part, as well in the upper parts, with a ſeparate way up to them, as alſo like part to the ſaid yards.

He left the management of theſe Houſes to his Executors for the time being [Q], and to Four of the moſt chief and auncient Inhabitants within the ſaid pariſh of Saint Nicolas, to be named by his Executors: And whenſoever any of the ſaid Four men ſhould deceaſe, or depart out of the ſaid pariſh of Saint Nicolas, the over-liver or over-livers of his Executors, or ſuch of the ſaid Four perſons as ſhould remain and abide in the ſaid pariſh, within a convenient time after ſuch departure or deceaſe, ſhould nominate others to the full number of Four of the moſt honeſt and auncient Inhabitants within the ſaid pariſh: And the ſame order of nomination of thoſe Four perſons to continue for ever.

Theſe Four honeſt Men, ſo to be choſen, were to elect and put into the ſaid Houſes and Buildings, Four ſuch Impotent and Poore Inhabitants, Men or Women, dwelling in the pariſh of Saint Nicolas, and being of good name and fame, as to them ſhould ſeem moſt convenient: Which Poor perſons were not to be removed out of thoſe Alms houſes, ſo long as they were quiet and of good behaviour. And whenever any of them departed out of the ſaid houſe or houſes, either by death or otherwiſe, they ſhould at their departure leave there ſome reaſonable portion of their goods, towards the reparation of the ſaid Houſes, to be adjudged by the diſcretion of the ſaid Four men. Any of his kindred being in poverty, and deſiring to dwell in any of the ſaid houſes, to have the preference of any other.

For the maintenance of theſe Poor people, he granted to the ſaid Four perſons, (whom he ſtyled Governours of them) a yearly Rent, of Six pounds Six ſhillings and Eight pence, to be paid at Michaelmaſs and Lady-day, out of all thoſe Lands, Tenements, and Hereditaments, which he bequeathed to Amye his daughter, wife of Gerrarde Shilbery, and to Mary Rutt; namely, all his Houſes and Buildings at the Balkon, with all utenſils and implements, as well belonging to the brewing of beer there, as otherwiſe: Together with all and ſingular Lands, Meadows, &c. to them belonging; that is, One piece of Meadow lying there next the Balkon, which he bought of Richard Duke, Gent. containing Three acres; One Moore, with a little piece of Meadow, lying there, which he bought of one Filſed; One piece of arable Land, containing by eſtimation Seven acres, which he bought of one Richard Harking, Gent. One acre and a half of Meadow, lying in King's-meadow: All thoſe his Lands, Tenements, and Groves, lying in Fordham; together with his leaſe and term of years yet to come, which he had in a certain Meadow next Powles-land, near the Eaſt of King's-meadow, which he had by the leaſe and grant of one Thomas Awdeley, Eſq;

Out of the fore-mentioned 6 l. 6 s. 8 d. the Four Governors were to pay Six-pence weekly, for ever, to each of the Four poor perſons, abiding and dwelling in the ſaid Houſes.—— For their pains therein, the Governours were to tke every year Six ſhillings and Eight pence.— And the overplus of the ſaid Rent was to be employed for Fewell wood for the ſaid Four poor folke, by the only diſpoſition of the Governours, for ever.

There were alſo ſix Feoffees of this Charity, appointed by the Bailiffs; and when they were reduced to two, the two ſurviving perſons were to enfeoffe ſix others and their heirs as ſhould be nominated by the Bailiffs for the time being.

2. John Wenock's Hoſpital, or Alms-houſe.

Mr. John Wenock of Colcheſter, Bay-maker, having in his life-time, built and finiſhed a Row of Houſes in Hog-lane, in a piece of ground, which was part of a Field called Golden-at-hill, in the pariſh of St. Giles's: He did, in the year 1679, ſettle thoſe Houſes in truſtees for the habitation and benefit of Six Poor people: Whom he ordered to be ſuch ancient and orderly poor perſons, as receive no Alms or Collection from any pariſh whatſoever; unleſs, after ſuch time as they are placed there, they ſhould, by reaſon of age or ſickneſs, become diſabled to maintain themſelves out of his allowance.

For their maintenance, he veſted in his truſtees an Annuity, or yearly Rent-charge, of One and forty pounds; iſſuing out of the Rents and Profits of his Meſſuages or Tenements [R] in the pariſh of St. Peter's in this Town; and to be paid, after his own and his wife's deceaſe, to his aforeſaid truſtees, by quarterly payments, without any deduction.

Out of this Annuity he ordered, That there ſhould be paid by his truſtees to each of the Dwellers in the ſaid Six Dwelling-houſes, Two ſhillings a week, upon the Saturday in every week, and ſo continue for ever.——And alſo, That his truſtees ſhould lay in yearly one Chaldron of Sea-coales for every dwelling-houſe, [R] They were, at the time of making the ſettlement, let only to Four perſons; but are now in Six tenements, rated to the King's-tax at 32 l. per ann. Some of theſe tenements are viſibly the remains of an old Inn; anciently the White-Horſe; and go, in old writings, under the name of the Berghold, from the Saxon beꞃᵹ, or beoꞃᵹ, a hight, an eminence, and holꝺ an inn: And had formerly land, or gardens, belonging thereto, that extended as far as the lane called Angel-lane. for and towards their winter-firing, over and beſides their weekly ſtipend of two ſhillings a week [S]. But, the Tenements out of which the aboveſaid Annuity was to ariſe, not being ſufficient to anſwer it, by reaſon of the fall of the Rents from about 60 to between 30 and 40*l.* per annum; which, after deducting for taxes and repairs, do not yield above 25 l. a year clear; if ſo much: On that account, the allowance to each of the Six poor people is no more than Six pence a week, and a Chaldron of Coals once a year.

3. Mr. Arthur Winſley's Hoſpital.

This is the moſt conſiderable, and the beſt-endowed, Charitable-foundation about this Town. Be pleaſed to take the following acount of it in the very words of Mr Winſley's will, which was dated the 28th of March 1726.

"My Body I deſire ſhould be decently interred with my dear Wife in the Vault of the Pariſh Church of St James (g) in Colcheſter, requireing my Executor hereafter named to purchaſe a faculty for the ſaid Vault. Item, I give Two hundred and Fifty pounds, to be laid out on a Monument to be erected againſt the South wall of the ſaid Church, neareſt the ſaid Vault, with my ſtatue cut out in marble, lying with the left hand under the head, and a book in the right hand, and in a night gown, with Inſcriptions as my moſt judicious Friends ſhall think proper. And I give the Rents of my now dwelling Houſe in the ſaid pariſh of All-Saints, for the maintenance of the ſaid Monument in good repair; and appoint the Rector of the pariſh of St James's, for the time being, to take care that it be kept in good repair. Item, I give all that my farm with the appurtenances, lying and being in the pariſh of St Buttolph in Colcheſter, called the Brick-Houſe, which I purchaſed of Mr. Morley of Halſted; I give the Houſe for an Habitation of Twelve antient Men, that have lived well, and fallen into decay, to be made into Twelve convenient Appartments, at the diſcretion of the Truſtees hereafter mentioned; And I give 500 l. for the making the ſaid Appartments commodious; and I give the Rents of the ſaid Farm towards the maintenance of the ſaid Twelve poor Men. And I give all that my Farm in Weſt Merſe, in the County of Eſſex, called Bocking-Hall, with the appurtenances, now in the occupation of Tho. Spurdin, towards the further maintenance of the ſaid Twelve Men. And I give all the over-plus Rents of my now dwelling Houſe, after the repairs of the ſaid Monument are paid for, as a further maintenance for the ſaid Men. And my Will is, That no poor Man under the age of Sixty years be admitted into any of the ſaid Apartments: Not none (h) be admitted, but who give Bond of Fifty pounds with two good Sureties, not to take Alms of the Town dureing their ſtay there. And further my Will is, That each of the poor Men ſhall, out of the Rents of the ſaid Farms, and Houſe, have Two ſhillings and Six pence paid them every week: and, once in every year, One Chaldron of Cole. And my Will is, That no prophaine Perſon, giving to ſwearing, drinking, or any other vice, be admitted: And if any of them be found ſo guilty, that they may be turned out by the major part of the Truſtees hereafter mentioned. And if any one of the ſaid Men be contentious, and diſturb the Peace of the reſt, or be guilty of any undecent acts, they ſhall be lyable to be diſcharged by the Truſtees. And I do nominate and appoint my brother Richard Winſley, Alderman Nathaniel Lawrance of Colcheſter, Mr. Tho. Coe linnen-draper of Colcheſter, Mr John Grimſtone baymaker of Colcheſter, Mr Ed. Sherman of Deadham in the County of Eſſex, my brother Mr. Benjamin Dyer, and Alderman Jer. Daniel, the preſent Mayor of Colcheſter, to be Truſtees, as well for the fitting up and makeing convenient the ſaid Twelve apartments; which I will to be a low Room, a Chamber, and a Garret, and a Garden to every dweller, as near as may be in the form that Mr John Winock's Charity Houſes now are. And I do alſo appoint one of the ſaid Truſtees yearly and every year to take the rents, and do ſee to the repairs of the ſaid farmes and houſe, and to pay to each of the poor Men their weekly maintenance allowed aforeſaid, and lay into each their Chaldron of Coal as Mr. Winock's Truſtees now do. The firſt Truſtee nominated to pay the firſt year, and the reſt in order as named; and I do allow them and each of them for their trouble the year they ſerve, one pound one ſhilling, out of the Rents of the ſaid Farmes and Houſes. And when it ſhall happen that any one of the Truſtees ſhall dye, my will is, That the reſt ſurviveing ſhall proceed to the choice of another in his room as ſoon as may be, the major part to decide the choice. My will is, That no children be admitted into any of the ſaid appartments. I alſo give out of the ſaid Rents Ten ſhillings yearly to be paid to a good Preacher, choſen by the Truſtees, to preach a Sermon to the ſaid poor Men every New year's day. And I give Twenty ſhillings every year for a Dinner to the poor Men, or any of the Truſtees that will be there every New year's day; except it falls on the Lord's day, and then I will that the ſaid Sermon and Dinner be on the Monday, the day following."

§ 2. Alms-houſes.

BESIDES theſe three endowed Charitable Foundations, of which I have been giving an account, there are Alms-houſes without endowment, in the pariſhes of St Mary, St Peter, H. Trinity, St Nicolas, St Botolph, &c.

1. The Alms-houſes in St Mary's, ſtand in Crouch-ſtreet, on the North ſide of the London road, being the firſt Houſes on the left hand as you come into the Town. They are a brick-building, containing Six dwellings, each of which hath a lower and an upper room: And there is a garden behind. They were granted by the Lord of Lexden-manor, for the relief of the poor (i); but in what year, I have not been able to learn. The date was in the front of them; but was beaten down in the beginning of this century, when the Workhouſe-Corporation took them into their own hands. Theſe Almshouſes are called in old writings St Catharine's Hoſpital, and corruptly the Spittle. There is a tradition, That the Poor therein were allowed 2 s. a week each, a chaldron of coals, and a load of wood; but I have not been able to trace out any ſuch endowment. They are now converted into a Work-houſe for the pariſh of St Mary's.

2. The Almſhouſes in St Peter's pariſh ſtood in the lower Balkon-lane; and were built by George Sayer, Eſq; [T] for four poor people, each appartment being only a lower room and a garret. In the front, not far from the ſouth eaſt corner, was this date cut in a ſtone, ANO DNI 1570. In the middle were his Arms. They had no endowment, and are now taken down.

3. The Almſhouſes in the pariſh of H. Trinity ſtand in Eld-lane, in a pleaſant and retired place; as indeed all Almſhouſes ought to be: But how often are they the effect of oſtentation and vanity, and therefore made as conſpicuous as poſſible?——Theſe were built by Mary Lady Darcy, who lived within this pariſh, in the great Brick houſe oppoſite to the weſt end of the Church; where ſhe died in 1044 (k). She was the daughter of Sir Thomas Kitſon of Hengrave, Suffolk, and wife of Thomas Lord Darcy, Viſcount Colcheſter, and Earl Rivers. ——The exact date of this building I have not found, but it was in the reign of K. Charles I. Theſe Houſes are all of brick, and contain Eight dwellings, each of which conſiſts only of one lower room, two more of timber have been added ſince, at the Weſt end: There is a garden behind them, but no endowment. They are now turned into a Work-houſe for that pariſh.

4. The Almſhouſes in St Nicolas's pariſh ſtand on the North ſide of Bucklerſbury-lane. They are built of timber, and contain ſeven dwellings. The time when they were erected is unknown. Theſe are alſo converted into a Work-houſe for St. Nicolas's pariſh.

5. The Almſhouſes in the pariſh of St. Botolph ſtand on the South ſide of Eld-lane. They conſiſt only of Two dwellings.

There are ſome others in divers parts of the Town; but too inconſiderable to deſerve notice.

In St Martin's pariſh, in Angel-lane, there is a knot of Buildings in a kind of court, called the Hoſpital-yard. But it appears only to have been a work-houſe, for ſetting the poor on work; ſuch Houſes being anciently called Hoſpitals (l).

All the foreſaid Almſhouſes are vulgarly called Gift-houſes; they having been given for the habitation of the Poor. And perhaps that was reckoned a conſiderable Gift, and even ſufficient, when Poor-rates were either unknown, or amounted to a very trifling ſum.

CHAP. III.

§ 1. Account of the Free-ſchool.

IN ſo large and conſiderable a Place as Colcheſter, there muſt undoubtedly have been always ſeveral ſchools. The public ones were, in the 8th of King John, as appears from the Record above cited (*), in the pariſh of St Mary at the Walls, between St Mary's-lane, and Church-lane near Head-gate [U]. But there were none endowed till the 31ſt of K. Henry VIII. aº 1539, nor any effectually endowed at all till the 27th of Q. Elizabeth, 1585.

For, K. Henry VIII. having by his letters patent, dated 12 November 1539, granted the Chantries, in the Chapel of St Helen, and in the Church of St Mary's, to the Bailiffs, Burgeſſes, and Commonalty of this Town; Upon condition of their founding and endowing, with part of the revenues of the ſame, a Free-ſchool here: They accordingly allowed out of them, from that time, the yearly ſum of 6 l. 13 s. 4 d. to a School-maſter, for teaching the children of the Town [W]. But it being found, by an Inqueſt taken at Stratford-Langthorn about the 25th of Q. Elizabeth, That the Bailiffs and Commonalty had not ſettled or appropriated any of the Revenues of thoſe Chantries for the uſe of the School, according to K. Henry's intention: And ſome doubt having ariſen about the validity of the King's grant, as being made to the Bailiffs, Burgeſſes, and Commonalty, whereas they were incorporated only by the name of Bailiffs and Commonalty [X]; therefore they ſurrendered K. Henry's Letters Patent into Chancery to be cancelled. And Q. Elizabeth, July 6, in the 26th of her reign, made them a new Grant of thoſe Chantries, with all the Revenues, &c. thereunto belonging; ſo as that they ſhould diſtribute and apply part of the Revenues of the ſaid Chantries in erecting and endowing a Free-ſchool in this Town; for which ſhe granted them her royal licence. Ordaining, That the Bailiffs and Commonalty, and their ſucceſſors for ever, ſhall and may chuſe and nominate the Maſter from time to time: That the Biſhop of London, and the Dean of St Paul's, and their ſucceſſors, may make wholeſome and ſuitable Statutes and Ordinances in writing, for the government and direction of the Maſter and Scholars of this School; which theſe ſhall firmly obſerve and keep: That the ſaid School, and the Maſter and Scholars of the ſame, ſhall for ever hereafter be under the viſitation and correction of the Biſhop of London, and his ſucceſſors, for the time being: And that the ſaid Biſhop of London, and his ſucceſſors, from time to time hereafter, may viſit and overſee as well the School, and the Maſter and Scholars of the ſame, as all and ſingular the meſſuages, lands, tenements, and hereditaments, aſſigned and appointed by the Bailiffs, and Commonalty for the maintenance of the ſaid School: And moreover ſhall make and cauſe from time to time the iſſues, profits, and revenues of thoſe meſſuages, lands, and tenements, to be converted, laid out, and employed in the maintenance and ſupport of the ſaid ſchool, and the Maſter of the ſame, according to the true tenor, effect, and intent of theſe letters patent.——

About ten months after the date of this Grant, the Bailiffs and Commonalty erected and endowed the Free-ſchool, as appears by the following Deed.

"To all Chriſtian people to whom this preſent Writing ſhall come to be ſeen or read; Robert Mott and Thomas Cock Bayliffs of the Town of Colcheſter, and the Commonalty of the ſame Town, Greeting in our Lord everlaſting. Whereas our Sovereign Lady Elizabeth, the Queen's moſt excelent Majeſtie that now is, by her Letters patents under the great Seal of England, dated the 6th day of July in the 26th year of her Majeſties reign, bearing eſpecial favour towards good letters, and chiefly deſiring the amendment of the ſtate and profit of her ſaid Town of Colcheſter, of her Majeſties eſpecial grace, certain ſcience, and mere motion, Hath, among other things, given and granted, for her, her heirs and ſucceſſors, unto the Bayliffs and Commonalty of her Highneſs's ſaid Town of Colcheſter, Two ſeveral Chauntrys (that is to ſay) the late Chauntry of St Hellen of the ſaid Town of Colcheſter, and one other late Chauntry in the Church of the bleſſed Mary within the ſaid town, and the Meſſuages, Lands, Tenements, Meadows, Paſtures, Woods, Rents, Reverſions, Services, and other Hereditaments whatſoever, to the ſaid Chauntrys lately belonging or appertaining, or which were part, parcel, or member of the ſaid Chanterie, or of either of them, or known, taken, or reputed as part or parcel or member of them; To have, hold and enjoy all and ſingular the premiſſes, with their appurtenances to the Bailiffs and Commonalty of her Majeſties ſaid Town of Colcheſter, their ſucceſſors and aſſigns, to the ſole and proper uſe and behoof of them, their ſucceſſors, and aſſigns for ever; So nevertheleſs that the ſaid Bailiffs and Commonalty, with part of the aforeſaid Meſſuages, Lands, Tenements, Paſtures, and Meadows, and of other the premiſſes, to erect a certain Free-ſchool in the ſaid Town; and the reſidue to the common profit of the ſaid Town for the better payment of the Fee-farm of the ſaid Town, according to their ſound diſcretions ſhould together ſet forth and diſtribute. And that her Majeſties ſaid intentions as to the erection of the ſaid Free-ſchool might have the better effect, her Highneſs did farther by her ſaid Letters Patents, of her more ample grace, give and grant, for her, her heirs, and ſucceſſors, her Majeſties eſpecial Licence, to found and erect a Free Grammar School within the ſaid Town, and to aſſign, limit, and convey ſuch part of the ſaid Meſſuages, Lands, Tenements, and Hereditaments, as ſhould be of the clear yearly value of Twenty Marks, or above, to the maintenance of the ſaid School for ever, as unto them ſhould be thought meeteſt. And further, that the ſaid Bailiffs and Commonalty, and their ſucceſſors, might from time to time for ever, chooſe, name, and appoint, the School-maſter of the ſaid Town, as by the ſaid Letters Patents ſhall and may more plainly appear. Now know ye, That, we the ſaid Bailiffs and Commonalty of the ſaid Town of Colcheſter, in accompliſhment of her Majeſties princely mind and intention concerning the erection of the ſaid Free Grammar School within the ſaid Town, Do by this our preſent Deed and Writing, for us and our ſucceſſors, erect and found a free Grammar School within the ſaid Town, in manner and form following; Firſt, we do appoint, ſet forth, and declare, That the houſe called Weſtons, or by whatever other name or names the ſame is called or known, which heretofore hath been uſed to be a School-houſe, ſituate and being in the pariſh of All-Saints in the ſaid Town of Colcheſter, and now being in the occupation of Edward Watſon, Grammar School-maſter, ſhall be for ever hereafter the School-houſe of the ſaid Free-Grammar-ſchool within the ſaid Town of Colcheſter, and ſo ſhall be for ever hereafter named and called: Within which School-houſe there ſhall be Sixteen Free Scholars taught and inſtructed in the art of Grammar for ever. And further, We the ſaid Bailiffs and Commonalty for us and our ſucceſſors, do at this preſent nominate, place, and authoriſe our beloved in Chriſt, Edward Watſon, Maſter of Arts, to be the School-maſter of the ſaid School, ſo long as unto us and our Succeſſors ſhall be thought meet, and do aſſigne, limit, lay out, and convey all the Meſſuages, Lands, Tenements, and Hereditaments hereafter particularly mentioned, being part of the premiſſes mentioned in the ſaid Letters Patents, That is to ſay, All that capital Meſſuage or Tenement, with the backſide and Rentarie thereto adjoining, ſituate, lying, and being in the pariſh of St Mary at the Wall in the ſaid Town of Colcheſter, between the Tenement late of Robert Leach, Alderman, and now of Robert Brown, Gent. on the North part, and the Tenement late John Wells, Baker, and now of John Talcot in part, and the lands pertaining to the Parſon of St. Maries aforeſaid in part, on the South part; one head thereof abutteth on the Queen's high-way there, leading ing to Head-gate, towards the Eaſt; the other head thereof abutteth upon the Walls of the ſaid Town of Colcheſter towards the Weſt. And Two acres of Land, more or leſs, lying in the ſaid pariſh of St Marie at the Wall, between a certain place of old called the Wall-ditch, and now the Poſtern Ditch on the Eaſt part, and the Land once of John Fitzwauter, and late of the Earl of Suſſex on the Weſt part. And two Crofts of Land containing Eight acres more or leſs, lying by Green Tye in the hamlet of Mile-end, alias Myle-end, within the Liberties of the ſaid town of Colcheſter, ſometimes called Green-Tye-field, and Tyle-kiln-field; Whereof one croft, containing Four acres of land, of old called Godyereſland, lyeth in Mylend aforeſaid, between the lands late of the Abbot and Convent of St Oſyth, and now of Sir Tho. Lucas Kt, on the Weſt part; and a certain lane or way leading towards Mile-end aforeſaid on the Eaſt part: And the other Croft, containing four acres of land, lyeth in Myle-end aforeſaid, between the land late of the ſaid Abbot and Convent on the Weſt part, and a certain grove, wood, or paſture, once Nicholas le Groſſe on the Eaſt part. And alſo all that Croft of Land, containing Four acres of Land, more or leſs, lying in the Hamlet of Lexden, within the Liberties of the ſaid town of Colcheſter, between the Lands and ground called Lexden-park, once John Fitz-wauter's, on the Weſt part, and the way leading from Colcheſter to Weſt Bergholt on the Eaſt part, and the field or meadow late Tho. Audley Gent. and after Edmond Markham Gent. on the South part. All which premiſſes, with their appurtenances, late were let to ferme to Robert Roger, and afterwards to Nich. Clere the elder, and now be in the tenure or occupation of Robert Stanſted or his aſſigns, and be all together of the clear yearly value of Twenty Markes of good and lawful money of England, and above; To and for the maintenance of the ſaid Free-ſchool, and the School-maſter thereof for the time being, for ever. In witneſs whereof the ſaid Bailiffs and Commonalty have to theſe preſents ſet their common Seal of Bailiffs and Commonalty of the ſaid town of Colcheſter. Dated at Colcheſter aforeſaid, the 1ſt day of May in the 27th year of the reign of our Sovereign Lady Elizabeth, by the grace of God Queen of England, France, and Ireland, Defender of the Faith," &c. [Y].

The Reader hath undoubtedly obſerved, in peruſing the Foundation-Deed immediately preceding, That the Meſſuages, Lands, Tenements, &c. wherewith the School was endowed, [and valued then at 20 marks] were All "aſſigned, limited, layd out, and conveyed, for "the maintenance of the ſaid Free-ſchool, and "the School-maſter thereof for the time being, "for ever;" and not a Penſion only, or Annuity, granted or reſerved out of them, for that uſe. Conſequently the Maſter was intitled to the whole and extended Profits of thoſe Meſſuages, and Lands, &c. But when the Rents came to be raiſed, though he had an unqueſtionable right to every part of them, he was, notwithſtanding, forced to ſit contented with his 20 marks: And the Magiſtrates of the Town (as honeſt as moſt other corporate Bodies) put the over-plus into their own pockets, or at leaſt into their common ſtock [Z]. Thus the matter continued till K. William's reign, when complaint being made of the ſame to Dr. Henry Compton, Biſhop of London (who, by Q. Elizabeth's patent, was to cauſe the profits of the premiſſes to be employed in the maintenance of the School, and of the Maſter) his Lordſhip filed a Bill in Chancery againſt the Mayor and Corporation in Michaelmaſs-term 1696, and on the 31ſt of October 1698 obtained a Decree. Still the matter remained unſettled, ſo that it was above fourteen years from firſt to laſt before the Biſhop could bring it to a final iſſue [A]. At length the Mayor and Corporation were prevailed upon to part with the management of the School revenues, and to put them into other hands. Therefore, in purſuance of, and obedience to, the aforeſaid Decree in Chancery, they enfeoffed (September 16, 1707.) by way of Leaſe and Releaſe, Sir William Luckin

And if any of the ſaid Scholars do breake the ſame howers in comeing to Schoole (having not lawfull lett) the Schoole-maſter ſhall miniſter to ſuch Scholars reaſonable correction.

12. Item, ſuch of the Scholars of the ſaid Schoole as be reſonably able to ſpeak and underſtand the Latine tongue, ſhall always, as well in the Schoole as all other places, ſpeak and talke th' one to the other, in their communication and talk, no other Language, ſave Latine or Greeke, as their knowledge ſhall be. 15. 16. Item, the Baliefs of the ſaid Towne for the time being, ſhall from time to time, overſee the ſaid Schoole, and ſee and cauſe the ſaid Laws and Orders to be duly obſerved in every article and point.

17. Item, that no Scholler ſhall at any time bee rebellious or diſobedient to the Schoole-maſter, or the Uſher, but ſhall with good obedience be ready to perform all his precepts and commandments, upon pain of grievous puniſhment, and expulſing out of the ſame Schoole.

18. The third Statute being found, in proceſs of time, ſome way or other inconvenient, was altered by the following order.

An Order made the 11th day of January 1638, by the Right worſhipful Dr. Aylett, Commiſſary to the Right Reverend Father in God William Lord Biſhop of London, and Official of the Archdeaconry of Colcheſter.

WHEREAS an Order was formerly made by the Reverend Father in God John late Lord Biſhop of London, and Mr Alexander Nowell Dean of the Cathedral Church of St Paul London, in the 29th year of the Reign of Queen Elizabeth, "That the Schoole-maſter of the Free-Schoole of Colcheſter, ſhould every Sunday cauſe all his Schollers to go with him to the Church to the general Sermon, and there to continue decently and conveniently in his ſight during the Time of the Sermon:" It is now thought fitt and ordered, That while there is no general Sermon, the Schoole-maſter, for fulfilling of the intent of the aforeſaid Order, ſhall cauſe all his Schollers every Sunday and Holydays, to go with him to the Service and Sermon made at the pariſh Church whereto the Schoole belongs, and there ſee them quietly and ſoberly to behave themſelves, during the time of Divine Service and Sermon, and ſhall examine them at times convenient after their return, what they have born away of ſuch Sermon as they ſhall heare: And this we require the School-maſter from time to time to perform. Given under our hand, this 11th day of January, A. D. 1638.

Maſters of the School.

1. Edward Watſon M. A. was, at the time of the Foundation, in 1585, appointed the firſt Maſter, during the pleaſure of the Bailiffs and Commonalty [B]. He held it very little more than a year. For

2. Samuel Harſnet, or Halſnothe, M. A. mention'd above under St Botolph's, was elected [C] in March 1586-7. But chuſing rather to follow his ſtudies at Cambridge, than the painful trade of teaching, he quitted it in November 1588, and retiring to Pembroke-hall, of which he was Fellow, applied himſelf to the ſtudy of Divinity (n). He endeavoured to have Marke Sadlington M. A. Fellow of Peterhouſe, for his ſucceſſor; but in vain. For

3. William Bently M. A. educated at Shrewſbury-ſchool, Fellow of Clare-hall, and then Maſter of a little School at Dedham (o), was ordered, on the 12th of November 1588, to be Maſter, if found fit. He was confirmed in that office, March 26, 1590, under the common Seal of the Towne, in ſuch ſort as Mr Halſnothe had the ſame, with all ſuch duties and fees as were granted to the ſaid Mr Halſnothe (p). It was impoſſible for any man to have ampler teſtimonials, or greater recommendations than he had, of which the originals are in my poſſeſſion [D]. After having enjoyed this School about ten years, it became vacant by his death or otherwiſe. Whereupon

4. William Kempe M. A. born in London, and educated at Eaton-ſchool, and Peter-houſe in Cambridge, was elected 18 Decemb. 1598. At his election he gave ſecurity, not to leave the School for four years next after his admiſſion, without the Bailiffs licence (q). He had for competitor Hilkiah Crooke, who was recommended by the moſt learned Alexander Nowell [E]. He died April 22, 1637, aged 68,

5. Mr. Proſt appears to have been in poſſeſſion of it; in ejecting him out of which, the Mayor and Commonalty were at ſome trouble and charge [F]. But, April 24, 1637, Mr Knowles the Town-preacher was deſired to nominate a learned and able ſcholar to be the Free-ſchool-maſter of the Grammar-ſchool of this town, (to be approved of by the Mayor, Aldermen, and common Council, or the greater part of them :) Accordingly he nominated (r)

6. William Dugard, M. A. educated at Sidney-college in Cambridge, and heretofore maſter of Stanford-ſchool, a moſt excellent ſcholar [G]. He was elected 27 July 1637, by the Mayor and Commonalty, with one mutual conſent and agreement; and was to be preſented to the Biſhop of London for his approbation, and to enter upon the ſchool at or before the Michaelmas-day following; which he did September 9, 1637. Before his admittance, he gave ſecurity to the Mayor and Commonalty (s), for his continuance, and attending the School without departure from thence without the licenſe of the Mayor for the time being, during the term of Four years next after his admittance. He not only brought the ſchool into a moſt flouriſhing condition; but alſo made ſeveral uſeful repairs and improvements about the School-houſe [H]. Notwithſtanding which, he met with ſo much ingratitude and unkind uſage, though many perſons of the higheſt eminence interpoſed in his behalf [I], that he was fain to be content to reſign his place Jan. 17, 1642-3: Upon condition, the Mayor and Commonalty ſhould pay him what he had truly diſburſed about the houſe, with a competent allowance for his prejudice in removing: all which amounted, according to his computation, to 100 l. which was paid him (t). Shortly after his removal, in 1643, he was choſen Head-maſter of Merchant-Taylor's-School, London. His ſucceſſor here, was

7. Thomas Waterhouſe, M. A. born in London, and educated at the Charter-houſe, and Emmanuel-college Cambridge. He was elected June 30, 1643, upon the ſame conditions as Mr Dugard (u).

8. Nathaniel Seaman, M. A. of Ipſwich, was the next; choſen February 7, 1647-8 [L]. He laid out a good deal in repairing the School; but reſigned it 24 June 1659, when Mr Coppin was recommended by Mr Archer the late Town-Preacher (w); but probably he did not accept of it. For

And ſo I ende, commending yow all, and your whole Citie, to the moſt bleſſed keepinge and protection of Almightie Godd. 7° Dec. 1598. Your woorſhipps aſſured in Chriſte, Alexander Nowell."

[H] He built a fire-room, and a ſtudy over it adjoining to the School: and did other great and uſefull repairs about the whole houſe, to the amount of above 71 l. which the Corporation repaid him. (From his Bills.)

[I] A letter was ſent to the Mayor and Aldermen in his favour, ſigned by the Earls of Mancheſter and Exeter, Sir Harbottle Grimſton and his ſon, Peter Wentworth, Tho. Cheek, J. Wray, Tho. Mountagu, &c. dated Jan. 6, 1642, and of which theſe are the contents, "Gentlemen, Wheras wee are informed of the faithfulnes and integrity of Mr Dugard Schoolemaſter at Colcheſter, and of his good affection to his Majeſtie, the which he hath maniſeſted by lendinge xx l. whenas yet he hath receaved but xvi l. per ann. (as a ſtipend) from you; And is further ready to ſpend both life and livelyhood in the publique cauſe, And therefore may juſtly expect from the Parliament protection in all his juſt rights and priviledges, and encouragement and maintennance from you. And wheras wee are allſo informed, That a diſaffected party in the Toune, intend ſhortly to ſett up another unneceſſary Schoolemaſter to teach Grammar in the ſame Towne, Whereby wee conceave their ayme is to take away the livelyhood of the ſayd Mr Dugard, and to raiſe factions and diviſions, and to foment diſtractions and contentions which muſt needes breed great diſturbance in your Towne, To prevent which inconveniencies, wee, whoſe names are ſubſcribed, at the humble requeſt of the ſaid Mr Dugard, doe recommend the conſideration of his caſe unto you who are the Governors of the Towne, And doe deſire you to take order, that no other Schoolemaſter may be admitted to teach Grammar there, ſo longe as the ſaid Mr Dugard ſhall continue faithfully to diſcharge his duty in his place." —However their recommendations had no effect, as appears by the following entry in his regiſter-book, "Εκρινα σὺν Θεῷ (διὰ) τὰς τῶν διαβαλλόντων βλασφημίας τῷ ἔργῳ ἀπολύεσθαι, καὶ ἐν τῷ ἀγαθοποιεῖν φιμοῦν τὴν τῶν ἀφρόνων ἀνθρώπων ἀγνωσίαν.

12. James Cranſton, M. A. of Boxford, was choſen, and preſented to the Biſhop of London, viſitor of the School, for his allowance and approbation, as his predeceſſors and ſucceſſors were (*).

He enjoyed it till Novem. 21, 1684, when

13. William Slinger, M. A. was elected. He became, 4 Febr. 1686, Rector of Eaſt Doniland; and 15 Octob. 1692, Rector of Layer-Breton (x). Notwithſtanding which, he kept the School, till September 23, 1695, when

14. Richard Reynolds, M. A. recommended by the Biſhop of London, was choſen [M]. He was a good and diligent Maſter; and enjoyed the School about ſeven years. His ſucceſſor

15. Thomas Allen, B. D. of St John's college Cambridge, was elected in 1702. He died in 1723.

16. William Turner, M. A. born in Leiceſterſhire, and educated at Clare-hall in Cambridge, was the next Maſter; choſen April 18, 1723 [N], from Stamford-ſchool in Lincolnſhire, over which he had preſided above 30 years. He died Jan. 24, 1725-6, aged 68. And, the 15th of March following,

17. David Comarque, M. A. educated at Bennet-college in Cambridge, was elected. Upon his accepting of the Rectory of Arlesford in this county, the School was declared vacant. And

18. Palmer Smythies, M. A. late Fellow of Sidney-college, Cambridge, was elected December 20, 1727. He was, before his election, alſo Rector of St Michael's Mile-end, and Maſter of St Mary Magdalen's hoſpital. Now living.

Foundations at Cambridge, belonging to this School.

Robert Lewis, formerly Fellow of St John's College, Cambridge, and for ſome time Preacher at St Peter's in this Town, and Mary his wife; who were both born and brought up in Colcheſter; did intend, and the ſaid Mary, by her will dated Octob. 12, 1620, did give One hundred pounds to the uſe of the ſaid College [O]: Which ſum, in the judgement of the Maſter and Seniors of that College, William Beadle preacher at Horningerth in Suffolk, and Thomas Thurſton of Colcheſter, executor of the ſaid will, might be imployed and put to the beſt uſe for the College, by founding a Scholarſhip therein, for the maintenance of a Scholar for ever. Now, as there was a Free-ſchool in this Town, which was always likely to afford hereafter ſufficient Scholars for the ſupplying of that place of a Scholar; And the Bailiffs and Commonalty being deſirous to give encouragement to the Scholars of this Free-ſchool to apply themſelves to learning: Therefore the ſaid Bailiffs and Commonalty, for and in conſideration of the abovesaid ſum of 100*l.* received of Thomas Thurſton the executor aforeſaid, to the uſe of the College; Did, for them and their ſucceſſors, give, and grant to the ſaid Maſter, Fellows, and Scholars, and their ſucceſſors for ever, one Annuity or yearly Rent of Seven pounds; iſſuing out of all their Meſſuage, or Tenement, and all the houſes, barns, ſtables, yards, orchards, lands, and paſtures, containing Eleven acres one rood and half a rood; and one grove or wood, containing Nine acres, belonging to the ſaid Bailiffs, and Commonalty, called Marks; lying and being in the Hamlett of Mile-end, within the Liberties of this town, and then in the tenure and occupation of John Brincklye. To have, receive, and enjoy the ſaid Annuity of Seven pounds unto the ſaid Maſter, Fellows, and Scholars, and their ſucceſſors for ever, for and towards the maintenance of the ſaid Scholar. To be paid within the ſaid college, to the ſenior Burſar of the ſame, for the time being, at the two Feaſts of St Michael the Archangel, and the Annunciation of the Virgin Mary, by equal portions. And if the ſaid yearly Rent, or any part thereof, ſhould be behind or unpaid by the ſpace of 40 days after either of thoſe feaſts whereon it ought to be paid; the Bailiffs and Commonalty to forfeit and pay for every ſuch default 20 ſhillings, as a penalty to the ſaid Maſter, Fellows, and Scholars. And, if the ſaid arrears of rent, and penalty, were behind and unpaid 20 days more next after the ſaid forty days; then the Maſter, Scholars, and Fellows, and their ſucceſſors, to enter into the ſaid Meſſuage or Tenement, and all other the premiſſes; and the ſame, and every part and parcel thereof, to have, hold, and enjoy to them and their ſucceſſors for ever, to the uſes and intents therein limited and expreſſed.

Upon a vacancy, the Maſter and Seniors of the ſaid College are to make choice of a Scholar, formerly of the Free-ſchool of Colcheſter, and the ſon of a Free-burgeſs of the ſame Town; if they have any ſuch within their College, and qualified according to their ſtatutes. But if there be none ſuch in that College; then it ſhall be lawfull for the Bailiffs, and the general Preacher, of the Town of Colcheſter, and the School-maſter of the Free-ſchool there for the time being, or any three of them, to nominate and preſent to the Maſter and Seniors of the ſaid College, a ſufficient Scholar of the Free-ſchool of Colcheſter to ſucceed into the ſaid place [P]. This Annuity is now paid by the heirs of Mr Bernard the Leſſee of the Severalls, according to the Covenants in his Leaſe.

Ambroſe Gilbert S. T. B. by his Will, dated May 6, 1642. gave as follows, “ Item, I bequeath Marſh-houſe in St Oſith in Eſſex, with all the Lands and Woods belonging thereunto, to the founding of a Fellowſhip and a Scholarſhip in St John's College in Cambridge; and do appoint to be capable of theſe places, firſt the Gilberts, next the Torkingtons, then Colcheſter-ſchool, laſtly Orſet, and Eſſex.” This Will was proved the 14th of June 1649.

§ 2. Charity-Schools.

CHARITY-SCHOOLS were firſt erected in this Kingdom, in the year 1688 [Q]; which uſeful and commendable Example hath been ſince followed in moſt parts of the Nation. Among the reſt, there were Two ſet up in this Town about the year 1708 or 1709; One of which contains at preſent 45 Boys, and the other 14 Girls; who are taught, and cloathed but not boarded.

The Houſe wherein they are kept, was purchaſed with a hundred pounds, given by Mr Samuel Ruſh of London in 1711.

His widow, who was ſiſter to the late James Boys of this Town Eſq; having bequeathed by her Will to theſe Charity-ſchools, in 1741, the ſum of Fifty pounds; there was in conſideration of it, a brick Meſſuage, with a piece of Garden-ground adjoyning thereto, in Stanwell-ſtreet, within the pariſh of St Giles's, [or St Botolph's, or one of them,] formerly parcel of the poſſeſſions of St John's Abbey (y), ſettled upon theſe Schools for ever. And a conveyance was made of the ſame, in 1746, to Mr John Morley, Mr William Mayhew, Mr Iſaac Boggis, the Rev. Palmer Smythies, Mr Edward Morley, and Mr William Naggs; in truſt for theſe Charity-ſchools belonging to the Church of England in Colcheſter.

But the moſt conſiderable Benefactor to them, hath been

William Naggs of Colcheſter, Gent. who did, by Indenture dated July 20, 1747, enfeoffe Palmer Smythies, Philip Morant, George Kilby, and Thomas Halley, clerks, William Smythies ſurgeon, Iſaac Boggies, Michael Hills, and William Cole, Merchants, all of Colcheſter; in a freehold meſſuage, and twenty five acres of land, lying in Wickham St Paul's, in the County of Eſſex: and did alſo convey, at the ſame time, to the ſaid Michael Hills three acres of land, being copyhold called Scryvens or Scrovens; one acre, called Pitt-acre; and one other acre called Tomes lands: In Truſt, to apply the clear Rents and Profits of the ſaid premiſſes over and above taxes, repairs, and other neceſſary deductions, for and towards the putting out on apprenticeſhip two Boys every year out of the Church of England Charity-ſchool in Colcheſter aforeſaid, with any ſum of money not exceeding Five pounds for each Boy: And to pay and apply the remainder of the ſaid clear Rents and Profits to the Truſtees of the ſame Charity-ſchool for the time being, or their Treaſurer, for and towards the teaching and cloathing of Four Boys in the ſaid ſchool, and for the better ſupport of the ſame ſchool [R].”

For the reſt, theſe Schools are ſupported and maintained by ſubſcriptions, and voluntary contributions.

The Maſter has 40*l.* a year ſalary, and a houſe and firing. The Miſtreſs has a ſalary of 14*l.* a year, with a houſe and firing.

The Proteſtant Diſſenters have alſo two ſmall Charity-ſchools in this Towne; to which Arthur Winſley, Eſq; bequeathed Three pounds a year, to be paid by his executor, for the maintenance of a Boy and a Girl in theſe Schools, as long as they are in being: The children to be put in by his executor, or in his default by the majority of the Truſtees.

§ 3. Work-houſe.

THAT the Poor ſhall never ceaſe out of the land; and that ſuch Members of Society, as cannot maintain themſelves by their own honeſt Labour and Induſtry, are not to be ſuffered to ſtarve, but be charitably relieved by their fellow-members; is manifeſt not only from the Laws of God, but alſo from thoſe of Nature and Reaſon.

This Maxim hath been always underſtood, and well practiſed in this bountiful and charitable Nation. Numbers of Poor have at all times abounded in our Towns, which much encreaſed within theſe two or three laſt centuries, in proportion as the people muitiplied, and manufactures were brought in and encouraged. But, for their relief and maintenance, ſeveral uſefull proviſions and regulations were made; even long before Q. Elizabeth's reign [S], when Laws were firſt enacted for the relief of the Poor in general.

We are aſſured, That our Abbies and Monaſteries, aſſiſted with the Benevolence and ancient Hoſpitality of the Lords of Manors [T], till the time of the Reformation, were a ſufficient proviſion for the Poor of this Kingdom (z).

(y) See Book II. p. 35. note [A].

[Q] They were founded, with a view of oppoſing and defeating the pernicious Effects of the Seminaries ſet up by the Papiſts in K. James the IId's reign. The firſt Proteſtant Charity ſchools ſet up at Lady-day that year, were in Norton-Folgate London; and the blue-coat ſchool in St Margaret's Weſtminſter. Bp. Kennett's Complete Hiſt. of England, Vol. III. p. 501.

[R] The Indenture was enrolled in Chancery, November 17, 1747.

[S] By Statute 23 Edw. iii. c. 7. Relief was to be given to thoſe that could not labour.—Statute 17 Rich. ii. c. 6. injoined, That upon the Appropriation of any church, the Dioceſan of the place ſhould ordain, according to the value of ſuch Churches, a convenient ſum of money to be paid and diſtributed yearly of the Fruits and Profits of the ſame Churches, by thoſe that will have the ſame in proper uſe, and by their ſucceſſors, to the poor Pariſhioners of the ſame Churches, in aid of their living and ſuſtenance for ever.—From Statute 2 Hen. v. c. 1. it appears, that there were then Hoſpitals for the maintenance of impotent men and women, Lazars, men out of their wits, and poor women with child; and for the nouriſhment, relief, and refreſhment of other poor people.—And by Statute 22 Henr. viii. c. 12. the Juſtices of every County, dividing themſelves into ſeveral limits, were to give licence under their ſeals, to ſuch poor aged and impotent perſons to beg within a certain precinct, as they ſhould think to have moſt need.

But upon the ſuppreſſion of the Monaſteries, 27 Hen. VIII. c. 25. it was enacted, That all Governors of ſhires, cities, towns, hundreds, hamlets, and pariſhes, ſhould find and keep every aged, poor, and impotent perſon, which was born, or dwelt three years, within the ſame limit, by way of voluntary and charitable Alms in every of the ſame cities, and pariſhes, &c. with ſuch convenient Alms as ſhould be thought meet by their diſcretion, ſo as none of them ſhould be compelled to go openly in begging. And alſo ſhould compell every ſturdy vagabond to be kept in continual labour.— And that no perſon ſhall make any open or common dole, nor ſhould give any money in Alms, but to the common boxes, and common gatherings in every pariſh, upon pain to forfeit ten times ſo much as ſhould be given. And ſtatute 3 and 4 Edw. VI. c. 16. injoyned, That maimed, ſore, aged, and impotent perſons, ſhould be relieved and cured, and habitations provided for them, by the devotion of good people of that city, town, or village where they were born, or had dwelt three years.

By ſtatute 2 and 3 Phil. and Mar. c. 5. Relief for the aged and impotent Poor of every pariſh, was to be gathered weekly of the charitable devotion of the inhabitants. And a remedy was provided where a Pariſh was not able to relieve the Poor therein, &c. [U].

Statute 5 Elizab. c. 3. ordained, That the poor and impotent perſons of every pariſh ſhould be relieved of that which every perſon would of their charity give weekly: And the ſame relief to be gathered in every pariſh by Collectors aſſigned, and weekly diſtributed to the poor; for none ſhould openly go or ſit begging. And if any pariſhioner obſtinately refuſed to pay reaſonably towards the relief of the ſaid Poor, or diſcouraged others; then the Juſtices of peace at the Quarter-Seſſions might tax him to a reaſonable weekly ſum, which if he refuſed to pay, they might commit him to priſon. And if any pariſh had in it more impotent poor perſons than they were able to relieve, then the Juſtices of the peace of the County might licenſe ſo many of them as they ſhould think good, to beg in one or more Hundreds of the ſame county.

By ſtatute 14 Elizab. c. 5. Aſſeſſments were to be made of the Pariſhioners of every pariſh, for the relief of the poor of the ſame pariſh.

Notwithſtanding theſe Laws, the Poor continued to be relieved by the voluntary Alms and the Charity of well-diſpoſed perſons (for the reception of which a Trunk, or Box, was ſet up in every church) or elſe by collections at the Church-doors [W], as is ſtill practiſed

[T] For they did not uſe to ſpend the greateſt part of their time in London, and riotouſly or luxuriouſly waſte their ſubſtance there; but were wont to reſide moſtly in their own Manors, and to keep hoſpitality and open houſe, upon many occaſions —To which muſt be added, That in many Wills there were very conſiderably bequeſts to the Poor—ad diſponendum in erogationibus pauperum, ac aliis operibus caritatis—as the words generally were. And Ralph Fynche, founder of the Hoſpital abovementioned, left, To the poor in the four Wards of this town, at the day of his burial, by the order of his executors, 4 l. All his beer-barly, and four quarters of rye, to be diſtributed amongſt the Poor of St Nicholas, by his executors and the honeſt men of that pariſh. He ordered his tenement and houſes in St Mary's to be ſold, and the money to be diſtributed amongſt the Poor of the town of Colcheſter by the diſcretion of his executors. The reſidue of his goods, after legacies, gifts, and funeral charges paid, he ordered to be diſtributed amongſt the poor people, and in deeds of charity, as his executors ſhould think beſt.

[U] In purſuance of this Act, certain Ordinances were made by the Bailiffs, Aldermen, and Common Councel of this Town, 15 February 1556-7, in the Mote-hall; Some of which are as follows. " 1. It is agreed and condiſcended by the hole houſe, that yf any of the ſeid choſen men of the pariſhes [in this town] do not aſſociate and company themſelfs willyngly togither, but do obſtinatly refuſe to putt their helpe as well toward the order for the aide of the Poore, as other reformacions here under written; that the ſame defalt beyng by the reſt of his company complayned of to the Bayliffs, the ſame offender or offenders ſhall forthwith forfeit to the uſe of the Poore for every ſuche default x s. 2. It is further agreed, That the perſons by them nominated of every pariſhe, ſhall have full powre and auctorite to Rate and aſſeſſe all and every perſon or perſons inhabiting in their circuite, what porcion of money He or They ſhall pay from tyme to tyme and weke to weke, for and towards the proviſion of the ſeid poore. And that upon every refuſall ſo by any manner of perſon whatſoever hereafter to be had or made ayenſt thentent aforeſeid; and the ſame being declarid to the Bailyffs for the tyme beyng, then the ſame Baillies immediatly for ev'ry ſuche perſon ſo refuſyng ſhall comytt him or them to priſon, there to remayn tyll he hathe fully paid his ſeid Rate, and ſuch other porcion of money as ſhal be by the ſeid Bailliffs thought more condign for his fyne and ranſom. And that to be employed to the uſe of the Poore in the circuite where ſuche defaute ſhall happen to be doon; and no favor to be ſhewid by the ſeid Bayliffs upon ſuche offender, upon payne to be forfeited by the ſame Baillies as ſhal be thought mete by the ſeid houſe. 3. It is further agreed, that every and ſingular owner and owners of houſes and tenements within the precynct of this town, ſhall not, after the daye of makyng this order, take or receyve into his or their houſes, tenantries, or ſhoppes, or admitt to be their tenaunts, any ſtraunger or ſtraungers, to inhabit or dwell in the ſame; unleſs it ſhall evydently apere, that he or they, with their wiffs, or familie, by their handywork or goods, be able ſufficiently, to lyve honeſtly and truly without magginge or bribing, upon payn to forfett for every ſuch one herin offending x s. to be employed to the uſe of the poore. 4. Item, they agre, that every houſe, warehouſe, or ſhopp within the ſeid pariſhes, ſhal be rated by iii or iiii honeſt perſons of the ſame pariſhe; And to pay by the year viii d. of the Noble, and no perſon to paye for any houſe that is rated at iii s. iiii d. and under by the yere. 5. Item, it is agreed, that yf any houſe ſtand vacant, yt then for that tyme ſhall paye nothing, 6. It is agreed further, that ſuch perſons as be appoynted to be Surveyors for the Poore, ſhall, in like manner, Rate all the Houſes in every pariſhe by the yere, within the precynct where they dwell.

[W] Such Collections were made here by Warrant from the Bailiffs of this Towne, of which this was the uſual form. " Theſe are, in the Queen's Majeſty's name, to will and command you, upon Sunday next in the afternoon, at the end of the general Sermon, to give your perſonal attendances at the Church-door of St —— in Colcheſter, and there to aſk, collect, and receive the devotion, charity, and benevolence of well-diſpoſed people, reſorting from the ſaid Sermon, for and towards the relief of the Poor in this Town; and the ſame collection you continue by the ſpace of four Sundays together. And the Money ſo collected, you pay over unto —— Purſers of the ſaid Collection for this year: Which ſhall not lay out any part thereof without our warrant. And, that at the end of the ſaid four Sundays, you return this precept, with your weekly contributions thereupon en-in many countries: Until the 39th and 43d of Elizabeth, when Overſeers of the Poor were appointed, and their manner of election, office, and duty, ſettled and limited by ſtatute. Which method of Relief is ſtill uſed in this Nation.

Under this new Law, the maintenance of the Poor of this Town was at firſt very eaſy, as appears by the Note below [X]; and ſo it continued for about 40 years: Of which theſe were the natural cauſes; A good Trade; Difference in the manner of living, from what it is now; Cheapneſs of proviſions; Money going a great way; The Nation not ſo populous; Few or no Luxuries imported, or at leaſt not diſperſed amongſt the poor; Not ſo great a number of Ale-houſes, and incentives to vice and drunkenneſs; Few Taxes, and public Impoſitions, which being infinitely multiplied ſince, have greatly enhanced the Price of every thing.

But the unhapy Siege brought univerſal Diſtreſs and Poverty in this place. However Trade and Riches flouriſhed amongſt us again, till towards the end of K. William's reign, when the French influence at the Court of Spain prejudiced our Intereſt, and the Sale of our Woollen Goods there; and that crafty people began to ſteal our Wool, and to make manufactures of the ſame kind; and alſo to underwork and underſell us in many countries.

Thereupon our Poor grew ſo numerous and burdenſome, that the Corporation found it neceſſary to preſent a Petition to the Houſe of Commons in March 1697 (a), wherein they repreſented, "That this Burrough is very ancient, and conſiſts of ſixteen pariſhes, and is very populous, and a great trading Towne, and that the Poor in the ſaid Corporation were very numerous, and did daily multiply, and idleneſs and diſorders amongſt the meaner ſort of people here for want of Workhouſes to employ them did daily encreaſe, to the great charge of the Petitioners (who already paid one half part of the rents of their lands and tenements they occupied here, towards the maintenance and relief of the poor) and alſo to the hindrance of the Poor themſelves, which, if not ſpeedily prevented, would tend to the impoveriſhment of the ſaid Corporation, and inhabitants thereof in general. And finding, that, for prevention of ſuch like abuſes and diſorders in the city of Briſtol, an Act of Parliament was lately granted, for erecting Workhouſes, employing their Poor, and for raiſing moneys for maintaining and upholding the ſame, which the Petitioners were ſufficiently informed, proved to their great benefit and advantage: Therefore they humbly deſired leave, to have a Bill brought in for redreſs and relief of the Corporation of Colcheſter, in like manner and form, and with as large and ample grants, liberties, privileges, and immunities to and for the purpoſes aforeſaid, as were lately granted to the ſaid Corporation of Briſtol."

Accordingly an Act paſſed aº. 9 and 10 of William III. wherein it was enacted, "That from and after the 24th day of June 1698, there ſhould be a Corporation to continue for ever within the Town of Colcheſter, and the Liberties thereof, conſiſting of the Mayor and Aldermen for the time being, and of Forty eight other perſons; to be choſen out of the honeſteſt, diſcreeteſt, and charitable inhabitants of the ſaid Town and Liberties thereof, by the Four Wards in the Town, i. e. Twelve out of every Ward, and of ſuch other charitable perſons as ſhould be elected and conſtituted Guardians of the Poor of the ſaid Town: To be elected at a Court for that purpoſe to be held for every Ward, by the Mayor and Aldermen for the time being, or any Five or more of them, whereof the Mayor for the time being to be one, by the votes of the inhabitants of ſuch Ward, or of the major part of them then preſent, and paying, or then rated at One penny per week or more [Y], in his own right, for or towards the Poor's Rate.—Which ſaid Mayor and Aldermen, and 48 perſons ſo elected and conſtituted, ſhould be, and be called Guardians of the Poor of the Town of Colcheſter.—And, to the intent that all inhabitants of this Town, qualified for the ſaid office of Guardians, might in their turns be, or have the opportunity of being, choſen thereto; It was further enacted, That in every Second year from thenceforth for ever, on the firſt Monday after the 24th of June, or within three days after, the Mayor and Aldermen ſhould hold a Court for the reſpective Wards: At which time, the Clerk of the Work-houſe-Corporation ſhould declare the Names of the firſt Six perſons of each Ward, in the order as they were entred as Guardians in the Book, or Books, provided for that purpoſe; and thereupon thoſe Six perſons in every ſuch Ward reſpectively ſhould ceaſe to be Guardians; and immediately a new Election ſhould be made in the four Wards, by the like votes of ſuch inhabitants thereof as aforeſaid, of Six perſons ſo qualified as above declared, to fill up the places of thoſe firſt Six perſons ceaſing

But as the Act is at preſent ſuſpended, and beſides hath been printed ſeveral times, there is no neceſſity of giving a larger Extract of it here.

The money aſſeſſed by this Corporation, was gathered weekly by Two Collectors, who paid it into the hands of the Treaſurer; and he diſtributed it weekly to two other Perſons called Payers, who relieved the Poor according to each perſon's ſtated collection, or their particular emergencies, as the Aſſiſtants did, by Bills under their hands, order; which Bills were always produced as vouchers to prevent any fraud.

Two Chirurgeons were alſo employed, at a certain yearly ſalary, to take care of the Sick-Poor.

Since the ſuſpenſion of the Act, this Town is in the ſame ſtate with regard to the maintenance of the Poor as the reſt of the Kingdom. But, beſides the want of Equal Taxation, which is the juſteſt method; and of late much ſpoken of, and much recommended; it is attended here with this inconvenience, or evil, that ſome of thoſe pariſhes which have the moſt trade, or could beſt afford to pay towards the maintenance of the Poor, pay very little; while others that are in the by-lanes, and can have few or no advantages in the way of buſineſs, pay 8, 10, and 12 ſhillings in the pound.

This Workhouſe Corporation became indeed too much the Property of a few, who perhaps made too great an Advantage of it: And it alſo became a powerful Tool in the hands of thoſe odious things, Parties. But, it might have been better amended, than deſtroyed.

I muſt not forget to obſerve, That long before this, there were Workhouſes or Hoſpitals (as they were anciently called) erected in this Town, for the employment and maintenance of the Poor; particularly in the years 1594 and 1612.

The firſt was called, The Poore-houſe and Hoſpital in Colcheſter: And, for the relief of the Poor therein, the Guardian and Keeper of the ſame did, by protections by him and his deputy, collect the Benevolence of good people in ſundry places; and gave Bond for the imploying of the Money ſo collected for the relief, behoof, and uſe of the Poor in that hoſpital (b).

For the management of the latter, ſeveral curious Orders and Conſtitutions were made which are inſerted in the Appendix [Z].

§ 1. and 2. Antiquities, Roman Pavements, Coins and Medals, &c. found in and about Colcheſter. Account of the Teſſelated Pavements now extant.

THERE are more Roman Remains in and about this Town, than in any other part of South-Britain [A]; nay I may juſtl affirm than in any other part of Europe out of the Italian dominions, wherein ſtood Rome, the center of Glory, and the Metropolis of that great Empire. For Here immenſe Quantities of Roman Bricks and Tiles are to be ſeen incorporated, or rather the chief Materials, in all our moſt ancient and public Edifices. The Town-walls, the Caſtle, and the Churches, are half-built with them, and in ſeveral parts thereof the Roman workmanſhip is alſo copied; as I have obſerved above (c). The Bricks are generally about eighteen inches long, eleven broad, and two thick; exceeding hard, and well-baked. And the Tiles are much more ſubſtantial than thoſe at preſent uſed in our ſlight and trifling Buildings; which are in general more calculated for the benefit of the workmen than of the owners.

The Supellex Romana of all kinds ſtill abounds with us; hardly any places being dug up without diſcovering Urns, Vaſes, and Potterie of all ſorts, or at leaſt fragments of them: among which is a great deal of the fine glaſed and red ware, reſembling the beautifulleſt of thoſe that come from China.

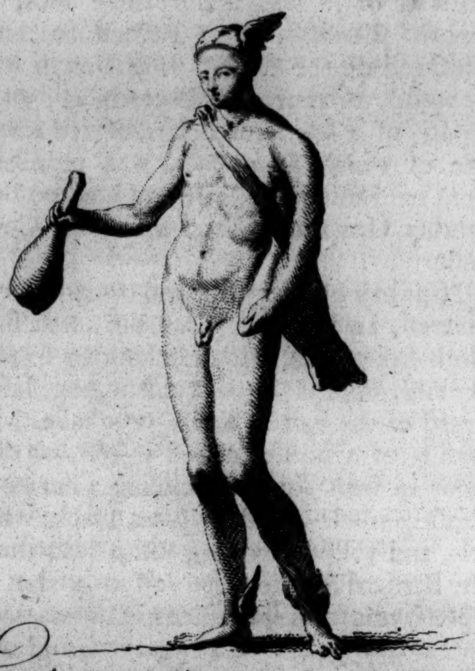
Sepulchral Urns, with the aſhes therein, are likewiſe frequently found; as alſo Lamps, Rings, Intaglia's, Styles, Chains, and ſuch other work [B]. A remarkable Sepulchral Urn in particular was taken up here ſome few years ago. It was a large Veſſel, made of thick coarſe light clay, containing twenty gallons: Within which there was an Urn of black earth, holding about two gallons; and having in it the aſhes of a Roman Lady, as may be ſuppoſed, becauſe there were alſo with it two bottles of clay for incenſe, two clay lamps, one metal veſſel for ointment, and a ſpeculum of poliſhed metal, anciently uſed for a looking-glaſs. This apparatus undoubtedly belonged to a Lady, it being the cuſtom among the Romans, to bury with the deceaſed ſuch things as were dear to them while alive (d).

In 1738, juſt within St. Botolph's gate, were found ſeveral Urns, a Roman Lamp, ſome pieces of melted metal, and two coins of Domitian.

In the large field, on the South ſide of the London-road, oppoſite to the two wind-mills, was found, in 1753, a large Urn, 22 inches in diameter, 2 feet 4 inches deep, and containing about 14 gallons; in which there was a metal ſpeculum, or looking-glaſs.

The 24th of March 1749-50, in Wind-mill field, near the weſt end of the Town, was found a leaden Coffin; not lying due eaſt and weſt, but north-eaſt and ſouth-weſt. In it was a quantity of duſt, but no bones, except very ſmall remains of the back-bone, and the ſkull in two pieces. There lay near the head two bracelets, or picture-frames, of jet, one plain, the other ſcalloped, and a very ſmall and ſlender one of braſs wrought; and four bodkins of jet. The coffin was caſt or wrought all over with lozenges, in each of which was an eſcallop-ſhell, but no date. Near it was found an Urn, holding about a pint, in which were two Coins of large braſs; one of Antoninus Pius, and the other of Alexander Severus.

A little braſs Mercury was alſo found here ſome time ago. It came into the poſſeſſion of the worthy George Holmes Gent. Deputy-keeper of the Records in the Tower; who was ſo kind as to adorn this work with a repreſentation of it. George Scott Eſq; hath it now.



This Figure of Mercury was found at Colchester and was lately in the Custody of Mr. George Holmes now of George Scott Esq.

In 1739, there was found, in a gravel-pit near this town, a fragment of a ſmall image ſeeming to be Venus; and a little Urn holding about half a pint.

§ 2. Next, As to the Moſaic or Teſſelated Pavements; There is one in the Church-yard of St Mary's at the Wall, of which pieces are frequently diſcovered, when graves are dug in a quite freſh place. It ſeems to have been a very large one, or rather more than one Pavement; for the pieces diſcovered are at a conſiderable diſtance from each other.

There is moreover one, in the Cherry-garden belonging to the Rector of St Mary's, on the North ſide of the Parſonage; not many yards from the other.

There is alſo one in Berry-field, in St James's pariſh, of which part was diſcovered by George Wegg Eſq; The teſſeræ were red, intermixed with many white ones, diſpoſed in a ſtar-like form.

Another was found on the South-ſide of the Red-Lion-inn, when part of it was converted into an iron-warehouſe. A great quantity of the pieces were preſerved, and ſet in an arbour in one of the gardens belonging to that inn.

Another was diſcovered juſt below the Caſtle hills.

When Dr. Daniell's houſe was rebuilding, one was found by the workmen; together with an earthen Urn, holding about a quart, and a metal one [C].

In the beginning of the year 1748, one was diſcovered in the garden of Peter Creffeild, now of James Round, Eſq; in the pariſh of H. Trinity. It was near three foot under the ſurface of the ground, [as the reſt generally are,]

(d) See Dr. Con. Middleton's Antiq. p. 29.

[B] Many of them are in the poſſeſſion of Charles Gray Eſq;—Ebenezer Muſſel Eſq; had alſo ſome of them.

[C] By the places where the Urns have been found viz. in St. Martin's pariſh; near St Botolph's gate; the and red; only a few whiter pieces were intermixed, but not in any regular order. The breadth of it was about three foot, and the length fifteen; but it ſeemed to have been damaged on the ſides. In the earth which was flung up, there was the bottom, and other fragments, of a fine figured Urn of red earth; upon one of which fragments, was repreſented the head of Jupiter. There was alſo the bottom of another Urn found; and a coin of Conſtantine junior.

Near half of a very fine and elegant one was diſcovered, 12 May 1763, on the north ſide of the High-ſtreet, in a garden belonging to Mr. John Bernard, apothecary and chirurgeon, late part of a yard of the Falcon and Queen's-head-inn. It conſiſts of a border of red teſſeræ, or dies, each about an inch ſquare, incloſing a curious workmanſhip made of leſſer teſſeræ, black, white, two reds, and yellow, looking like a beautiful carpet. Mr. Bernard hath incloſed and covered it, in order to preſerve it from the injuries of the weather. An exact drawing of it was engraved, and delivered with Lexden-Hundred, when that part of the Hiſtory of Eſſex was publiſhed.

Near this, was found, either part of the ſame, or another, when a ſtable was pulled down, which was ſuppoſed to be an old Roman building. Many others have been undoubtedly found in divers places; that have been either ſlighted by the workmen, or of which no notice has been otherwiſe taken.

§ 3. Then, as to Roman Coins and Medals; immenſe Numbers, nay Buſhels, have been found in and about this Town; and amongſt them many gold ones of the higher Empire. Even the richeſt Cabinets in this Nation have been furniſhed from hence; of which a very large ſpecimen may be ſeen in the late Earl of Oxford's Collection, where compleat ſeries, both of braſs and ſilver, were preſerved (e). And hardly a Traveller of curioſity paſſes through this place, without enquiring after and purchaſing ſome.

The following Liſt will inform the curious and learned Reader, of what nature and value are thoſe Roman Coins and Medals found in and about this Town: And, at the ſame time, will ſhew Mr. Camden's great miſtake when he inſinuates (f), that we have none here but of the lower Empire [E].

Weſt-ſide of the Balkon-hill; and near Mr. Alexander Carter's Mill, it is a certain ſign, that the Roman Town did not extend to thoſe places. It ſtood more in the higher parts of the Town, as I have obſerved above.

⁂ We have here no Roman Altars or Inſcriptions remaining; except one found in 1763; which is to be imputed to the many Revolutions that have happened in theſe parts, as I have obſerved above. Beſides this is ſo far from being a rocky country, that Stones are very ſcarce with us. Now ſuch Inſcriptions are chiefly found in greateſt quantities, in thoſe parts of Britain wherein Stones are moſt plentiful.

This Liſt is only a ſhort Specimen of ſuch Roman Coins and Medals as I have purchaſed ſince my coming here, or of the many that are in the curious collection of Charles Gray Eſq; But there are innumerable quantities more found, even down to the Times of the Romans final Departure from this Iſland; with which it would be improper and unneceſſary to ſwell this work.

§ 4. Ancient Dates upon two Houſes, particularly 1090.

THIS Account of Colcheſter would, I am afraid, appear to the Reader very incomplete, if I did not ſay ſomething of the famous date 1090, which hath ſo much exerciſed the heads and invention of the learned. This date formerly ſtood on the North ſide of a Houſe in the High-ſtreet, near the corner of White-fote's, or Pelham's, lane, and almoſt oppoſite to the Motehall. That North-front of the Houſe was of timber; and, to all appearance, no older than the 14th or beginning of the 15th century. But the back, or ſouthern, part of the ſame was built of a mixture of Roman brick and ſtone, with arched paſſages, in the ſame manner as the under-part of the Mote-hall: And, according to tradition, was built by, and the reſidence of, Eudo Dapifer; towards the end of the eleventh century, in the reigns of K. William I. and II. [F].

About ſixteen or ſeventeen years ago, this old Houſe was wholly taken down and rebuilt by the owner John Laurence: And then the bottom-cell of the Window on which the Date in queſtion is carved, was placed as the cell of a Window on the South ſide of the new houſe, in an inner yard, where it ſtands at preſent.

The firſt who took notice of this date, or whoſe account at leaſt was made public [G], was the late Rev. Mr Thomas Lufkin. His deſign was, to confirm thereby the opinion of the learned Dr John Wallis, (for whom he expreſſed a profound veneration,) viz. That the Numeral Figures were uſed in Europe, long before the years 1250, or 1300; the time when Father Mabillon (f), and J. Gerard Voſſius (g), have affirmed, they firſt came into uſe: The contrary to which the Dr fancied was apparent, from a date on the mantle-tree of a Parlor-chimney, at the Rectory-houſe of Helmdon in Northamptonſhire [H]. And ſo ſtiff was Mr Lufkin in his Opinion, that the queſtioning of it gave him great uneaſineſs.

The next time this Date came to be mentioned in print, was in the Bibliotheca Literaria [I]. Upon which occaſion a Gentleman informed the editor [K], that both Mr Lufkin and Dr Wallis appear to have been miſtaken, in the account they have given of the uſe of Arabian characters here in England, as early as the eleventh or twelfth centuries. His words were thus, “ I fear Voſſius and Mabillon were “ too good Judges to be impoſed upon in the “ Æra of Numerals; and ſince only two in- “ ſtances are produced againſt them, I doubt “ they are both Forgeries, and ſo can conclude “ nothing againſt them. The Colcheſter in- “ ſcription, as you print, ſtands thus 1090, “ falſifyed with a vengeance! for I have ſeen “ it, and it was originally thus 1 8 90, i. e. 1490. “ Some fantaſtical Knave, perhaps as late as the “ æra of Quakers, has diminiſhed the 8 of his “ lower parts, and left it thus, ° ; for it plain- “ ly appears to any diſcerning eye, that the “ firſt ° of the pretended 1090 is but half as “ big as the other [L]. Being ſure in the “ Colcheſter inſcription,” our author “ ven- “ tures a fling at the Chimney,” the date on which M 8 E33 he makes to be 1433.

Dr Jebb obſerves thereupon, with a great deal of modeſty and good nature, “ What this “ unknown Gentleman ſays, is very probable, “ and I can eaſily believe theſe Dates to be no “ older than the time he has aſſigned for them; “ but I am not ſo ready to charge any perſon “ with forgery. The lower parts of the 8 — “ might eaſily be broken by accident, or worn “ out by time: And if there was any chiſwel- “ work in the caſe, it might be done ignorant- “ ly, without any deſign to deceive. For the “ lower parts of the 8 — being a little crop- “ ped, ſome body might think it would look “ better to be ſmoothed, without conſidering “ that it would alter the date; as not indeed “ knowing that 8 ſtood for 4.—We ought not “ to charge any thing as forged, if any other “ fair account may be given of it. It is much “ more chriſtian and charitable to impute it to “ Ignorance and Miſtake, where there can be “ room for it, as I conceive there is in this “ caſe.”

The laſt time this Date hath been publickly mentioned, was by the learned Mr John Ward, in the Philoſophical Tranſactions (b); upon occaſion of the ſuppoſed date M16, found on a chimney-piece at Widihale in Hertfordſhire. But, after conſidering theſe three ſeveral Dates, Mr Ward declares (i), “ He was at laſt ſatisfied, that none of them prove, the Arabian figures were ever uſed among us, in leſs than an hundred years after the Reading given to the lateſt of them:” i. e. till after the year 1333. However the ſame learned Gentleman has ſince diſcovered two inſtances ſomewhat older than this laſt Period aſſigned of the uſe of Arabian Figures in England; the one of the year 1295 on the N. E. Corner of the Steeple at Aſhford in Kent; the other of 1332, on a Beam at the Half Moon near Magdalen Coll. Cambridge (k).

Upon the bare inſpection of this our Colcheſter date, there are ſeveral viſible circumſtances, which make it appear extremely improbable that it ſhould be ſo ancient as the year 1090.

1. The figures are in that form which we call the Black letter, or Engliſh character. But no ſuch form of Letters, (much leſs of Figures) was then uſed, as is plain from MSS. and Records; the hand being at that time more round, and Roman-like [M]. And this clumſy, gothic, and ill-favoured kind of Letters (ſtill abſurdly uſed in his Majeſty's Printing-houſe) came not into faſhion till the 13th or 14th century, as is manifeſt from the Great Seals in Stebbing and Speed, and other evidences. Therefore Mr Luſkin was greatly miſtaken, when he aſſerted, that the ſquare 𝔬 is an Engliſh Letter of that age (l), viz. of the 11th century.

2. In the ſame yard where this Date is, there are three more window-cells in the ſame ſtyle, and with the ſame ſort of work as this. On two of them are carved the Arms of Colcheſter, in two eſcutcheons; as is alſo this Date on one. Now eſcutcheons, and coats of armour, were not uſed till the 12th century at ſooneſt; as hath been ſhewn by Sir William Dugdale (m), and Mr Sandford and Stebbing (n). Therefore this Eſcutcheon, with the Date thereon, ſeem not to be ſo ancient as the year 1090.

3. Nor does the Date appear plainly to be 1090. For the firſt 𝔬 is not perfect at bottom; part of it being decayed with age, or having been chiſeled off. And it is wider than the ſecond 𝔬 and muſt have been bigger in proportion. So that I cannot determine, whether it was with croſs legs at the bottom, in the manner the figure 4 uſed to be at firſt made: Or whether it was the ſame figure as the third. Now, this laſt might have been intended for a 4; if ſo, then the date originally was 1440: But this is only conjecture, and not ſupported by any other inſtance of the like form of the 4.

To deliver my own opinion freely, I really believe, as did alſo the late Rev. Mr. R. Turner, that this Date was either ſet down by the Carpenter from Tradition: or taken from ſome ancienter Date, undoubtedly in Roman Numerals, which ſtood upon the old Stone-houſe, (as it is called in ſome writings in my poſſeſſion,) when it was new-fronted with Timber in the [L] I have given, at the end of this Book, as exact a Repreſentation as is poſſible of our Colcheſter-date, taken from the Date itſelf with wet paper, in the manner uſed by Printers. Now by that it appears, that the unknown Author is miſtaken; for the date is not as he repreſents it. His Argument would have been right, had this date been in the ſame form as another in this Town, on the Eaſt-ſide of North hill, over a Door leading into the ciſtern-yard; which is put down below at the bottom of the other, being 1 8 9ʌ, 1497. Though the figure uſed for 4, is not always quite round at the top. For, a book-ſeller in this town (J. K.) hath a MS. of the 14th century, once belonging to St Edmundſbury-abbey, wherein are abundance of figures, amongſt which the 4 is generally made thus ꝝ

14th or 15th century. And this Date very well tallies with the time wherein Eudo Dapifer lived in this Place.

I may perhaps be blamed for not ſtanding up more zealouſly for the received Antiquity of this Date: which, in ſome people's opinion, is one of thoſe venerable Remains, that add to the Antiquity and Reputation of this place. But, for the reaſons here given, I can find no ſufficient authority for it. And I look upon it as my Duty, not to propagate but to diſcountenance Error of any kind, and eſtabliſh Truth, the doing of which gives me a pleaſure inexpreſſible.

Mr. Muſſell had alſo in his curious Cabinet ſeveral Antiquities found in Colcheſter; ſome of which are repreſented in this plate; namely, 1. An Urn of brown Earth, three Inches high: It belonged to the late Earl of Oxford, who has left an account of it in theſe Words. "This was found ten Foot "deep, in digging a Cellar at the Houſe of "Mr. Tho. Great in Colcheſter."

This is now in the poſſeſſion of George Scott, Eſq;

He hath alſo C. D. being an antient Engliſh Ring of Silver, curiouſly wrought, and formerly enamelled. On it is engraved a Repreſentation of the Trinity, and the child Jeſus in his Mother's Arms. It was found at the Queen's-head Inn here; which was very ancient, and part of it a Roman Brick Building.

A. B. Is a moſt ancient Roman Ring, of coarſe Silver, wherein is ſet a large Cornelian Seal; in which is carved a Hare thrown on its back, and holden by an Eagle: Being a device to repreſent the Subjection of the Britans to the Roman Empire. It was found in the Borough-fields; and belongs now to T. Hollis, Eſq;

Nº 10. Another Roman Ring of coarſe Silver, having on it LVCIANI, and repreſented here, is in the Poſſeſſion of Charles Gray Eſq;

And the little Seal, which is cut in a very beautiful Cornelian, is in my own Poſſeſſion.

Copy-Clauſes of the Act 22 George II.

AND whereas the Streets and Lanes in the ſaid Town of Colcheſter, and the Liberties thereof, have, for ſeveral years laſt paſt, been much out of repair, and are now in ſo bad and ruinous a condition, that it is dangerous for perſons to paſs and repaſs through the ſaid town: now, for the effectual repairing and amending thereof for the future, be it enacted by the Authority aforeſaid, That all and every landlord or owner, landlords or owners, of any dwelling-houſe, ſhop, warehouſe, coach-houſe, building, lands, tenements, or hereditaments, being contiguous to, adjoining upon, fronting, or lying along the ſides of ſuch Streets and Lanes in the ſaid Town, as have been formerly paved, ſhall, from time to time, and at all times after the commencement of this preſent Act, at his, her, and their own coſts and charges, ſufficiently repair, pave with Stone, and amend the ſtreet or lane, before and lying over againſt his, her, or their houſe or houſes, buildings, walls, fences, grounds, or lands, ſo far as his, her, or their houſe or houſes, buildings, walls, fences, grounds, or lands extend, unto the middle of the ſame ſtreet or lane.

And for that purpoſe, be it farther enacted by the Authority aforeſaid, That the Surveyor or Surveyors of the highways for the time being, within the reſpective pariſhes of the ſaid town of Colcheſter, ſhall and do, from time to time, every three months or oftener, if the Juſtices at any ſpecial Seſſions of the peace, to be held for the ſaid town of Colcheſter, or county of Eſſex, ſhall ſo order, during his or their being a ſurveyor or ſurveyors, take a view of all the ſtreets and lanes within the pariſh or place, for which he or they is, are, or ſhall be appointed ſurveyor or ſurveyors; and ſhall make a return, on oath, in writing, to the Juſtices to be aſſembled in Special Seſſions as aforeſaid (which ſpecial ſeſſions the Juſtices are hereby required to hold every three months for that purpoſe) of the names of all the landlords or owners, whoſe pavements ſhall be out of repair, and the names of the ſtreets or places where ſuch pavements are, and the length and breadth of the pavements ſo out of repair; and after ſuch return made to the Juſtices, as aforeſaid, the ſaid Surveyor or Surveyors ſhall, within three days then next, cauſe notice in writing to be given of ſuch pavements as ſhall be ſo out of repair, to ſuch landlords or owners, who ought to repair the ſame; or ſhall cauſe ſuch notice to be left at, or fixed upon, ſuch houſe or houſes, buildings, walls, fences, or other the premiſſes contiguous to, or over againſt the Places wanting ſuch repair; and if ſuch decays or want of repair ſhall not be amended within Twenty days next after ſuch notice given, left, or affixed, as aforeſaid, then the ſaid ſurveyor or ſurveyors ſhall and may cauſe the ſaid decays to be repaired and amended; and ſhall be reimburſed what charges and expences he or they ſhall be reaſonably at in ſo doing, by the party or parties who ſhould or ought to have done the ſame; and in order to reimburſe ſuch Surveyor or Surveyors all ſuch ſum and ſums of money, as ſhall or may have been by him or them ſo laid out and expended in or about the repairs of the ſaid Pavements as aforeſaid; it ſhall and may be lawful to and for the ſaid Surveyor or Surveyors, to apply him or themſelves to the juſtices of the peace for the ſaid town of Colcheſter, or county of Eſſex, at any of their ſpecial ſeſſions; and upon his or their making oath of the charge of ſuch repairs, the ſaid Juſtices ſhall and may order the repayment thereof to ſuch ſurveyor or ſurveyors, by the landlords or owners, who ought to have repaired the ſame; and in caſe ſuch landlords or owners ſhall for the ſpace of fourteen days, after demand made, or notice thereof given, or left at, or fixed upon ſuch houſe or houſes, buildings, walls, fences, or other the premiſſes, as aforeſaid, neglect or refuſe to pay ſuch ſum or ſums of money, ſo ordered by the Juſtices as aforeſaid, then it ſhall and may be lawful to and for the ſaid ſurveyor or ſurveyors, by warrant or warrants under the hands and ſeals of any two Juſtices of the peace for the ſaid town of Colcheſter, or county of Eſſex (which warrant or warrants ſuch Juſtices are hereby authoriſed and required to grant) upon oath made before them, by ſuch ſurveyor or ſurveyors, of the perſon or perſons ſo refuſing or neglecting to pay, to levy the ſame by diſtreſs and ſale of the goods and chattles of ſuch landlords or owners ſo neglecting or refuſing to pay, as aforeſaid, or by diſtreſs and ſale of the goods and chattles of the Tenant or Tenants, Occupier or Occupiers of any ſuch houſe or houſes, buildings, lands, tenements, or hereditaments; and in caſe any ſuch houſe or houſes, buildings, lands, tenements, or hereditaments, ſhall be empty or unoccupied, or that a ſufficient diſtreſs cannot be found therein, then the ſaid ſurveyor or ſurveyors, or any ſucceeding ſurveyor or ſurveyors, ſhall and may, at any time afterwards, levy ſuch ſum or ſums of money, by virtue of the ſame, or any other ſuch warrant or warrants, by diſtreſs and ſale of the goods and chattles of ſuch landlord or landlords, or of the next or any other ſucceeding tenant or tenants, occupier or occupiers of the ſaid houſe or houſes, buildings, lands, tenements, or hereditaments, rendering the overplus, upon demand (if any be) the reaſonable charges of ſuch diſtreſs and ſale being firſt deducted, to the perſon or perſons whoſe goods and chattles ſhall be ſo diſtrained and ſold.

And be it further enacted by the Authority aforeſaid, That if ſuch ſum or ſums of money, ſo to be paid by any landlord or owner, as aforeſaid, ſhall be levied by diſtreſs and ſale of the goods and chattles of any of the tenants or occupiers, as aforeſaid; or in caſe any ſuch tenants or occupiers ſhall voluntarily, and without ſuch diſtreſs and ſale, pay ſuch ſum or ſums of money as aforeſaid; then, and in either of the ſaid caſes, it ſhall and may be lawful for the ſaid tenants or occupiers to deduct the ſame out of their Rent then due, or thereafter to grow due, which he, ſhe, or they are to pay for the houſe or houſes, buildings, lands, tenements, or hereditaments, being in his, her, or their poſſeſſion or occupation; and the landlords, owners, and proprietors thereof, are hereby required to allow ſuch Deductions and Payments; and every tenant or tenants, paying or having his, her, or their goods diſtrained and ſold for ſuch ſum or ſums of money as aforeſaid, ſhall be, and are hereby, acquitted and diſcharged for ſo much money as the ſame ſhall amount to, with the charges of ſuch diſtreſs and ſale, in the ſame manner as if the ſame had been actually paid to ſuch perſon or perſons, to whom his, her, or their Rent ſhall have been due or payable.

And be it further enacted by the Authority aforeſaid, That the ſtreets and lanes adjoining to any Churches or Church-yards within the ſaid town ſhall, from time to time, and at all times hereafter, be repaired, paved with ſtone, and amended, ſo far as ſuch churches or church-yards do extend, unto the middle of ſuch ſtreets and lanes, by the ſurveyor or ſurveyors of the highways, for the time being, of ſuch pariſh or pariſhes wherein ſuch ſtreets and lanes do lie; and the ſurveyor or ſurveyors for the time being, of the reſpective pariſhes within the ſaid town, or ſuch other perſon or perſons as he or they ſhall appoiut, ſhall ſweep and cleanſe, or cauſe to be ſwept and cleanſed, all the ſtreets, lanes, and publick places, within the pariſh for which he or they ſhall be ſurveyor or ſurveyors; and ſhall carry away and remove, orcauſe to be carried away and removed, all the ſweepings, dirt, filth, and other annoyances in the ſaid ſtreets, lanes, and places, from time to time, as often as ſhall be neceſſary, or as the Juſtices, at any their ſpecial ſeſſions, ſhall order or direct; which ſurveyor or ſurveyors ſhall be reimburſed the monies by him or them paid or expended in or about the paving and cleanſing the ſaid ſtreets, lanes, and places, and removing annoyances therein as aforeſaid, in ſuch manner as the ſurveyors of the highways, for the time being, are, by the laws now in force, to be reimburſed the monies by him or them laid out or expended in or about the repairing of highways.

And be it further enacted by the Authority aforeſaid, That in caſe any tofts or ſpots of grounds, or other waſte places, againſt which the ſtreets or lanes ought to be paved as aforeſaid, ſhall be deſerted, or in ſuch bad condition that no ſufficient Diſtreſs can be found thereon; then from and after the commencement of this preſent Act, it ſhall be lawful for the ſurveyor or ſurveyors of the highways for the time being, within the reſpective pariſhes of the ſaid town, to cauſe the pavement to be amended, which ſuch tofts and waſte places are liable to amend, and to put the expence thereof into the ſurveyors rates; which ſhall be allowed in like manner as the reſt of the expences of ſuch ſurveyors rates are by law allowable.

And be it enacted by the Authority aforeſaid, That if any ſurveyor or ſurveyors of any pariſh or pariſhes within the ſaid town ſhall neglect his or their duty, in any thing required of him or them by this Act to be done, he or they ſhall forfeit, for every ſuch offence, the ſum of forty ſhillings, to be levied on his or their goods and chattles, by diſtreſs and ſale of the ſame, by warrant or warrants under the hands and ſeals of any two or more Juſtices of the peace for the ſaid town of Colcheſter, or county of Eſſex, before whom ſuch ſurveyor or ſurveyors ſhall be convicted thereof, in a ſummary way, by confeſſion, or by the oath of two credible witneſſes; which warrant or warrants the ſaid Juſtices are hereby impowered and required to iſſue; which ſaid forfeiture ſhall be paid into the hands, and be applied by the order of the ſaid Juſtices, for and towards the Uſes and Purpoſes directed by this Act for repairing the pavements, or cleanſing the ſtreets of the ſaid Town; rendering the overplus upon demand (if any) to the owner or owners, the charge of ſuch diſtreſs and ſale being firſt deducted.

And be it further enacted by the Authority aforeſaid, That if any Juſtice or Juſtices of the peace of the ſaid town of Colcheſter, or county of Eſſex, ſhall at any general quarter ſeſſions of the peace, to be holden for the ſaid Town or County, make any preſentment or preſentments, in writing, to be ſigned by him or them, upon his or their view of any neglect or default in the pavement of the ſaid ſtreets or lanes contrary to this Act, every ſuch preſentment or preſentments ſhall be of ſuch and the ſame force and effect as any other preſentment in default of the repairs in any highways; and the Juſtices, at the ſame or any other ſuch ſeſſions, are hereby authoriſed and required to proceed thereupon accordingly; and the ſaid Juſtices are hereby authoriſed and required to take all poſſible care to cauſe the ſaid pavements to be, from time to time, well and ſufficiently repaired, paved with ſtone, and amended, according to the true intent and meaning of this act.

Provided always, That if any perſon or perſons ſhall think him or themſelves aggrieved, and ſhall not think fit to abide ſuch order ſo to be made by the Juſtices at their Special Seſſions as aforeſaid; then ſuch perſon or perſons ſhall and may appeal to the Juſtices of the peace for the ſaid town of Colcheſter, or county of Eſſex, at the next general quarter ſeſſions of the peace to be be held for the ſaid town or county (ſuch perſon or perſons ſo appealing giving reaſonable notice thereof to the ſurveyor or ſurveyors of the pariſh wherein the cauſe of ſuch Appeal may ariſe) who ſhall and have hereby full power and authority to make ſuch order therein as they coſts on other appeals relative to the ſettlement of the poor are ordered and directed to be raiſed and levied.

ſhall think proper; which order ſo made ſhall be, and the ſame is hereby declared to be final and concluſive to all parties, to all intents and purpoſes whatſoever; and the ſaid Juſtices, at ſuch general quarter ſeſſions, ſhall and may order and award to the party or parties, in whoſe favour ſuch appeal ſhall be determined, ſuch coſts and charges as they ſhall think fit, to be raiſed and levied by ſuch ways and means as

I find it thus mentioned in an inqueſt, 10 Edw. II.——Magiſter Joh'es de Coleceſtr' clamat habere unam Sokam vocatam Haymeſokne infra muros Burgi Colec' & in eadem tenet Curiam ſuam de tribus ſeptimanis in tres ſeptimanas, & nullam executionem fieri permittit in eadem per miniſtros Domini Regis. (Orig. penes me.)

In 1416, it was in Tho. Fraunceys, who mentions it thus in his Will, —de Dominio meo, alias dict' Soka in Hedſtret vocat' Haymſokne.

Likewiſe in a Lawe-hundred-roll, 6 Hen viii. it is ſtyled---Soca jac' in Havedſtrete-- So that it appears to have been a diſtinct Franchiſe, Liberty, or Juriſdiction.

And whereas heretofore the diviſion and controverſyes, which have been amonge ourſelves have occaſioned your Lordſhip to miſlyek of our Towne (as juſtly we did deſerve); the ſame, prayſed be God, now are abandoned, and unitie hathe ſupplyed the place, as by the quyet and peaceable late election of Bayliffs and other offycers is ſhewed. Privy-ſeal of K. Charles I. for the Defence of the Northern Coaſts.

Charles R.

TRUSTIE and wel beloved wee greet you well. The many and grievous complaints preſented unto us by our loving Subjects of that Towne of Newcaſtle upon Tyne, and others inhabiting the Northerne Coaſts of this our Realme of England, touching the great ſpoiles and outrages committed upon their perſons, ſhips, and goods by the men of warre of Dunkerk, to the undoing of them in their particular eſtates, and the hinderance of their Trade in generall, have mooved us, out of our tender Care over our Subjects, to take their ſaid Complaints into our princely and ſerious Conſideration; And being deſirous (as much as the preſent Condition of our Affaires can permitt) to provide timely remedies for the preventing of the like Inconveniences hereafter; Wee have in theſe tymes of our owne wants, and other preſſing occaſions for the publique defence of our Kingdomes, condiſcended to graunt and aſſigne a good part of the Revenues of our Crowne accrewing unto us by the forſeitures and fynes of Recuſants of all our Counties by North Trent, to ſett out ſhipping for the guarding and defending of the Coaſts aforeſaid, and the repelling and fruſtrating of the Enemies deſignes. But foraſmuch as we conceave that the proportion by us allotted for this ſervice, will not be ſufficient to accompliſh the worke intended, which doth much concerne the good of that Towne; Wee have therſore ben pleaſed to give way, that a Compoſition or Contribution of Sixe pence upon every Chaldron of Coales to be tranſported from Newcaſtle and Sunderland, into any other part of our domynions, or any forraine part beyond the ſeas, may be levyed by your owne free conſent and agreement, to ſupply that which may fall ſhort of our revenues upon the forfeitures of Recuſants aforeſaid, and to be imployed for that ſpeciall ſervice, and to noe other end. And as wee have found you forward in all other occaſions of our ſervice, ſoe wee doubt not your readines in this, wherein your owne livelyhood, ſafetie and benefit is ſoe nearely concerned. Given under our Signett at our Pallace of Weſtminſter, the nine and twentieth day of May in the third yeare of our Reigne.

Two of Chancellor Audeley's Letters.

Bibl. Cotton. Cleopatr. E. IV. 116.

AFTER my right herty comendacon to your Lordſhip, beyng enformed by Maſtr. Pollard, that the King's majeſty myndeth to reteyne and kepe in his graces hands, the late moneſtery of ſeynt Johns of Colceſtour, I cannot but therat be ſatisfyed, and in al thyngs that ſhal be his mageſtes pleaſure. And yet your Lordſhip knowith, that fyrſt ſavyng the Howſe and Parks at ſeynt Oſyes by his graces own aſſignement, durynge his highnes pleſure, and after the Howſe of Seynt Johns, and the lands nere adjoynyng by your means apoynted to me by his highnes, and now to forego al this ſhalbe no litell loſſe to my poor honeſte and eſtimacion, conſydering this to be in the Contree where I was borne and moſt part browt up, and alſo theſe thyngs to ly nere my poore howſe and lands, that I fyrſt bylded and bowt, but his graces goodnes hath be ſo gretly ſhewyd to me, that whatſoever his highnes pleſure ys or ſhalbe, I am and ever will be therwith content, for eny other reſpects in the world. pray uues your good lordſhip to helpe to further my ſute to his Majeſte for an exchange, accordyng to a bill hereyn encloſyd, and if his grace wold be my good lord therin, I will never hereafter trouble his Mageſte for eny ſute to his gracis charyte for myſelf, but to holde me full ſatisfyed in all thyngs, and this exchange well ponderyd, ys more profitable to his highnes than to me; for I leve the reverſion in his highnes, and I do it not nor wolde trobil his highnes with yt, but that the thyngs that I deſire ly ſo nere and mixt with my othir londs, ſythen his mageſte made me baron, and ſythen I maryed my wyff, I never axyd eny thyng, and I am not abaſhyd, but that I hope by your meanys, his highnes will be ſo gracious lord to me to graunt this ſute. the overplus of his gracis londe paſſith not 21 l. or litell more above myne, and for that his highnes ſhall ſtil ſave the reverſion of al that I ſhal have of his grace; and if his gracis pleſure be to graunt me this, I wil leve my ſute for the Howſe of Seynt John's, and never trobill his Mageſte for that, nor none other thyng to his highnes charge herafter. I maryed at his Mageſties commaundment, and his grace ſayd, that he wold conſider it, and what I ſhud have had otherwiſe, your lordſhip knowith for avancement of myn Heyrs. but yet I repent never a whytt my mariage, but have gret cauſe to thanke the Kyng's Mageſte for enduyng me to it, for aſſuredly I have happened of oon moche to my contentacion and honeſte. And if God ſend us childern whiche I deſire, the Kyng's Mageſte hath made me a Baron, and al my londe excedith not clerely viii. c l. wherat I am right wel content, praying your good lordſhips to-morrow or Monday, to move the King's Mageſte in this my poor ſute, and to make min excuſe, that I wayte not upon his highnes accordyng to my moſt bounden dute. For I aſſure your lordſhips, I am ſo trobilled in my right foote that I cannot ſtepp nor goo; the payn ys a lytel ſlaked, but the ſorenes and ſtyffnes remayneth. And thus ſyttyng in my chayer with a ſore foote, I trobill your lordſhipp with a longe letter, praying your eſtſones to aſſaye this my pour ſute, now oon of theſe 2 dayes in myn abſens, beyng in good hoope, that the Kyng's Mageſte wyl gracyuſly here yt, and althoughe it be not any gret profitable thynge, yet it ſhall be moche to my comfort, honeſte, and eſtymacion; and alſo a full ſatisfaction for ever; and thus fare your good lordſhipp as hertely wel as I wold myſelf, ſcribelid this Satyrday with a ſore and akying foote, your lordſhippes aſſured to his pour,

Thomas Audeley, Chancellor.

I SEND to your lordſhipp a byll heryn encloſyd, of ſuche londs as I deſire of the King's Highnes, and of ſuche londs as his grace ſhule have of me; my londs, the decanary of Seynt Botulphe, ly emongs the londs of Seynt Jones on the bakſyd of the howſe. my parſonages be ſymyler good and never emprowed, and in every of them ther ys a Vycare endowed, having good lyvynge conſyderyng the Kyng's Highneſs makyth biſhoppes, they be as good as eny temporal londs for them; for on my fayth they be very good and well payen, and if the yeres were owt, I could have gret fynes for them; as for Eſt Donylond lyeth a gret wey from Seynt Johns, and I have a Myll there of myne owen, and my londs mixt with it. and as for Chetford, I have xcvii. yeris in yt, and it lyeth by me at Walde fferr from any of the King's londs. My lord, I pray you take payn for me herin as an earneſt ffreind, and make an end of this my ſute, and I wil giff you XL. li. i of redy mony with my herty good will and vyce, that may lye in my litel pour as ſoon as ever my bil ſhalbe ſigned, your lordſhippes

aſſured,

Every Horſe, Mare, or Gelding, that baiteth upon the Town-wharf, or Key, the Owner to pay for every Time a Halfpenny, except for the Fill-Horſe, Mare or Gelding, during their Lading.

The above Table of Tolls, &c is now only a mere curioſity, ſince the Act of 1748-9, which enacted, That only three pence for every chaldron of Coal, over and above the duty of three pence before granted, ſhall be paid; and no other duty ſhall be raiſed upon any Goods, Wares, Merchandiſe, or things whatſoever.

If thoſe Tolls, &c. were a Grant from the Crown, one would imagine they were unalterable while the Corporation ſubſiſted. There is a Water Bailiff appointed, who hath a Leaſe from the Corporation, but he doth not think himſelf authorized to demand or collect thoſe Tolls; and therefore requires only a wharfage for goods landed at the Town-wharf: and every one has a right to do the like at a Wharf of their own, or an hired one, for Goods landed or loaded there.

THIS Indenture made the fifteenth day of March, in the year of the reign of our Soveregn Lord Charles the Second, by the Grace of God, of England, Scotland, France, and Ireland, King, Defender of the Faith, &c. the two and thirtieth, and in the year of our Lord, one thouſand ſix hundred ſeventy and nine; between John Wenock of Colcheſter in the County of Eſſex bay-maker of the one part, and John Milbank Linnen draper, Thomas Gray Merchant-taylor, John Tatam Tanner, Samuel Featherſtone Baker, and Thomas Wilbye Rower, [all of Colcheſter] on the other part: Whereas I the ſaid John Wenock, have lately purchaſed to me and my heirs of my brother-in-law, Lucas Benne and Rachel his wife, a certain piece of ground, being part of a field called, Golden-at hill, lying and being in the pariſh of St Giles in the ſuburbs of Colcheſter aforeſaid, and my intention in the purchaſing of the ſame, was for the building of a row of houſes, for the habitation and benefit of ſix dwellings, for ſuch poor people to dwell in, in ſuch manner as is hereafter limited and declared; which ſaid row of houſes it has pleaſed Almighty God, to let me live to ſee built and finiſhed. Now know ye, that I the ſaid John Wenock of my own good will and benevolence, for and towards the relief and maintenance of the ſaid poor people, which, for the time here-after being, ſhall inhabit and dwell in the ſaid row of houſes, have given and granted, and by this my preſent writing indented do give and grant unto the ſaid John Milbank, Thomas Gray, John Tatam, Samuell Featherſtone, and Thomas Wilbye, and to their heirs, and the heirs of the ſurvivor of them, to the uſes intents and purpoſes, and upon the truſt herein after-mentioned; one Annuity or yearly Rent-charge of one and forty pounds, to be yearly iſſuing, going out, had, and taken out of the rents and profits of all thoſe my meſſuages or tenements, with the yards, gardens, orchards, out houſes, buildings, and appurtenances thereto belonging; ſituate, lying, and being in the pariſh of St Peter in Colcheſter aforeſaid, and now or late in the ſeverall tenures and occupations of the ſaid Thomas Gray, Samuel Featherſtone, Johanna Brand, widow, and Lidia de Hame, ſome or one of them, or ſome or one of their Aſſigne or Aſſignees, which ſaid Annuity or yearly Sum of one and forty pounds, ſhall from and after my own, and my wife Mary's deceaſe, be paid to my aforeſaid Truſtees or ſuch as ſhall hereafter be nominated and appointed Truſtees, by quarterly payments, that is to ſay, at the feaſt of the Nativity of our bleſſed Lord and Saviour, the feaſt of the bleſſed Lady St Mary the Virgin, the feaſt of St John the Baptiſt, and the feaſt of St Michael the Arch-angel, by even and equal portions, without any deduction of, or for any manner of rates, taxes, aſſeſſments, repairs or other charges whatever; the firſt payment to be made at ſuch of the ſaid Feaſts, as ſhall next happen, or come after the death of me the ſaid John Wenock, and my ſaid wife; and the firſt quarter's rent to be paid to the firſt of my ſaid Truſtees abovenamed, or to the firſt Truſtee that ſhall happen to be then living, and ſo to continue ſucceſſively one after another for ever. Which ſaid firſt Quarter's rent, my mind is ſhall be kept in hand, as a beginning of a ſtock, to be preſerved for the benefit of the ſaid poor people, that ſhall be then inhabiting, or the reparation of the ſaid new houſes, or otherwiſe, as to my ſaid Truſtees, or the major part of them ſhall ſeem meet: and upon truſt and confidence, that out of the ſaid annuitie or ſum of one and forty pounds a year, ſo by me given and granted as aforeſaid; there ſhall be paid to the dwellers in the ſaid ſix dwelling houſes Two ſhillings a week, that is to ſay, Two ſhillings a week for the dwellers in every reſpective dwelling houſe, and the ſame payment to be forever paid upon the Saturday in every week to the reſpective dwellers as aforeſaid; the ſame being demanded at the dwelling houſe of the eldeſt of my ſaid Truſtees that ſhall be then living, without any fraud or delay, and the ſaid firſt weekly payment to begin to be paid upon the Saturday next after the ſecond of the ſaid feſtival days, that ſhall happen after the deceaſe of me or my ſaid wife, and ſo to continue for ever; and upon this further truſt, that my ſaid Truſtees, or the major part of them, ſhall from time to time appoint ſuch ancient and orderly poor perſons, to inhabit and dwell in the ſaid ſeverall dwellings, as receive no alms or Collection from any pariſh whatſoever, unleſs after ſuch time as they are there placed, they or any of them ſhall, by reaſon of age or viſitation of ſickneſs, become diſabled to maintain themſelves by, and out of the ſaid two ſhillings per week, ſo allowed unto them as aforeſaid; and upon further truſt, that my ſaid Truſtees out of the aboveſaid one and forty pounds annuity or yearly rent ſo granted to them as aforeſaid, ſhall yearly and every year for ever, have, allow, and lay in one chalder of ſea-coals, for every dwelling houſe, for and towards their winter firing, over and beſides their weekly ſtipend of two ſhillings a week, which I expect to be twenty ſhillings for every chalder, amounting in the whole to ſix pounds, to be raiſed and had out of the ſaid forty and one pounds annuity or rent ſo charged upon the ſaid Meſſuages and Tenements as aforeſaid; and in caſe the charge of laying in the ſaid coales ſhall amount to above the ſaid ſum of twenty ſhillings for every chalder of coal, then the overplus to be paid out of the ſtock of money ſo to be raiſed as aforeſaid; and in caſe the ſaid coal may be had and laid in at leſs price than twenty ſhillings a chalder, then I order the remainder and overplus to be added to the ſtock, to be employed for the purpoſes aforeſaid: And upon further truſt, that my ſaid Truſtees or the ſurviving Truſtees hereafter to be named, ſhall not place any poor people there to inhabit and dwell, that have or are like to have at the time of their placing there any child or children; but only ſingle perſons or lone couples. And forasmuch as the ſaid annuity or rent charge of one and forty pounds a year, doth amount to more than the ſaid ſum of two ſhillings a week to each reſpective dwelling houſe, and the ſix pounds allowed for the ſaid ſix chalders of coal; I do therefore order and appoint, that each of the ſaid Truſtees and their ſucceſſors reſpectively, ſhall deduct out yearly for their care and pains in this behalf, the ſum of ſix and thirty ſhillings, for that year only that he ſerve and pay the two ſhillings a week to the dwellers in the ſaid ſix dwelling houſes ſo by me erected, as aforeſaid; and the overplus being forty ſhillings a year, my mind is ſhall be kept and added to the aforeſaid ſtock to the uſes aforeſaid. And upon further truſt, that my ſaid Truſtees or the major part of them, ſhall within ſome convenient time after the deceaſe of me and my ſaid wife, make ſale of all the ſaid meſſuages and premiſſes in the ſaid pariſh of St Peter for the beſt advantage that they can, and the overplus of the ſaid money ſo ariſing upon the ſale, to be paid to my Executors, and to be accounted as part of my perſonal eſtate; but my mind is, that upon ſuch ſale for to be made, there ſhall be a good and ſufficient proviſion made in the aſſurance ſettlement and conveyance of the ſaid meſſuages and premiſſes ſo to be ſold; that the aforeſaid annuity or rent-charge of one and forty pounds a year ſhall and may be well ſecured to the uſes, ends, and purpoſes aforeſaid, by the advice of learned and able Councell in the law, to be made uſe of by my ſaid Truſtees or the major part of them, ſo that the ſame may be paid for relief of the ſaid poor people, and the other uſes before herein by me declared: And that upon ſuch ſale ſo to be made, my ſaid Truſtees ſhall have, take, and keep a counter part of ſuch conveyance and aſſurance, ſo to be made upon the ſale of the premiſes for the manifeſtation of this my charitable uſe, which ſaid counter-part, together with a true copy of this my conveyance and ſettlement, ſhall be left in the hands of ſuch Truſtees as ſhall happen to make ſale of the premiſſes, to be preſerved for perpetuity, and for their direction for the payment of the ſaid weekly ſums, or delivery of the ſaid coales to the aforeſaid poor people for ever; and that until ſuch ſale ſhall be made, my mind is that the ſaid one and forty pounds a year be by my Truſtees paid for the relief of the poore aforeſaid, and the remainder to my Executors to be added to my perſonal eſtate. And upon this further truſt and confidence, that if any of the aforeſaid People ſo inhabitting and dwelling in any of the ſaid new buildings ſo erected by me as aforeſaid, ſhall at any time after they are there placed, ſet up any Bay-loom or loams for the weaving of Colcheſter hundred Bays in any part of the ſaid new buildings, or ſhall make any holes or breaches there, or commit any wilful damage there, or ſhall make any diſturbance or quarrels one with another, that then in ſuch caſe, I do hereby give power and authority to my ſaid Truſtees, or ſuch others as ſhall then happen to be Truſtees, to expell and put out ſuch perſons ſo tranſgreſſing as aforeſaid, and they to loſe their ſaid weekly and other ſtypend, and to place other poor people in their rooms, at the diſcretion of my ſaid Truſtees, and to pay and allow ſuch perſons ſo by them placed, the ſame ſtypend of two ſhillings per week, and one chalder of coales yearly, to ſuch dwelling houſe as they had before they were ſo removed and put out. And I do further make it my deſire and earneſt requeſt, that my ſaid Truſtees do procure and keep a book among them, for the entring their receipts, diſburſements, and elections, to be kept in the cuſtody of the eldeſt of my ſaid Truſtees, and at the end of every year, to deliver up the ſame to the next eldeſt Truſtee; but my deſire is, and I doe appoint, that every of my ſaid Truſtees, ſhall have at ſeaſonable and convenient times, and upon requeſt made to ſuch Truſtee as hath the cuſtody of the ſaid booke, free acceſs to ſuch book, for the peruſing all the orders and entries that ſhall from time to time happen to be made, and that immediately after the death of any one of my ſaid Truſtees, there ſhall be, by the ſurviving Truſtees or the major part of them, a new Truſtee elected and appointed, whereby the full number of them may and ſhall be preſerved, made up, and continued for the taking care of the ſaid poor people as ſhall happen to be placed there. And that upon the death of any of the ſaid poor people or the death of the couples appointed to inhabit any of the aforeſaid dwelling houſes; that upon ſuch death, my Truſtees, or the major part of them, ſhall put and place other poor people in the room of any ſo dying at their diſcretions, and that from time to time for ever; my ſaid Truſtees placing only ſuch poor as are before in this my ſettlement mentioned, and not other, and the ſaid poor people ſo newly placed, to have the ſame ſtypend and allowance, that ſuch poor perſons ſo dying had before them. And if it ſhall happen that the ſaid annuitie or yearly rent of one and forty pounds, or any part thereof, to be behind and unpaid after any of the ſaid feaſt days, in which the ſame ought to be paid as aforeſaid, by the ſpace of fourteen days; that then and from thenceforth it ſhall and may be lawful to, and for my ſaid Truſtees or any of them to enter into the ſaid premiſſes or any part thereof, and diſtraine, and the diſtreſs and diſtreſſes ſo to be made, to take, carry, and drive away, &c. Provided always, that this preſent writing indented, or any grant or thing therein contained, ſhall not extend to charge the perſon of me the ſaid John Wenock, or my heirs, but only to charge the aforeſaid meſſuages, tenements, and premiſſes.

In witneſs whereof the parties to theſe preſent Indentures have interchangeably ſet their hands and ſeals, the day and year above written,

John Winock.

Sealed and delivered in the preſence of us,

Thomas Ruſe, Jer. Shaw, Mathew Scrivener.

The rents of the Houſes are ſo much fallen, that the weekly allowance to the Poor is very ſmall.

O happie hoared heares that here in grave dothe lye,
Whoſe body reſteth nowe in earth, his ghoſt with Chriſt on hie.
His youthfull race he ran with travayle and with troth,
His myddle and his aged years with wealth and worſhip both.
Full thyrtye years or more cheefe rule or place he bare
In this his native auncient Towne, whereof he had great care.
With Juſtice he did rule, and eke with mercy mylde.
With love he lyved many years of man woman and chylde.
A Monument he made for ever to remain
For ayde to poor and aged wights, which are oppreſſed with payne.
Poſteritie he had to his great joye of mind,
His place and portion to poſſeſſe, which he hath left behynde.

O happie Sayer, not for theis thinges alone
Which were but mundane vayne and vyle and fade and fayle eche one
But happier thowſande-folde to lyve and love thoſe dayes
Wherein Goddes goſpell brightlye ſhynes to his eternall prayſe.
Thy oft deſired wyſhe thou doubtleſs dideſt obtayne,
With Symeon to departe in peace, and lyfe by death to gayne.
Thy ofspringe maye rejoyce for this thy happye ende:
Thy freinds and tenaunts all are gladd that God ſuch grace did ſend.
And we, that yet remayne within this vale of teares,
By thyne example maye be taught for to contemne all feares,
And alwayes for to praye that God our ſtepps ſo gvyde
That we lykewiſe may hence depart in endleſſe bliſſe to byde.

THE HUNDRED OF BECONTREE

IS now uſually called a Half-Hundred; but in Domeſday-book it is ſtyled a Hundred: and, by reaſon of the number of Houſes and Inhabitants, may have as good a claim to the name of A Hundred, as ſeveral others. For it abounds with Villa's, where the rich and induſtrious Citizens retire, at this convenient diſtance, from the thick Air and Hurry of London. The ſmall number of Pariſhes it contains, may have degraded it to the diminutive name it now bears, of a Half-Hundred.

This Hundred is the South-weſt corner of Eſſex, and the neareſt part of the County to the Metropolis of the Kingdom, the rich and noble City of London; it reaching up to Bow-bridge, and almoſt to Blackwall. 'Tis bounded on the Weſt by the river Ley; on the South by the Thames; on the Eaſt and North-eaſt by Havering Liberty; on the North by the Hundreds of Ongar and Waltham: And was ſo named from ſome remarkable Beacon, ſuppoſed to ſtand whereabouts Woodford Wind-mill now is, that being the moſt conſpicuous part of this Hundred. For Beacons, tho' now chiefly diſuſed and neglected, were formerly reckoned very important Signals to give notice of the landing or approach of an Enemy: a precaution neceſſary, before the increaſe of our Naval Strength made us Maſters at Sea. In Domeſday-book the name is diſguiſed by the odd one of Beuentreu.

This Hundred, and the Execution and Proceſs therein, belonged of old to the Nunnery of Berking. Upon the ſuppreſſion of the Abbies, it becoming veſted in the Crown, remained there till obtained by Sir Thomas Fanſhaw, to hold in as ample manner as any Abbeſs of Berking had held it: Of that family Sir William Humphreys, Kt. and Bart. purchaſed it; whoſe grandaughter Ellen, and her huſband Charles Gore of Tring Eſq; ſold it, with a noble eſtate, to Smart Lethieullier Eſq; The inheritance of it is now in his niece Mary, only daughter of his brother Charles Lethieullier Eſq;

As to Eccleſiaſtical Juriſdiction, this Hundred is within the Archdeaconry of Eſſex.

In this Hundred, or Half-Hundred, are Nine Pariſhes, which I deſcribe in the following order.

BERKING,
Dagenham,
Eaſt-Ham,
Weſt-Ham,
Leyton,
Ilford,——Little,
Wanſted,
Waltham-Stow,
Woodford.

Of theſe Pariſhes, Leyton, Waltham-Stow, Wanſted, and Woodford, are within the Foreſt of Eſſex: And Berking, Dagenham, Eaſt-Ham, Weſt-Ham, Little Ilford, and the Hamlet of Great Ilford, are partly in, and partly out of, the Foreſt (a).

I begin, according to the Method I have preſcribed to myſelf, with the Town in this Hundred, that is

I. BERKING.

The name of this Town is derived from the two Saxon words, Beoꞃce, birch-tree; and inᵹ, meadow, or paſture: The place being originally full of birch trees. 'Tis otherwiſe written in records, and ancient authors; Berchingas; Barkyng; Bercingum (b); Berkingum; Berchigenſe monaſterium (c); Bercingis; or Bertingis (d); Berekingum; &c. (e).---This Town ſtands about 8 miles north-eaſt from London; and hath a market on Saturdays; and a Fair October 22.

Near the Road leading from Ilford to Berking, on the north weſt ſide of the Brook which runs croſs it, are the Remains of an ancient Entrenchment: one ſide of which is parallel with the lane that goes to a Farm called Uphall; a ſecond ſide is parallel with the Rodon and lies near it; the third ſide looks towards the Thames; the ſide which runs parallel with the Road itſelf has been almoſt deſtroyed by cultivation, though evident traces of it are ſtill diſcernible. We do not hear, that any other Fottifications, or remains of Antiquity, have been diſcovered here.

The Pariſh of Berking is very extenſive, being about ſeven miles from ſouth to north; and four in ſome places from eaſt to weſt. It is divided into theſe four Wards; Berking, Great-Ilſord, Chadwell, and Ripple-Ward.

Moſt probably it was in the earlieſt times part of the demeſnes of our Eaſt-Saxon Kings. Afterwards it became the ſite, and the chief part of the Endowment, of a famous NUNNERY, founded by Erkenwald, biſhop of London, ſon of Annas, king of the Eaſt-Angles; for which reaſon it is proper, and even neceſſary, to begin our Account of this place with the Hiſtory of that Religious Foundation.

Erkenwald, the founder, was conſtituted Biſhop of London in the year 675; and had either begun this Nunnery before, in 666 (f); or undertook it very ſoon after his conſecration. It was the ſecond Nunnery in England; that of Folkeſtone having been founded in 630. This Nunnery of Berking was of the Order of St. Benedict, and dedicated to the Virgin Mary, and St. Ethelburga, or Alburgh, the firſt Abbeſs, ſiſter of the founder (g).

What the original Endowment of this Houſe was, we do not find. But, for an augmentation to it, Hodelred, father of Sebba King of the Eaſt-Saxons, with that King's conſent, granted to it for ever [A], out of his right, or eſtate, the Land called Rytyngham, Buddenham, Deckengham, Angelalbeſham, and Wymondesfeld in the Foreſt; which together compriſed forty manſions: with all the fields, woods, meadows, and marſh, thereto belonging. Of which the boundaries were, on the eaſt, Thrictolaburn; on the north Centincert-broch, and Hanghemſtede; and on the ſouth the river Thames (h). Thrictola burn, or brook, is the weſtern branch of that which falls into the Thames at Dagenham breach; and Centincert broch, or brook, ſeems to be ſome brook that runs into the Rodon.

As to other Benefactions,—In this Pariſh. Leo de Bradenham, and William Rikele, clerk, gave them in 1357, 2 meſſuages, 72 acres of arable, and 8 acr. of meadow: And John Frucher 44 s. 5 d. rent.—In 1366, John ſon of Sir John Sutton of Wivenhoo, John de Bampton, and Thomas Smyth, clerk, gave them, one meſſuage, 80 acres of arable, 2 of meadow, 30 of wood, and 15 s. rent.—As did, in 1389, Sir John de Gildeſburgh, Robert Crulle, and John Heneſthorpe, clerks, William Rickhill, Clement Spice, and Nicolas Conyers, 50 acres of arable, 10 of meadow, 11 of paſture, 55 of marſh, and 53 s. 4 d.—And Joanna, wife of Thomas de Felton, 11 meſſuages, 209 acres of arable, and 2 s. 3 d. ob. rent; all which, except very little, were holden of the ſaid Nunnery (i).

What they had out of this Pariſh, is ſet down in the Note [B].

The particulars of their Eſtates here, do moſt plainly appear by the Grants of them, after the ſuppreſſion. Beſides the ſite of the Nunnery, they were, the Maners of Fulkys, Jenkins, Porters, Stonehall, Wangey, Withfeld: and the Meſſuages, or Farms, of Eſtbury, Gayſhams-hall, Loxford, Mables or Mogges, Uphall, Lands at Stanbridge near Craynebroke-lane,—And many other parcels (k).

What the ſtate of this Pariſh was at the time of the general Survey, appears by the extract and copy of it given below [C]. By that it is manifeſt, that it then wholly belonged to the Nunnery [D], except 24 acres, which Goſcelin Loremar, lord of Little Ilford, had ſtolen; and three ſoldiers, or knights, held 2 hides, and 3 carucates.

In the year 870 this Nunnery was laid waſte by the Danes (l), and continued ſo, moſt probably, till after the Norman Conqueſt.

The Abbeſs was Lady paramount in all the Maners within this Half-Hundred, as is ſtill the Lord of Berking Maner: And ſhe held of the King by an entire Barony; there being but three more of the kind in England, namely, the Prioreſſes of Wilton, Shaftſbury, and Wincheſter (m).

A Liſt of the Abbeſſes may be ſeen in J. Stevens's Hiſtory of Abbeys, Vol. I. p. 529, 530. and in Dr. Br. Willis's Hiſtory of Abbies, Vol. II. p. 76. 77.

Dorothy Barleighe, the laſt of them, ſurrendred this Houſe 14 Novemb. 1539. the Revenues of it being then valued at 862 l. 12 s. 5 d. ½. Dugdale; or, according to Speed, 1084 l. 6 s. 2 ¾. per ann.

[D] That is, the whole Pariſh of Berking; with all the Maners, Wards, Hamlets, and Lands within the bounds and limits thereo; as J. Stevens expreſſes it. Hiſt. of Abbeys, Vol. I. p. 528

The Nunnery ſtood on the north ſide of the Church-yard. One gate, and ſome part of the wall all round, is ſtill remaining.

Let us now ſee how the Revenues of that Houſe in this pariſh, were diſpoſed of.

The ſite of the NUNNERY, and the Maner of WANGEY, were granted by K. Edward VI. in 1551, to Edward Fynes, Lord Clinton, and Say. And there went, with the ſite of the Nunnery, Gunſmead, alias Covent-mead, 6 acres; Grange meadow, 16 acres; a paſture called Huntings, 16 acres; Warpehawes, 6 acres; the Vineyard, 5 acres; and the grove, 8 acres. There was alſo in the grant, 10 acres in Ilford, near Grandſtrote; and a parcel of land in Stanbrige near Craynebroke-lane, in Ilford (n). On the 7th of November, the ſame year, the Lord Clinton alienated the ſite of the Nunnery, with the lands thereto belonging, to

Sir Richard Sackvile (o). How it paſſed out of that family, doth not appear. But, 13 Septemb. 1605, K. James I. granted it, with the appertenances above-mentioned, to Anne Steward, and Auguſtin Steward, to hold of the maner of Eaſt Greenwich, by fealty in ſocage (p). This Auguſtin dyed 11 Novemb. 1628, poſſeſs'd of the capital Meſſuage called Barkeinge-Abbey, and other eſtates here [E]: leaving—Martin his ſon and heir, aged 22 years (q).

The ſite, and Maner, of the Nunnery belongs now to Joſeph Keeling Eſq; who hath alſo in this pariſh Weſtbury-hall, and Peryman's, and Cricklewood: This laſt, by the name of Cicklewood, alias Chickley-wood, was given by Qu. Elizabeth, in 1573, to Chriſtopher Hatton (r). The Aqueduct belonging to the Nunnery came through this wood.

The Lord Chancellor Audeley obtained a grant of the maners of Fulkys, and Withfeld (s).

Uphall was purchaſed, with the Monaſtery of Stratford Langthorn, for the ſum of 398 l. 6 s. 8 d. on the 12th of September 1541, by Morgan Phillipps, alias Wolfe (t).

To William Denham were granted, 28 September 1545, the maner and farm of Stone-hall, with Hobbens grove, High-groves, and Horſlees, containing 10 acres: the maner of Weſtbury, and lands called Hareſdon, Stondon, Leyndon and Preſtlond; Goſepitall; and Towne-downe, or mead, Ede-mead, Mylmead; and paſtures &c. named the Branche, Berryfield, 14 acres in Randemarſh: the meſſuage or farm called Eſtbury: the meſſuage and farm called Gayſehams-hall, with lands and woods called Battell-downe, Long-grove, Graunts-Hethe, Horſe-grove, Bromfeild, Buſſheleez, and Penty-grove, containing 23 acres. And all the Tithes of grain, corn, and hay, growing on the ſaid maners and lands of Stone-hall and Weſtbury, and on thoſe of Eſtbury, and Gayſehams (u).

Thirty ſeven ſmall parcels that had belonged to this Nunnery, were granted to Sir Richard Greſham, who had licenſe, 20 July 1546, to alienate them to Bartholomew Barnes, and Joanna his wife (w).

The meſſuage and farm, called Loxford, was granted, 2 June 1557, to Thomas Powle (x).

Porters, a maner here, which Richard Pygot held of this Convent about the year 1483, under the yearly rent of 29 s. 1 d. ob. (y) was granted to John Lucas Eſq; who, at the time of his deceaſe, 13 September 1556, held this maner, and one meſſuage, 200 acres of arable, 40 of meadow, 100 of paſture, 6 of wood, 40 of marſh, and 40 s. rent: and alſo Covent-croft, and Perryfeild, and Weſt-marſhe (z). His ſon,—Sir Thomas Lucas, Kt. held it alſo at the time of his deceaſe, 30 Auguſt 1611 (a).

The capital meſſuage, or tenement, called Mabbes, otherwiſe Mogges, in Ripleſide, with Marſhes croft, 10 acres, was granted, 16 July 1558, to Thomas Argall; and afterwards, in 1585, to Ferdinand Richardſon (b).

Two parcels of marſh, one of 16, and the other of 17 acres, belonged to John Stonard, in 1565, and were by him conveyed to William Avery [F]. And, the ſame year, ſeveral parcels were granted to Thomas Chapman: As was Pondeleaz, 10 acres, to Sir Gawin Harvey, 13 Septemb. 1612 (c).

THE CAPITAL MANER OF BERKING remained in the Crown, till K. James I. ſold it, for the ſum of 2000 l. and a fee-farm rent of 160 l. per ann. to Thomas Fanſhaw Eſq; With it there ſeems to have gone a Maner called and another Maner, or capital meſſuage, named

JENKINS,

MALMAYNES, or Mammons.

The capital Meſſuage of Jenkins ſtood about a mile and a half north-eaſt from this Church. It is now down.

Sir Hugh Bryce, and Elizabeth his wife, held, in 1496, of the Lady Abbeſs, this maner of Jenkins, and 3 tofts, 1 garden, 5 ox-gangs of land, 203 acres of arable, 3 of meadow, 40 of paſture, 5 of wood, and 53 s. 4 d. in Berking and Dagenham; by the rent of 3 s 4 d. then valued at 13 l. 6 s. 8 d. (d).

About the beginning of Qu. Elizabeths reign, it was in Sir William Hewett, Lord Mayor of London; whoſe daughter Anne brought it in

In 1567, it belonged to Martin Bowes Eſq; [H] who was ordered to deliver poſſeſſion of the maner of Jenkins otherwiſe Dagenham, or Dakenhames place, with appertenances, and 3 meſſuages, 1 dovehouſe, 2 gardens, 2 orchards, 140 acres of arable, 20 acr. of meadow, 40 of paſture, 12 of wood, 40 of marſh, and 40*s.* rent. in Berking and Dagenham, to Henry Fanſhaw Eſq; and Dorothy his wife. The ſame year, theſe laſt were ordered to deliver it to John Bullock, and Edmund Morrans, but for what uſes is not mentioned (e): Moſt probably, it was in order to raiſe a truſt; for it remained in the Fanſhaw Family. They were deſcended from the Fanſhaws of Fanſhaw Part in Derbyſhire, and ſeated at Ware-Park in Hertfordſhire: three of them were ſucceſſively Remembrancers of the Exchequer (f). The maners of Fulkes, Porters and Weſtbury, in this pariſh, belonged alſo to them, as we ſhall ſhew preſently.—Anne, Lady Fanſhaw, who was a Lunatic, held, in 1632, this maner of Jenkins of the King in fealty only in free and common ſocage (g). Her ſon—Sir Thomas Fanſhaw Kt. who dyed 17 September 1632, held alſo this maner, and free-warren therein, of Chriſtopher Hatton, and Thomas Fanſhaw, Knights of the Bath; and of John Fanſhaw, Eſq; Simon Fanſhaw, and John Weſt, as of their maner of Berkeinge; alſo the maner of Foulkes, alias Faukes; and meſſuages called Blackehouſe, Longbridge, and in Upney &c. with ſeveral parcels of marſh, and meadow.—Thomas Fanſhaw Eſq; his ſon and heir was then 24 Years old (h). He was made a Knight of the Bath at the Coronation of K. Charles I. and created Baron Fanſhaw and Viſcount Dromore 5 September 1661. His eldeſt ſon and ſucceſſor,—Sir Thomas left two daughters coheirs; whereof the youngeſt dyed unmarried [I]. Suſanna, the eldeſt was married to the Hon.

Baptiſt Noel, of Luffenham in the County of Rutland, Knight of the Shire for that County in 1685, ſecond ſon of Baptiſt Viſcount Campden.

Sir William Humphreys, Kt. and Bart. Lord Mayor of London in 1715, purchaſed this eſtate. He departed this life in October 1735. As did his ſon—Sir Orlando Humphreys 14 June 1737, aged 59 years. The latter by Ellen his wife, only child of Col. Robert Lancaſhire, had had three ſons, and two daughters. Two of the ſons dyed yound, and Robert, the ſecond ſon, in 1736, at the age of 28 years. Of the two Daughters and coheirs,

Mary, the eldeſt, had three huſbands. 1. William-Ball Waring, of Dunſton in Berkſhire, who dyed 11 Auguſt 1746, without iſſue. 2. John Honywood Eſq; ſecond brother to Richard, of Marks-hall, to whom ſhe was married 30 May 1747. But he alſo dying without iſſue, 16 Janu. 1747-8, ſhe took to her 3d. huſband, 8 Septemb. 1748, Thomas Gore Eſq; Member of Parliament for Bedford, uncle to Charles Gore Eſq; Knight of the ſhire for the County of Hertford: which Charles Gore Eſq; had married 3 Decemb. 1741, the youngeſt ſiſter, named Ellen-Wintour Humphreys.

Of them this large Maner and eſtate was purchaſed in or about the year 1748, by Smart Lethieullier Eſq; of Alderſbrook in Little Ilford, for the ſum of 40,000*l.*

There went with this Maner, the capital Meſſuage, or Farm, called Malmaynes, Molmans, or Mammons, of which the Houſe is taken down. Joanna Lady Laxton held it, at the time of her deceaſe 15 Auguſt 1577; having been lately purchaſed of Thomas Barker Eſq; and then valued at 20*l.* per ann.—Nicolas Lodd was her heir (i).—Sir Thomas Lodge held it alſo, at the time of his deceaſe, 28 Febru. 1583 (k). It was purchaſed with the reſt by Smart Lethieullier Eſq;

The Court for this Maner is kept at Berking every three weeks, on a Saturday, the Market-day. In it are tried cauſes of Treſpaſs and of Debt under 40*s.* No other Maner in this pariſh keeps a Court.

The Lord, being paramount, claims the Deodands of this Hundred.

A fee-farm of 210 l. a year, due to the Crown, is payable to the Earl of Sandwich.

The reputed Maners of LOXFORD, and of WANGAY, belonged alſo to the late Smart Lethieullier Eſq; and now to his heirs.

The manſion houſe of Loxford ſtands about a mile north from the Church, and near half a mile from Loxford-bridge, on the right hand of the road from Berking to Ilford: and that of Wangay on the South ſide of Chadwell-heath.

[G] It is of him that Mr. Strype relates the following remarkable Story, in his Edition of Stow's Survey of London, fol. 1720. B. 5. pag. 133.

Sir William Hewet Lord Mayor in 1559, who then lived upon London Bridge, had a Daughter to whom this Miſchance happened. The Maid playing with her out of a Window over the River Thames, by chance dropt her in, almoſt beyond expectation of being ſaved. A young Gentleman, named Oſborne then Apprentice to Sir William the Father (which Oſborne was one of the Anceſtors of the Duke of Leeds in a direct line) at this calamitous Accident, immediately leapt in bravely and ſaved the Child. In memory of which deliverance, and in gratitude, her Father afterwards beſtowed her in Marriage on the ſaid Mr. Oſborne with a very great Dowry. Whereof the late Eſtate of Sir Thomas Fanſhaw, in the pariſh of Barking in Eſſex, was a part; as the firſt Duke of Leeds himſelf told the Reverend Mr. John Hewyt from whom Mr. Strype had this relation; and together with that eſtate in Eſſex, ſeveral other lands in the pariſhes of Harthil and Wales in Yorkſhire; then in the poſſeſſion of the ſaid moſt noble Family. Several perſons of Quality courted the ſaid young Lady, and particularly the Earl of Shrewſbury. But Sir William was pleaſed to ſay, Oſborne ſaved her, and Oſborne ſhould enjoy her. The preſent Family preſerve the Picture of the ſaid Sir William in his habit of Lord Mayor at Kiveton houſe in Yorkſhire: Valuing it at 200. l.

nate this meſſuage, or farm, to —— Thomas Pouncett (l). His ſon—— William Pouncett dyed 26 March 1591, leaving —— Henry, his ſon and heir (m): who dyed 26 Febru. 1627.—William was his ſon (n). Henry Pouncett ſome time before his deceaſe, ſold this eſtate to Francis Fuller, Clerk of the Eſtreats in the Exchequer. He dyed 10 March 1636, poſſeſſed of this meſſuage of Loxfords with appertenances, containing 82 acres of arable, and 18 acres of meadow: with ſeveral other lands [K].

Francis Oſbaldeſton, of Standon in Hertfordſhire, ſon of his ſiſter Barbara Fuller, was his heir (o). He dyed in 1648, without iſſue. Alice his widow was remarried to Robert Bertie, fifth ſon of Robert Earl of Lindſey: He dyed in 1701, aged 84, and ſhe 31 Auguſt 1677 (p). After her deceaſe, it came to —— Henry Oſbaldeſton, brother to her firſt huſband; who was ſucceeded by his ſon —— Francis Oſbaldeſton: the latter leaving only two daughters, they ſold Loxford and Wangay to

John Lethieullier Eſq; who ſettled them both on his ſon —— Smart Lethieullier Eſq;

Between the Lord Clinton and Mr. Lethieullier, the following Perſons enjoyed the Maner or meſſuage of WANGEY.

Thomas Baron, or Barnes, to whom that Lord ſold it, by licence dated 14 March 1550 (q). He dyed 29 June 1573, poſſeſſed of it, and of Dunſhall, Stanleyes, part of the meſſuage called Newberry, &c. (r).

Next Joſeph Heynes, to whom Qu. Elizabeth granted it, 30 January 1601. He dyed 16 Sept. 1621, aged 72, and was buried in this Church (s).

Francis Fuller, &c. had it afterwards [L].

The Maner of FULKYS,

Was ſold by Sir Thomas Audeley, to William Severne, who alienated a moiety of it, in 1542, to Stephen Cloſe and Ralph Marſhall (t).

It came afterwards into the Fanſhaw family; for Sir Thomas Fanſhaw, at the time of his deceaſe 17 Sept. 1632, held this maner of Foulkis, or Faukes, with all its rights, members, and appertenances (u).

It is now blended, and goes along, with the Maner of Jenkins.

The houſe ſtood in the town of Berking, but is pulled down.

The Maner of PORTERS, belonged, after Sir Thomas Lucas, to Thomas Fanſhaw Eſq; in 1635. But it is now in Walter-Vane Fletcher Eſq; 'Tis otherwiſe called Hedgemans, and the houſe is about two miles and a half from the Church.

The Maner of WESTBURY, of which the manſion houſe ſtands at the eaſt end of this Town, was granted, as we have ſeen above, to William Denham Eſq; afterwards knighted. At the time of his deceaſe, 4 Auguſt, 1548, he held this maner with all its rights and appertenances, and 1000 acres of arable, 600 acres of paſture, 100 of meadow, 80 of wood, and 500 of heath and furze. And other parcels, mentioned above in the grant; with ſome particular ſervices [M]. —— Marieria, his daughter and heir, was 30 years old (w).

It was next in Edward Breame Eſq: who dyed in 1560, poſſeſſed of this lordſhip, or maner, of Weſtbury, and 40 meſſuages, 40 tofts, 40 gardens, 1500 acres of arable, 300 acres of meadow, 1000 of paſture, 200 of freſh marſh, 200 of wood, and 100s. rent, in Weſtbury, Barking, Ilford, Dagenham, and Chigwell. His next heir was his brother —— Arthur Breame (x). [Concerning him, ſee in the other volume, p. 251.] The 11th of June 1574, this Arthur, and Thomaſine his wife, ſold to Thomas Fanſhaw Eſq; and Mary his wife, this maner, and one meſſuage, 2 tofts, 1 dove-houſe, 600 acres of arable, 200 of meadow, 300 of paſture, 10 of wood, 200 of furze and heath, &c. (y). It continued ſeveral years in the Fanſhaw family.

Blackburne Poulton, Attorney at law, having enjoyed it a conſiderable time, dyed in October 1749, upon which it came to

Poulton Alleyne, a nephew of his, who had it for life: and then it was to deſcend to

Joſeph Keeling Eſq;

EASTBURY,

ſtands about a mile eaſt of Weſtbury, in the road to Dagenham through Ripleſide. The houſe is a large brick building, over-looking the marſhes.

Sir William Denham held alſo this, at the time of his deceaſe, with the appertenances; viz. 200 acres of arable, 300 acres of paſture, 50 of meadow, 60 of wood, 200 of furze and heath (z).

But, 7 May 1557, John Keele had leave to alienate the meſſuage, tenement, or farm, called Eſbery, in Barking, to Clement Siſley (a).

Into whoſe hands it afterwards came, we cannot find.

It belongs to two or three ſiſters of the name of Weldon; and they have alſo ſome portion of the Tithes here.

GAYSEHAMS-HALL

ſtands about three miles and a half north from this Church; and is called in Warburton's Map Great Geris.

This meſſuage was holden of the Nunnery, in K. Edward the third's reign, by Thomas de Sandwich, proveditor to the Prince of Wales, with 120 acres thereto annexed; and the meſſuage called Hockeles, with 55 acres of arable, and 3 of meadow (b).

At the time of Sir William Denham's deceaſe, it compriſed 100 acres of arable, 100 of paſture, 50 of meadow, 40 of wood, and 200 of furze and heath (c). His daughter, and her huſband William Abbot, had licence, 14 Decemb. 1556, to alienate it to Clement Siſley, above-mentioned (d).

It was next in the Breame family. For Arthur Breame Eſq; had licence, 8 June 1571, to alienate it, and Battall downe, Long grove, Gaunts heath, Horſgrove, Bromefeild, Buſhe-Leaz, and Penty grove, to Vincent Randall (e).——Edward Randall dyed poſſeſſed of it, 7 October, 1577, leaving——Vincent, his ſon, 3 years old (f).

Afterwards it belonged to Hugh Hare; and of him it is ſuppoſed to have been purchaſed by

Of this Family ſee a further account under Little Ilford.

UPHALL

Stands about a mile north from the Church, and near Loxford, on the eaſt ſide of the river Rodon, half way between Berking and Great Ilford.

After Morgan Phillips, the next poſſeſſor upon record was Weſſelin Webblynge; who held it [N] in ca. by the 40th part of a knight's fee: and alſo a tenement called Monckes, with divers other lands in this pariſh. He dyed 7 Novemb. 1611, having bequeathed the premiſſes by will to his kinſman——Nicolas Webblinge (h).

Elizabeth, widow of William Billingſley, of London, merchant, ſold it to

Mr. Edward Seabrooke: and from him it hath paſſed to his deſcendents,—— Mr. Thomas, and ——Edward Seabrooke.

STONE-HALL

Stands a little way eaſt from Red-bridge upon the river Rodon.

It had belonged to Sir John Raynesforth; but was granted, as we have ſeen above, to Sir William Denham: with Hobbens grove, High grove, and Horſlees, containing 10 acres; and a yearly rent of 38s. 6d. (i). Sir William had licence, 6 March 1545, to alienate the ſame to

Richard Breame Eſq; (k) [O] Arthur Breame, ſold it, in June 1578, to John Bales. And they two, jointly with Thomas Bales, conveyed by fine, in January following, to

Robert Devereux, Earl of Eſſex, the maner of Stonehall, with appertenances, and 3 meſſuages, 3 gardens, 300 acres of arable, 70 of meadow, 300 of paſture, 40 of wood, and 30 of marſh (l). His mother the Lady Lettice, and her then huſband, Sir Chriſtopher Blount, had licence, 12 December 1589, to ſell the premiſſes to Sir George Carew: And, 2 March 1598, it was conveyed back, by Henry Earl of Northumberland and others, to the ſaid Sir Chriſtopher, Lord Montjoy; who ſold it, 1 November following to

John Crook, and others. It appears to have gone along with the maner of Wanſted. For in 1636 it was in

Sir Henry Mildmay: and is come with that eſtate to the Rt. Hon. Earl Tilney.

The Maner of CLAY-HALL,

Took its name either from the ſoil, or from a Family ſurnamed de la Clay [P].

Here was formerly a very good ſeat, with a Chapel.

The old Houſe was taken down ſome years ago and a farm houſe erected in its room. It ſtands pleaſantly on the ſide of a hill, about 4 miles north of this Church, and a mile from Woodford-bridge.

This, like the reſt of this pariſh, was part of the poſſeſſions of the Nunnery of Berking. It was held under the Abbeſs by the Colt family, mentioned in the other volume, p. 491. Joane, relict of Thomas Colt Eſq; and married afterwards to Sir William Parre, held it, at the time of her deceaſe in 1475, of the Abbeſs by the ſervice of one knight's fee, and yearly rent of 15s. 3d. (m). Her ſon——John Colt Eſq; had it alſo, in 1521, with 100 acres of paſture, &c. (n). And ſo had his ſon —— 8ir Georga Colt, 1578 (e). His cnuſin and heir —— George Colt who held it of ihe Queen, and dyed 21 March Eſq; dyed poſſeſſed of it, 6 Janu. 1615, it being then holden of the King by fealty, and yearly rent of 28s. 8d. (p).

In 1616, it belonged to Sir Chriſtopher Hatton, who, on the 15th of September that year, had a Chapel conſecrated here ()*.

Some time after it was in the Cambell Family, deſcended from Robert Cambell of Foulſham in Norfolk. His ſon——Thomas Cambell was one of the Sheriffs of London in 1600, and Lord Mayor in 1609, being then a Knight (q). He dyed 13 Febr. 1613, aged 78; having been Near Clay-hall there is a farm-houſe called St. Swithin.

There is in the London Regiſtry (y) a Rental made in K. Henry the Seventh's reign, of divers lands, farms, &c, belonging to this Hoſpital: alſo a note of all the lands, demeſnes, tithes, &c. that belonged to it, in 1560.

Upon the ſuppreſſion it becoming veſted in the Crown, Qu. Elizabeth granted, 23 April 1572, the patronage and advowſon of this Hoſpital of St. Mary at Ilford to Thomas Fanſhaw Eſq; Remembrancer of the Exchequer, and to his heirs and aſſigns for ever. He covenanted to appoint a fit perſon for Maſter, or Keeper, of the ſame, who ſhould from time to time repair the Chapel and Edifices belonging thereto, and provide convenient habitations for ſix people ſound or infirm, with an allowance of 45s. a year, at the uſual feaſts. And afterwards directed, that a fit perſon ſhould read divine ſervice in the Chapel here every Lord's-day (z).

The Hoſpital, as it now is, has a row of brick houſes on each ſide of the court, for ſix ſingle men; who have their dwelling here and three half-pence a day each, or 11s. 6d. a quarter, but in the Chriſtmas quarter 16s. 6d. for firing. The Miniſter has 14l. a year paid by the patron of the Hoſpital, with a Houſe, beſides ſubſcriptions from the inhabitants.

The lands belonging to it are ſaid to be worth 100 l. a year.

In 1591, thoſe greedy hunters after concealed lands, W, Tipper, and R, Dawe, got a grant of this Hoſpital, and of the advowſon of the ſame (a).

In Trinity term 1604, it was recovered by Selwood againſt . . . . Chamberleyne (b).

Some years ago it was in Mr. Walden of Southwark, and afterwards in Mrs. Walden; from whom it was purchaſed by the late

The Maner of WITHFIELD,

Of which the Houſe ſtands about half a mile north of Ilford, was granted, as we have obſerved above, to the Lord Chancellor Audeley. He had licenſe, 12 July 1541, to ſell the demeſnes of it to Robert Cowper (d). And, by licenſe dated 24 May 1543, William Grey ſold the maner of Withfeld to ——Richard Stansfeild, with 3 meſſuages, 3 cottages, 100 acres of arable, 400 of meadow, 200 of paſture, 20 of wood, 100 of furze and heath, and 40s. rent, in Ilford, Barking, and Wanſted (e). Edward Randall, Gent. bought this maner, 30 June 1552, and dyed poſſeſſed of it 7 Octob. 1577 (f). His ſon ——Vincent Randall ſold it, by licenſe, dated 7 Auguſt 1598, to

John Tedcaſtle, who lies buried in this Church with an epitaph. He ſold it, by licenſe 1 Septemb. 1604, to . . . . . Aſton. And this laſt to Sir Nicolas Coote, who had it in 1617, as had Lady Coote in 1636.

Before the year 1651 it was purchaſed by John Brewſter, ſon of Francis, of Wrentham-hall in Suffolk. He dyed 27 July 1677, aged 73, and was buried in this Church: As was alſo his ſon ——Auguſtine Brewſter Eſq; who dyed 27 March 1708, aged 66 years (g) [W]. His two ſiſters and coheirs ſold it to

John Bamber M. D. who left it to Walter Jones for life, he having married the Doctor's daughter; and the reverſion to——Bamber Gaſcoigne Eſq;

CRANBROOKE, a maner or meſſuage in this pariſh, ſtanding on the north ſide of the London road, about half a mile from Ilford, and holden of the maner of Berking, belonged to Sir Henry Palavicini, who dyed 14 October 1615. His brother——Tobias was his heir (h). [See under Ray-houſe in Little Ilford.]

Sir Charles Montague Knt. was poſſeſſed of it, at the time of his deceaſe 11 Septemb. 1625. He left three daughters coheirs, Elizabeth, Anne, and Mary (i).

The owner or occupier of it, in part of the laſt century, was Sir James Northfolke, Serjeant at arms to the Houſe of Commons (k).

Sir William Boreman Knt. had it afterwards; and then his lady for life; upon whoſe death, one moiety of it came to her nephew——Henry Davis Gent. and the other moiety to Henry Gibbs Eſq; who married Elizabeth, ſiſter of the ſaid H. Davis. They were to enjoy this eſtate for a term of years, under a decree in Chancery. It belonged afterwards to John Ward, and . . . . Raymond Eſq; now to Andrew Moffatt Eſq;

RIPPLE-WARD is the fourth Ward in Berking, in the eaſtern part of the pariſh, next to Dagenham.

Samuel Wegg, James Clarke, and John Miller, Eſquires; Tho. Hatcher, Samuel Shuckford, Wiltſhire Emmet, George Stubs, Richard Farrar, and a few others, have alſo ſome lands here.

A Free SCHOOL in this Town was founded in 1649, by Sir James Cambell of Woodford Knt. and afterwards Bart. The endowment is 20l. a year, an orchard, a garden, and half an acre of land. The Maſter is to repair the Houſe; and

He alſo gave Three pounds per annnm, iſſuing out of the Chamber of London for the intereſt of 60 l. placed there by him; to be received yearly, or once in two years at fartheſt, for putting out a poor boy in Ilford ward.

The CHURCH, dedicated to St. Margaret, is large, conſiſting of a middle pace, a ſouth aiſle which runs the whole length of church and chancel, and two north aiſles ſupported by pillars of the Tuſcan order. The ſouth aiſle and veſtry are leaded, and ſo is the Church, which hath a flat roof; The two north aiſles, and the Chancel are tyled. At the weſt end there is a lofty Tower of ſtone embattled, with a ring of ſix Bells.

This Church belonged of old to the Nunnery here; to which it was appropriated, and two Vicarages ordained and endowed, one called the Vicarage of St. Margaret of Berking on the South, and the other the Vicarage of St. Margaret, on the North, and ſometimes of North-ſtreet, both in the gift and patronage of the Nunnery. They were conſolidated and united after the year 1395, and continued in the Convent's gift till the diſſolution.

All the Tithes of corn, grain, and hay on Stone-hall, Weſtbury, Eſtbury, and Gayſehams lands, were granted to Sir William Denham, who dyed poſſeſſed of them in 1548, as we have ſeen above. On the 11th of June 1574, Arthur Breame ſold the Tithes of grain and hay here, to Thomas Fanſhaw Eſq; (l). And we ſuppoſe they have gone ever ſince with the capital eſtates: but ſome parcels have been bought off. Thoſe of Weſtbury belong to Bamber Gaſcoigne Eſq; Some parts of the marſh-lands are tithable to the Vicar.

The Rectory and Church, with the advowſon of the Vicarage, were granted, 10 March 1549, to Robert Thomas, and others, to hold of the Honor of Hampton-court (m). In 1556 the Vicarage was in Thomas Baron, or Barnes, of whom it was purchaſed by Sir William Petre, William Cook Eſq; and William Napper, Gent. executors of the will of William Pouncett of this pariſh; and ſettled by them, 1 June 1557, on the Warden and Fellows of All Souls college Oxon, in whoſe gift it has continued ever ſince (n).

There were three Chantries founded in this Church; one at the Altar of the Reſurrection of our Lord Jeſus Chriſt; the ſecond at the Altar of King Edward; and the other at the Altar of St. Ethelburga (o).

In this pariſh was a Chapel, called St. Anne's Chapel, which, with Cockerell's grove, was granted to Richard Robſon, &c. in 1572 (p).

2. DAGENHAM.

This pariſh claims the next place to Berking, as having belonged to the Nunnery there till its diſſolution; and been look'd upon as a member of the capital Maner, ſtyled Jenkins, otherwiſe Dagenham, or Dakenhames place.

In Hodelred's grant of it to the Convent it is called Deckenham (q). From whence Dagen, or Decken, the firſt part of the name, is derived, we cannot learn. As for Ham it ſignifies a habitation, village, or town. The place is not mentioned in Domeſday-book, being included in Berking.

Here are four Maners, or reputed Maners; 1. The maner of Dagenham. 2. That of Cockermouth. 3. . . . of Parſlows. 4 . . . of Valence.

1. The Maner of DAGENHAM was holden of the Abbeſs, in K. Edward the Third's reign, by Edmond de Northtoft, mentioned in the other Volume, p. 366. His two grandaughters, Emma, and Florence, were his coheirs (r).

Sir Richard Alibon Kt. one of the Judges of the King's Bench, had it in the laſt century; and ſold it to

Thomas, eldeſt ſon of Sir Henry Audeley. He dyed inteſtate, and without iſſue, in 1697. And this eſtate, with that of Goſebeck's in Stanway, was decreed to his ſiſter Catharine's ſon, Henry Barker Eſq;

2. The Maner of COCKERMOUTH is the only one that has a Court kept in this pariſh. The manſion houſe ſtands about a mile ſouth, ſouth-weſt from the Church.

John de Cockermouth, clerk, had licenſe, in 1330, to give to the Abbeſs and Convent, 1 meſſuage, 140 acres of arable, 30 of meadow, 24 of paſture, 8 of wood, and 70 s. rent, in Dakenham, Berking, and Hylleford, which were holden of the ſaid Abbeſs &c. by the yearly rent of 2 s. 6 d. and ſuit of Court (s).

Upon the diſſolution of Abbeys, this eſtate came to the Crown, and reſted in it till 14 July 1565, when Qu. Elizabeth granted it, with Purlevants and Wildland-marſh, in Riple-marſh, to Sir Antony Browne Chief Juſtice of the Common Pleas (t). [See under South-Weald.] He dyed 17 May 1567, poſſeſſed of this eſtate. His brother John's grandſon——Wiſtan Browne, Eſq; was his heir (u). He had licenſe, 2 May 1574, to alienate this manner, and 10 meſſuages, 10 tofts, one barn and garden, 200 acres of arable, 100 of meadow, 100 of paſture, 3 of wood, 20 of furze and heath, 100 of marſh, and 4 l. rent, to

John Bullock Eſq; &c. who, 26 Novemb. 1574, had licenſe to alienate them to Thomas Fanſhawe, and Thomas Powle, Eſqres.

In 1589, William Nutbrowne had this eſtate; and, by licenſe dated 2 Decemb. the ſame year, ſold it to William Megges; by whom it was conveyed, 7 April 1601, to——John Swinnerton. ſenr. and junr, (w).

Sir Thomas Darcy of Gr. Brackſted Bart. held a Court here 8 June 1685, as lord of this maner. The 21ſt of October 1690, he and Jane his wife ſold it for 2050 l. to William Clark: the latter gave it by will to his wife Anne for life: remainder to——Thomas Cage, and others, in truſt; by whom it was conveyed to William Watkins, and Thomas Johnſon, ſubject to the truſts in W. Clarke's will.

It is ſaid to have been afterwards in Mrs. Tipping, and——Philip Page.

3. The Maner of PARSELOWES, or Paſſelowes.

The manſion houſe ſtands about a mile and a half north-weſt from this Church.

We do not find any account of the owners of this eſtate till 1568. Then Martin Bowes, and Frances his wife, paſſed it to Rowland Hayward, or Haywood, Alderman of London, and Thomas Wilbraham; with appertenances, being 10 meſſuages, 1 cottage, 10 gardens, 2 orchards, 100 acres of arable, 20 of meadow, 50 of paſture, 30 of wood, and 40 s. rent, in Dagenham, Berking, and Upminſter (x).

William Fanſhaw Eſq; who dyed 4 March 1634-5, held this maner with all its rights and members, of Sir Chriſtopher Hatton, and Sir Thomas Fanſhaw, Knights of the Bath &c. as of their maner of Berking, in free ſocage, by the ſervice of 9s. 1d. ob. And Cricklewood, and Caſtell-feilds, &c. of the King. He was ſon of Thomas Fanſhaw of Ware-park.—John Fanſhaw Eſq; his ſon and heir, then aged 15 years, dyed 6 April 1689, in the 69th Year of his age. He married Alice, eldeſt daughter of Thomas Fanſhaw of Jenkins in Berking, by whom he had——John, Auditor of the Dutchy of Lancaſter, who dyed 19 December 1697, in the 38th year of his age. By his wife, Mary, eldeſt daughter of John Coke of Melborn in Derbyſhire, he had 3 ſons, and 1 daughter (y).——Thomas his ſon was father of——Thomas, who married, 13 June 1745, Ann daughter of Sir Criſp Gaſcoigne. He is the immediate heir of the Fanſhaw family.

4. The nominal Maner of VALENCE.

The manſion houſe ſtands about half a mile north of Paſſelowes.

It took its name from the Valence family, Earls of Penbroke, frequently mentioned in the other Volume of this Hiſtory.

Agnes de Valence, at the time of her deceaſe, in 1309, held of the Abbeſs of Berking, 1 meſſuage, 128 acres of arable, 4 acres of meadow, and 7 s. 3 d. rent. And the tenant of thoſe lands was obliged to ride with two horſes along with the Abbeſs, and at her expence, upon reaſonable notice.——Adomar de Valence, Earl of Penbroke, was her heir (z) [X]. Concerning this Adomar, See in the other Volume, p. 26. 138.

Sir Nicolas Coote of Withfeild in Berking, had it in the laſt century.

Thomas Bonbam, Eſq; who dyed 3 May 1676, was owner of this eſtate (a).

Henry Merttins Eſq; elder brother to Sir George Merttins, Lord Mayor of London in 1724 and 1725, purchaſed this eſtate. He dyed 28 March 1725, and was buried in this Church. His ſon——John-Henry Merttins is the preſent poſſeſſor.

Charities.

John White of this pariſh Gent. who dyed 2 February 1675, gave by will one dozen of bread weekly for ever to 7 poor widows: for which, land in this pariſh is tyed.

——Whelham of this pariſh, Gent. left, in 1692, five pounds per annum for ever, to be diſtributed amongſt the poor of this pariſh at Chriſtmaſs; for the payment of which there is alſo land appointed in this pariſh.

Forty ſhillings per annum, left by Mr. Armſtrong, and to be diſtributed alſo at Chriſtmaſs; for which there is land tyed in Horn-Church.

John Fanſhaw, of Parſlowes in this pariſh Eſq; left alſo a dozen of bread, weekly, to the Poor.

Richard Uphill Eſq; ſtandard-bearer to K. William and Qu. Mary, to Queen Anne, and to K. George I. who dyed 26 Febru. 1717-18, and was buried in this Church, gave, by his will, Ninety pounds per annum, being two orders in the Exchequer, one of fifty pounds, and the other of forty, for the remaining term of years upon them, to the Poor of this pariſh not taking alms; and to put out children apprentices, or to ſervice, or otherwiſe, as ſhould be appointed by two Juſtices of the Peace living in or near Dagenham, and by ſome other Gentlemen of this pariſh, belonging to the Church of England.

The Church, dedicated to St. Peter and St. Paul, conſiſts of a body and north aiſle; the Chancel hath only a ſouth aiſle. At the weſt end there is a ſtone Tower. This Church belonged, as well as the Maner, to Berking Nunnery: The Rectory, or great Tithes were appropriated to them, and a Vicarage ordained and endowed, of which the Convent continued patrons till their diſſolution, when both came to the Crown.

They were granted to Sir Antony Browne, who, at the time of his deceaſe in 1567, is recorded to have held the Rectory of Dagenham, with appertenances, and all the Tithes thereto belonging; and all the Tithes of hay (b). Out of them he partly endowed the Free-School he founded at Burntwood: what he granted here being lett for 40 l. a year, but ſaid to be worth much more. As to the Vicarage, it paſſed from Wiſtan Brown Eſq; to . . . John Bullock, to . . . William Netbrown, or rather Nutbrown, who preſented to the Vicarage in 1579, . . . John Swinnerton ſenr. and junr. had it next in 1601. The Biſhop of London collated to the Vicarage in 1637, 1640, and 1641, in full right: But, after the Reſtoration, the Advowſon of it was in . . . Sir Thomas Darcy Bart. For ſome years paſt, it hath been in . . . William Blackbourn, and now in Levett Blackbourn Eſq;

This pariſh is rated to the Land-tax at 2512 l.

Dagenham-Breach makes ſo conſiderable a figure in the Map, that it is neceſſary to give an Account of it here.

It happened 17 December 1707, at an extraordinary high tide, accompanied with a violent wind: And was occaſioned by the blowing up of a ſmall ſluice, or trunk, made for the drain of the land-waters in the wall and banks of the Thames. If proper and immediate help had been applied, it could have been eaſily ſtopped with a ſmall charge; the ditch or drain of the marſh grounds, which led to ſuch ſluice, being at the firſt blowing up of the ſluice not above 14 or 16 feet broad, and might in a day or two have been eaſily ſtopped, by the bringing on a ſmall dam, in form of a ſemi-circle, to the Thames Wall, if many hands had been employed: But through the neglect thereof, the conſtant force of the Water ſetting in and out of the levels, ſoon made the gap wider; ſo that a large channel was torn up, and a paſſage made for the water of 100 yards wide, and 20 feet deep in ſome places. By which unhappy accident about 1000 acres of rich land, in the levels of Dagenham and Havering, worth about 3 l. an acre, were overflowed, and a ſand-bank was raiſed in the Thames, at the mouth of the breach, which reached almoſt half-croſs the river, and near a mile in length; likely to prove a great obſtruction to, and even utterly to deſtroy, the navigation. The expence of repairing this breach was at firſt laid upon the proprietors of the lands, but after many wearied and unſucceſsful attempts of theirs, for about ſeven years, until they had expended more than the value of the land, it was given wholly over as impracticable (c). However being deemed a public concern, upon application to Parliament, an act was obtained for the ſpeedy and effectual preſerving the navigation of the river Thames, by ſtopping the breach in the Levels of Havering and Dagenham: by which act, for ten years from 10 July 1714, the Maſter of every ſhip or veſſel coming into the port of London was obliged to pay three pence per tun; coaſters three ſhillings each voyage; and colliers one penny per chalder: except fiſhing-veſſels, ſhips in balaſt only, and coaſters particularly Harwich boats: Colcheſter packet boats to be charged with the duty of 3s. a voyage, only four times in the year (d). Propoſals being thereupon made, William Boſwell demanded 19000 l. but agreed afterwards, for the ſum of 16500 l. to ſtop up the breach; remove the ſhelf that had been thrown out in the Thames; and make good the Walls of the Levels, extending from the point of land above the half-way Tree, down to the mouth of Raynham-Creek; to be compleated wholly at his own riſque, and to begin with his own money. But being unable to fulfill his engagement (e), Capt. John Perry entered into Indenture of Covenants, 26 Janu. 1715, effectually to make up and ſtop the Breach in the Levels of Havering and Dagenham, being of the width of 400 feet; and to repair and make good the walls, banks, and other works, 200 yards on each ſide of the Breach; before the 1ſt of November 1717, for the ſum of 25000 l. [Y]. And, within eighteen months, to commence from 23 April 1718, remove the ſand-bank in the Thames: upon condition that if ſuch ſum was not ſufficient, they would recommend him to Parliament. Accordingly he went diligently to work; but an extraordinary tide, on the 10th of September 1717, flowing above what he had done, tore it down to the foundation; and his work was damaged again twice afterwards, the laſt time 30 September 1718; ſo that he was obliged three times to ſtop the breach, with more than common labour. However it was compleated in ſomething more than five years time; at the end of which, inſtead of 25000 l. the charge and expence was found to have amounted to forty thouſand, four hundred ſeventy two pounds, eighteen ſhillings and eight pence three farthings. Which involving Capt. Perry in great difficulties, a Clauſe was inſerted in an Act 7 George I. c. 20. impowering the Truſtees, out of the money collected by virtue of the act of Queen Anne, to pay him the further ſum of 15000 l. over and above the 25000 l.

From 1707 to 1721 the Breach had worn and ſpread itſelf into ſeveral large branches, like the natural arms of a River, by the force and fall of the water returning from the marſh ground upon every reflux of the tide; the longeſt of which arms was above a mile and a half in extent, and in ſome places four or five hundred feet in breadth, and from twenty to thirty or forty feet depth. There was by computation about 120 acres of ſolid marſh ground waſhed into the Thames (f). At this time there is yet a pool of forty or fifty acres left within the wall, where the earth had been carried off by the tide.

The keeping up of the Wall here was of ſuch great importance, that the Abbeſs of Berking had licenſe to cart wood, or timber, through the Foreſt, in fence month, by the tenants of Berking and Dakenham, from Goldherſt-wood to La Claye, for the repair of the breaches occaſioned by the inundation of the Sea [Z],

Capt. Perry, in repairing the Breach, found a great quantity of what he calls Moorlogg; that is, a vein of divers ſorts of rotten wood; yew timber only, that is found amongſt it, not being decayed; which lyes about 3 foot and a half or 4 foot under the ſurface of the marſh ground belonging to the levels, about 10 feet in depth, and with very little mixture of earth that can be diſcerned amongſt it: underneath it there is about 12 or 15 inches depth of blew clay, then gravel and ſand. A great part of this Moorlogg ſeems to be compoſed of ſmall bruſh wood, and many hazel nuts have been taken up in digging, which looked to be firm, but upon a very little preſſure break to duſt. Some of the yew trees found here, are 14 or 16 inches diameter, and perfectly ſound, excepting the ſap: the willow or ſallow trees are many of them two feet and upwards in diameter, and retain a whitiſh colour like touch-wood, and ſo decayed, where they lye, that men cut into it with their tools with more eaſe than they do the earth or adjoyning Moorlogg. Along other parts of the Thames, it generally lies in an even and regular manner; and as to its thickneſs, it is nigh 6 foot thick at Deptford; in Woolwich-reach between 7 and 8 foot; in Plumſted-levels againſt Berking-Creek 9 foot; and gradually of a greater thickneſs as well as breadth, going down on both ſides of the Thames below the Breach, as the Marſhes extend; the thickneſs of the marſh-ground, which lies upon it, being near alike, and none of it to be ſeen at any place where the courſe of the River cuts into the high land, as at Woolwich, Purfleet &c. But Capt. Perry did not ſee amongſt it that ſort of wood which others have deſcribed to be taken up ſound, and to moulder away upon its coming into the air. There have been found a little above the vein of this Moorlogg at Dagenham, Stags-horns (g) [A]. What was taken for yew, the learned Dr. Derham, ſuppoſed to be horn-beam, or alder, perhaps rather birch. And, amongſt them, he diſcovered a large oak; another which had ſigns of the ax, its head having been lopped off; and ſtumps, that ſeemed to have been cut off at the ſurface of the earth (h).—How theſe ſubterraneous Trees came to be buried here, and elſewhere (i), in ſuch quantities, is not agreed amongſt the learned. Some ſuppoſe, that they are remains of the general devaſtation made by the Deluge (k); others imagine, that they are the ruins of ſome later age, occaſioned by an extraordinary Inundation of the river Thames; or by ſome Storms and ſtrong ſoutherly Winds, which blow ſharply upon this ſhore, and might be able to root up and tumble down Trees growing in ſo lax a ſoil as this is. But if they could root up a few ſturdy Oaks, they could not affect ſmall bruſh wood, which is among the reſt in great plenty.—Why therefore it is not more natural to ſuppoſe, that they were cut down and laid here on purpoſe to ſtop the Inundations of the river Thames, I cannot conceive: and humbly ſubmit it to the conſideration of the Learned.

3. EAST-

3. EAST-HAM.

The two Pariſhes of Eaſt, and Weſt, Ham, are ſo named on account of their ſituation with regard to one another. Eaſt-Ham is the moſt eaſterly of the two.

This Pariſh belonged of old to the Crown, and was made part of the endowment of the rich Abbey of Weſtminſter; to which it was confirmed by K. Edward the Confeſſor, under the name of two hides in Hamme (l). At the ſame time it appears, that theſe two Pariſhes were not then divided; but went by one common name.

St. Peter's Weſtminſter held it in two parcels, when the general Survey was taken [B].

How and when the Convent and Monks parted with this eſtate, or by whom it was taken from them, doth not appear [C].

But in the reign of K. Henry III, it was in the Montfichet-Family, which had the adjoining Maner of Weſt-Ham. The Account of that Family properly belongs to Stanſted-Montfichet, where ſtood their capital Seat. Accordingly it is placed there, in the other Volume of this Hiſtory, p. 576, 577.

The ſucceſſion of them was thus. Robert Gernon.——William, his ſon, who took the ſurname of Montfichet; and founded the Abbey of Stratford.——Gilbert,——Richard, that dyed in 1203, leaving his ſon——Richard de Montfichet, the laſt heir male of this family. He departed this life about 1258 without iſſue; and was ſucceeded by his three Siſters, and coheirs, Margery, married to Hugh de Bolebec; Aveline, to William de Fortz, Earl of Albemarle; and Philippa, to Hugh de Playz.

Their large inheritance being divided amongſt them, Hugh de Bolebec had this eſtate for his ſhare: And his ſucceſſors were——Walter de Bolebec,——Walter,——Hugh, and another——Hugh. This laſt left four Daughters his coheirs. Philippa, married to Roger de Lancaſter. Margery firſt to Nicolas Corbett, and afterwards to Ralph ſon of William de Grimſthorp: Alice married to Roger, or Walter, de Huntercombe; and Maud, to Hugh de la Vall (m).

Amongſt them was this eſtate divided, and ſo became diſmembred. Maud, who dyed firſt, in 1281, without iſſue, held of the King in ca. in Eaſt-Ham and Weſt-Ham, 80 acres of arable, 35 s. 8 d. rent of the free-tenants, and of the cuſtomary 4 l. 18 s. 5d. ob (n).—Philippa, de Lancaſter, that dyed in 1294, held of the King in capite, by the ſervice of the 4th part of a knight's fee, in Eaſt Hames, 1 meſſuage, 200 acres of arable, 3 of meadow, and 15s. rent. ——John de Lancaſter was her ſon (o). But, before her deceaſe, ſhe had parted with her ſhare to Robert Burnel, Biſhop of Bath and Wells, and Lord Chancellor, in whom Alice's part was alſo veſted; which produced another Maner here called EAST-HAM BURNELS. [See in the other Volume, p. 577.

Before we come to treat of it particularly, we ſhall trace the Maner of EAST-HAM down to the preſent time. John de Lancaſter, who was heir to it, obtained a licenſe in 1307, to give 2 acres of arable in Eaſt-Hammes and the Advowſon of the Church, which were holden of the King, to the Abbot and Convent of Stratford (p). Afterwards, in 1319, the ſame John, and Annora his wife, granted the reverſion of this Maner, after their deceaſe, to the ſaid Abbot and Convent; it being holden of the King by the ſervice of the third part of one moiety of a knight's fee (q). The Abbey was in poſſeſſion of it in 1358 (r); and continued ſo till their diſſolution; at which time the maner and rectory were lett at 23 l. 12 s. 2 d. and other lands here at 31 l. 0. 2 d.

K. Henry VIII. 10 May 1544, granted to Richard Breame Eſq; this maner, and the Rectory and Church of Eaſt-Ham, with 47 acres of arable land, and marſh; 13 acres in Eaſt-ham-marſh; 2 parcels of arable and marſh, containing 13 acres and a half; a fiſhery called Weſt-Hams-fletes-mouth, and the two ſhores, or reed-tufts; likewiſe the tithes of Weſtmeſter fee in this pariſh; and 4 acres and a half in Rohytyng marſh in Berking; to hold of the King by the 20th part of a knight's-fee (s). He dyed 6 Octob. 1546, poſſeſſed of the ſame, leaving his ſon—Edward, 4 years old (t); who departed this life 1 Janu. 1558. His brother—Arthur, was his heir (u); to whom, in 1567, Dorothy Dalton made over all her right in this maner (w).—Giles Breame was his ſon.

In 1635, Robert Allington, of Cambridgeſhire, had one part of this maner, and—Cherry, merchant in London, the other part.

It belonged afterwards to Sir Thomas Draper of Sunninghill in Berkſhire, Bart. who dyed in 1703. His daughter

Mary brought it in marriage to her huſband, John Barber Eſq; Their ſon John Barber, ſold it, with ſeveral capital Farms in this pariſh, to John Henniker Eſq; ſeated in the adjoyning pariſh of Weſt-Ham; under which a more particular account is given of him.

The maner houſe, called Eaſt-ham-hall, ſtands near the Church.

[C] There was an eſtate here named Weſtmeſter, or Weſtminſter, fee, as low as the reign of K. Henry VIII.

East-Ham Burnels, is the other Maner in this Pariſh, as we have obſerved before.

The manſion houſe ſtands near the London road.

In 1286, a fine paſſed between Robert Burnel, Biſhop of Bath and Wells, plaintiff, and Ralph ſon of William de Grimſthorp, and Margery his wife, deforc' of the maners of Eſt-hammes, and Gr. Hoyland (x) ——The Biſhop's great nephew, Edward Lord Burnel, who dyed in 1316, held of the King, as of the Barony of Montfitchet, 132 acres of marſh in Eaſt-ham, 80 acres of arable, 23 s. 4 d. rent of the free tenants, and 20 l. a year rent of aſſize of the cuſtomary tenants, in Eaſt-ham and Weſt-ham; and 700 days work of the cuſtomary tenants, 7 acres of meadow, and 40 acres of wood, by the ſervice of the 4th part of a knight's fee. He held alſo here ſome ſmaller parcels under Richard Plaiz, Thomas de Undercombe, and William Malemaynes (y):

Maud, his ſiſter and ſole heir, was married firſt to John Lovel, and afterwards to John de Handlo. In 1330, this Maud, and her huſband John de Handlo, held in Eſt-ham and Weſt-ham, 148 acres of arable, 6 of meadow, 11 of paſture, and 24 of wood, of the King in capite, as parcel of the Barony of Monfichet, by the ſervice of half a knight's fee.—And by licence, they entailed their eſtates on Joan, Elizabeth, and Margaret, daughters of Richard Handlo, the ſaid Maud's eldeſt ſon by her ſecond huſband; remainder to John Lovel, ſon of her firſt huſband John Lovel, and his heirs male (z). Thoſe three daughters, and their brother Edmund, dying without iſſue as far as we can find, their uncle——Sir Nicolas Handlo ſucceeded to this and their other eſtates, and took the ſurname of Burnel. [See in the other Volume, p. 12, 13, 577.] He dyed in 1382 (a). His ſon——Sir Hugh Burnel, held the maners of Eſt-ham and Weſt-ham, in which there were 145 acres of marſh lying under water, and 1 meſſuage, and 101 acres of arable, of the King, in capite by the third part of a knight's fee; 7 acres were alſo holden of the Abbot of Stratford; and the remainder of Giles de Plays.

Joice, wife of Thomas Erdyngton jun. Catharine Burnel; and Margery wife of Edmund Hungerford, were his couſins and heirs (b). Sir Edmund Hungerford, at the time of his deceaſe in 1484, held the maners of Eſt-ham Burnel, and Weſt-ham-Burnel, Hell-houſe, and Stanſted-Montfichet, of Francis Lord Lovel; and was ſucceeded by his ſon——Thomas Hungerford (c). But his widow Margery enjoyed them till her deceaſe, 27 March 1486 (d).——Sir John Hungerford had them in 1506 (e). And——John Hungerford Eſq; in 1359 (f). But between them they were held by William Lacon, alias Laxon, who dyed 20 July 1556, and his heir was ſaid to be Joanna, widow of Thomas Wanton (g) [D]. ——Sir John Hungerford, who dyed 19 March 1581, held divers meſſuages, lands and tenements in the vills, fields, and pariſhes of Eaſt-ham and Weſt-ham Burnel.——Antony was his ſon and heir (h).

Roger Beckwith, at the time of his deceaſe 5 Septemb. 1586, held a moiety and purparty of the maner of Eaſt-ham Burnels, and Weſt-ham Burnels; and a moiety and purparty of the maner of Eaſt-ham and Playes, with all their appertenances. His two ſiſters and co-heirs were,

Frances, wife of George Harvey, and Frances, wife of Henry Slingſby; Eſqrs; (i) [See under Marks, near Romford.] George Harvey was afterwards knighted, and dyed 10 Auguſt 1605. His widow the Lady Frances, juſt now mentioned, lived till 11 Novemb. 1627, and held theſe eſtates [E] till her deceaſe. Margaret her eldeſt daughter was married to

William Mildmay Eſq; ſon and heir of Sir Thomas Mildmay of Barnes Kt. and Elizabeth the ſixth daughter to Sir Nicolas Coote, of Dagenham Kt.——Sir Thomas, ſon of the ſaid Margaret, and William Mildmay, and the Lady Coote, were her co-heirs (k).

This eſtate continued in the Family of Mildmay of Marks, till Carew Mildmay Eſq; ſold it to

Henry Edwards Eſq; who conveyed it to John Gore Eſq; A moiety of it was afterwards purchaſed by

Sir Robert Smyth Bart. This Sir Robert was deſcended from the Smyths of Stoke Prior in Worceſterſhire, and created a Baronet 30 March 1665. His eldeſt ſon and heir,——Sir Robert Smyth, married Jane, eldeſt daughter of John Trafford of Dunton-hall in Lincolnſhire Eſq; by whom he had two ſons Robert, and James, who dyed unmarried 12 Octob. 1741. aged 81 years [F]—Sir Robert, the eldeſt ſon, and ſucceſſor to his father, married Anne, daughter of Henry Whitehead of Titherly in Hampſhire, by whom he had 3 ſons, Trafford, Robert, and Henry. He dyed 28 Janu. 1744-5.——Trafford, the eldeſt ſon, dyed before him, in January 1731-2. He had married Conway, daughter and heireſs of Thomas Hacket, biſhop of Down and Connor, by whom he left four fons, Trafford, Robert, James and John. By a ſecond wife he left no iſſue. —Trafford, the eldeſt ſon, was heir to his grandfather. He died unmarried in December 1765, and was ſucceeded by his nephew now Sir Robert. The other moiety of this eſtate belongs to Stephen Comyns Eſq;

The tenants of the Maner of Eaſt-Ham are obliged to treat and entertain the tenants of the other Maners of Weſt-ham, Weſt-ham-Burnels, and Plaiz. The original of which Cuſtom is ſaid to be this; that when the Lord of thoſe Maners was taken priſoner in France, and ſent to his tenants for a relief, the tenants of all the other Maners complied, and thoſe of Eaſt-ham refuſed: ſo that to puniſh them for their diſobedience, he laid this burden upon them. This is the current tradition among the homagers; whether true or falſe.

The following Perſons have lands here, beſides thoſe already mentioned, Samuel Hunton Eſq; Thomas Draper Bever, Gent; Mr. George Brownſworth; Benjamin Rutland; Samuel Pullin; Henry Shuttleworth; Joſeph Hall; Y. Burges; George Carter, &c.

Green-ſtreet is a Hamlet in this pariſh, about a mile north-weſt from the Church. Here is a ſeat that formerly belonged to Sir Francis Holcroft, afterwards to the Garrard Family, deſcended from thoſe of Langford in Norfolk. Sir Thomas Garrard Bart. had two ſons, Jacob, and Nicolas; and Mary, wife of Samuel Kerridge of Shelley-hall in Suffolk Eſq; On Sir Jacob's death without male iſſue, his brother Sir Nicolas ſucceeded him in title and eſtate. He married Cecily, daughter of Sir Edwin Steed of Kent; but having no iſſue, this ſeat and the chief of his eſtates deſcended to Sir Jacob-Garrard Downing Bart [G]. Sir Nicolas dyed 12 March 1727-8.

Charities.

Robert Rampſton Eſq; gave one pound a year to this pariſh, payable out of Stone-hall in Little Canfield. [See in the other Volume, p. 464.]

Sir Richard Higham, or William Higham Eſq; gave the rent of two acres of marſh-land in Berking, for bread to the poor of this pariſh, and the remainder for buying of coals; to be diſtributed at the diſcretion of the heirs of his family.

Sir John Hart, who lived in this pariſh, gave 4 l. a year, payable out of ſome lands here; to be diſtributed amongſt the poor, at the diſcretion of the miniſter and church-wardens.

Giles Breame Eſq; who dyed 31 March 1621, built an Hoſpital, or Alms-houſe here, for ſix poor men, three out of this pariſh, and three out of Bottiſham in Cambridgeſhire; and endowed it with an eſtate in Braintree and Felſted; conſiſting then of ſeven cloſes; three called Sherwell-cloſe, White-Reding, Stoke-Reding; three others called Wood-fields, and the other Prattcroſt; containing ſix ſcore acres, ſome time parcel of Naylinghurſt-hall.

Jane Nevill, Counteſs of Weſtmoreland, 18 July 1641, did enfeoff Sir Francis Holcroft of Greenſtreet, and others, in two parcels of land in Middlemarſh in Weſt-Ham, containing two acres and a half each; the rent to be paid on Lady-day and Michaelmaſs by even payments; and directed, that out of it, 10 s. ſhould be paid for preaching a ſermon in this Church on St. John Baptiſt's day; and the like ſum for another ſermon on St. John the Evangeliſt's day; 2 s. 6 d. to the Clerk, each time: 5 s. a year for repairing the monument of her huſband Edmund Nevill Lord Latimer Earl of Weſtmoreland, in the Chancel: the reſt to the Poor.

The Church, dedicated to St. Mary Magdalen, is of one pace with the Chancel, and tyled. The walls are of an extraordinary thickneſs on each ſide of the Chancel; and on the north and ſouth are arches in the walls, of indented wreath-work, ſo that here ſeem to have been two aiſles, though now demoliſhed. In the Tower are three Bells.

This Church was given by John de Lancaſter, as above mentioned, to the Abbey of Stratford Langthorn; and they preſented to it a while as a Rectory. But, upon their complaint and repreſentation to Ralph de Baldock, Biſhop of London, that they were reduced to want, on account of their lands being frequently over flowed, &c. the Rectory, or great Tithes, were appropriated to them, 9 April 1309; and a Vicarage ordained and endowed, of which the Biſhop reſerved the collation to himſelf and ſucceſſors; and accordingly it hath continued ever ſince in the gift of the Biſhops of London (l).

After the ſuppreſſion of Monaſteries, the great Tithes were granted by K. Henry VIII. in 1544, to Richard Breame Eſq; and his heirs (m), as above mentioned. He dyed poſſeſſed of them 6 October 1546; as did his ſon—Edward 1 Janu. 1558; and was ſucceeded by his brother——Arthur (n). His ſon——Giles, Breame ſold this Rectory to

William Heigham, or Higham, Eſq; third ſon of Sir Clement Higham of Barrow-hall in Suffolk (o), one of the Privy Council to Qu. Mary, and conſtituted chief Baron of the Exchequer in 1557. He reſided here in a capital meſſuage (p), and dyed 10 July 1620, aged 75 years; and is interred in the Chancel of this Church, with his wife Anne, one of the daughters and coheirs of Richard Stonely Eſq; one of the Tellers of the Exchequer. They had 5 ſons, Richard, Clement, Daniel, William, and Joſeph; and 3 daughters, Anne, wife of William Dutton, Dorothy of Samuel Plume of Gr. Yeldham, and another Dorothy.—Richard, the eldeſt ſon, was knighted, and had two wives, 1. Elizabeth, daughter of James Harvey of Vange Eſq; by whom he had James, and Anne, who both dyed young; and Elizabeth. 2. Mary daughter of John Colt of Rickmanſworth was his ſecond wife, and by her he had, Francis, Mary, and Anne.——Francis Higham Eſq; the ſon, and heir, left an only daughter and heireſs,

Mary, that brought this eſtate to her huſband, Robert Bendiſh, of Norwich Eſq; they had two ſons, Higham, and Arthur; and Mary, that dyed unmarried.——Higham Bendiſh Eſq; the lies in the great road leading to London from this County, and extends to Bow-bridge. As it is ſo near the Metropolis, and hath the great conveniency of water-carriage from the Thames, it is the reſidence of ſeveral conſiderable Merchants, Dealers, and induſtrious Artiſts.

This populous Pariſh is divided into four Wards, viz. 1. Church-ſtreet Ward. 2. Stratford Langthorn's. 3. Plaiſtow-Ward. 4. Upton-Ward.

The owners of this pariſh, in Edward the Confeſſor's reign, were, Aleſtan, and Leured, two freemen: At the time of the general ſurvey they were held by Robert Gernon, and Ralph Peverell [I].

There are in this Pariſh the following Maners, or reputed Maners. 1. The Maners of Weſt-Ham, and Eaſt-Weſt-Ham. 2. . . . That of Wood-Grange. 3. . . . That of Playz. 4. The Maner of Weſt-ham-Burnels. 5. . . . That of Bretts. 6. The Maner of Chobhams. To which add the Abbey of Stratford-Langthorn.

1. The Maner of WESTHAM, &c.

The Maners of Weſt-Ham, Eaſt-Weſt-Ham, Wood-Grange, and Plaiz, are the part that belonged to Robert Gernon. He is mentioned in the foregoing pariſh of Eaſt-Ham, and more fully under Stanſted, in the other Volume, p. 576, 577, which was the Head of his Barony. ——William, his ſon, dropt the ſurname of Gernon, and took that of Montfichet, from the Mount at Stanſted, on which his Caſtle ſtood. He founded the Abbey of Stratford, and endowed it with his whole Lordſhip of Hamme, in arable and paſture lands, meadows, marſhes, waters, &c. This grant comprehended the Maners of Weſt-Ham, and Wood-Grange: for the Maners of Eaſt-Weſt-ham, and Playz, continued in his poſterity, till John de Lancaſter granted them to the ſame Abbey, with that of Eaſt-Ham, as is ſhewn under Eaſt-Ham.

Part of Gernon's eſtate, diſmembred from the reſt, formed the Maners of EAST-HAM and WEST-HAM-BURNELS; of which we ſhall give a ſhort account, after having traced the Abbey's eſtates down to the preſent time.

The Abbey continued poſſeſſed of the Maners of Weſt-Ham, Eaſt-Weſt-Ham, Wood-Grange, and Playz, till their diſſolution. At which time the lands and demeſnes belonging to the Maner of Weſt-ham contained about 1400 acres, beſides ſeveral parcels not numbred: and the rents of aſſiſe were 78 l. 8 s. Wood-Grange was then lett for 13 l. 11 s. 0 d. The rents of aſſiſe of Eaſt-Weſt-Ham maner were 4 l. 8 s. 0 d. Thoſe of Playz, the ſame. And the perquiſites of Courts were valued in each, at 4 s. 10 d.

The Maner of WEST-HAM hath continued in the Crown ever ſince the ſuppreſſion. It was part of the Dowry of Catharine of Portugal, Queen of K. Charles II. and from thence called the Queen's Maner. She dyed in 1705. But, before her deceaſe, K. William had granted a 99 years Leaſe of it to the Hon. George Booth, at a reſerved Rent, which was remitted, or releaſed, afterwards. G. Booth granted a 69 years leaſe, of part of the demeſnes, and a farm called Hamfrith [or Wood grange,] in this pariſh, com-

But he reſerved to himſelf, and ſucceſſors in the leaſe, the other quit-rents and royalties.

The other parts of this Maner paſſed from G. Booth to Mrs. and Azariah Penny, then to Smart Eſq; and Mr. Brown. This laſt ſold all his intereſt in them to John Henniker Eſq; who lives here in a good Houſe, which he purchaſed of Mrs. Crop, daughter of Mr. Benjamin Tudman: whoſe mother married to her ſecond huſband Sir John Blount Bart. one of the South-Sea Directors in 1720. John Henniker Eſq; ſerved the office of High-Sheriff for this County in 1758, and is one of the Burgeſſes in the preſent Parliament for Sudbury. He hath two ſons, John; and Major; and one daughter, Ann-Elizabeth; by his wife Ann, the eldeſt of the two daughters of Sir John Major, of Worlingworth-hall in Suffolk, member of parliament for Scarborough; to whom the King granted, 8 July 1765, the dignity of a Baronet, and to the heirs male of his body lawfully begotten; and, in default of ſuch iſſue, to his ſon-in-law John Henniker Eſq; and the heirs male of his body lawfully begotten. Beſides the eſtates here and at Eaſtham, Mr. Henniker has other conſiderable eſtates in this county [K]. His father was an eminent Merchant in London, and dying in 1749, was buried at Weſt-ham. The Family is originally of Kent.

The Maner of PLAYZ.

Took its name from Hugh de Playz, who married Philippa, third ſiſter and coheir of the laſt Richard de Montfichet: And Plaiſtow is moſt probably derived from the ſame original.

The manſion-houſe is about half a mile eaſt north-eaſt from the Church.

After the ſuppreſſion of Stratford-Abbey, to which this Maner belonged, it was granted by K. Edward VI. in 1553, with the maner of EAST-WEST-HAM, to Sir Roger Cholmley, and his heirs; to hold of the King in ca. by the 40th part of a knight's-fee (q). His coheirs, Elizabeth, wife of Chriſtopher Kenne Eſq; and John Ruſſell Eſq; enjoyed it after him (r).

Roger Beckwith, who dyed 5 Septemb. 1586. held a moiety and purparty of this maner of Playes. His ſiſters and coheirs were, Frances, wife of George Harvey, and Henry Slingſby (s), [ſee under Eaſt-Ham.] From the Family of Carew, alias Harvey, Mildmay, of Marks, it paſſed to the Smyth Family of Upton, together with the Maner of Eaſt-ham-Burnels, and that of

WESTHAM-BURNELS

Of which I proceed to give ſome account.

It took the additional diſtinction of Burnel, from the Burnels mentioned under the foregoing pariſh of Eaſt-Ham.

From them it paſſed to Handlo; Lovel; Hungerford; Beckwith; Harvey, and Mildmay, of Marks.

Carew Mildmay Eſq; ſold this maner, with thoſe of Playz, and Eaſt-Ham Burnels, to

Henry Edwards Eſq; who ſold them again to John Gore Eſq; by whom they were conveyed to

Sir John Blount Bart. one of the South-ſea Directors. Being ſeized by the South-ſea Company, this was purchaſed by Sir Robert Smyth of Upton in this pariſh, Bart. who thereby became poſſeſſed of the Maners of Eaſt-ham Burnels, Weſt-ham Burnels, Eaſt Weſt Ham, and Playz. From him they deſcended to his heirs and ſucceſſors, mentioned under Eaſt-Ham.

But a moiety of them belongs to Stephen Comyns Eſq;

The Maner of BRETTS.

We hear nothing of this maner till the reign of K. Edward IV. Then John Ferrers Eſq; who dyed 5 May 1478, held the maner of Brettys in Eaſthamme. The reverſion of it was in Edward Earl of Warwick, heir of George Plantagenet, late Duke of Clarence (t). But the ſaid Edward being executed for treaſon, 28 Nov. 1499, all his eſtates became forfeited to the Crown.

In 1519 K. Henry VIII. ſettled this maner on his Queen, Catharine of Arragon (u).

On the 8th of May 1576, Qu. Elizabeth granted it to Peter Gray, and Edward Gray.——The ſame year, ſhe granted it to Sir Thomas Henneage (w). But, 10 June 1583, he obtained a licenſe to alienate this maner with appertenances, and 6 meſſuages, 6 tofts, 6 gardens, 60 acres of arable, 100 of meadow, 100 of marſh, and 40s. rent to

Roger Townſhend Eſq; who, 2 March following, ſold them again to

Edward de Vere, Earl of Oxford (x). He diſperſed and waſted the beſt part of his noble

His widow, in order to repurchaſe Hedingham-caſtle, the ancient ſeat of the De Vere Family, obtained an Act of parliament in 1609, to ſell this maner of Bretts, and farm at Plaiſtow, about 200 l. a year.

Henry Woollaſton dyed 22 Novemb. 1619, poſſeſſed of them; leaving —— Henry, his ſon and heir aged 30 years (z).

This eſtate belongs now to Francis Beauchamp Eſq; of Cornwal.

The reputed Maner of Chabhams, or Cobhams,

Seems to be derived both from Peverell's and Gernon's Maners.

Sir Adam Fraunceys who dyed in 1417, held the maner of Chabhams of Hugh Burnel, and of the Abbot of Stratford; —— Agnes, wife of Sir William Porter, and Elizabeth, wife of Thomas Charleton, were his daughters and coheirs (a) Margaret his widow, which had the third part of this maner in dower, dyed in 1444 (b).

Agnes, wife of Sir William Porter, held the ſame till her deceaſe in 1461.

Sir Thomas Charleton, her ſiſter Elizabeth's ſon, was her heir (c). He not only poſſeſſed this eſtate, but alſo Rokeholt-hall, and lands in Little Badow, and Writtle. [See in the other volume, p. 25 and 66.] He dyed in 1465. His ſon —— Sir Richard Charleton, was then 15 years old (d). He being attainted for high-treaſon, on account of being one of K. Richard the Third's adherents, and his eſtates thereupon becoming forfeited to the crown, K. Henry VII. granted them, 11 March, 1487, to

Sir John Ryſley: who dying without iſſue, 13 March 1512, they ſeem to have eſcheated again to the Crown (e). On the 28th of February 1513, K. Henry VIII. granted them to

William Compton Eſq; and the heirs male of his body (f). He dyed 30 June 1528, being then a knight: his ſon —— Peter Compton was but 7 years old (g). Thoſe greedy hunters after concealed lands, Tipper and Dawe, procured a grant of them in 1589. And, 31 Janu. 1596, Qu. Elizabeth granted the reverſion of this to

Thomas Spencer, and Robert Atkinſon (h). They had licenſe, 2 March following, to alienate this maner, and 10 meſſuages, 6 tofts, 10 gardens, 100 acres of arable, 100 of meadow, 100 of paſture, 2 of wood, 20 of furze and heath, and 3 l. rent to Richard Wiſeman, and his heirs (i). He dyed 11 November 1618, poſſeſſed of the maner of Cobhams, alias Chobhams, or Chebhams; —— Sir Robert his ſon and heir, was thirty years old. [See in the other volume, p. 479.] It belonged afterwards to Mr. Hyatt; and now to —— Mrs. Jane Hyatt. This maner pays a fee-farm rent to the maner of Weſt-ham.

The manſion houſe of Chobhams is on the left ſide of the road leading from Stratford to Low Leyton; about a mile north-weſt from this Church.

Stratford, i. e. the Street at the Ford, is a very large and conſiderable Hamlet in this Pariſh. 'Tis diſtinguiſh'd by the name of Stratford Langthorn, or Langton [L], from the other adjoining Stratford at Bow, or Bogh, lying on the weſt ſide of Bow-bridge, and in the county Middleſex.

Plaistow Hamlet lies ſouth of the Church: And Upton, north of the ſame.

Maryland Point is a cluſter of Houſes near Stratford: The firſt of them were erected by a Merchant, who had got a fortune in that Colony, from whence they took their name.

Stratford-Abbey.

The ſite and remains of this once conſiderable Monaſtery are about half a mile ſouth ſouth-weſt from this Church.

It was founded either in the year 1134, or 1135 [M], by William de Montfichet, for Monks of the Ciſtertian order, and dedicated to the Virgin Mary, and All Saints.

He endowed it with all his Lordſhip here, as juſt mentioned under the maner of Weſt-ham; and alſo with eleven acres of meadow, and two mills: and his wood of Bocherſt in Woodford; and the tithe of his panage (k). The demeſnes of the Abbey in this pariſh comprehended near 1500 acres. And amongſt them was Sudbury, given them by K. John (l). The maners of Weſt-ham, Wood Grange, Eaſt-Weſt-ham, and Playz, were theirs. They had alſo the Maners of Eaſt-ham; of Beringers, and Rye-houſe, in Little Ilford and Berking; of Low-Leyton; of Bumpſted in Aveley and Upminſter; of Great Burghſted, Challeweden, Whites, and Gurneys; of Buckwins, in Butteſbury; of Cowbridge, in Mountney's ing; of Calircot's, or Caldecots, in South-Weald; of Brygginge, in Chaldwell. And 2 tenements called Oſe, and Warrewyke in Coringham; Clerkynwyke, or the Abbots marſh, in Hadleigh caſtle; Grangewyke marſh, in Little Thurrock; lands in Chigwell, Eaſt and Weſt Tilbury, &c. rectories, and advowſons of the vicarages of Weſt-ham, of Great Burghſted, of Layton, and of Great Mapleſted, in this county.—Some houſes in Clement's-Lane, and elſewhere, in London [O].——The maner of Lewiſham, and a meſſuage and lands at Wolwich in Kent.——In the foreſt of Melkeſham in Wiltſhire, 472 acres.—Common of paſture in Wanſted.—Free-warren in moſt of the pariſhes above-mentioned, and in Woodford, Dunton, Eſt-Horndon, &c. [P]. A market, and two fairs, at Billerica (m).—Paſture for 800 ſheep; and Liberties, in Windſor-foreſt (n).

This Houſe being ſituated low amongſt the marſhes, was liable at firſt to frequent inundations, ſo that the monks were obliged to remove to a cell of theirs at Great Burghſted; where they continued till K. Richard, the Second, we ſuppoſe, cauſed their damages to be repaired, and brought them back to Stratford [Q].

The Abbot had ſummons to Parliament in 1307 (o).

At the ſuppreſſion, this Abbey was valued at 511l. 16s. 3d. per ann. according to Dugdale, and at 573l. 15s. 6d. ob. q. according to Speed. To whom the ſeveral revenues belonging to it were granted, is ſhewn under the reſpective pariſhes where they lay.

As to the Abbey itſelf, K. Henry VIII. in 1538, gave the houſe and ſite of this monaſtery, with the church, belfrey, and church-yard, and ſeveral parcels of ground thereto belonging, and Richard's Chapel, now unknown [R], to Peter Mewtas, or Meautis, Eſq; and Joane his wife, and their heirs male (p). This Peter's grandfather was John Meautis, a native of Normandy; who came into England with K. Henry VII. and was made by him his ſecretary for the French tongue.——Thomas Meautis his ſon and heir had, by Elizabeth his wife, daughter of . . . Foxley, of Northamptonſhire——Peter Meautis of Weſtham Eſq; juſt now mentioned; He was Embaſſador from K. Henry VIII. to the court of France, and knighted. At the time of his death, which happened at Dieppe, 8 September 1562, he held the houſe and ſite of this monaſtery, ten meſſuages, ten tofts, four water mills, ten gardens, 300 acres of arable, 200 of meadow, 100 of paſture, 50 of wood, 300 of marſh, 40 called red ground, wet ground, and ozier-hopps, one fiſhery from the mouth of the river Lee, and 40s. rent. Part of the wall, which keeps out the Thames, is ſtill called Meautys his Wall. He left two ſons, Henry and Hercules, and one daughter, Frances, wife of Henry Howard, Viſcount Bindon. . . . Hercules, the ſecond ſon, married Philippa daughter of Richard Cook of Gidding-hall Eſq; by whom he had Thomas; Frances, wife of . . . Shute; and Jane, married, firſt, to William Cornwallis, anceſtor of the preſent Earl Cornwallis, afterwards to Sir Nathaniel Bacon of Culford, K. B. Thomas, the ſon, afterwards knighted, was ſecretary to Francis Bacon Lord Verulam, and ſeated at Gorhambury. He married Anne, eldeſt daughter of Sir Nathaniel Bacon, juſt now mentioned, remarried to Sir Harbottle Grimſton Bart.

Henry Meautis Eſq; of Weſt-ham, the elder brother of Hercules, married Anne, daughter of John Jermy of Suffolk Eſq; and had by her Thomas, Henry, Peter; and Margaret.——Thomas, the eldeſt ſon, by Elizabeth his wife, daughter of Sir Henry Conyngſby of North-Mims, had five ſons, and three daughters.——Henry Meautis Eſq; the eldeſt ſon, married Elizabeth daughter of Sir William Glover, and had by her——Henry, and Anne [S].

Either this laſt Henry, or his father, ſold the ſite of the Abbey, with appertenances, to

John Nutts Eſq; It belonged afterwards to Peter Knight Eſq; and now to ——Newman Knight, and others; being divided among ſeveral proprietors.

Some of the conſiderable Privileges belonging to the Abbey, were obtained, or purchaſed, by Sir Thomas Cambell, of Clay-hall in Berking. His deſcendent, Sir Harry Cambell, procured a confirmation of them, by an Inſpeximus of K. William and Qu. Mary, 15 Nov. 1689. By which he was to enjoy the ſame liberties, cuſtoms, franchiſes, profits, emoluments, &c. as any Abbot of Stratford Langthorn at any time enjoyed. Namely; to take in Windſor-foreſt thorns, or bruſh-wood, where moſt convenient, and as much as would be neceſſary for the uſe of their Houſe [T]; To cut down, and

A Mill here, called St. Thomas's Mill, belonged to the Hoſpital of St. Thomas of Acons in London, from whence it took its name.

An Eſtate at Plaiſtow, of about 150 l. a year, belongs to an Hoſpital at Egham in Surrey; which, as well as a School there, were founded by Henry Strode of London, merchant. The Coopers company are truſtees.

In the extremities of this Pariſh is the famous Bow-Bridge, over the river Ley which divides this County from Middleſex. It received the name of Bow, or arched, Bridge, becauſe it was the firſt arched Stone Bridge, at leaſt in this County.

The occaſion of its being built is thus related. The ancient Road from this County to London was by Old Ford; that is, through the Ford there, without a Bridge. But that paſſage being difficult and dangerous; and many perſons loſing their lives, or being thoroughly wetted: which happened to be the caſe of Maud, Queen conſort of K. Henry I: ſhe turned the Road from Old Ford to the place where it now is, between Stratford-Bow and Weſt-Ham; and cauſed the Bridges and Cauſeways to be built and made at her own charge. And for the keeping of them in repair, ſhe gave to the Abbeſs of Berking certain Maners, and a mill called Wiggon-mill. Theſe maners and mill the Abbot of Stratford purchaſed afterwards of the Abbeſs of Berking, taking upon himſelf, in conſideration of them, the repairs and maintenance of the Bridges, and Cauſeway [W]. But neglecting duly to keep them up, and wanting to throw the charge again upon the Abbeſs of Berking; after a Tryal between them, in February 1315, the Abbot of Stratford agreed, for himſelf and ſucceſſors, to build, make, repair, and ſuſtain, the ſaid Bridges and Cauſeways for ever. And for this agreement the Abbeſs gave the Abbot 200 l. in ſilver [X].

The Tenants of the Abbey's Lands ſeemed, in the laſt century, to have been unwilling to ſtand to this agreement. For, in 1691, an information was brought in the King's bench againſt Buckeridge, and others, for not repairing of an Highway ratione Tenuræ, [by reaſon of their holding, or tenure] between Stratford and Bow. It was tried at the Bar by an Eſſex Jury. The evidence for the King was, that Maud the Empreſs gave certain lands to the Abbeſs of Barking to repair this way: that the Abbeſs ſold theſe lands to the Abbot of Stratford, who by the conſent of his Convent charged all his lands for repair of the high way, and thus it ſtood at the Diſſolution. Then all the lands of the Abbot of Stratford being veſted in the Crown, were granted

[W] The account given by J. Stow, is as follows. "This Matilde, when ſhe ſaw the way to be dangerous for them that travailed by the Old Foord over the river of Lue (for ſhe herſelfe had been well waſhed in the water) cauſed 2 ſtone bridges to be builded. Of the which, one was ſituated over Lue at the head of the towne of Stratford, now called Bow, becauſe the Bridge was arched like a Bow, a rare piece of work, for before the time the like had never beene ſeen in England. The other over the little brooke commonly called Chavelſebridge. She made the Kings high way of gravell betweene the two Bridges."——Then he gives an account of her giving the maners and mill above-mentioned, and of the Abbot of Stratford's taking upon himſelf, in conſideration of them, the repairs of the Bridges and cauſeway. . . . "At length he laid the charge upon one Hugh Pratt, who lived near the Bridges and cauſeway, allowing him certain loaves of bread daily. And by the alms of paſſengers, he kept them in due repair; as did his ſon William after him: who, by the aſſiſtance of Robert Paſſelewe, Ch. Juſtice in the time of K. Henry III, obtained theſe tolls; of every cart carrying corn, wood, coal, &c. one penny; of one carrying taſel, two pence; and of one carrying a dead Jew, eight pence: and put up a bar with locks on Lockkebreggs. But Philip Baſſet, and the Abbot of Waltham, having broke the Bar rather than pay the toll, the Bridges and cauſeway remained unrepaired. In the mean time, Eleanor Queen of K. Henry III. cauſed them to be mended at her own charge, by William the keeper of her Chapel; and William de Carleton kept them afterwards in repair, till the agreement between the Abbeſs and Abbot above mentioned.——Stow's Annals, ed. 1631. p. 139.——Thoſe whom curioſity or neceſſity may induce to look further into this affair, will be pleaſed to conſult, Clauſ. 35. & 37 Hen. The CHURCH, dedicated to All-Saints, is large; both Church and Chancel having north and ſouth aiſles; all tyled. A ſquare Tower at the weſt end contains 6 Bells.

This Church was given to the Abbey of Stratford, by Gilbert de Montfichet, ſon of the Founder (q). Afterwards, the Rectory, or great Tithes, were appropriated to this Monaſtery, and a Vicarage ordained and endowed which continued in their gift till the diſſolution.

But, before that, even the ſmall portion belonging to the Vicar, was extorted from him by the Monks, after a tedious ſuit, in the years 1514, 1515, 1516, firſt in the Archbiſhop of Canterbury's court, and afterwards at the Court of Rome: and he was forced to ſit down contented with a penſion of 39 l. 13 s. 8 d. which did not increaſe in its value as the Tithes did.

All the Tithes becoming thus veſted in the Abbey, they came to the Crown upon the ſurrender of this Houſe, 18 March 1538. And have been leaſed out from time to time. At preſent a moiety of them is held of the Crown, by the heirs of the late James Smith Eſq; and the other moiety by Miſs Pickering. [See a little above.]

The Vicar hath very little more, certain, than the ſaid penſion of 39 l. 13 s. 8 d. paid out of the Exchequer: but the Pariſh being very populous, the contributions, and other accidental profits, render this a conſiderable living. It is in the King's gift.

5 LEYTON.

This pariſh ſtands by the river Ley, called in Saxon Lyȝan, and Lyȝean, from which and the other Saxon word ꞇun, denoting a town, or village, the name ſeems to be formed; qu. The Town on the river Ley. Unleſs it ſhould be derived from the Britiſh word Lhuch, a lake: for the low lands, or marſhes, between this place and the Thames, formed a great Lake, till the water was partly drained, and diverted into ſeveral channels, by K. Alfred, in the year 896 (r).

The name of this Pariſh is otherwiſe written in records, Leituna, Leintuna, Lochetun, Layghton, Layton, Leighton, Leyton.

That part which is Loweſt, near the meadows, is called Low Leyton; and the upper part on the Road to Epping &c. Leyton-ſtone, moſt probably from one of the Roman milliary ſtones placed there.

Here ſeems to have been a Roman Villa, or ſome Summer Camp, or Station. For between the maner Houſe of Leyton, and the Canal, where the Garden now is, in digging were found old foundations, with a great many Roman Bricks intermixed with others, and ſeveral Medals. And in enlarging the horſe-pond, huge foundations were diſcovered ſix foot under ground; and a large arched Gate with mouldings, 9 or 10 feet high, and 5 or 6 broad, the top of which was alſo ſix foot under ground, The Walls were four foot thick, or more.

A very large Urn, with aſhes and bones, was taken up in the Church-yard, pretty deep in making a grave. Several Urns, with aſhes in them, have been alſo found on the ſouth ſide of Blind lane, near Rokholts, in digging for gravel.

But this place is not the ancient ſtation called Durolitum, or rather Duroſitum (s).

In Edward the Confeſſor's reign, the ſeveral owners of the lands in this pariſh, were Harold, Toſti, Suene Suart, Uluric, Alſi, one Freeman, and four Sochmen. At the time of the Survey, they were holden by Robert ſon of Corbutio; the Abbot of Weſtminſter; Peter de Valoines; Hugh de Montfort; and Robert Gernon [Z].

As there were then, ſo there continued to be three Maners in this pariſh; Namely, 1. The maner of Leyton. 2.—that of Marks. 3. The maner of Ruckholt, or Rokholt.

1. The Maner of LEYTON

belonged to Stratford-Abbey; but by whom given doth not appear. Moſt probably it was by the heirs of Robert ſon of Corbutio, or Hugh de Montfort [A].

That Convent had alſo other benefactions in this pariſh; For, by licenſe from K. Edward III. in 1331, Edmund Baſſet and Roger Samekyne of Hatfield, gave one meſſuage, 40 acres of arable, 21 of meadow, 25 of paſture, 40 of heath, in Leyton, to the Prior and Convent of Stratford, and their ſucceſſors for ever, holden of Hugh de Nevill, by the ſervice of the fourth part of a knight's-fee, and yearly payment to him of ſix pence for one pair of gilt ſpurs; and to the Abbeſs of Barking 2 s. and 2 d. of rent ſeck (t) [B].

At the time of the ſuppreſſion of Monaſteries, the rents of aſſiſe of the free and cuſtomary tenants amounted to 6 l. 6 s. 0 d. $\frac{3}{4}$. per annum. The maner with all the demeſnes and lands thereto belonging, and the Rectory and Tithes, were let for 27 l. 15 s. 0 d. Three crofts of 20 acres, called Cryſtmas breche, lett for 4 s. The perquiſites of Courts, one year with another, were 0 l. 13 s. 4 d.

On the 9th of June 1545, K. Henry VIII. granted this Maner, and the Rectory and Church, of Leyton, with Criſtmas breche, to Thomas Lord Wriotheſly Lord Chancellor of England (u). The next day he had licence to alienate it, and the day after ſold it, to (w)

Sir Ralph Warren, Lord Mayor of London, who dyed poſſeſſed of it, and other eſtates [C], 11 July 1553; leaving——Richard, his ſon and heir, eleven years old (x). He departed this life 25 March 1597, and was ſucceeded by, his ſiſter the lady Joanna's ſon and heir, Oliver Cromwell of Hinchingbrooke Eſq; then 33 years old (y). He had licenſe, 4 December 1599, to alienate this maner, and 24 meſſuages, 20 gardens, 20 orchards, 200 acres of arable, 260 of meadow, 420 of paſture, 40 of wood, 300 of heath and furze, to.

Edward Rider (z). This Edward held the maner, and rectory, of Layton, alias Lowe Layton, at the time of his deceaſe 11 July 1608. His ſon and heir——Edward was then 13 years old (a). From him it came to——Sir William Rider, Kt. Lord Mayor of London in 1600, who built the Upper Chancel. Sir William dyed 30 Auguſt, 1611, and left two daughters coheirs; Mary, wife of Sir Tho. Lake, Kt. and Suſan, wife of Sir Tho. Cæſar, Kt. (b) [D].

The 12th of January 1649 George Swanley captain of a ſhip, Bernard Oſtler, and Robert Abbot became joint purchaſers of this Maner and Rectory.

John Smith, of London, merchant, bought Abbot's third part, and by will gave it to the Corporation of Lincoln, as truſtees for a charity to the Poor of Bourn in that county; Oſtler's third part came to Charles Hopton, who 8 Febr. 1709, ſold it to David Ganſel Eſq; Captain Swanley's part, after the death of his ſons William, George, Thomas, John, Joſeph, and of his daughters Mary and Barbara, was veſted in Martha lady Clutterbuck, Sarah wife of——Lymbry, and Mary of John Hanſon.

John Chinnal bought Sarah Lymbry's part, 24 March 1695; Oliver Martin bought lady Clutterbuck's ſhare, 5 Aug. 1696, and ſold it to Chinnal, 4 May 1697; Chinnal at the ſame time purchaſed Hanſon's third part. John Chinnal ſold all theſe parts to David Ganſel Eſq; June 19, 1703, who continued Lord of the Maner, and Patron of the Vicarage, till his death in February, 1753, when they deſcended to his ſon—— William Ganſel Eſq; now a Major general.

The maner-houſe was purchaſed of Mr. Ganſel, together with a padock and ſome land, by John Strange Eſq; Sollicitor General, afterwards knighted, and made Maſter of the Rolls; who improved that delightful ſeat with additional buildings.

The part of this pariſh that belonged to Peter de Valoines at the time of the Survey, was given by his great grandaughter Gunnora to the Nunnery of Haliwell in Middleſex; and confirmed to that Houſe by K. Richard the Firſt's Charter [E]. After the diſſolution, K. Henry VIII, in 1540, granted theſe lands, called Croft, Howfield, Showfield, Les Harpe, and Haliwell, late belonging to Haliwell Priory, to Morgan Philips alias Wolfe (c). His ſon——Julinus Morgan, alias Wolfe, dyed 27 Octob. 1557.——Henry was his ſon and heir (d). This eſtate, we ſuppoſe, is now incorporated with others in this pariſh.

As is alſo another, that belonged to the Priory of Holy Trinity in London; and was confirm'd to them by K. Henry the Third's charter [F].

The Maner of MARKS.

There are many eſtates named Marks, probably from Henry de Merk, who was lord of Berdfeld, Shortgrave, and Latton, in the time of K. Henry III. The Maner-houſe here, called Marks-Hall, is an old Building, now only a farm houſe.

This eſtate belonged to the Priory of St. Helen's, as appears from the Book of Alienations taken 36 Hen. VIII; 'Marks Maner and meſſ.' 'called le Marke with appert.' in the pariſhes of 'Laiton and Waltham-ſtow, belonging to the

He dyed 21 February 1616-7, poſſeſſed of the maner, farm, lands, &c. called Le Marke in Leyton, and Walthamſtowe. His ſon and heir——Sir James Altham Kt. was then 29 years old (g). The eldeſt was married to Charles Tryon Eſq; and the youngeſt to John Vaughan, Earl of Carberry.

The maner of Marks was afterwards in David Ganſel; and now in——William Ganſel Eſq;

The Maner of ROKHOLT, took that name from the two Saxon words, hꞃoc, holꞇ, i. e. Rook-wood.

The ſite of the manſion houſe is near a mile ſouth from this Church.

The ancienteſt owners of this maner upon record, after the ſurvey, were the Families of Bumpſted, and Fraunceys.

William, ſon of Robert de Bumſted Steple, recognized a deed, wherein he had granted his Maner, with the appertenances in Leighton, called Rocholte-hall, to Sir Richard de la Vache, about the year 1284 (k).

In 1360, Philip, ſon and heir of Robert Bumſtede, of Stoke, releaſed to Adam Franceys, citizen of London, and Agnes his wife, and their ſons Robert and Adam, his right in this maner of Rokholt-hall (l).——Sir Adam Franceys, who dyed in 1417, held the maner of Rokholt-hall of Earl Warren. Agnes wife of Sir William Porter, and Elizabeth, wife of Thomas Charlton, were his daughters and co-heirs [G].——Margaret his wife, held this maner in dowry, till her deceaſe in 1444. As did

Agnes, wife of Sir William Porter. She dying in 1461, without iſſue, was ſucceded by her ſiſter Elizabeth's ſon,

Sir Thomas Charlton. He held alſo this maner of Earl Warren, and dyed in 1465. His ſon —— Sir Richard Charlton was attainted of high Treaſon, as mentioned above under Chobhams in Weſt-Ham (m). Upon that attainder his eſtates coming to the Crown, K. Henry VII, on the 11th of March 1487, granted this maner to Sir John Ryſley. He dyed without iſſue 13 March, 1512 (n).

And this maner thereupon reverting to the Crown, K. Henry VIII. 28 Febr. 1513, gave it to

William Compton Eſq; afterwards knighted. Upon his deceaſe 30 June 1528, it came to his ſon—Peter Compton Eſq; then but 7 years old (o). He was in wardſhip to Cardinal Wolſey, and dyed 30 Janu. 1543, before he came of age (p). His grandſon——William Compton Eſq; (afterwards ſummoned to Parliament) ſold, in 1592, this maner of Ruckehold, alias Ruckeholt, and 7 cottages, 1 dove-houſe, 7 gardens, 150 acres of arable, 44 of meadow, 24 of paſture, 30 of wood, and 9s. rent, in Laiton and Stratford Langthorn, to

Henry Parvis, or Parviſh, Gent (q); who dyed poſſeſſed of it 4 Auguſt 1593——He was a merchant that traded to Italy. By his wife, Elizabeth Colſton, he left his ſon and heir——Gabriel (r), and other children. After his deceaſe, his widow was remarried to

Sir Michael Hickes, Secretary to the great Sir William Cecil, Lord Burghley [H], who ſtood godfather to his eldeſt ſon, and named him William after his own name: Beſides him they had another ſon named Michael, and a daughter, Elizabeth, married to Sir William Armine of Oſgodby Bart. Sir Michael having purchaſed Rokholts of one of Henry Parvis's ſons, made it the place of his reſidence, and dyed there 5 Auguſt 1612, aged 69. His widow dyed in February 1634, and they were both buried in the Chancel of this Church.——William Hickes Eſq; of Beverſton, eldeſt ſon and heir of Sir Michael, was created a Baronet 21 July 1619. Afterwards he was appointed Lieutenant of the Foreſt of Waltham, one of the Deputy Lieu-

He was ſucceeded by his eldeſt ſon——Sir William, who had been knighted by King Charles II, when he came to Ruckolds, and was entertained there at dinner after hunting in the foreſt, and became Baronet on his father's death. He married Marthagnetes, daughter of Sir Harry Coningſby of North-myms in Hertfordſhire Kt. of the antient family of Coningſby, in the county of Hereford, by whom he had thirteen children; of which only Harry, Charles, and Margaret arrived to maturity. It was purchaſed of him by the Right Honorable Earl Tilney, for his eldeſt ſon Lord Caſtlemain, upon whoſe death it came to his next brother, the preſent Earl Tilney. It was a beautiful ſeat, ſtanding near the place where the old houſe was, which Mr. Parvis abovementioned built: But it hath been taken down ſome years.

Edward-Rowe Mores; Peregrine Bertie; and Edward Hillerſden Eſqres; Richard Trowbridge; Robert Willis; Samuel Guillim; Robert Petty; Iſrael Woollaſton; John Cannick; Edward Wright &c. have alſo ſome lands here.

In this Village, which is a pretty retiring place, from London, are, and have been, ſeveral fine Houſes. The moſt elegant, with beautiful gardens, &c. was that of the late Sir Fiſher Tench. His father Nathanael Tench Eſq; had 8 ſons, and 3 daughters; and dying 2 April 1710, in the 79th year of his age, was buried here. Fiſher, his only ſurviving ſon, was Sheriff of this County in 1712; created a Baronet, 8 Auguſt 1715, and dyed 31 October 1736, aged 63. By Elizabeth his wife, daughter of Robert Bird Eſq; he had 5 ſons, and 4 daughters. Sir Nathanael, his eldeſt ſon, dyed 2 June 1737, aged 40.——Jane, Sir Fiſher's only daughter and heir, was married to Adam Sowerſby of Cheſterfield in Derbyſhire Eſq; he dyed 5 June 1751, and ſhe 18 May 1752.

The Foreſt-houſe, anciently belonging to the Abbot of Waltham, is finely ſituated.

Charities.

This Pariſh receives twenty ſhillings yearly, part of Mr. Robert Rampſton's gift abovementioned, p. 15. and in the other Volume, p. 464.

Henry Archer gave by will in 1580, twenty ſhillings a year for ever, to ſuch poor people as ſhould be at the church in divine ſervice on Whit-Sunday morning.

John Smith, late of this pariſh merchant, in 1656 founded an Alms-houſe adjoyning to the Church-yard, containing 8 rooms for as many poor people; and endowed it with 20 l. per annum for ever, that each of the ſaid poor people ſhould receive 50 s. a piece yearly, to be paid them quarterly by the truſtees.

Sir William Hickes gave, in 1702, 50 l. to the Poor. His widow added to that, in 1707, 20 l. on condition the whole ſum of 70 l. ſhould be applied to the purchaſe of land; the rent whereof ſhould be diſtributed in bread yearly to the poor.

The CHURCH, dedicated to the Virgin Mary, conſiſts of a body, and of north and ſouth aiſles, adjoyning to both; all tyled. The body of the Church being very old and ruinous was rebuilt in 1658 or 1659; and the upper or north aiſle then added. The ſteeple was built about the ſame time with ſtone and brick: In it are 3 Bells. The upper Chancel was built, about 1610, by Sir William Rider; and repaired in 1679, through the care, and partly at the charge, of the Rev. Mr. Strype.

This Church was given to the Abbey of Stratford-Langthorn, by Giles de Montfichet, and confirmed thereto by K. Henry II. (s) [K]. The Rectory was afterwards appropriated to that Convent, and a Vicarage ordained and endowed, of which the Abbot and Monks were patrons till their ſuppreſſion. In 1545, both Rectory, and Advowſon of the Vicarage, were granted to the Lord Chancellor Wriotheſly, with the maner of Leyton; from whom they paſſed to Sir Ralph Warren, and the reſt, as mentioned above under the maner of Leyton [L].

The Vicarage houſe was rebuilt by the late Mr. John Strype, Miniſter of this pariſh, about the year 1677, with 140 l. 10 s. 0 d. of his own money, joined to the aſſiſtance and contributions of the pariſhioners. He was elected Preacher, or Curate, here in 1669, and continued ſo, without inſtitution or induction, above 68 years, that is till his deceaſe 13 December 1737 at the age of 94. This good man's learning and induſtry were very remarkable, and well known, he having publiſhed thirteen Volumes in folio, and three Volumes in octavo, of Hiſtory; wherein he was greatly aſſiſted by Sir Michael Hickes's MSS. preſerved at Rokholts. He publiſhed alſo ſome other things in Divinity (t).

A penſion of 3 l. is paid out of the maner of Low-Leyton to the Vicar; one pound of which he receives upon account of the poor of Lincoln, or Bourn, above-mentioned.

6. LITTLE ILFORD, lies ſouth ſouth-weſt of Great Ilford, between it, the two Hams, and Wanſted; &c. having on the eaſt the river Rodon.

In Edward the Confeſſor's reign it belonged to two Freemen; but at the time of the ſurvey it was held by Goſcelin Loremar [M].

In 1210 and 1211, Haluit de Sifrewaſt held Ylleford, for one knight's fee (u).

In 1234, this maner of Eleford, with other lands, and a market, were granted to Richard de Grey (w).

Afterwards it ſeems to have been granted to Stratford-Abbey, but by whom we cannot find: And was divided into the Maners of—Little Ilford—Beringers—and Rye-houſe.

About the time of the diſſolution of the Monaſteries, the Farm of the Maner of Little Ilford and Ray-houſe, was 17 l. 10 s. 8 d. The rent of aſſiſe of the maner of Beringers in Berking, 3 l. 17 s. 3 d. The rent of aſſiſe of the maner of Little Ilford, 1 l. 7 s. 6 d. And rent in Reyhouſe, 11 s. 7 d. (x).

The 11th of February 1540, K. Henry VIII. granted the premiſſes to Morgan Philips, alias Wolfe, to hold of the King in capite by the 20th part of a knight's fee (y).—— Julinus Morgan, alias Wolfe, who dyed 27 October 1557, held the maner of Beringers, and Ilford Parva, and the maner of Ray-houſe, late belonging to Stratford-Abbey; and the advowſon of this Church.——Henry, his ſon and heir, was but 2 years and 11 months old (z).——Walter Morgan had licenſe 3 Octob. 1570 to alienate the maner of Rayhouſe, with appertenances, to Ralph Bedwolfe, and others (a). This maner, and 2 tofts, 2 gardens, 25 acres of arable, 40 of meadow, 20 of paſture, 50 of furze and heath, and 40 s. rent, belonged in 1581 to

John Pelkington Gent. and Mildred his wife, who, by licenſe, dated 2 Octob. that year, ſold to——Nicolas Fuller; and Fuller, by licenſe dated 2 April 1582, to——Thomas Pearſon: this laſt, by licenſe dated 7 June 1583, alienated it to

Iſrael Amice, it containing 3 meſſuages, 2 tofts, 1 mill. 3 gardens, 40 acres of arable, 6 of wood, and common of paſture in Berking. [See in the other Volume, p. 334.] The ſaid Iſrael, and Thomaſine his wife, alienated it again, in 1594, to

Robert Cecil Eſq; and Thomas Owen, Serjeant at Law, and the heirs of Robert (b).

Some part of this eſtate was purchaſed of Edward Earl of Oxford, by Robert Earl of Leiceſter, who ſold it to Horace Palavicini Gent. He was afterwards knighted; and dyed 14 October, 1615.—— Tobias was his brother and heir, who held Cranbroke of the King, as of his maner of Barking, and Ray-houſe in capite by knight's ſervice (c). This eſtate hath belonged for ſome time to the Wight family, of Northamptonſhire.

ALDERSBROKE,

is another Maner in this pariſh, named probably from the Alder trees that grow there in great abundance. The manſion houſe ſtands low, on the right hand ſide of the road from Ilford to London. It hath a paddock; and was greatly improved by the late Mr. Lethieullier.

To whom this Maner anciently belonged we cannot find, or even gueſs, unleſs it was part of the demeſnes of Stratford Abbey in this pariſh.

It was in the poſſeſſion of K. Henry VIII, having been purchaſed for him by Cromwell of one Monoke: a family of which name was at Walthamſtow. Amongſt the purchaſes made by Thomas Cromwell for the King, a liſt of which is preſerved in the Treaſury of the Exchequer, Alderſbroke is mentioned as one, together with Hampton-court, St. James in the Field, Piſhobury, and Weſton in Hertfordſhire, Copt-hall, and lands of the Earl of Northumberland. For theſe it is not likely his Majeſty paid much money; moſt of them were Abbey-lands which Cromwell could pretty eaſily come at. Copt-hall in particular was given him by the Abbot of Waltham, in hopes by that ſacrifice to ſave the reſt of their poſſeſſions (d): and Woolſey's time was come to compound for Hampton-court, or any thing elſe.

Moſt probably it was granted by K. Henry VIII. to Sir John Heron, Treaſurer of his chamber: For, his ſon and heir Thomas Heron dyed at Alderbroke, 17 March 1517, and was buried in this church (e). Sir John himſelf dyed 8 July 1521, holding Rowley-meadow in this pariſh of the Abbey of Stratford; the maners of Higham Benſted in Waltham-ſtow, and of Batells

The latter having the misfortune to be attainted for treaſon, on account of his refuſing to acknowledge the King's Supremacy; this eſtate thereupon fell to the Crown [N].

K. Henry VIII. in 1535, granted to Antony Knevett, for his life, this maner of Alderſbrook, with a tenement thereto adjoyning called Draginsford and Naked-hall-grove, and Millfeld in Wanſted.

The ſame King, 26 April 1544, granted to Catharine Adington, widow, and her ſon Thomas, this maner, and meſſuage, of Alderſbrooke, and a cloſe of the ſame name, a meadow of 13 acres and 1 rood, 7 cloſes, and other parcels, in Little Ilford; the meſſuage called Draginsford, Hertfeild, 9 acres; and other fields in Wanſted (g). Thomas Adington, in 1553, conveyed the premiſſes to

Henry Earl of Pembroke: who, 18 October 1580, conveyed them to

Edward Bellingham Eſq; At the time of his deceaſe, 31 March 1605, he held of the King in capite, by knight's ſervice, this maner, or farm, of Alderſbrooke, with all the lands &c. thereto belonging, in Great and Little Ilford, and Wanſted: alſo the maner of Jenkin Maldon, and ſeveral eſtates in Suſſex. His ſon and heir was——Sir Edward Bellingham, then aged 29 years (i). He dyed 24 January 1636, and was ſucceeded in his eſtates, by

Cecily, his uncle Richard Bellingham's daughter, then wife of Thomas Weſt, Gent (k). Their ſon,——Henry Weſt, ſold it, 26 July 1655, to

Henry Oſbaſton, or Oſbaldeſton. He dyed 29 September 1669, and is buried in this Church. [See above under Berking.] His ſon——Francis Oſbaſton Eſq; [O] was High-Sheriff of this County in 1678, and dying 22 April in that year, aged 32, was buried in this Church.——Elizabeth, his widow and executrix, ſold this Maner and Eſtate to Sir John Lethieullier Kt. The Family of Lethieullier was originally of Brabant.

Peter le Thieullier married Agnes Covillet, in 1490; and had by her John, who married Jane Meſureur; His ſon John le Thieullier of Valenciennes, was burnt for Religion during the regency of the Duke of Alva. By his wife Catharine Goding he had John, who married Jane, daughter of John Trappe of Tournay. From Valenciennes he removed to Cologn, and dyed there in 1593, leaving John his ſon and heir, born in 1591; and Catharine, wife of Iſaac Deſbouverie. He came into England with his mother, in 1605, and lived at Great Ilford, till the confuſions and horror of our civil Wars, filled him with ſo much uneaſineſs, that he removed with his family to Amſterdam. After the Reſtoration, he returned, and ſettled at Lewiſham in Kent, where he dyed in 1679, aged 88 years. By Jane his wife, daughter of John La Forterie of London, merchant, which dyed in 1693, aged 82, he had 7 ſons, and 3 daughters. Sir Chriſtopher, the ſecond ſon, married Jane Ducane; was Sheriff of London in 1689; and dyed in 1690. Jane, the eldeſt daughter, born in 1629, was married to James Bourkin, of London, merchant.——John Lethieullier Eſq; the eldeſt ſon, born in 1633; the purchaſer of this eſtate, was Sheriff of London in 1674, and afterwards knighted. He departed this life in 1718, aged 86; having had by Anne his wife, daughter of Sir William Hooker Kt. to whom he was married in 1658, 3 ſons, and 4 daughters. William, the ſecond ſon, was married, firſt, to Mary daughter of Nicolas Manning a Hamburgh merchant; and afterwards, to Salkeld. Anne, one of the daughters, was married firſt to John Deleau, merchant, and next to Sir William Dodwell. The reſt of the daughters, and one of the ſons, dyed young, or unmarried.——John, the eldeſt ſon and heir, ſettled at Alderſbrook in 1693; took to wife, in 1695, Elizabeth, daughter of Sir Joſeph Smart of Havering Kt. [N] The ancient family of the Herons, or Heiruns, were in former ages the warlike poſſeſſors of very large revenues in the county of Northumberland; part of whoſe Barony were the caſtles of Foord, Swinburne, &c. William Heron was father of Sir John Heron of Hackney, who rebuilt that church, and is buried in it. Sir John's ſecond wife was, Anne, daughter of Griffith Read of Wales, related to K. Henry VII. by whom he had Sir Giles Heron; that married Cecilia, daughter of Sir Thomas More, Lord Chancellor. Mr. Harcourt, and Mr. Thomas Cockſedge, have alſo ſome eſtate in Little Ilford.

Mr. Hide gave twenty ſhillings a year to the poor of this pariſh.

The Church, dedicated to the Virgin Mary, is ſmall, of one pace with the Chancel, and the whole leaded. A wooden cupola, contains one Bell. Mr. Lethieullier erected a burial place, adjoyning to the Church.

This Rectory was in the gift of Stratford-Langthorn Abbey till the diſſolution, when it came to the Crown. In 1540, K. Henry VIII. granted the advowſon of it to Morgan Philips, alias Wolfe, with the maners of Little Ilford, Beringers, and Rayhouſe (l). Having been alienated in 1596, it was recovered in 1605, by Bernard Hide, and continued in that family till 1669. Then it came to Sir William Morley, Knight of the Bath (m): And hath been of late in the Wight Family, lords of the ſaid Maners of Little Ilford, &c.

This ſmall pariſh is rated to the land-tax at 361 l.

Thomas Newton, Rector of this pariſh from 1583 to 1607, was a man of conſiderable Learning for the time; and publiſhed J. Lelandi Encomia Trophæa &c. and ſeveral other pieces. He is interred in this Church (n).

7. WANSTED

joins to the two Ilfords, and is ſeparated from the pariſh of Berking by the river Rodon. Part of it ſtands high and very pleaſant, having a proſpect of the noble city of London.

The name ſeems to be formed from ſome of theſe Saxon words, ƿan, white, ƿanꞇ, a mole, ƿanᵹ, a field; and ꞅꞇeꝺe, place.

Here appears to have been a Roman Villa, or ſome little ſtation. For, in the year 1715, as the then Sir Richard Child's gardiners were digging holes, for planting an avenue of Trees in the Park, on the ſouth ſide of the lower part of the Gardens, they diſcovered a Teſſellated Roman pavement. The owner would not permit it to be quite laid open: But by the fragments that were thrown up, they obſerved, That it conſiſted of ſmall ſquare Teſſeræ of brick, of divers colours, ſome red, ſome white, black &c. from one inch to a quarter of an inch ſquare. Round it, there was a border about a foot broad, compoſed of red dies about three quarters of an inch ſquare; within which were ſeveral Ornaments, wove into wreaths, and in the middle, the figure of a Man riding, holding ſomething in his right hand. The Pavement was ſituated on a gentle gravelly aſcent towards the north; and, at a ſmall diſtance from the ſouth end of it, was a ſpring, or well, of fine Water, now abſorbed in a great pond. From this Well the ground roſe gently towards the ſouth, till it came to an exact level, which reaches a great way. On the very brink of this level, and about 300 yards directly ſouth from the foreſaid well and pavement, were the ruins of ſome brick foundations. Some years after, upon making further improvements, the workmen found many ſherds of broken pots, or fragments of Urns, of different kinds of earth, ſome brown, ſome white &c. but all of a coarſe clay; many pieces of bricks, which proved there had been a building there; and many calcined human bones, teeth &c. There was found here a ſilver medal; and a copper one of the Emperor Valens; and another of copper, generally eſteemed to be of the Conſtantine age.

Smart Lethieullier Eſq; thought, that this was the Mauſoleum of ſome private Family, whoſe Villa perhaps ſtood on the more elevated ground where Wanſtead now ſtands. What date to appropriate to theſe Urns is difficult. The general opinion is, That Burning human Bodies was left off ſoon after the time of the Antonines, and Sepulture introduced in its place. But this muſt be underſtood to extend to the time of thoſe Emperors who took the name of Antonini, and not be confined to the age of Marcus Aurelius Antoninus; ſince Anno 211, we read of the magnificent Burning of the Emperor Severus in this iſland: and Dr. Thomas Brown ſeems to be of opinion, not without good reaſon, that Burning was not totally laid aſide, eſpecially in the diſtant Provinces, till the full Eſtabliſhment of Chriſtianity amongſt them.

Waenſtede, with all its appertenances, was given by Alfric to St. Peter's Abbey at Weſtminſter; and the grant confirmed by K. Edward the Confeſſor (o).

How this eſtate came from St. Peter's-Abbey to the Church of St. Paul's London, does not appear; perhaps by exchange for another, or by grant of ſome ſucceſſor of the founder.

However, at the time of the Survey the Biſhop of London held it; and his under-tenant was Ralph ſon of Brien [R].

The

was many years holden of the Biſhop of London by the families of Hodeing otherwiſe Hodeng and Hoſdene [S], and Huntercombe: mentioned in the other Volume, p. 277.

In the reign of K. Henry III, Hugh de Hodeing, ſon of Ralph, had in Wanſted and Hamme 169 acres of arable, and 20 acres of meadow; &c. and feed for 200 ſheep in the Foreſt; paying 2 s. for ward to the caſtle of Stortford (p).

Alice, daughter and heireſs of this Sir Hugh de Hodeing, was ſecond wife of William de Huntercombe, to whom ſhe brought this and other eſtates [T]. At the time of his deceaſe in 1271, he held in capite of the Biſhop of London, by the ſervice of the fourth part of a knight's fee, and rent of 20 s. per annum, to the caſtle of Stortford [V]; in Wanſted, 18 s. and 2 d. of yearly rent; a capital meſſuage, 180 acres of arable; 27 of meadow, ſix and half of paſture and convenient commonage. He was patron of this living.——Walter was his ſon and heir (q).——Chriſtiana, widow of John Huntercombe, which dyed in 1361, held this maner of Wanſted, of the Biſhop of London, by the ſervice of 2 s. a year——Sir John Huntercombe was their ſon and heir (r). And, at the time of his deceaſe, in in 1368, he held the maner of Wanſted, and the Advowſon of the Church, jointly with Margaret his wife, of the Biſhop of London by the ſervice of one Spar-hawk, or 2 s. and of the Abbot of Waltham by the ſervice of 10 s. per ann. and of the Abbeſs of Berking by the ſervice of 10 s. per ann. and of the Prior of Holy Trinity, London, by the ſervice of 13 s. 4 d. per ann. and of the Prior of Clerkenwell, by the ſervice of 13 s. 4 d. per ann.——John was his ſon and heir (s). In another Inqueſt taken in 1383, it is ſaid, that John Huntercombe held, for his life, jointly with his wife Margaret ſtill living, the maner of Wanſted, of the Biſhop of London, by the ſame ſervice as abovcſaid: And one tenement called Naket hall in Wanſted, of the Abbeſs of Berking: And lands and tenements called Sayes in Wanſted, of the Abbot of Waltham, by the ſervice of 10 s. a year each.——John Huntercombe, was their ſon (t).

John Tatterſall, of London Gent. who dyed in 1446, held the Maner of Wanſted, and Advowſon of the Church, of the Biſhop of London, as of his caſtle of Stortford, by knight's ſervice——John, his ſon, was ſix years old (u). Robert Tatterſal, Citizen of London, in 1449 gave his maner of Wanſted by will to his wife Anne, then to his ſon John (w). From 1446 to 1457, William Keme, or Kene, and John Torrell, Eſquires, preſented to this living; as did Ralph Haſtings, and Anne his wife in 1471, and Sir Ralph Haſtings, in 1487 (x). From which we conclude that they were alſo Lords of this maner.

The ſaid Sir Ralph Haſtings, and Anne his wife, lords of the maner of Wanſted, within the King's Foreſt of Waltham, having been diſturbed in the enjoyment of a wood; common of paſture; and other liberties and privileges, which they poſſeſſed by reaſon of this lordſhip; upon their petition, K. Henry VI, in 1454, ſent a mandate to his Juſtices itinerant for the Foreſts on this ſide Trent, to make inquiſition (y).

Another lord, Robert de Ploiſe, Eſq; made a claim for the privileges of this maner; but the time when he lived doth not appear. The claim was produced, 1 October 1670, before Aubrey de Vere, Warden and Steward of the Foreſt: being for view of frankpledge, perquiſites of courts, with other uſual privileges; and among the reſt Deodands, in his Maners of Wanſted and Stone-hall; a park paled in, of 300 acres in Wanſted and Barking, with the ſtock of deer; and free-warren; and ſole and ſeparate fiſhery in the brook of Wanſted: He claims liberty of felling trees on the waſte, by view of the foreſter, both for neceſſary repairs of the houſes belonging to this maner, and for firing; and of appointing a woodward for his own woods; and to drive the foreſt in his Maner once a year (z).

Sir John Heron, mentioned in the foregoing Pariſh of Little Ilford, in the reign of K. Henry VIII, had this eſtate, ſtyled, "a great meſſuage, "called Naked-Hall Hawe, [i. e. Court;] "and lands in Wanſted and Ilford:" But, his Son——Giles, for refuſing to acknowledge K. Henry the VIIIth's Supremacy, was forced in 1531, to give them up to the King (a).

In 1549, K. Edward VI. granted the Maner, and Park, of Wanſted; North-mead containing 16 acres and a half; Dawſon crofts, 8 acres; 50 acres of wood and paſture, and 24 acres of meadow called Le Sayes; and the advowſon of the Rectory, to Richard Lord Riche, and his heirs (b). He dyed 12 June, 1566, poſſeſſed of this maner and advowſon——Robert Lord Riche, his ſon and ſucceſſor (c), had licenſe, 7 February

Upon a replevin brought by Sir William upon a diſtreſs for arrears, it was reſolved, on a demurrer by the Judges, that though the caſtle be ruinous, yet the rent remains. Sir Hen. eldeſt ſon, being dead before him without iſſue, he was ſucceeded in titles and eſtates by the ſecond ſon——John, the preſent Earl Tylney.

WANSTED-HOUSE, the Seat of this noble Family, (with a View of which his Lordſhip hath been pleaſed to adorn this Work,) for Situation, Building, Waters, Gardens; and the hereditary command of the Foreſt, may be ſaid to exceed any in England. And was intended to be made ſtill more magnificent, by Wings raiſed with colonades anſwering to the grandeur of the front.

The Maner of CANN-HALL, or CANONS-HALL,

Did anciently belong to the Prior and Canons of the Holy Trinity in London; and from them took the name of Canons-hall. That it belonged to them, appears from a compoſition made between the Convent, the Patron, and the Rector, about the tythes of this lordſhip of Cann-hall, and confirmed by William de Sancta Maria Biſhop of London, under his ſeal 5 Septemb. 1207: By which compoſition, the Prior and Canons were to receive the tythes of this eſtate, and to pay to the Rector of Wanſted yearly one quarter of fine wheat, and one quarter of oats, at Michaelmaſs (b).

This eſtate becoming veſted in the Crown at the diſſolution, Qu. Mary granted, in 1553, the maner of Cannon-hall, alias Canne-hall, with appertenances in Wanſted and Weſt-ham, to John Strelley, citizen and vintner of London, and Anne his wife, and the heirs of the ſaid John (i): To hold in capite, by the 40th part of a knight's fee. He dyed 29 Auguſt 1559; leaving his ſon and heir——Nicolas, aged 22 years (k): who held the ſame at the time of his deceaſe in 1611; and his heir was his daughter Cecilia, then wife of Humfrey Cardinall, of Great Humby in Lincolnſhire, aged upwards of 40 years (l).

Richard Boothby, and Thomas Woolhouſe Eſqrs; were poſſeſſed of this eſtate in 1635.

It belonged, in the beginning of this century to William Colegrave of St. Giles's in the Fields, Eſq; the Maner being about 65 l. per annum, and the Farm 105 l. And afterwards to his ſon——William Colegrave Eſq;

The Nunnery of Clerkenwell in Middleſex had one mark's yearly rent in this pariſh, iſſuing out of the third part of Wanſtede, with the ſervice of the ſame; granted thereto by Henry Foliot, and Lecia his wife, daughter of Jordan, ſon of Ralph, ſon of Brian, founder of that Houſe.——And Abraham de Waneſtede gave them alſo the Mill of Wanſtede, and Melegrave, or Mill-grove, near the ſame (m).

A good Houſe in this pariſh, pleaſantly ſituated, with an eſtate; and Gardens conſiſting of 30 acres; belongs to Humfrey Bowles Eſq; It was built, about the year 1690, by Sir Francis Daſhwood, father to Lord Deſpenſer. From him the eſtate paſſed to Sir Orlando Bridgman, who had married one of his daughters. Sir Orlando ſold it to Mr. Gough, grocer in Bread-ſtreet, and the latter ſold it again to Matthew Wymondeſold Eſq; of whom it was purchaſed by Humfrey Bowles Eſq;

This pariſh is rated to the land-tax at 1179 l.

The CHURCH, dedicated to St. Mary, ſtands near Wanſted Houſe; and was new built, chiefly by the liberality of the late Richard Earl Tylney. There is alſo a new Steeple; where before was but a wooden Spire.

This Rectory hath been all along appendent to the Maner of Wanſted. It hath a fine Glebe of 76 acres.

8. WALTHAM-STOW,

lies between Wanſted and Woodford, and the river Ley,

The name is derived from the three Saxon words, Ƿealꝺ, a wood or foreſt, ham, a village, or habitation, and ꞅꞇoƿe, place: The laſt ſyllable being added to diſtinguiſh it from the three other pariſhes of the ſame name in this County; namely Waltham Holy-Croſs, and Great, and Little Waltham. [See in the other Volume, p. 82.] In records it is written theſe other various ways, Walcamſtowe, Welcamſtow, Welcomſtowe, Walkehamſtowe, Walkhampſtowe, Walkampton, and Wilcumeſtou.

It belonged, in Edward the Confeſſor's reign to Waltheof, ſon of Earl Siward, by Elfleda daughter of Earl Aldred, both Earls of Northumberland (n). Waltheof being a man of eminent qualities, and ſubmitting to the Conqueror, was reſtored to his paternal eſtates, and to his Honors. However, he was one of thoſe Noblemen whom K. William ſomewhat diſtruſting, took along with him into Normandy, in 1067, that they might attempt nothing in his abſence. His jealouſy was not groundleſs: For, two years after, Waltheof engaged with ſeveral Engliſh noblemen and malecontents; harraſſed and cut off the Normans in their quarters; and when an army of Danes invaded the Kingdom, they were joined by this Earl among the reſt. The Danes were bought off by the King, but not without granting them this condition, that he ſhould pardon and even reward the Engliſh noblemen who had appeared in arms againſt him. In conſequence of that, he conferred on Waltheof the Earldoms of Northumberland, Northampton, and Huntingdon, and gave him his niece Judith, daughter of his half ſiſter Maud by Lambert Earl of Lens in Artois (o) [Z]: yet, in 1075, Waltheof, and others, at a marriage feaſt, plotted to depoſe him: Waltheof revealed this deſign, yet William recalled his promiſe of a pardon, and cauſed Waltheof to be beheaded at Wincheſter. The common voice of writers attribute his death to his wife's inſtigation, who lived not well with him, and had more mind to another huſband (p). She was poſſeſſed of this Lordſhip at the time of the Survey [A]. Waltheof left two daughters [B]; Maud, married to Simon de St. Liz, who had the Earldom of Huntingdon; Alice, otherwiſe called Judith, was married to Ralph de Toeni, of Flamſted in Hertfordſhire, to whom ſhe brought this maner of Waltham-ſtow, from him called Waltham-Stow-Toni. Beſides which there were three other Maners, or reputed Maners, in this pariſh; namely,——The Maner of Waltham-Stow Beandick, or Francys, otherwiſe Low-hall.——The Maner of Higham-Benſted. And that of Saliſbury-hall.

There are alſo the following Hamlets in this pariſh; Hou-ſtreet; Wood-ſtreet; Marſh-ſtreet; Clay-ſtreet, and Chapel-end.

The Maner of WALTHAM-STOW-TONI, ſome time called High-hall; and that of WALTHAM-STOW FRANCIS, otherwiſe Low-hall, ſeem to have been at firſt but one; and to have remained united a conſiderable time.

Ralph de Toenio, or Toni, who married Alice, or Judith, daughter of Waltheof, was ſon of Ralph, Standard-bearer to K. William at the time of the Conqueſt. He had two ſons, Roger, and Hugh; and ſeveral daughters (q).——Roger, the eldeſt ſon and heir, had for his firſt wife a daughter of the Earl of Henault; for his ſecond a daughter of the Earl of Leiceſter. He dyed in 1162, leaving by his ſecond wife——Roger, his ſon, very young. To him ſucceeded——Ralph de Toni, moſt probably his ſon, who was in arms with the rebellious Barons againſt K. John. But, afterwards in 1232, was conſtituted by K. Henry III. one of the Generals of the Engliſh forces then quartered on the confines of Wales (r). He held the maner of Welcumeſtowe by the ſervice of attending the King in his proper perſon, when his Majeſty went upon any warlike expedition (s). Undertaking a Voyage to the Holy-land in 1239, he dyed at ſea (t). Petronill, his widow, claimed the third part of this maner, but had ſomething elſe given her by the King in exchange (u). Their ſon and heir——Roger Tony held the maner of Welcomſtowe of the King in capite (w). He firmly adhered to K. Henry III. at the battle of Lewes, where he was taken priſoner, and the Barons ſeized his caſtle of Kirtling. Departing this life in 1277, he was ſucceeded by his ſon——Ralph; and he by his ſon——Robert, who held this maner of Wolkamſtowe of the King in capite, by the ſervice of half a knight's fee (x). He dyed in 1309, and his heir was his ſiſter.

Alice, then widow of Thomas de Leyborn. Her ſecond huſband was Guy de Beauchamp, Earl of Warwick; who in her right held this maner, of the King, as of the Barony of Robert de Tony. By him ſhe had two ſons, Thomas, and John; and five daughters. After his deceaſe, which happened in 1315 (y), ſhe gave 500 marks for licenſe to marry William la Zouch of Aſhby in Leiceſterſhire (z). This William la Zouch, of Mortimer as he is ſtyled in the record, held for life, by the cuſtom of England, after the deceaſe of his wife Alice, this maner of Wolcamſtowe; as of the right and inheritance of Thomas de Beauchamp, Earl of Warwick: and dyed in 1337 (a) [C]. Upon his deceaſe,

Thomas de Beauchamp, Earl of Warwick, came into this eſtate. He dyed of the plague at Calais 13 November 1369, at which time he held this maner of Weltomſtowe of the King; and had purchaſed the reverſion of the maner of Weltomſtowe Bedyk, which Maud wife of Simon Franceys enjoyed for her life (b). He had ſeven ſons, and nine daughters.——Thomas de Beauchamp, the ſecond ſurviving ſon and heir, ſucceeded his father. But, by the artifices of K. Richard the ſecond's evil counſellors, this Earl being condemned to dye, in 1396, his eſtates were forfeited, and given away; and theſe maners of Welkehampſtowe, and Low-Hall, in particular, to William de Scrope Earl of Wiltſhire, in ſpecial tail, and to his heirs male (c).

But the Earl of Warwick being reſtored to his honors and eſtates upon the acceſſion of K. Henry IV, he held, at the time of his deceaſe, 8 April 1401, the Maner of Welcomſtow-Tony, and the Maner of Welcomſtow-Frannceys, of the King as of the Honor of Bologne. Margaret, his widow, held the ſame in fee-tail till her deceaſe 22 Janu. 1406 (d). Their ſon and heir——Richard de Beauchamp, Earl of Warwick, held alſo theſe Maners at the time of his deceaſe 30 April 1439 (e). As did his ſon——Henry, Earl of Warwick, who dyed 11 June 1445, leaving——Anne, his daughter and heir, only two years old; but ſhe departed this life 3 Janu. 1449 (f). Whereupon his eſtates, and theſe two Maners in particular, were divided between his two ſiſters; Elianor his ſiſter by the father but not by the ſame mother; and Anne his own ſiſter both by father and mother.

Elianor had the Maner of Waltham-ſtowe-Tony; and dyed poſſeſſed of it in 1467. She had two huſbands, Thomas Lord Roos of Hamlake, and Edmund Beaufort Duke of Somerſet. Her heir was her grandſon Edmund Roos (g).

Anne, the other ſiſter of Henry the laſt Earl of Warwick, then wife of Richard Nevill, Earl of Saliſbury, had the Maner of Waltham Stowe Franceys; and the title of Earl of Warwick was confirmed to him, and to the heirs of the ſaid Anne. How this Richard, the King-Maker as he was called, loſt his life in the Battle of Barnet, in 1471, and what diſtreſſes his widow thereupon became expoſed to, may be read in our Hiſtorians (h): all her vaſt inheritance being by authority of Parliament taken from her, and ſettled upon her two Daughters, Iſabel wife of George Duke of Clarence, and Anne wife of Richard Duke of Glouceſter, two brothers of K. Edward IV. as if ſhe herſelf had been naturally dead.

After the death of thoſe two daughters, K. Henry VII. having a mind to this noble inheritance, he cauſed it to be reſtored to the ſaid Anne, by act of Parliament in 1487, with power to alienate the ſame, or any part thereof: But not with purpoſe that ſhe ſhould enjoy it, as it ſeems; for, 13 December the ſame year, by a ſpecial feoffment, and a fine thereupon, ſhe conveyed it wholly to the King, entailing it upon the iſſue male of his body, with remainder to herſelf and her heirs. The particulars of this noble eſtate are in Sir William Dugdale (i).

But, before this act, the maner of Walkhamſtowe, called Lowe-hall, had been granted to John Hugford, who held it of the King by an entire Barony, as of the Honor of Bologne, and dyed poſſeſſed of it, 6 Decemb. 1485 (k).

The Crown becoming poſſeſſed of theſe two Maners, made diſtinct and ſeveral Grants of them.

For inſtance, K. Henry VIII, 14 May 1520, granted to John Jennyns, the maner called Walkamſtow Frauncys, alias Low-hall, formerly part of the poſſeſſions of Anne Counteſs of Warwick, for 21 years, at the rent of 15 l. 3 s. 4 d. and 3 s. 4 d. of advance. The ſame day he granted to John Heron, the maner of Waltham-Stow-Tony, or High-hall, in Walkamſtow, parcell of the lands called Coperceners-lands, for 21 years, at the rent of 48 l. 3 s. 4 d. (l).

Feb. 5 1527, he granted the maner called Walthamſtowe Frances, alias Low-hall, to John Lynſell, and his heirs male; part of the poſſeſſions of Anne Counteſs of Warwick (m).

The ſame King, in 1544, granted the maner of High-hall, alias Walkhampſtow-Tony, to Paul Withipole and Edmund his ſon, and their heirs: And alſo the Advowſon of the Rectory and Vicarage; the maner of Mark, and a meſſuage called le Mark in Layton and Waltamſtow (n).

This Paul Withipole [mentioned above under Leyton] had licenſe, 20 Febru. 1545, to paſs away this maner, with Helbrynkys 16 acres, and Bakers merſh 4 acres, to

Sir Ralph Sadleir, Clerk of the Hanaper (o). On the 10th of September 1546, Sir Ralph gave up this Maner, then worth 90 l. per annum clear, to K. Henry VIII. in exchange for lands of greater value (p).

In 1550, Walcambeſtowe, alias Lowhall, was held by Ralph Saunder, and Laurence Wennington, in free ſocage (q). Qu. Mary, in 1553, granted the maner of Highall, alias Walcombeſtow Tony, alias Walkhampſtowe Fraunces, alias Lowehall, alias the maner of Higham Bemſted, alias Higham Bempſted, alias Highamhill, to Thomas Heron, and his heirs; to hold in capite by the 20th part of a knight's fee (r).

The 27th of July 1583, Qu. Elizabeth granted the Maners of Highe-hall, and Lowe-hall, alias Walthamſtowe Tony, and Walthamſtowe Fraunces, to Theophilus Adams, to be held of the maner of Eaſt Greenwich, by fealty, in ſocage.——And, in 1592, ſhe granted the Maner of Walthamſtow Frances, alias Low-hall, to Will. Tipper and Robert Dawe (s). But theſe men, Adams, Tipper, and Dawe, were Hunters after concealed Lands, and procured many and large Grants under that pretence; which we have frequently obſerved did not ſtand good.

Previous to theſe Grants, the two Maners of Waltham-Stow Toni, and Waltham-Stow Franceys, had been ſeparated.

The Maner of WALTHAM-STOW-TONY, appears, in Qu. Elizabeth's time, to have been in the Family of Mannors Earls of Rutland. For Edward Earl of Rutland, by licenſe dated 26 May 1575, alienated that maner, and 60 meſſuages, 60 cottages, 30 tofts, 60 gardens, 60 orchards, 1000 acres of arable, 500 of meadow, 1000 of paſture, 200 of wood, 200 of furze and heath, 200 of marſh, 100 of moor, 40 s. rent, and common of paſture, in Walkampton, or Walkamſtowe Tony, to . . . Juliana Holcroft, widow, and her heirs.—And this maner was ſaid, afterwards, in 1587, to be held in capite (t). The Earl of Rutland's alienation muſt have been to lead to the uſe of ſome truſt: eſpecially as he had married Iſabel, daughter of the ſaid Juliana by her huſband Sir Thomas Holcroft. For——Elizabeth, his only daughter and heir, dyed poſſeſſed of this maner of Waltham-ſtowe Tony, and High-hall, 12 April 1591, which ſhe held of the Queen by knight's ſervice. She had been married to Sir William Cecil, ſon and heir of Thomas Earl of Exeter; and left by him her ſon and heir——William Cecil, Lord Roſſe, Hamlake Truſbutt, and Belvoir, eleven months and fifteen days old (u); who dyed in Italy 27 June 1618, without iſſue.

George Rodney Eſq; was poſſeſſed of this Maner in 1635. Very ſoon after, it belonged to Charles Maynard Eſq; Auditor of the Exchequer, who ſettled here. He was the third ſon of Sir Henry Maynard, Kt. and brother of William, the firſt Lord Maynard. [See in the other Volume, p. 432.] He dyed 19 November 1665, having had, by Mary his wife daughter of Zeger Corſellis, of London, merchant, whom he married in November 1633, four ſons, and two daughters. The ſons were Charles, who deceaſed 3 June 1665, aged 31, and unmarried; Henry, who dyed an infant; William, baptized 6 Octob. 1641; Henry, baptized 4 Aug. 1646, afterwards an eminent Spaniſh merchant, and a ſpecial Benefactor to this pariſh. The two daughters were, Mary, who deceaſed 20 Janu. 1663, at the age of 20 years; and Anne.——William, the third, but eldeſt ſurviving ſon and heir, was created a Baronet 1 February 1681, and elected one of the Knights of the Shire for this County in 1685. By Mary his wife, daughter of William Baynbrigg Eſq; citizen of London, he had, William; and Charles; who both dyed infants; another William; and Henry: and three daughters, Mary, wife of Sir William Scawen Kt. Jane wife of Edward Eyre Eſq; and Elizabeth, of Edward Stafford,——Sir William, the eldeſt ſurviving ſon, dying a batchelor, 25 Decemb. 1715, was ſucceeded by his next brother——Sir Henry, then an eminent Merchant at Aleppo, who came and reſided here, and was choſen Verdurer of the Foreſt in 1725. He departed this life 16 Novemb. 1738, leaving, by Catharine his wife, daughter of George Guntur of Racton in Suſſex Eſq;——Sir William Maynard Bart. the preſent worthy poſſeſſor; who ſucceeded to a conſiderable eſtate on the death of his uncle Sir Charles Guntur Nicholl, K. B. He married Charlotte, ſecond daughter of Sir Cecil Biſhopp Bart. of Parham in Suſſex, (now deceaſed) by whom he has, Charles, Anne, William, and Henry.

This Maner is very extenſive, and holds a Court-leet and Court Baron annually on Whitſun-tueſday; the landed eſtate is not very conſiderable, as eſtates now are. The Courts are kept at Toni-hall, a ſpacious brick Houſe in Shernall ſtreet, about a quarter of a mile ſouth-eaſt from the Church. For when a purchaſe was made of the Maner, the Maner-houſe and a few fields were left out: ſo that High-hall is now only a handſom brick farm houſe, ſtanding about a mile and a half from the Church.

As for the Maner of Waltham-Stow Fraunces, alias Low-hall, it was granted to Thomas Argall, mentioned above, under Berking, p. 3. At the time of his deceaſe, 15 Auguſt 1563, he held this Maner of Walkamſtow Fraunces, as it is there called, of the Queen, as of her maner of Eaſt-Greenwich.——Richard was his ſon and heir (w).——Thomas Argall Eſq; who dyed 4 March 1604, held alſo this maner of Walkamſtowe Francis, alias Lovehall. His brother——John was his heir (x).

The laſt heireſs of the Argall family was married to John Greene of Dover-ſtreet, London, Eſq; he was jeweller to K. William, and a Juſtice of Peace, and dyed 1 June 1718.

This eſtate belonged afterwards to . . . Boſanquet Eſq; and, upon his deceaſe, in 1765, deſcended to his ſon——Samuel Boſanquet Eſq; of the Foreſt-houſe in Low-Leyton.

The Maner houſe, called Low-hall, ſtands about a mile and a half ſouth-weſt from the Church.

Higham Bensted Maner.

The manſion houſe ſtands about a mile and a half north-weſt from the Church; above the river Ley, on a Hill, or riſing ground, from whence it has an extenſive proſpect over the marſhes into Middleſex and Hertfordſhire. From its ſituation it received the name of Higham-hill, and the addition of Benſted from ſome of its ancienteſt owners. Part of it is now pulled down, and the reſt converted into two dwellings.

This eſtate belonged, in Edward the Confeſſor's reign, to Haldan, a freeman; and at the Survey was held by Peter de Valoines [D]. His great grandaughter Lora brought it in marriage to Alexander de Balliol.

Afterwards, from the reign of K. Edward II. to that of K. Henry VII. it was part of the poſſeſſions of the Benſted Family in this County: John de Benſted having purchaſed it of Alexander de Balliol. [See in the other Volume, p. 495.] [E].

The purchaſer of this eſtate, John de Benſted, at the time of his deceaſe in 1323 [F], held in Wolcomeſtowe 1 meſſuage with a garden, 100

[F] This John de Benſted, was conſtituted one of the Juſtices of the Common Pleas in 1310, and had ſummons to Parliament 8 Edw. II. among the Barons of this realm. He was employed in Scotland upon the King's ſervice in 1314, and 1320. And in 1317 appointed one of the Commiſſioners to treat of a peace between K. Edward II, and Robert de Brus. Chauncy, as above.

But his widow Maud enjoyed for her life, 1 meſſuage, 140 acres of arable, 8 acres and a half of meadow, and 7 acres of paſture, in this pariſh; reverſion to——John de Benſted: ſo that Edmund's alienation was not valid (z). This John de Benſted dyed in 1368, at which time he held in the vill of Waltomſtowe, in the Hamlet of Higham, a tenement called Waterhall, of the King in capite, as parcel of the maner of Benyngton, by knight's ſervice: And a tenement called Benſtedes in the ſame Hamlet; in which there was a capital meſſuage, and ſeveral parcels of land (a) [G].——John his ſon and heir, dyed in 1376. His brother, and ſucceſſor,——Edward de Benſted (b), was one of the Repreſentatives for the County of Hertford, in the Parliaments 7, and 20 Richard II, and 1 Henry IV. and Sheriff of Eſſex and Hertfordſhire in 1400 (c). He dyed in 1432, holding this maner of Heigham-Benſted of the King, in ca. by the ſervice of half a knight's fee.——Edward, or Edmund, his ſon and ſucceſſor, was then 44 years old (d) ——Joane, widow of Sir Edward Benſted, had a life eſtate in this maner till her deceaſe in 1448 (e). Then it came to——Sir John Benſted, who dyed poſſeſſed of it in 1471, leaving——William, his ſon and heir (f). He dyed in September 1485; and his heir was his aunt

Helen Benſted, aged 50 years (g). On the 23d of November 1493, ſhe had licenſe to alienate this maner to William Sutton, John Riſhe, and others (h); One of theſe other purchaſers we have reaſon to ſuppoſe was

Sir Thomas Lovel, who held a Court here 25 Novemb. 1494.

Sir John Hiron had this eſtate in 1521 (i). His ſon——Giles Heron, Eſq; mentioned above under Little Ilford, and Wanſted, who married Cæcilia daughter of the great Sir Thomas More, was afterwards owner of this eſtate. He being attainted of high-treaſon, and his lands thereupon eſcheating to the Crown, K. Henry VIII leaſed this maner to

Cuthbert Hutton Eſq;

But Qu. Mary, 23 July 1554, reſtored this eſtate to Thomas Heron Gent. eldeſt ſon of Giles (k). May 20 1566, this Thomas, and Edmund, and Joane, Heron had licenſe (l) to alienate the maner of Higham-Benſted alias Higham-hill, to Thomas Rowe Eſq; afterwards knighted; and Lord Mayor of London in 1568. He dyed 2 Septemb. 1570, and was buried at Hackney. By Mary his wife, daughter of Sir John Greſham, born 17 Auguſt 1523, he had ſeveral children.——William Rowe Eſq; his third ſon, born 22 Decemb. 1545, ſucceeded him in this eſtate; and dyed 29 June 1596 [H]. His wife was, Anne, daughter of John Cheyne of Cheſham-Bois Eſq; born 24 Auguſt 1558, which dyed 24 January 1638; by whom he had John, born 5 May 1581, and William born in September 1585, both knighted. Sir John, the eldeſt ſon, having no iſſue, ſold this Maner to his father-in-law, Sir Reginald Argall, of whom it was purchaſed by the ſecond ſon——Sir William Rowe; that dyed 27 Decemb. 1667. He married Elizabeth, daughter and heir of Thomas Potts of Cuddington in Buckinghamſhire Eſq; and had by her Robert, born 29 Janu. 1625, who dyed 1 March 1671, without iſſue; and——Cheyne, Barriſter at law. This laſt, after his mother's death, in 1672 got this eſtate. He married Elizabeth, daughter of . . . . Stone, by whom he had ſeveral children, and dyed in 1702.——William Rowe Eſq; his eldeſt ſon, alſo a Barriſter at law, dyed 27 or 28 Novemb. 1727. His wife was Elizabeth, daughter of John Whiſtler Cl. and by her he had William, Elizabeth, and Wilhelmina.——William, the ſon and heir, dyed in April 1739; having had, by Anne his wife, daughter of Edward Marſhall, Gent. William; Whiſtler; and Thomas.——William, the eldeſt ſon, an Apothecary, married Anne, daughter of . . . . Ceorner, and had by her, William; Charles; Charlotta [I].

Some years ago this eſtate was purchaſed by Richard Newman Eſq; High-Sheriff of this County in 1762.

He ſold it again to Antony Bacon Eſq; one of the repreſentatives in parliament for the Burgh of Ayleſbury: who is building a very handſom brick Houſe in the northern part of this pariſh, near Woodford-Wells.

The Maner of SALISBURY-HALL,

Whether, upon the Counteſs of Saliſbury's attainder it fell to the Crown, we cannot diſcover. But Qu. Mary granted, among other things, to Sir Thomas White, this maner, late parcel of the poſſeſſions of Robert Tirwhitt (n).

In 1590, Qu. And dying 1 January 1623, was ſucceeded by his ſon——Thomas Symons (q).

It belonged afterwards to——Edge Eſq; who gave it to Richard Sheldon, a corn-meter in London. Upon whoſe deceaſe without iſſue, it came to Rice Fellows Eſq; and now belongs to his nephew——Fellows, a minor.

Saliſbury-hall ſtands about a mile and a half north from this Church; in Chapel-end, in a lane leading from Clayſtreet towards Chingford-Church; being the laſt Houſe on the left hand. It is old and mean.

The following perſons have alſo ſome eſtates, and lands in Waltham-ſtow.—Francis-John Tyſſen; William Sheldon; and Thomas Pigot, Eſquires; Mr. Henry Moor; Thomas Wetenhall; Joſeph Freeman; Charles Dumbleton; Antony Todd; Robert Phipps, Thomas Trueman; Joſeph Eyre; John Rigg, &c.

dyed in 1686. By his will dated 18 Novemb. 1686, he gave to this pariſh, for a purchaſe of lands for the Miniſter, 400 l. [for his better maintenance and ſupport, and for preaching a ſermon every ſunday in the afternoon, and every St. Thomas's day, and on the day of his death, yearly for ever.]——Alſo, For a purchaſe, to the uſe of the Maſter of the Free School, 200 l. for his better maintenance, and for reading Prayers in the church on every ſunday, and teaching eight poor children.——For the purchaſe of lands, 300 l. the profits whereof, after ſermon on St. Thomas's day, and the day of his death (which was 27 November, 1686,) to be diſtributed amongſt the poor and real neceſſitous inhabitants of this pariſh.——And for the payment of 10 s. to the Clerk of this pariſh for his attendance at ſermon on the 27th of November, and for a ring to each of the Churchwardens, for diſtributing then his Charity, 50 l. He alſo bequeathed 50 l. for the repair of the Free-ſchool here; and a legacy for the repair of the Church, as we ſhall preſently mention. Accordingly an eſtate of 1000 l. purchaſe, and of the yearly rent then of 50 l. was purchaſed in 1690, and ſettled in 1706, to anſwer all and every of the ſaid Legacies.

The CHURCH, dedicated to the Virgin Mary, conſiſts of a body and two aiſles. The body, and ſouth aiſle both of Church and Chancel, are leaded; as is alſo the north aiſle of the Church. But the Chancel, with the north aiſle of the ſame, are tyled [K]. A ſquare Tower of Stone contains 6 Bells.

Mr. Henry Maynard bequeathed 100 l. for repairing and beautifying this Church; and 50 l. for a piece of Communion-plate.

This Church, as well as the lordſhip of the place, belonging to Ralph de Toni above-mentioned, he gave two parts of the Tithes to the Abbey of Conches in Normandy, founded by his father Ralph. His wife Alice ſurviving him, gave the other two parts of the Tithes, with this Church, in 1108, to the Priory of the H. Trinity, otherwiſe called Chriſts-Church, near Aldgate in London: And this grant was confirmed by their ſon Roger de Toni [L]. The Prior and Canons of H. Trinity having bought of the Monks of Conches the two other parts of the Tithes [M], got the whole confirmed to themſelves about the year 1200, by the Biſhop of London, and a Vicarage ordained here: Of which Tithes and Rectory, and of the Advowſon of the Vicarage, they continued poſſeſſed till their diſſolution, in 1531, when they came to the Crown (r).

This Rectory, ſtyled and reputed a Maner, and the Advowſon of the Vicarage, were granted by K. Henry VIII, in 1544, to Paul, and Edmund Withipoll, and their heirs; to hold in ca. by the 20th part of a knight's fee; They preſented to the Vicarage from 1552, to 1576 (s).

Sir Reginald Argall dyed 20 December 1611, poſſeſſed of this Maner, Rectory, and Church, and the Advowſon of the Vicarage; with divers pieces of land belonging to this Rectory, containing by eſtimation 60 acres; holden of the King in capite, by the 20th part of a knight's fee.——John was his brother and ſucceſſor (t).

Afterwards this eſtate was diſmembred. The Maner of the Rectory came to Richard Cooper Eſq; who gave it to his ſiſter Elizabeth, that left it by will, in 1708, to Fanſhaw of Comb in Somerſetſhire Eſq; It now belongs to Joſeph Fell Eſq; and is leaſed to Mr. Watſon. The Rectory houſe is down.

The Tyth of corn and hay was ſome time ago in . . . . Maſcall; and now in John Aſgill Eſq;

The Advowſon of the Vicarage was ſold, in 1600, by Sir Edmund Withipole to Sir Reginald Argall, and John his brother, above-mentioned (u). The latter alienated it to Dr. Henry King, afterwards Biſhop of Chicheſter; from whom it paſſed to his ſon——Henry King Eſq; and from him to his two daughters and coheireſſes, one wife of Edmund Wyndham Gent, and the other wife of Mr. Iſaac Houblon. Theſe conveyed it, about 1690, to

John Conyers Eſq; from whom it hath deſcended to his grandſon, . . . John Conyers Eſq;

In this Church there was a Chantry founded by George Monox Gent. the ſame, we ſuppoſe, as Sir George above-mentioned, valued, at the ſuppreſſion, at 6 l. 13 s. 4 d. a year. And in the certificate of Chantries it is ſaid, that this Town was then 'a great Town, having yn yt to the 'number of 360 houſeling people.'

This pariſh is rated to the land-tax at 4014 l.

William Lee was a conſiderable benefactor towards the roof of the Church.

9 WOODFORD,

was ſo named from the Ford in the Wood, or Foreſt, where now is Woodford-bridge. This Pariſh was one of the ſeventeen Lordſhips with which Earl Harold endowed his Abbey of Waltham-holy-croſs, and was confirmed to that Monaſtery, with all its lands and appertenances, and liberties [O], by K. Edward the Confeſſor, in his charter, in 1062 (w).

The Canons of Waltham held it at the time of the Survey [P]. And when K. Henry II. converted the Secular Canons here into Regulars, in 1177, he confirmed Wodeforda to them; as did K. Richard I. with the Church, by his Charter dated 18 September 1198 (x).

Among other Liberties belonging to this Abbey, they were permitted to aſſart their lands in Wodford, and many other places; and encloſe them with a ditch and low hedge; that they might take of their woods at their pleaſure; to have the forfeitures and aſſarts of their own men; to hunt the fox, hare, and cat in the foreſt; that their dogs ſhould not be expediated; as is ſhewn more at large in the Deſcription of the Abbey, under the next pariſh (y).

The Maner, and Church, of this Pariſh continued in the Abbot and Monks till their diſſolution 23 March 1540; at which time the Farm of Hill-houſe was lett for 30 l. a year: the rent of aſſiſe of the free and cuſtomary Tenents, was 4 l. 7 s. 10 d ½. Perquiſites of Court, 4 l. 7. 7 d. New rent, 2 l. 8 s. (z).

In 1545, K. Henry VIII. granted this Maner with appertenances, 10 acres of meadow, lands called Elbury, and Hall-grove 18 acres and 3 roods, and the Advowſon of the Rectory of Woodford, to John Lyon, and Alice his wife, and the heirs of the ſaid John; to hold in capite by the 20th part of a knight's fee (a). K. Edward VI, in 1547, having got this eſtate of John Lyon, citizen and Alderman of London, in exchange for other lands in Lincolnſhire, gave it to

Edward Fynes, Lord Clinton and Say; who by licenſe, dated 28 November 1553, alienated the Maner of Woodford and Hill-houſe to

Robert Whetſton (b). This Robert was of London, and having married Margaret, ſiſter and coheir of Francis Bernard of Suffolk, had by her——Bernard Whetſton, father of——Sir Bernard Whetſtone of Woodford. This laſt had three wives, 1. Elizabeth, daughter and coheir of John Calybut of Caſtle acre in Norfolk Eſq; by whom he had, Bernard, Calybut, Dorothy, Mary, Anne, and Brigitta. But no iſſue is recorded by his 2 d. and 3 d. wives, which were 2 Anne, daughter of . . . Whalley, widow of Giles Paulet, fourth ſon of William Marquis of Wincheſter, remarried to Richard Bellingham Eſq; and, 3 Mary, widow of Richard Bellingham of Newtimber in Suſſex Eſq;——Bernard his eldeſt ſon, married Margaret daughter of the ſame R. William Hunt Eſq;

The Cuſtom of the Maner of Woodford is Borough-Engliſh. Whence this ſhould ariſe, that the youngeſt ſon inherits, is hard to account for. However, it prevailed greatly in the Kingdom of the Eaſt-Saxons; and without queſtion was the Cuſtom of that part of the country, whence theſe came [Q].

Buckhurſt, alias Monken-hill, Monket-grove, and 20 acres called Maggot, in this pariſh, and Chigwell, belonged to Stratford-Abbey. After the ſuppreſſion they were granted by K. Edward VI, in 1547, to John Lyon, and Alice his wife, as the Maner here; To hold Buckhurſt in capite, by the 40th part of a knight's fee: and the Grove of the Honor of Windſor (d). Sir John Lyon, dyed poſſeſſed of the ſame 7 Septemb. 1565. He was Lord Mayor of London in 1554. —— Richard Lyon, his brother Henry's ſon, was his heir. He departed this life 17 March 1579, leaving——Henry his ſon and heir, aged 27 years (e).

The following perſons have alſo Lands, or Eſtates, here, Peter Eaton; Peter Godfrey; and Thomas Godfrey; Eſqres. Mr. Robert Jones; Marton Rockliff; John Moxon; Robert Foſter; Charles Collyer, Mr. Edward Green; Samuel Baker &c.

At Woodford-Row Richard Warner Eſq; has a fine Garden, with a Labyrinth, adorned with ſeveral Greek inſcriptions, and other curioſities.

This Pariſh partakes of Robert Rampſton's Benefaction, ſo often mentioned above; being twenty ſhillings a year.

The Church, dedicated to St. Margaret, conſiſts of a body and north and ſouth aiſles. The Chancel hath only a veſtry on the north ſide. In the Tower are 6 Bells.

This Rectory hath always been appendent to, and gone with, the Maner.

The Pariſh of Woodford is rated to the land-tax at 1850l.

Woodford-Wells were formerly in repute, as purgative, and good for many illneſſes; but are now entirely neglected.

Before I diſmiſs this Hundred, I ſhall obſerve, That there is within the circumference of it about 500 acres of Marſh-land, adjoining to the River Thames, and parted from Kent by that River; which, notwithſtanding, belong to the Pariſh of Woolwich, and are rated, and pay taxes, as parcel of that Pariſh. How to account for it, is not eaſy; unleſs it appeared, that the River Thames had altered its courſe, and formerly ran on the north of this marſh-land. There formerly ſtood on it a Chapel of Eaſe, of which the foundations are viſible, and ſome few Houſes, which are now fallen down, except one, called the Devil's Houſe; being an Ale-houſe near the Thames-Wall, much frequented in ſummer-time. This Houſe, and about 100 acres of the land, belong to Sir Thomas Webſter Bart.

[Q] Dr. Plot makes a random gueſs, 'that it was introduced by the Lord of the Manor's claiming the right of enjoying the bride, daughter of his tenant, on the wedding-night; therefore the villan, or ſlave, doubting whether the eldeſt ſon was his own, made the youngeſt heir.' —Plot's Natural Hiſtory of Staffordſhire, p. 278. I believe it will not be found that this was ever an eſtabliſhed practice. And it ſpoils the Doctor's conjecture, that the Lords made laws for the tenants, not the tenants for themſelves.—This cuſtom ſeems rather to have been derived from that juſt and equitable maxim, which entitled the Children of the ſame Parents to a reaſonable proportion of their inheritance, till the Feudal Syſtem ſettled the chief and almoſt the whole of the real Eſtates upon the eldeſt Son, in order to enable him to perform the Feudal Duties and Services. By the name of Borough, it ſeems to have been firſt, or chiefly, uſed in Boroughs, as it is ſtill at Maldon in this County, and elſewhere. And Engliſh plainly denotes that it was derived from our Anglo-Saxon anceſtors. Now, it is well known, that the Northern Natations in general had a great Delicacy in matrimonial affairs; they appear to have been chaſte; and not abandoned to lewdneſs, as the wild wandering goatiſh Iſhmaelites, and their deſcendents, the Turks.—According to Littleton's Tenures, it is very improperly called Borough Engliſh, in the country. His words are 'ſome Boroughs have ſuch a cuſtom, that if a man have iſſue many ſons, and dyeth, the youngeſt ſon ſhall inherit all the tenements which were his father's within the ſame Borough as heire unto his father, by force of the cuſtom, the which is called Borough Engliſh.' Littleton's Tenures, lib. 2. c. 10. §. 165. Upon which Sir Edward Coke makes this remark, 'Neither in an upland towne can there be a cuſtome of Borough Engliſh, or Gavelkinde, but theſe are cuſtomes which may be in Cities or Boroughes.'—As for Marcheta Mulieris, a lewd cuſtom ſaid to have been in Scotland till aboliſhed by K. Malcolm III, it appears to have been the invention of ſome ignorant Writers; who miſtook it for Maritagium; which, according to the Statute of Merton, c. 7. was a fee for the Marriage of him that was within age, of meer right pertaining to the lord of the fee.

THE HALF-HUNDRED OF WALTHAM.

IS bounded on the Weſt by the river Ley; on the North by Harlow Hundred; on the Eaſt by that of Ongar, and a ſmall part of Becontree's. It is of a triangular figure; about 10 miles and a half long from North to South, and 6 and a half from Eaſt to Weſt where broadeſt; but in the Southern part it is but two miles, and leſs. Anciently it belonged to the Abbey of Waltham; At the ſuppreſſion coming to the Crown, it hath ſince paſſed by grant to the owners of the ſite of the Abbey, the Families of Denny, Hay, Wake, and Jones.

There are in it only theſe four Pariſhes,

Waltham Holy-croſs.	Naſing, and
Epping.	Chingford.

Theſe four Pariſhes are within the Foreſt.

1. WALTHAM

is the moſt conſiderable place in this Half-Hundred; to which it gives name, and alſo to part of the Foreſt of Eſſex. As to the origin of the name, it may be ſeen under Waltham-Stow.

'Tis ſituated near the river Ley, where it, parting into ſeveral ſtreams, forms divers little iſlands. The diſtance of it from London is 12 miles: and it has a Market on Tueſdays, and two Fairs on May 14. and September 25, 26.

This place is of no great antiquity. The firſt mention we have of it is about the latter times of the Saxons, when Tovi, a man of great wealth and authority, Stalhere, or Standard-bearer to K. Cnute, induced by the abundance of Deer, built a number of Houſes here, and peopled them with ſixty ſix inhabitants. After his death, his ſon Athelſtan ſoon ſquandered away the eſtate: whereupon K. Edward the Confeſſor, into whoſe hands it was come, beſtowed this Village on his brother-in-law Harold, ſon to Earl Godwin; who built a monaſtery here (f).

As it was this Monaſtery that gave birth to this Town, or at leaſt contributed to its growth and importance, we ſhall therefore begin our account of it with that foundation.

Tovi had begun a Church here for two Prieſts, and committed to their keeping a miraculous Croſs, ſaid to have been diſcovered in a viſion to a Carpenter far weſtward, and brought hither in a manner unknown; which was reported to work many wonders [R]. On account of that Croſs, this place obtained the name of Holy Croſs.

Harold becoming thus poſſeſſed of it, with all its appertenances; in 1062 founded here a College for a Dean, and eleven ſecular Canons; in memory of K. Edward, his Queen Ædith, his father and mother, and all his other relations. And endowed it with, Northland, now Northfield, wherewith he found the Church of this Town endowed; and with the following Maners, Alwartune, [ ] Lambehithe, [Lambeth, or Lambourn] Lukintone, [Loughton] Nethleſwell; Neſingan; Paſſefelde, in High-Ongar; Tippedene [ſuppoſed to be Epping] Upminſter; Walde, [South-Weld,] Walliſare, in Boreham; Wodeford; in this County. Brikendune; Hicche; and Wrmeley, in Hertfordſhire. Alrichſey; and Melnho, in Bedfordſhire. Weſt-Waltham in Berkſhire. All theſe K. Edward the Confeſſor confirmed to this Houſe, with very ample Privileges, and Liberties (g).

And to them were afterwards added theſe Benefactions. Maud, firſt Queen to K. Henry I, gave them the Mill at Waltham; as did Adeliza his ſecond Queen, all the Tithes in this pariſh, as well of her demeſnes, as of her tenants. And other perſons gave them ſeveral fine Meadows near their Houſe.

[R] De miraculis Crucis in Monteacuto per fabrum inventæ tempore Canuti, et de ejus deductione ad Waltham, MS. in Bibl. Cott. Julius D. vi. 2.

Hugh de Nevill gave them the maner of Thorendon.—John de Chiſhull, Biſhop of London, appropriated to them the Church of South-Weld: Robert de Valoines that of All-Saints in Hertford: Juliana, daughter of Geffrey, that of Sudecamps; and Geffrey de Scalers that of Badburgham, both in Cambridgeſhire: John, Biſhop of Sarum, the Churches of Old and New Windſor: Simon le Bret gave them the Church of Wrangle, in Lincolnſhire: John, ſon of Alward, that of Leverton, in the ſame county: Everard de Geiſt the Churches of Geiſt, and Geiſthorpe; and the third part of that of Norton, in Norfolk: Roger de Gaiſt, the Church of Kateram, or Taterſham in Surrey (b). They had alſo the Rectories, or great Tithes of Epping and Naſing, with the diſpoſal of the Vicarage of the latter [S]. And the Advowſons of the Rectories of Alphamſton, Lambourn, Loughton; Nettleſwell, Woodford, Wormley; and the third turn in that of Great Parndon; with the advowſon of St. Nicolas's Chapel, in Stanford le Hope.

K. Henry II. granted them the maners of Siwardeſtune, and Eppinges, Waltham-hall, in Takeley; and Stanſted-Thele; with all their appertenances; and the Houſe of Walter de Geldeford, for a lodging whenever they went to the King's court: The tithe of Hay of the whole meadow belonging to the Lordſhip of Waltham, &c. the land of Lamburne, and the tithes of Purlai. And amply confirmed all their poſſeſſions and privileges before recited: together with the land in Dunton, given them by the Chamberlain of that place.

K. Richard I. beſides two very ample confirmations, added to thoſe Grants the whole Maner of Waltham; and the great Wood; and Harold's Park, with liberty to incloſe it for the uſe of the Canons; and all the waſtes, and 300 acres of eſſarts in that maner; and the Market of this Town: And the pariſh of Neſinges, which was a member of Waltham, with all its waſtes, and 160 acres of eſſarts: Together with the Half Hundred. Paying, in lieu of all ſervices, the yearly ſum of 60 l. by tale in the Exchequer, at Michaelmaſs (i).

In 1377, John Morrice gave them 40 acres; And, in 1383, John Morrice ſenr. and others, a meſſuage, ſome ſhops and land, in this pariſh, Naſyng, and Roydon (k).

John de Tany gave them the maner of Theydon Boys.

What other eſtates they had, beſt appears by the Survey of them taken at the diſſolution. And they were, The maner of Katherines in Great Parndon; Waterman's maner, in Matching; a Farm in Shering; the maner of Abbots in Stanway; the maners and rectories of Wormingford, Blakemore, Margaret-ing; Priors in Bromfield; the maner of Little Badow. Theſe five laſt they got from K. Henry VIII. in exchange for the maner of Stanſted Abbots in Hertfordſhire. And they had alſo in that county the maner of Little Amwell, and the rectory of Great Hormead. Their maner of Walkfare in Boreham they had exchanged, together with Sude Camps and Orſeth, or Orſeye in Cambridgeſhire, for Shingle-hall and Copped-hall (l). But ſtill they had at the time of their diſſolution the maner of New-hall, then lett for 4 l. 13 s. 4 d. They had likewiſe a maner called Cullings; a conſiderable eſtate at Stanford le Hope; and ſome in Willingale: The farm of Cavelands, in Middleſex: a Quit-rent of 15 l. 13 s. 4d. in Berking: and rents of aſſiſe in the pariſhes of St. Mary-Hill, and St. Mar. Paten, in London (m) [T].

This Houſe was endowed with very great and ſpecial Privileges and Immunities, as may be ſeen in their ancient Charters (n): Particularly in that of K. Edward III; granting them very ample Liberties in Waltham, Naſing, and Epping, which were of the King's ancient demeſne; allowing them to have two Fairs at Waltham; a Market, and a Fair, at Epping-heath; the ſame at Takeley: And Free-warren in many of their Maners (o) [U].

From its firſt foundation it was a royal Chapel, ſubject to no Archbiſhop, or Biſhop, only to the ſee of Rome, and the King (p). But, ſince the Reformation, this Church hath been under the juriſdiction of the Biſhop of London, and his Commiſſary.

The Abbot of Waltham was one of the twenty eight in this Kingdom, who were ſtyled Mitred Abbots, and ſat the 20th in order in the Great Council of the Nation.

A Liſt of the Abbots may be ſeen in Mr. Newcourt's Repertorium, Vol. II. p. 629, 630. in the Hiſtory of Mitred Parliamentary Abbies, by Br. Willis Eſq; Vol. I. p. 191, and J. Stevens's Supplement to the Monaſticon, Vol. II. p. 113.

Robert Fuller, the laſt Abbot ſurrendred it to K. Henry VIII, 23d. March 1540, at which time the whole yearly Revenues of it were 1079 l. 12 s. 1d. according to Speed, or 900 l. 4 s. 3d. according to Sir William Dugdale.

The Abbey's Poſſeſſions in this Pariſh, beſides their yards, gardens, and other demeſnes in their own hands, were, The maner or lordſhip of Waltham; rents of aſſiſe; and the rents of ſeveral large parcels of land, meadow, and paſture, lett to divers tenants; the farm of the Rectory, and of Waltham Grange; and of their demeſnes in the four Hamlets, of Siwardſton, Upſhire,

Whatever lands the Dean and Canons of this Houſe might have been endowed with by their founder Earl Harold, in this pariſh; which is not plain; they ſeem to have been deprived of the chief of them at the Conqueſt. For, at the time of the Survey, they held only half a hide here. The reſt and the chief was holden by Walcher, biſhop of Durham [X]. After his cruel death 4 May 1080 (q), it reverted to the Crown, and was enjoyed by the two Queens of K. Henry I. as appears by their grants to the College.

The foundation for a Dean and Canons was of no longer continuance than from the year 1062 to 1177. For the Court of Rome having formed the deſign of introducing into all Convents Monks inſtead of Seculars, under the falſe pretence that the latter lived more irreligiouſly and carnally than the others [Y], K. Henry II. converted this College into a Monaſtery for an Abbot, and ſixteen Monks of the Order of St. Auguſtin (r). In ſo doing, among other motives, he ſaved his money: For, to pacify the Pope, having vowed to erect an Abbey for Canons regular, to the honor of God and St. Thomas à Becket, for the expiation of his ſins (s); it was much cheaper for him to make a ſmall change in this than to erect a new one [Z]. However, from this time till the Diſſolution, it continued an Abbey for Auſtin Monks.

The ſite and moſt of the demeſnes of it remained in the Crown during the laſt part of K. Henry the Eighth's reign; who granted a 31 years leaſe of them to Sir Antony Denny (t), Gentleman of his bed Chamber, and one of the executors of his will; as we ſhall ſhew more at large preſently, after taking a ſhort Survey of this Pariſh.

The Pariſh of WALTHAM-HOLY-CROSS, or WALTHAM ABBEY, is very large; comprehending Four Hamlets, or Diſtricts; that are Maners, or were formerly ſo eſteemed and called in Records, and holden of the Abbey, which had very near all the Lands within the bounds of this pariſh. Thoſe four Hamlets, are, 1. Siwardſton, about two miles ſouth from the Church. 2. Roydon, or Woodredon, two miles and upwards eaſt. 3. Upſhire, north-eaſt. And 4. Hallifield, a mile and a half north, of the ſame.

Moſt of theſe centered in Sir Antony Denny, and his heirs. K. Henry VIII. had granted him, in 1540, the Demeſnes, with Sigmors Downe, parcel of Hallifield-hall (u). In 1547 K. Edward VI. made him this very large Grant; namely, The ſite of the Monaſtery, and the Park, of Waltham; the Rectory, and tithes of the ſame, and the Advowſon of the Vicarage; the maner of Claverhambury; and Waltham-grange; the Tildhouſe, with theſe following lands, Cobbſeild 280 acres, Shepecoteſeild 244 acres, the Warden 47 acres, Pukwellſeild 45 acres, Periſeild, 30 acres, Northſeild 112 acres, the Fortie acres 53 acres, Eſtfeild 200 acres, Scrutehills in five pieces 122 acres, Northleaſe 23 acres, the Curtell 10 acres, Ware meadow 38 acres, in Cobbmeade 30 acres, in Tonmead 24 acres, Northmead 23 acres, in le Trethey meadow 28 acres, Printfeild and Printmead, and the tithes of hay of the ſame; the tenement of Upſhire; Floodlands, and Hedge crofts, 28 acres; the maner or tenement called Prickland with the tithes; a tenement called le Pytancer in Sewardſton with the tithes of the ſame; Sulling myll meads 41 acres: with other ſmaller parcells (w).—The 1ſt. of July the ſame year, by licenſe, he purchaſed of Sir Ralph Sadleir, to whom they had been granted, The maner, or farm, of Woodredon, and the maner of Sewardſton, or Sewardſtonbury, with the tithes belonging to both of them; Lands here called Hookes; Pynnacles [A]; and Cuſſons-leaſures 31 acres; in Hallifeild; with the tithes of them; and Naſing.—The 25th of June before, John Earl of Warwick obtained leave to alienate to him Harolds Park, moſt of the lands of which lye in Naſing, but the Houſe ſtands in Waltham (x). So that we ſee, Sir Antony Denny acquired almoſt all the lands belonging to this great Abbey in this pariſh; and dyed 10 Septemb. 1549, at Cheſhunt, poſſeſſed of the maner of Sewardeſton, the Rectory of this place, 2000 acres of arable, meadow, paſture, and wood; and 100 acres called Hawkes farm; and the maners of Claverſham-bury; and Hallyfeild; all which he held of the King in capite, by knight's ſervice; and were then of the yearly value of 146l. 16s. 7d. ob. (y). His widow Joane, afterwards acquired, or got a grant, in 1553, of the maners and lordſhips of Waltham, and Naſing, three mills, a cottage, and a tenement called the Hermitage: to hold in capite (z). She held them, together with all the Courts, Fairs, Liberties, profits &c. [B] at the time of her deceaſe, 15 May 1553 (a).

Sir Antony Denny, to whom theſe large grants were made, was a favorite, and one of the Gentlemen of the Privy Chamber, to K. Henry VIII [C]. In 1537, 1539, and 1541, that King had given him great revenues in Hertfordſhire, belonging to the Abbey of St. Albans, and other diſſolved monaſteries (b). The family was ſeated at Cheſthunt in the ſaid County, and derived themſelves from John Denny Eſq; who ſerved K. Henry V. in his wars in France, and being ſlain there was buried, with his ſecond ſon Thomas, in the Chapel of St. Denis, no ſmall honor in thoſe days. His deſcendents were——Henry,——William, and ——Edmund. The latter was conſtituted one of the Barons of the Exchequer, 6 May 1514, and dyed 22 Decemb. 1520 (c).——Thomas, his ſecond ſon by his wife, Elizabeth daughter of George Mannock, had nine children, of whom——Sir Antony, the ſecond ſon, obtained this eſtate, as above-mentioned. He was one of the Knights for the County of Hertford in the 1ſt. Parliament of K. Edw. VI. We have mentioned before the time of his death, but cannot find where he was buried. By his wife, Joane, daughter of Sir Philip Champernon of Devonſhire, a lady of great parts and beauty; and a favorer of the Reformation, that dyed in 1553, he had two ſons; Henry; and Edward: and three daughters; Douglas; married to John Dive; Mary; to Thomas Aſtley; and Honora, to Thomas Wingfeild, Eſquires. Of Edward, the ſecond ſon, an account is given below [D].——Henry Denny Eſq; the eldeſt ſon, born in 1540, ſucceeded his father: and was married twice. By his firſt wife Honora, daughter of William Lord Gray of Wilton, he had two ſons, and ſeveral daughters; of whom Anne was married to George Goring of Ovingden in Suſſex Eſq; By his ſecond wife, Elizabeth, daughter of John Lord Grey of Pirgo, he had Henry, that dyed without iſſue; and two daughters that deceaſed in their infancy. He dyed 24 March 1573-4; poſſeſſed of the ſite of the Monaſtery of Waltham, with appertenances, then of the yearly value of 246 l. the Park 120 l. the manner of Sewardſton or Sewſtonbury 23 l. But he dying 12 Auguſt 1576, was ſucceeded by his brother——Edward Denny, Eſq; born 14 Auguſt 1569 (e). He was knighted in 1589, and when K. James I. paſſed from Scotland to London at his acceſſion to the throne, Sir Edward, being then High-Sheriff of Hertfordſhire, met him with a noble retinue of 140 men ſuitably apparelled [E] and well mounted: and made his Majeſty a preſent of a fine horſe with rich accoutrements (f). On the 27th of October 1604, he was ſummoned to Parliament by the title of Baron Denny of Waltham: and advanced by patent, 24 Octob. 1626, to the degree of Earl of Norwich (g). He

[D] This Edward was a knight, Gentleman of the Privy Chamber to Qu. He departed this life 11 Febru. 1599, about the 52d. year of his age, and was buried in the ſouth aiſle of Waltham Abbey-Church; where a ſumptuous monument was erected to his memory by his widow, Margaret, daughter of Pierce Edgecombe, of Mount Edgecombe in Cornwal Eſq; ſhe was once Maid of honor to Qu. Elizabeth, and lived 48 years a widow after her huſband's deceaſe, not dying till 24 April 1648, aged 88. She lies buried in Biſhop's Stortford-Church, with an epitaph. They had ſeven ſons at leaſt; one of them, Charles, ſenior Fellow of King's College Cambridge, dyed 29 December 1635, aged 38 years, and is buried by his mother. dyed 20 December 1630 [F], and was buried in this Church. By his lady, Mary, third daughter of Thomas Earl of Exeter, he had one daughter, his ſole heir, named

Honora. She was married, 6 January 1606-7, through the favor and countenance of K. James I, to one of his ſervants and attendants from Scotland into England, Sir James Hay Kt. to whom he granted the title of Lord Hay, with precedence next to the Barons of England, but without place or voice in Parliament. The 29th of June 1615 he was advanced to the title of Baron Hay of Sauley; and, 5 July 1617, to the further title of Viſcount Doncaſter; and, 13 Septemb. 1622, to that of Earl of Carliſle. He was alſo Maſter of the Great Wardrobe, Gentleman of the robes to K. James I, a Privy Counſellor, Knight of the Garter; and firſt Gentleman of the bed Chamber to K. Charles, I. In 1619, and 1622, he was ſent Embaſſador into Germany and France, where he lived in ſuch ſplendor that he impaired his eſtate, as he did otherwiſe by his remarkable Hoſpitality. His Lady Honora dying, he took to his ſecond wife, in November 1617, Lucy one of the daughters of Henry Earl of Northumberland. He himſelf departed this life 25 April 1636, leaving by his firſt lady——James, Earl of Carliſle, his only ſon and heir, who was a great ſufferer for the cauſe of K. Charles I. during the civil wars. He married Margaret, third daughter of Francis Earl of Bedford, but dyed in October 1660, without iſſue. His widow was remarried to Robert Earl of Warwick, and afterwards to Edward Earl of Mancheſter; and enjoyed the chief of this eſtate in jointure till her deceaſe (h).

Then it coming to the ſiſters of Charles Goring, Earl of Norwich, in right of their grandmother, Anne, one of the daughters of Henry Denny Eſq; (i) as above-mentioned, they ſold it to the truſtees of

Sir Samuel Jones of Northamptonſhire. He gave it to Samuel, fifth ſon of Sir William Wake [G] of Clevedon in Somerſetſhire, Bart. who thereupon took the ſurname of Jones, and was Sheriff of this County in 1699. This laſt left it to his nephew,——Charles, ſecond ſon of Sir Baldwin Wake, who alſo took the ſurname of Jones; and married Elizabeth eldeſt daughter of Sir Samuel-Vanacker Sambroke Bart. but dyed 21ſt. March 1739-40, without iſſue; being ſucceeded by——Sir Charles-Wake Jones.——Sir William-Wake Jones dyed in September 1765, and was ſucceeded by his ſon.

But part of this great eſtate was diſmembred upon the death of James Earl of Carliſle: He having deviſed in his will, 8 March 1660, the Maners of Sewardſton, and Woodredon to William Earl of Bedford, and other truſtees, in order to be ſold.

SIWARDSTON was accordingly purchaſed of them, 20 October 1674, by William Pocock, Gent.—It belonged afterwards to James Southerby Eſq; and then to his ſon——James Southerby Eſq;

This Hamlet is ſaid to have been formerly a diſtinct Pariſh, ſo named from a Saxon owner, one Siward. There is ſtill a heap of rubbiſh, called the ruins of the old Church.

WOODREDON, or Roydon, ſtands upon an eminence, and bounds that moſt delightful proſpect, which Cheſthunt, and that part of Hertfordſhire, enjoy. It was ſold by the truſtees above-mentioned; and belonged in 1742 to John Gibſon Eſq; and afterwards to his wife's mother, Mary Greene.

The Maner of UPSHIRE and HALLIFIELD continued in the Crown, after the ſuppreſſion of the Abbey [H], till 1571, when Qu. Elizabeth granted it to Richard Hill, and William James; together with 91 acres of arable, meadow, and paſture, and many other parcels, and woods, of which the meaſures and quantity are not ſpecified: woods and underwoods in the Foreſt of Waltham; two parcels in the Queen's mead; the Dean's houſe in the Church-yard, then in the Curate's poſſeſſion, and many other tenements and meſſuages: ſeveral Fiſheries, and Iſlands, in the water adjoyning: a water-mill, &c. (k).

The 4th. of October 1670, a capital meſſuage, and 100 acres in theſe Hamlets, belonged to Henry Wollaſton of Shenton Eſq;

It is ſufficient for me juſt to mention that ſuch a Claim was made, to which all perſons concerned may refer.

The Inhabitants of ancient meſſuages and tenements in Sewardſton Hamlet, as well free as cuſtomary, claimed common of paſture in all the waſtes there, the whole year, for neat-beaſts, and horſe-beaſts; Pannage for their hogs, except in the forbidden, or fence, month [*]. And common of eſtovers, or liberty of cutting wood, on the waſtes, ſufficient for their firing, from All-Saints to St. George's; to be drawn away each time on a ſledge, only with two horſes.

The cuſtomary tenants of Upſhire Hamlet claimed, in the waſte of the Foreſt, common of paſture all the year, for all their commonable cattle, except in the forbidden month; and common of eſtovers, by preſcription, in the woods called Otehawes, Redding-hills, Woodriddens, Harth hills, Long-running, Burned heath, Leadyng Queane, High beach green, and Ameſbury.

The Lord of the maner of Hallifeild claimed to hold a capital meſſuage and 100 acres in the Hamlet of Hallifeild and Upſheir; and to have free liberty to cut trees and wood growing upon his own grounds, for repairs, and hedge bote, and fire bote.

Harolds Park, ſo named from Earl Harold, part of whoſe demeſnes it was, and given by him to this Abbey; is about 3 miles North-eaſt from the Church. The houſe ſtands in this pariſh, but moſt part of the land is in Naſing, being upwards of 200 acres. See under Naſing.

Warleys, is a beautiful ſeat in this pariſh, which was inhabited by the late Richard Morgan Eſq; and afterwards by his widow.

This pariſh receives forty ſhillings yearly, part of Mr. Robert Rampſton's gift above-mentioned.—Robert Catrow gave, in 1597, twenty ſhillings a year to the poor.——Robert Brown, the ſame year, thirty ſhillings.——Henry Wollaſton, in 1616, two pounds twelve ſhillings.——Robert Dane, ten ſhillings.——George Weylet, in 1691, forty ſhillings. And—Robert Grubb, alſo forty ſhillings a year. See a fuller account of theſe Benefactions in J. Farmer.

The Church of this Abbey was alſo for the uſe of the pariſhioners. It was dedicated at firſt to the Holy Croſs, pretended to have been brought here; and afterwards to St. Laurence.

It cannot be ſuppoſed, that Earl Harold could make any great progreſs in the building, during the four years he lived after having laid the foundations. Therefore it was undoubtedly built, with the reſt of the Abbey, by degrees, and with the aſſiſtance of ſeveral benefactors, as low, or even after the reign of K. Henry II. 'Tis a Gothic edifice, rather large than neat, firm than fair, and very dark. The great pillars are wreathed with indentings, which are reported to have been formerly filled up with braſs. To the ſouth ſide of the Church adjoyns a Chapel, now converted into a School; and formerly called our Lady's, becauſe there was founded in it a Chantry of that name: and under it is a very fair arched Charnel-houſe, to which belonged a Gild, called the Charnel, well endowed with houſes and lands, in this pariſh and Reydon; granted, 12 Novemb. 1548, to Thomas Golding Eſq; (m) [I]. The whole was formerly well leaded, but now tyled.

In the middle ſtood the Tower, cathedral-wiſe. Part of it falling down ſoon after the ſurrender of the Abbey, probably in pulling down the Chancel and Choir, a wall was run up at the eaſt end of the Church; and a handſom Tower erected at the weſt end; 86 feet in height from the foundation to the battlements. This was done in the year 1558 (n), at the charge of the pariſhioners. In this Tower there are 6 Bells.

William Lake, and Thomas Stock, in 1637, ſettled an Eſtate for the repair of this Church.

There was, in the Infirmary belonging to this Houſe, a Chapel dedicated to St. Thomas the Martyr, [Becket] conſecrated by William, biſhop of Hereford, in 1188: And ſuppoſed to be inſtead of what K. Henry II. deſigned to have done in the memory of the ſaid Thomas (o).

The Abbey having engroſſed all the Tithes, and ſupplied the Cure by one of their own members; this Church remained, at the Diſſolution, only a Donative, or Curacy, with a ſmall ſtipend of 8 l. a year. But, in the laſt century, Edward Earl of Norwich ſettled a hundred pounds a year upon the Curate and his ſucceſſors, payable out of the eſtate of Claverham-bury; with a Houſe, and other good accommodations. The Advowſon of the Living is in the owner of the ſite of the Abbey.

The founder, K. Harold, was buried in this Church, with his two brothers Gyrth and Leofwine. Since the demolition of the Chancel, or of a Chapel thereto adjoyning, the place of his Sepulture is within the garden of the Lord of the maner. Over his grave was laid a plain, but rich, gray Marble Stone, with a croſs fleurie carved upon it, and a Latin epitaph (p). The laſt account we have of it is, that it was at Waltham-mill; and ſeen there by Dr. Uuedal of Enfield. Towards the end of Qu. Elizabeth's reign, his coffin was diſcovered by Sir Edward Denny's gardiner, being of a hard ſtone, and covered with another; wherein the bones lay in their proper order, without any kind of dirt, but upon the touch mouldered into duſt (q).

This Town gave birth to Roger de Waltham, Canon of St. Paul's, and a Writer, in the thir-

In the eaſtern Extremity of this pariſh, partly in it and partly in that of Epping, by the ſide of Copped-hall park, is a fine old Camp, incloſing 11 acres, 2 roods, and 20 perches; commonly called Ambres Bank. The new road from Debden-green to Epping goes through it. Hereabouts appears to me to have been fought the deciſive Battle between Boadicea and the Romans; as I have mentioned in the Hiſtory of Colcheſter, Book I. p. 23.

is eaſt north-eaſt of Waltham-Abbey, and divided into two parts; namely, Upland, where the Church is ſituated; and Townſide, where the Town ſtands. It was named probably from its upper or higher ſituation; qu. Upping, or upper paſture. We find a Hamlet in Waltham called Upſhire. Epping-ſtreet is of later date than the Church. The ancient way from Harlow to London, was from the corner of Wintry-Wood, where the turnpike ſtands, acroſs the Foreſt to Abridge. John Baker of Epping mercer, in his will dated 29 Sept. 1518, charged an eſtate called Stonards in Theydon-Gernon, for repairing the Road between Harlow and London, and for charitable uſes. This ſeems to have been for the ſake of Epping-Street, to induce Travellers to go that way, and the intention was anſwered.

The lands in this pariſh are entred, in Domeſday-book, under two different Hundreds. What belonged to the Canons of Waltham is ſet down under that Hundred; and the other part under the Hundred of Harlow.

Thoſe lands were divided afterwards into the following Maners. 1. The Maner of Epping-Bury, and Epping-Preſbyter. 2. Copped-Hall. 3. Shingle Hall. 4. The Maner of Chambers. 5. . . that of Gills. 6. . . Campions. 7. . . Madeleys. 8. The Maner of Hayles.—Within this pariſh are alſo, Epping Long Green; Copped-hall Green; Ryſe-ſtreet; Linſet-ſtreet; Epping-place; and Gregory's.

The Maner of EPPING.

Epping-bury, the Maner-houſe, lies in a bottom by the ſide of the road, near a mile ſouth ſouth-eaſt from the Church.

This was part of the poſſeſſions wherewith Harold endowed his Convent of Waltham: Or it was given to it, about the time of the foundation, by ſome benefactor: For it is ſaid in Domeſday-book, That Holy-Croſs always held Epinga, for a Manet [K].

Some have imagined (t), That this maner is the ſame that is called Tippedene in Edward the Confeſſor's charter to Waltham; the two firſt letters Ti, being by error written inſtead of E. To enable the reader to judge whether it was ſo, or no, we ſhall give below the boundaries of Tippedene [L], from the Saxon deſcription of them in the Monaſticon (u).

When K. Henry II. converted this Houſe into an Abbey for Regulars, he granted and gave to them Eppinges with all its appertenances [M]; And the land at Eppinges which Bruning the Prieſt held of the Canons; the Tithes of the King's lordſhip in the ſame town; and the Church with all its appertenances: And the land of Helyoth (w). From the words give and grant ſome have been apt to infer, That K. Henry II. was the firſt donor of this eſtate to Waltham. But thoſe general words are well known to be uſed in ſuch Charters, as are Confirmation-Charters only.

However, this Lordſhip being confirmed to the Abbot and Monks of Waltham Holy-Croſs, continued in their poſſeſſion till the Suppreſſion of the Monaſteries. Then it came to the Crown, in which it continued during the remainder of K. Henry the Eighth's reign, the reigns of K. Edward VI. and Qu. Mary; and part of Qu. Elizabeth's.

On the 15th of April 1558, Qu. Mary annex'd this Maner, and that of Copped-hall, &c. among others, to the Dutchy of Lancaſter (x).

In 1572, Qu. Elizabeth granted the maner of Epping, with appertenances, to Thomas Henneages and Anne his wife, in fee tail; To hold of the Dutchy of Lancaſter, by the 20th part of a knight's fee (y).

Sir Thomas Henneage was a conſiderable perſon in his time; being Captain of the Guards, Treaſurer of the Chamber, Vice-Chamberlain of

Sir Heneage, father of Heneage, created Lord Finch, and Earl of Nottingham, anceſtor of the preſent Earl of Winchelſea and Nottingham, &c. Of the daughters, Anne was married to Sir William Twiſden, of Eaſt Peckham in Kent; Catharine to Sir John Wentworth, of Gosfeild in this County. [See in the other Volume, p. 382.] Their mother, the Lady Elizabeth, was created Viſcounteſs of Maidſton 8 July 1623, and advanced to the title of Counteſs of Winchelſea 12 July 1628, with limitation to the heirs male of her body lawfully begotten. She dying 13 March 1633, was ſucceeded by her ſecond ſon——Thomds, Earl of Winchelſea (a). In 1635, he ſold this Maner and eſtate to

William Lord Grey, for the ſum of 21,000 l. it being then of the yearly value of 1200 l. He was the eldeſt ſon of Sir Ralph Grey of Chillingham in Northumberland, deſcended from Sir John Grey, Lord Powis, made Earl of Tankerville 31 January 1418.—The purchaſer of this eſtate was created a Baronet 15 June 1619; and, 11 February 1623, Baron Grey of Werke in the county of Northumberland. By Anne his wife, daughter and coheir of Sir John Wentworth of Gosfeild, he had, Thomas, who dyed 16 Febru. 1671-2. Ralph: and two daughters, Elizabeth, that dyed 22 Novemb. 1668; and Catharine, married firſt to Sir Edward Moſeley, Bart. and afterwards to Sir Charles North Kt. eldeſt ſon and heir of Dudley Lord North; ſummoned to parliament in 1673, by the title of Lord Grey of Rolleſton. William Lord Grey was buried in this Church 7 Auguſt 1674.——Ralph, Lord Grey, the ſecond ſurviving ſon and heir, dyed 15 June 1675. By his lady, Catharine, daughter and heir of Sir Edward Ford, of Harting in Suſſex, he had 3 ſons, Ford, Ralph, and Charles. ——Ford, the eldeſt ſon and heir, was created Viſcount Grey of Glendale, and Earl of Tankarville 11 June 1695. See his character and actions in our Engliſh Hiſtorians. But he leaving only one daughter, Mary, wife of Charles Bennet, Lord Oſſulſton, the title and eſtate deſcended to his next brother—Ralph, Lord Grey, of Werke, who attended K. William in moſt of his Campaigns. He dyed at Epping in July 1706, and having no iſſue, left this eſtate to his couſin

William, Lord North and Grey, eldeſt ſon of Charles above-mentioned. This William being bred to arms, ſerved through the whole courſe of the war under the Duke of Marlborough; at the battle of Hochſtet had his right hand ſhot off; and at length was made Lieutenant-general of the Forces, Governor of Portſmouth &c. He was married, but dyed without iſſue, 31 October 1734. His widow, and his heir Francis Lord North, ſold this maner and eſtate, together with Copped-hall, to Edward Conyers, of Waltham-ſtow Eſq; Of whom, and his Family, we ſhall give an account under Copped-hall.

At the Foreſt-Court in 1670, mentioned above under Waltham-Abbey, William Lord Grey brought in a very large Claim, for this Maner of Epping, of Liberties, Privileges, Immunities, Exemptions, Courts Baron and Lete, View of Frank-pledge, Profits and Emoluments, as extenſive as any Maner doth, or can poſſibly, enjoy; being the ſame that were granted to the Abbey: Alſo to have a weekly Market here on Fridays: [firſt granted by K. Henry III. in 1253] and two Fairs, one, the Tueſday, Wedneſday, and Thurſday in Whitſun-week; the other, the laſt day of October, and the two firſt of November. Now they are on Whitſun-tueſday, and October 13.——The Lord North and Grey obtained a grant for two Markets; one on Tueſdays, the other on Fridays. The firſt is diſuſed.

This maner was originally divided into two, viz. Epping-Bury, and Epping Preſbyter. The latter holds a Court-lete under a maple-tree in the road between Epping-bury and the Church. They both belong to the ſame Lord, who is Lord paramount of all the reſt.

COPPED-HALL,

called by contraction Copt-hall, is near two miles ſouth-weſt from Epping-Church.

The name is derived from the Saxon Coppe, the top of a hill, it ſtanding upon a high or copped ground [O].

(z) Inquiſ. 39 Eliz. nu. 107.

(a) See Dugdale, Vol. II. p. 445, & Collins's Peerage.

[N] He was deſcended from the ancient family of Henneage in the county of Lincoln, where they flouriſhed from the time of K. Henry III. His father, Robert Henneage, was Auditor of the Dutchy of Lancaſter, Surveyor of the Queen's woods beyond Trent, and dyed 4 July 1556. Collins's Peerage, edit. 1756. Vol. II. p. 397.

[O] It was not ſo named from Cobbing, a rivulet running at a little diſtance; or from two ancient Turrets of the old houſe, coped or covered with lead. T. Fuller, Hiſt. of Waltham-Abbey, p. 8, 9. . . . It was a manſion of pleaſure and privacy for the Abbots of Waltham.

It was built in an elegant manner, in 1753, by the preſent worthy owner John Conyers Eſq; who has adorned this work with a view of it.

The old Houſe ſtood a little more ſoutherly, and within the bounds of Waltham-pariſh; or was laid to it in proceſs of time: But the new one is in Epping pariſh, as was ſettled at the ſummer-aſſizes upon a tryal on that account in 1761.

The old one was a noble large Houſe, with a Court in the middle; as appears by a view of it, engraved at the charge of the late Sir Thomas Webſter. It had a ſtately Gallery, 56 yards long, erected by Sir Thomas Henneage, which was blown down in November 1639 by a violent hurricane. In this old ſeat was a Chapel, where was placed the fine painted Glaſs from New-Hall, mentioned in the other Volume, p. 103. and now fixed in the Church of St. Margaret Weſtminſter.

This eſtate ſeems to have been originally part of the Demeſnes of Waltham-Abbey, for it was holden afterwards of the Abbot. K. Richard I. gave it to Richard Fitz-Aucher, who built a ſtately Houſe, and fixed himſelf here; and alſo made a Park. He held it in fee and hereditarily of the ſaid Abbey (b); by the ſerjeancy of —(c) [P]. He had two ſons,—Sir Richard, his ſucceſſor, and William that dyed without iſſue. Sir Richard left two ſons, Stephen who dyed iſſue-leſs; and——Sir Henry. This laſt had licenſe, in 1295, to add 15 acres to his Park of Copped, within the bounds of the Foreſt. He held the maner called Copped-hall, and the maner of Shingle-hall, of the Abbot, by homage. And dying in 1304, was ſucceeded by his ſon——Sir Aucher Fitz-Aucher, a Knight-Banneret (d) [Q]. He married Joanna, youngeſt daughter of Sir Walter Fauconberg (e).

Afterwards this eſtate was in the knightly Family of Shardlowe, mentioned in the other Volume, p. 14. 380.

Sir John de Shardlowe, who was poſſeſſed of it in K. Edward the IIId's reign, got a licenſe, in 1350, for himſelf and Joan his wife, and his brother Thomas, to make an exchange of the maners of Copped-hall, and Shingled-hall, with the Abbot of Waltham, for the maners of Boreham in Eſſex, and Campes and Orſethe in Cambridgeſhire (f).

In 1374, the Abbot had leave to encloſe 120 acres of his demeſnes, to enlarge his Parks of Harold's-Park and Copped-hall (g).

This Maner and eſtate remained in the Abbey till the reign of K. Henry VIII. Then it was either purchaſed for the King by Thomas Cromwell (h); or, according to others (i), Robert Fuller, the laſt Abbot paſſed away this fair ſeat to the King, in hopes to have preſerved the reſt of his revenues. The Abbey had in Exchange for it Cane-Fields and Cane-Wood, Pancras, Kentiſh-Town, and the maner of Dame Ellens in Little Warley; this was done by Act of Parliament.

Qu. Mary annexed this maner to the Dutchy of Lancaſter; as we have ſeen under Epping.

On the 3d of Auguſt 1564, Qu. Elizabeth granted the capital meſſuage and park of Copthall alias Coppid-hall, to Sir Thomas Henneage and Ann his wife, mentioned under the Maner of Epping, to be held of her Dutchy of Lancaſter, by the ſervice of the 40th part of aknight's-fee (k). At the time of his deceaſe, 17 October, 1595, he held this capital meſſuage, with appertenances, and the Park; with liberties of park and warren within the ſame; and all the lands, tenements, paſtures, and woods, within the precincts of the ſaid park in Waltham Holy-croſs; and divers other lands &c. in that pariſh, and this, then valued at 24 l. 6 s. 8 d. per ann. (l). It paſſed from him, as the maner of Epping, to his daughter,

Elizabeth, married to Sir Moyle Finch, afterwards created Viſcounteſs Maidſton, and Counteſs of Winchelſea. Either ſhe, or her ſon——Thomas Earl of Winchelſea, ſold it to Lionel Cranfield Earl of Middleſex, conſtituted Lord High Treaſurer, in 1622. He had a grant from that King, for himſelf and his heirs, of free warren in his Park and demeſne land, exempt from the chief Juſtice in eyre, and other officers, which he laid Claim to in 1630. He dyed 6 Auguſt 1645, leaving——

James his ſon and heir, who dyed in 1651, without iſſue, as did his brother——Lionel who had ſucceeded him. The latter dyed in 1674; and left his eſtate to his nephew

Charles Sackville Lord Buckhurſt, eldeſt ſon and heir to Richard Sackville Earl of Dorſet, by Frances his wife, only daughter, and at length ſole heir, to Lionel Cranfield, firſt Earl of Middleſex above-mentioned. Thereupon he was created Earl of Middleſex 4 April 1675, and upon his father's death in 1677 became Earl of Dorſet. [See a further account of that noble Family in the Peerages.] In 1700, his Lordſhip ſold this ſeat and eſtate to

Thomas Webſter Eſq; He was created a Baronet 21 May 1703, and ſerved as one of the repreſentatives in Parliament for the Burgh of Colcheſter in 1705, 1707 and 8, 1713, and 1722. He alſo ſerved the office of Sheriff for this County in 1704; and, 1 June 1718, was choſen one of the Verdurers of Waltham-Foreſt. [See ſome further account of the family, under Nelmes in Havering Liberty.] In the year Sir Thomas ſold this Seat and Eſtate to

Edward Conyers, of Waltham-Stow Eſq; He was deſcended from the ancient Family of Conyers, or Coniers, ſeated in Yorkſhire, and the Biſhoprick of Durham, and more immediately from Boltby, and Baglail-Hall near Scarborough (m). The firſt that ſettled hereabouts, at Waltham-Stow, was Triſtram Conyers Eſq; He dyed 19 Novemb. 1619, and had, at the time of his deceaſe, 2 meſſuages, 2 gardens, 20 acres of arable, 6 of meadow, 60 of paſture, 15 of marſh, in Waltham-ſtow and Layton; 56 acres of marſh, in Eaſt-ham; 3 meſſuages in the pariſh of St. Helens Biſhops-gate; the maners of Scarborowe, and of Cleyton in Skipſey, in Yorkſhire; a capital meſſuage, and 9 cottages in Houlbech, Moulton-fleet, and Quapload in Lincolnſhire, which he held of the King, of his Honor or Abbey of Crowland.——William Conyers, his brother and next heir, was then 76 years old (n). He dyed without iſſue; Their brother Robert Conyers, of London, merchant, married Blanch, ſiſter and heir of Dunſtan Ducke, of Putney in Surrey Eſq; and had by her——William, heir both to him, and to his two uncles above-mentioned. He was a Serjeant at law; and twice married. By his firſt wife, Mary, daughter of Sir Francis Harvey, of Northamptonſhire, one of the Juſtices of the King's-Bench, he had a large Family; of whom only Elizabeth, Triſtram, Mary, and William, out-lived him. By his ſecond wife, Dorothy, daughter of Sir William Beecher, of Bedfordſhire, Kt. he had 5 ſons, and 5 daughters; but only Oliver, Dorothy, Judith, and Margaret, ſurvived him. He dying in 1659, aged 73, was ſucceeded by his eldeſt ſon——Triſtram Conyers Eſq; who was alſo a Serjeant-at-law. He married Winifred, daughter of Sir Gilbert Gerrard, of Harrow-on the Hill Bart. a beautiful and accompliſhed woman, by whom he had 5 ſons, and 6 daughters. One of the ſons, Sir Gerard Conyers Kt. was Alderman of London, and dyed 20 July 1737: He had to wife Anne, daughter of Sir Chriſtopher Lethieullier. Mary, one of the daughters, was wife of Sir Strange Jocelyn of Hide-Hall, Bart.——John Conyers Eſq; the eldeſt ſon and heir, was of Queen's College Oxford, and of the Middle Temple London; King's Counſel; and elected Member of Parliament for Eaſt-Grinſted in 1695 and 1698. 1700. 1702. 1705. and ſeveral times after, till his deceaſe in 1722. By his wife, Mary daughter and heir of George Lee of Stoke-Milborough in Shropſhire Eſq; he had 16 children; but only 4 arrived to maturity: namely, Edward, and theſe three daughters; Cæcilia, wife of Henry Brabant Eſq; Elizabeth, wife of Herbert-Perrot, Eſq; ſon of Sir John Pakington of Worceſterſhire, Bart. and Dorothy, of Sir Charles Mordaunt of Little Maſſingham, Bart.——Edward Conyers Eſq; the ſon and heir, was of Corpus-Chriſti College in Oxford, and of the Middle Temple. In 1722 he was elected member of parliament for Eaſt-Grinſtead, and again in 1734. He dyed 23 April 1742, leaving, by Matilda his wife, youngeſt daughter of William Lord Lempſter,——John Conyers Eſq; his ſon and heir, the preſent worthy poſſeſſor of the maners of Epping, and Copped-hall. By his firſt wife, Hannah, daughter of Richard Warner of Norfolk Eſq; he had no iſſue. But he hath ſeveral children by his preſent wife, Lady Henrietta Fermor, third daughter of Thomas Earl of Pomfret [R].

SHINGLE-HALL,

ſtands on, or near, Epping-Green, about three quarters of a mile north-eaſt from the Church.

This Maner naturally claims the next place to Copped-hall; they both having belonged to the Shardlowe Family, and been both exchanged together by Sir John de Shardlowe with the Abbot and Convent of Waltham, for the maner of Boreham &c. in 1350.

Henry-Fitz-Aucher held this maner of Shingled-Hall, of the Abbot, in 1304, as well as the former (o).

It continued in the Abbey till the diſſolution; at which time it was farmed by John Denton, at the yearly rent of 8 l. 10 s. (p).

In 1552, K. Edward VI. granted the maner of Shingill-hall, and a meſſuage called Parvytes, to Henry Lord Morley, and his heirs (q). And, 16 March 1562, that Lord, and Elizabeth his wife had licenſe to alienate it, with appertenances, holden of the Queen in capite, to

John Benton (r): who, at the time of his deceaſe 26 September 1570, held this maner of Shingle-hall, and Pynnes-croft, and Pynnes-meade.——Andrew, his ſon, was then 21 years old (s), and was ſucceeded by his ſon——Andrew. Of ——Ralph Benton it was purchaſed by

Mr. Richard Day, who dying in Auguſt 1741, left it by will to his grandſon

Sir Richard-Day Jenoure, Bart. Upon whoſe deceaſe, 23 March 1743-4, it came to his mother——Joane, daughter of the ſaid Mr. Day. [See in the other Volume, p. 426.]

John Benton claimed in this maner, a Court baron; liberty of frank-pledge; with all rights, rents, ſervices &c. late belonging to the Monaſtery of Waltham; timber for repairs, wood for firing; pannage for hogs; liberty of fiſhing, fouling, and hunting, without any impediment from the officers of the Foreſt: And, for himſelf, and Tenants, except in new-erected cottages, to take pollard trees for firing in their own meſſuages only; and to have common of paſture in the Foreſt, for all cattle, and at all times of the year, except in the fencing month. All this by preſcription.

The Maner of CHAMBERS,

The manſion houſe is pleaſantly ſituated on a riſing ground, about half a mile ſouth-weſt from the Church; a handſome row of trees leading up to it from the Church Yard. The eſtate is ſaid to be near 300 l. a year.

[R] Arms of Conyers. Azure, a manch or, charged with a baton.

This is thought to have taken its name from ſome owner, but more probably the owner from the place; becauſe it is written variouſly Del Chambre, Atte Chambre, and Chambre. It ſeems, to have been an antient lodge; ſuch a one, in Delamere Foreſt in Cheſhire, retaining the name of the Chamber in the Foreſt. The firſt of the name I meet here, is Edmund Del Chambre of Epping, who, in 1410, held here in fee taile one tenement, 180 acres of arable, 12 of meadow, and 20 of wood, of the Abbot and Convent of Waltham, by the rent of 12*s.* and 4*d.* per ann. And, in the ſame village of the Prior of St. John of Jeruſalem, one acre paying 4*d.* per ann.—— John Del Chambre was his ſon and heir (t). Hereby we ſee, that the chief of this eſtate was holden of the Abbot and Convent of Waltham, lords paramount of this pariſh.

In 1422, and 1430, Thomas atte Chaumbre, brother of Edmund, releaſed all his right in lands here, to Thomas Tyrell, Thomas Lyes, clerk, and others: As did John Chambre Eſq; in 1430, to John Randolf, clerk, &c. (u).

From this family it came, moſt probably by marriage, to the Skrene family: which gave name to the Maner of Skrenes in Roxwell. [See in the other Volume, p. 70. where an account of them is given, and where it properly belongs.] John Skrene who dyed 4 July 1452, held the maner of Chambers in Epping of the King in capite, by the ſervice of the fourth part of a knight's fee: and jointly with his wife Philippa, the maner of Langhous in Chaldwell, &c.——John his ſon, then one year and half old (w), afterwards knighted; held, at the time of his deceaſe in 1474, the maner of Chambres, the maners of Skrenes, Dukes, and Mountneys in Rokeſwell, and others (x).

Rich. Harper ſen. Eſq; who dyed 11 March 1518, held this maner of the Abbot of Waltham, by fealty and rent of one Red Roſe, being of the yearly value of 12l.——George his grandſon was his heir, then aged 15 years (y) [S].

John Halmer held it in 1536, of the King as of his Abbey of Waltham, by the ſame ſervices as above. And dying 7 Decemb. that year, left ——Thomas his ſon and heir 18 years old (z). ——Henry Halmer paſſed it by fine in 1557, to Richard Whorewood (a).

Afterwards, this eſtate was ſold to——Blackwell; from William Blackwell in 1568, it came to——John, who was ſucceeded by another—— John, and he by——Edward.

Then it came into the Searle Family.

Edw. Searle Gent. who dyed 28 October 1625, held the maner of Chambers, with all its rights members and appertenances. John was his ſon and heir forty years old (b) [T].—The latter left ——Andrew, his ſon, who dyed about ſix weeks after marriage; his widow was married to his kinſman——Andrew Searle, and had the eſtate. Andrew, called Capt. Searle, had one ſon, and a daughter wife of Oliver Martin.—Andrew Searle, the ſon had Andrew, John, and Richard.——Andrew Searle Eſq; was of the Middle Temple, and Barriſter at law: He married Anne, youngeſt daughter of Henry Beadell, an eminent ſcrivener in London. The 29th of December 1762, he had the misfortune of being drowned.

The Maner of GILES,

The houſe ſtands about half a mile ſouth of Chambers.

This eſtate paſſed by fine, in 1566, from Thomas Hales Gent. to Antony Browne one of the Juſtices of the Common Pleas; deſcribed as containing one meſſuage, 300 acres of arable, 24 of meadow, 40 of paſture, 36 of wood, and 15*s.* rent (c).

Rich. Raynsford Eſq; who dyed 14 Feb. 1603, held this maner.——Robert his ſon and heir was 21 years old (d).

In the year 1621, this eſtate was poſſeſſed by Thomas Palmer Eſq; third ſon of Henry Palmer of Dewſhall in Lamborn. He was educated at St. John's College in Cambridge; afterwards an utter Barriſter of Lincoln's-inn: and married Joane daughter of John Hoyben of Canterbury, merchant; but dyed in this houſe without iſſue 28 May 1621, and was buried in this Church.

Afterwards it belonged, as well as the former to the Searle Family.

On the 30th of September 1670, Andrew Searle claimed in the Maner of Chambers, a court-baron, with all rents, ſervices, and emoluments belonging thereto; and all trees, woods, and underwoods on the premiſſes.——In the Maner of Gilles, he claimed liberty, of fiſhing, fowling, and hunting; to cut down timber, and wood for firing, without forfeiture; pollard-trees growing on his demeſnes, to be ſpent in firing in the old meſſuages; panage for his hogs; and common of paſture for his tenants, except in the new erected cottages.——John Searle, who had two ancient meſſuages called Tackles and Coldhams, claimed common of paſture for all cattle; timber for repairs; pollard trees; and hedge-bote; by preſcription.

[T] He was one of thoſe who were forced to compound for their eſtates, during the cruel oppreſſions in the laſt century. There is extant a printed acquittance to John Searle of Epping, for 100 l. paid by him in part of 200 l. impoſed on him by Parliament, as a fine for Delinquency, 6 Sept. 1650 ſigned Richard Waring; and a Bond given from John Searle to Oliver Cromwell, penalty 100 l. Condition, that his menill ſervants ſhall demean themſelves well, and appear upon notice left at the houſe.

Campions, is another Maner that formerly belonged to the Searle Family: and before, in 1635, to Thomas Wynch.

William Heſter Eſq; one of the Filazers of the Court of Common-Pleas, dyed poſſeſſed of it in Octob. 1748. And it is now in his heirs.

'Tis ſaid to be about 80 l. a year.

The Maner of Madeleys, or Marles, is a ſmall Maner, holden of the Maner of Epping; and conſiſting of two Farms.

The manſion houſe is a little way eaſt of Shingle-hall above-mentioned.

Of this the ancienteſt account we have, is, that it belonged to the family of Wells, lords of the neighbouring maners of Theydon, Gernon, and Boys.

Adam de Welles, who dyed in 1345, held this tenement called Madles, of the Earl of Oxford, by the ſervice of keeping one ſpar-hawk, at the will, and at the charge, of the ſaid Earl.——John de Welles, his ſon (e), held, in 1361, of the gift of Sir Adam de Welles, 1 meſſuage, 172 acres of arable, 6 of meadow, 12 of wood, 43 of paſture, 68 s. 7 d. rent, in Epping att Hethe, &c. of the Earl Stafford, the Abbot of Waltham, &c. (f).——Sir John de Welles, his ſon, who dyed in 1421, held alſo this maner of the Earl of Stafford. Eudo his ſon was dead before him, but left a ſon, named——Leo, then aged 15 years, who was heir to his grandfather (g). This Leo at the time of his death in 1461, held the maners of Madles and Hemnales, as members and parcels of the maner of Gaynes park in Theydon-Gernon [U].——Richard his ſon and heir was 24 years old (h). Cecily wife of John Viſcount Wells, and daughter of K. Edward IV, which dyed 24 Auguſt 1507, held this maner, with the two others, of the Duke of Buckingham, of his Caſtle of Ongar, by the Service of the Wardſtaff (i) [W].

Sir Will. Fitz. Williams of Milton in Northamptonſhire, who dyed 9 Auguſt 1534, with the maners of Gayneſpark and Hamnalls, held, by the ſame ſervice, this maner of Madells, and 4 meſſuages, 240 acres of arable, 20 of meadow, 40 of paſture, 10 of wood, and 51 s. and 2 d. rent, of the heirs of the Duke of Buckingham, as of the Caſtle of Ongar (k).——William his ſon and heir paſſed it by fine, in 1553 (l), with other lands in Little Parndon, to John Green: who at the time of his deceaſe, in 1624, held this maner of Robert Earl of Warwick, of his Caſtle of Ongar, by the ſervice of the wardſtaff.——John his ſon and heir was twenty one years old (m).

This eſtate came afterwards to——Rawlins, with his wife. Of whom it was purchaſed by Mr. Blake, of London, merchant.

Another Maner,

in this pariſh, but placed in Domeſday-book under the Hundred of Harlow, belonged, in Edward the Confeſſor's time, to Anſgar; and, at the time of the Survey, to Alan Earl of Bretagne [X].

This is ſuppoſed to be what is called the Maner or Hamlet of Riſe-Hill or Rye-Hill, bordering on Little Parndon, the Inhabitants of which do their ſuit and ſervice to the Leet of the Hundred of Harlow; they chuſe their own Conſtable, and Surveyor.

This Hamlet conſiſts only of ſix or ſeven ſtraggling houſes, either little farms or cottages.

A part of this eſtate has been called the Maner of Hales, or Hayles. The ſame is ſometimes called a maner, ſometimes a meſſuage. Nicolas Wychingham Eſq; had lands and tenements in Epping-hethe, which, by his will, proved 16 April 1434, appear to have been this maner; in which he was ſucceeded by his grandſon——Robert. He had alſo Rookhall in Little Totham (n).

Joan Biddleſdon, widow, which dyed 8 Octob. 1496, held this maner of Hayles, of Humfrey Duke of Buckingham; being 260 acres of arable, and 23 acres of meadow. Her ſon and heir——Thomas Biddleſdon was 30 years old (o).

John Smith of Epping Gent. at the time of his deceaſe, 22 July 1570, held this maner or meſſuage of Hayles of the Lord Riche as of his Hundred of Harlow.——Nicolas his ſon and heir was eighteen years old (p).

Sir Will. Rowe likewiſe, at the time of his deceaſe, 23 October 1593, held the maner of Hayles in Epping and Latton: The meaning of which muſt be, that ſome lands in Latton were laid to that eſtate.

This farm belonged afterwards to Mr. Searle, and of him was purchaſed by Iſaac Foſter of London Alderman, who dying without iſſue, gave it to a brother's ſon,——Abraham Foſter of Eltham in Kent Eſq; This laſt by Anne his wife left two daughters, one married to Lewis Scawen Eſq; the other to Mr. Richard Merry of London Merchant.

Charitable Donations.

John Baker, beſides his benefaction for repairing the Roads, mentioned in the beginning of this pariſh; gave by will, a Grove called Ridden, now Stonards grove, lying in Epping, to the intent that the profits ariſing from it, that is from the fall of the wood and timber, ſhould be applied to the uſes of the Churches of Epping and Theydon Gernon, in equal portions.

The Lady Catharine Wentworth, buried here in a vault under the Communion-table, by her will dated 25 October 1638, bequeathed 400 l. to purchaſe Twenty pounds a year in land; whereof forty ſhillings to be given for a ſermon to be preached every year on the day of her burial; and the reſt yearly to the Poor of this pariſh. With that money, and the intereſt thereon, an eſtate in Foſter ſtreet in Harlow of about 30 l. a year, was purchaſed in 1720.

John Reynolds, of Ipſwich, Gent. by a deed dated 5 Febru. 1647, inveſted in truſtees a parcel of land in Theydon-Mount, lett then for 11 l. 10 s. a year, aſſigning one moiety of it to the pariſh of Theydon-Gernon where he was born, and the other to the pariſh of Epping. Of this laſt moiety, one pound was to be paid to a Miniſter, for a ſermon to be preached in the Chapel of Epping on the Wedneſday before Palm-ſunday, as a preparation for the Lord's ſupper: Five ſhillings to the bell-ringer: and the reſt to the Poor of that part of the pariſh called Town-ſide.

——Searle, Gent. made a ſettlement for providing 12 penny loaves, to be diſtributed in this pariſh-Church every Lord's-day among the poor.

The Church, dedicated to All Saints, is of one pace with the Chancel; the whole tyled. A Tower of flint and ſtone contains   Bells. It ſtands pleaſantly on a riſing ground.

In the year 1722, about 260 l. raiſed out of Mr. Baker's gift above-mentioned, were laid out in thoroughly repairing and beautifying this Church. The body of it is paved with Purbeck-ſtone; the Chancel, without the rails, with Portland-ſtone; and within the rails with white marble: and wainſcotted eight foot high with Norway oak. The Altar piece was alſo made handſom: and a new reading Deſk, and Pulpit, erected.

It is remarkable, that the Communion Table is placed at a diſtance from the Eaſt wall of the Chancel, with a rail quite round it: which is ſuppoſed to have been done by Jer. Dyke, Vicar of this Church in the laſt century, out of a ſimple oppoſition to the Injunctions then iſſued out [Y].

The Tithes of this pariſh were given by Adeliza, ſecond Queen of K. Henry I, to the Canons of Waltham, as is obſerved above. K. Henry II. gave afterwards to the Abbot and Monks of the ſame place the Church of Eppinges, with all its appertenances (q). Whereupon the Monks appropriated the whole profits of it to themſelves, and got the Cure ſupplied either by one of their own members, or by ſome Chaplain; which they might more eaſily do, as they were exempt from Epiſcopal juriſdiction. For the Biſhops, upon moſt occaſions, were a ſtrong barrier againſt the incroachments of the Monks. At the ſuppreſſion, the Maner of Epping, with all the Tithes of corn and grain, were lett for 53 l. 6 s. 8 d. The rents of aſſiſe, were 30 s. 6 d. ob. Farm of lands, 15 s. 4 d. Perquiſites of Court, 55 s. 7 d.

The Rectory, with appertenances, were granted, to Thomas Cornwall; who had licenſe, in 1548, to alienate it to Francis Monox, and his heirs. But, before the year 1572, it was again in Qu. Elizabeth. As to the Advowſon of the Vicarage, it was in the Crown from about 1556 to 1572. Then it was granted to Sir Thomas Henneage; and paſſed from him to the Families of Finch, Grey, Conyers, and to the preſent proprietor John Conyers Eſq;

The firſt Inſtitution to it as a Vicarage was in 1545 (r). For before the year 1540, the Abbey and Monks of Waltham were ſole proprietors and Ordinaries of the place; and kept it in their own hands as a Curacy.

In Epping-Town, which ſtands about a mile and a half from the Church, there is a Chapel, dedicated to St. John the Baptiſt.

The Abbot and Monks made a grant of it to John Peryent, Gent. who preſented a Chaplain, that was inſtituted to it, 14 February 1540, as a Free Chapel, without Cure of ſouls (s). K. Edward VI. granted it, 6 Sept. 1550, to John Cokks Eſq; with reſerve to the Inhabitants of the village of Epping-Heath of free ingreſs and regreſs to and from the ſaid Chapel for the hearing of divine ſervice, as had been accuſtomed in former times. The 3d of May 1552, Cokks conveyed it to Henry Archer, and his heirs, with a like reſerve of the free uſe of it to the Inhabitants; they being, in conſideration of that, to keep it in repair. In 1573, this Chapel was ſettled in truſtees for publick uſe: And the truſt has been renewed from time to time.

George Campion gave to the truſtees by will, 17 January 1615, a cloſe in the pariſh of Theydon Boys, called Aſſefield, containing about four acres; appointing, half of the yearly rent to be given towards the maintenance of a preacher in this Chapel; and the other half to the Poor of Epping Town-ſide.

The Chaplain's ſalary is about 26 l. a year.

In 1622 a new aiſle was added to this Chapel: and another in 1662.

Before the Reformation, lands and tenements were put in feoffment by ſeveral perſons, to find a Prieſt to ſing maſs in this Chapel. And in the Certificate of Chantries, it is ſaid, That this was a great Pariſh, ‘ having in yt to the ‘ number of 300 of houſeling people.’

3. NASING, comprifes the north-weſt corner of this Half-Hundred.

The Saxon word Naꞅe, or Næꞅe, ſignifies a noſe, or promontory; and inᵹ, a meadow, or paſture. But how the firſt is applicable to this place, I cannot well judge: Part of the pariſh is on the ſide of a hill. The name is otherwiſe written in records, Naſſingham, Neſinga, Neſinges.

This was one of the eſtates wherewith Harold endowed his College of Waltham (t); which had it at the general ſurvey [Z]: But, beſides that, here was another eſtate, which in Edward the Confeſſor's reign belonged to three freemen; and, at the time of the ſurvey, was holden by Ralph, brother of Ilger [A].

K. Henry II. confirmed to the Abbey of Waltham two Scrutlands of Naſinges [B], with the Church, and all its appertenances. K. Richard I. confirmed it alſo to that Houſe, as a member of Waltham, with all its waſtes, and with 160 acres of eſſarts in this place. Afterwards, he appropriated this Church, and that of Alrichſea in Bedfordſhire, to the Chamber of the Canons Regular at Waltham, for the clothing of thoſe which were in the old houſe there: enjoining, that they ſhould keep thoſe Churches in their own hands for the ſaid uſe, and not grant them to any one, either by way of penſion, or of farm. He alſo gave them the Tithes of Langrich (u).

The Abbey had, beſides, 50 acres of land here, that they purchaſed, in 1279, of Walter de Tany; and 100 acres of arable, in this pariſh, and Reyndone, which they got by exchange with Roger Levenothe: And John Levenothe gave them, in 1304, eighty acres of arable here, holden of the Abbot and Convent by the ſervice of half a knight's fee (w).

Of all the premiſſes the Abbey continued poſſeſſed as long as it ſubſiſted.

At the time of the ſuppreſſion, the maner of Naſing, with the Rectory and all the Tithes, were lett at 31 l. 18 s. The rents of aſſiſe from free and cuſtomary tenants amounted to 32 l. 18 s. 3 d. qa. Perquiſites of court, 12 s. 5 d. (x).

In 1547, K. Edward VI. granted the maner, or farm, and demeſnes of Naſingbury, with Queen-mead, and the Rectory and Tithes, to Sir Ralph Sadleir; who 1 July, the ſame year, had licenſe to alienate them to Sir Antony Denny (y). From him, and his ſucceſſors, as Waltham-Abbey, they deſcended to

Charles-Wake Jones Eſq;

Naſing-Bury, the maner-houſe, lyes near the Meadows, a mile weſt from the Church.

Harolds Park, of which the Houſe ſtands in Waltham pariſh, but moſt of the lands in Naſing, belonged alſo to Waltham-Abbey. [See above under Waltham.]

K. Edward VI. 27 March 1547, by way of exchange with John Dudley Earl of Warwick, gave him Harold's Park, parcel of Waltham-Abbey: which Sir Antony Denny procured.

Qu. Elizabeth, 18 July 1600, granted to Sir Edward Denny, the Park, lands, tenements and hereditaments called Harolds Park, in the pariſh of Naſing (z): undoubtedly to confirm the Family's title.

It now belongs to Richard Bateman Eſq; having been purchaſed by his father Sir James Bateman of Mr. Chauncy.

The Abbot of Waltham had a Park here, which was incloſed by licenſe from K. Henry III. in 1225 (a). It ſeems to be that at Fairmeade, which was in the hands of K. Edward VI.

There are alſo in this pariſh Naſing-Lodge, and Long Green, and Brodley Common.

As for the Lands belonging to Ralph brother of Ilger, mentioned above, they appear to me to have been what is now called Roydon Hamlet.

Mr. John Mumford; Thomas Carrington; Richard Wilſon; Abel Darley Eſq; and Mr. Matthew Merley, have alſo ſome eſtates here.

The Church, dedicated to All-Saints, is a large ſtately edifice, ſtanding on an hill, whence there is a delightful proſpect. It conſiſts of a middle pace, and north aiſle, the length both of Church and Chancel. At the weſt end a Tower of ſtone, of good height, and embattled, contains 5 Bells.

K. Henry II. granted, or confirmed, this Church, with all its appertenances, to Waltham-Abbey (b). And it was particularly aſſigned for clothing ſome of the Monks, as hath been obſerved a little before. The Rectory was accordingly appopriated to them, and a Vicarage ordained, of which they continued patrons till their diſſolution, when they came to the Crown.

In 1547, K. Edward VI. granted the Rectory and great Tithes to Sir Ralph Sadleir (c). From him they paſſed to the Denny Family, and their ſucceſſors, as the eſtates in Waltham-Abbey. But the Advowſon of the Vicarage was not granted away, but hath remained ever ſince the Diſſolution in the Crown. This Vicarage was augmented by the benefaction of the Rev. Stephen Hales, and Mrs. Palmer &c. jointly with Qu. Anne's bounty.

is the moſt ſouthern angle of this Half-Hundred; and was undoubtedly ſo named, from a Ford through the river Ley which bounds it on the Weſt, and the Saxon word Cinᵹ, or as we pronounce it King; qu. King's-Ford, the Meadows adjoyning being called the King's Meads, and the Ley the King's Stream. In records it is otherwiſe written Chilgelford, Cingeford, Cinghefort, Echingelsford, Schingelford, Shingelford, Shymgylford.

The chief Maner in this pariſh was given by K. Edward the Confeſſor to the Cathedral Church of St. Paul's [C]; Beſides which there was another Maner belonging to a Freeman, that was held, at the time of the Survey, by Robert Gernon.

From hence aroſe the two capital Maners in this pariſh, 1. One called Chingford St. Paul's. 2. And the other Chingford Comitis. From which laſt was afterwards taken another, named, 3. Gowers and Buckerels.

In this pariſh are alſo, Chingford-Green, Low-ſtreet, Merry Mount, and Warren-houſe.

1. The Maner of CHINGFORD St. PAULS.

Chingford-hall lyes down near the river Ley, about a mile ſouth-weſt from the Church. It has a court leet, and court baron.

In the year 1181, the demeſnes of this maner were, 140 acres of arable, 17 acr. of meadow, 17 acr. of marſh, and about 200 of wood (d).

The Dean and Chapter of St. Paul's continued poſſeſſed of this Maner till the Reformation, when K. Henry VIII. took it from them.

In 1551, K. Edward VI. granted the maner of Chingford Pauli to Sir Tho. Darcy, with the Advowſon of the Church. [See in the other Volume, p. 494.] But Qu. Mary taking it from him, in 1553, granted it to Suſan Tonge, alias Clarencieux, widow, and her heirs (e). She was firſt Lady of her Bedchamber, daughter of Richard White of Hutton, and widow of Tho. Tonge Clarencieux, King at Arms; and there was included in the grant a meſſuage called Harriotts, and Stubwood, in this pariſh. In 1557 the ſaid Suſan Tonge had leave to convey the premiſſes, late Sir Thomas Darcy's, to ſeveral in truſt, and——George White her nephew had licenſe, 12 May 1565, to paſs them to——Humfrey White his brother (f).

In Michaelmaſs-term 1567, this Humfrey, and Dorothy his wife, by virtue of a licenſe dated 14 Auguſt the ſame year, alienated this maner, with appertenances, to

John Leigh, or Lee (g), deſcended from the ancient family of Leigh, of Baggeſley in the County of Cheſter.——Sir Robert Leigh, moſt probably his ſon, dyed 17 June 1607; poſſeſſed of this maner; and of Wooddeheron, and Reddens or Rayles, 70 acres; 4 cloſes called Reddens, 40 acres; Docke marſhes, 18 acres, &c. His ſon and heir——Robert, then near 20 years old (h), was afterwards knighted, and dyed 18 June 1622, aged 55, leaving by Mary his wife, daughter of Henry Joſceline of Torrels hall in Willingale, 3 ſons, and 4 daughters (i)——Robert Leigh Eſq; the eldeſt ſon and heir, married Margaret, daughter of Miles Branthwaite of Heathfield in Norfolk Eſq; and had by her one ſon, and three daughters. He dyed 17 January 1672-3, aged fourſcore years (k); and was ſucceeded by his only ſon——Edward, who had three wives, but iſſue only by the laſt, namely Agnes daughter of Richard Kirkby of Kirkby in Lancaſhire Eſq; By her he had 2 ſons, Alſo, by Charter, exemption from the Regarders of the Foreſt, and other pleas and actions: and liberty to take what wood he wanted for his own uſe, within this maner: and view of frank pledge.

2. The Maner of CHINGFORD COMITIS, or Earl's, is the other capital Maner in this Pariſh; ſo named from the noble Earls to which it belonged, as will appear in the ſequel.

The manſion houſe ſtands about a mile eaſt from the Church, on the left hand ſide of the road leading from hence to Woodford; at a place called Friday-hill.

This is the Maner that belonged, at the time of the Survey, to Robert Gernon [E], anceſtor of the Montfichet Family; on which account it was holden of their Barony of Stanſted Mont-fichet, by the ſervice of one knight's fee. [Concerning theſe two Families, ſee the other Volume, p. 576.]

Under them this eſtate was held by the following perſons. About the year 1188, it was in Fulbert de Dover, ſecond of the name, lord of Chiſham in Kent. He married Roeſe, daughter of Geffrey de Lucy, ſon of Richard de Lucy, Juſtice of England, and had by her——Robert, who dyed about the year 1203.——Richard de Dover, his ſon, married alſo a wife named Roeſe, and they held jointly this manner of Chilgelford in the reign of K. Henry III.——Richard, their ſon and heir (m), by Joane his wife, which enjoyed this eſtate during her life, left an only daughter

Roeſe, that became the wife of Richard, natural ſon of K. John. They had two daughters, coheirs, Iſabel, the ſecond, brought this eſtate in marriage to her huſband David de Strathbolgie, Earl of Athol (n). Their ſon——John, Earl of Athol, inherited after them. But, during the cruel ambitious wars of K. Edward I. againſt Scotland, happening to fall a ſacrifice to that Prince, for his adherence to Robert de Brus, he had the favour, on account of his being deſcended from the blood royal, to be hanged on a gibbet fifty feet high. His head was ſet on London bridge, and his body burnt (o). His lands thereupon becoming forfeited to the Crown, K. Edward I. gave this eſtate to

Ralph de Monthermer, Earl of Glouceſter, who had married Joan de Acres that King's daughter, relict of Gilbert de Clare. However, in the reign of K. Edward II, David ſon of the Earl of Athol, compounded with Monthermer for his eſtate again. He had a ſon David, who preſented to this living, in 1325. Yet this ſeems to have been but a part of the maner; for Bartholomew de Badleſmere had of K. Edward II. in exchange for lands elſewhere 10*l.* rent in Echinglesford, out of the eſtate of the Earl of Athol hanged for felony (p).

And after this Bartholomew had been beheaded, in 1321, for oppoſing the unlawful proceedings of Iſabel, Queen of K. Edward II; his widow, and his ſon——Giles de Badleſmere recovered this, and the reſt of his eſtates, by the favour of K. Edward III, and dyed poſſeſſed of them [F] (q). [See in the other Volume, p. 415. 438.] Upon the ſon's deceaſe in 1338, his four ſiſters became his coheirs.

Margery, the eldeſt, had this maner for her purparty (r); ſhe married William Lord Roos of Hamlake, who held, jointly with her, this maner of Chingelford, of the heirs of Richard de Plaiz, as of the fee of Stanſted Monfichet, in free ſocage, by the ſervice of 1 d. per ann. as all his ſucceſſors did. He dyed in 1343; and ſhe in 1363 (s)——Thomas Lord Roos, was their ſon. The time of his death is unknown. But Beatrix his widow, who dyed in 1415, enjoyed this maner of Shingalford. Her eldeſt ſon, and ſucceſſor,——John Lord Roos held this maner of the heirs of John Monfichet: And departing this life in 1421, was ſucceeded by his brother——Thomas, then 14 years and a half old (t): who, at the time of his deceaſe in 1430, left——Thomas his ſon, three years old (u). He had the misfortune of being attainted in parliament in 1461, for his firm adherence to K. Henry VI. Thereupon K. Edward IV. gave this eſtate to his kinſman, [F] The family of Badleſmere, beſides this maner of Chingford, had thoſe of Thackſted, Lacheley in Lindſell, Little Stanbridge, North Fambridge; and 100 acres in Stebbing, holden of Henry de Ferrers; with other eſtates in Lindſell, and Dunmow. And Giles held, beſides, the Bailiwick and Stewardſhip of the Foreſt of Eſſex, of the King, as of his Crown. Inquiſ. 2 and 12 Edw. III. See in the other Volume, p. 438. 446.

Henry Bourchier, Earl of Eſſex. He dyed 4 April 1483, poſſeſſed of the maner (w), and was ſucceeded by his grandſon——Henry Bourchier, Earl of Eſſex; who departed this life 13 March 1540. [See in the other Volume, p. 253, 254.] From this Family it undoubtedly took the denomination of Comitis.

But we find that this eſtate was reſtored to the Family of Roos in K. Henry VIIth's time. Edmund Lord Roos, ſon of Thomas, then enjoyed the maner, and preſented to this Rectory in 1490.

Alienor, his ſiſter and co-heir, was married to Sir Robert Mannors, who dyed 13 October 1508: leaving his ſon——George Mannors, Lord Roos: that dyed in 1513, and was ſucceeded by——Thomas his ſon and heir, created Earl of Rutland, 28 June 1525. He had had ſpecial livery of this eſtate, the year before; as alſo of what had belonged to Iſabell, another ſiſter and coheir of Edmund Lord Roos.

About the year 1537, Thomas Earl of Rutland exchanged this maner with K. Henry VIII. for ſome lands that had belonged to Coggeſhall-Abbey (x).

I ſuppoſe it reſted after that in the Crown, till Qu. Mary granted the maner of Chingford Comitis, and the Advowſon of the Church, as well as the maner of Chingford St. Paul's, to Suſan Tonge, widow, in 1553 (y). Her nephew Humfrey White had licenſe 8 May 1564 to alienate it to

William Jeffreyſon, and others: And, 2 December 1571, the ſaid Humfrey, and Dorothy his wife, conveyed it to John Branche (z). At the time of his deceaſe, 4 July 1588, he held the maner of Chingford Comitis, by the 60th part of a knight's fee: and a meſſuage called Friday-hill, [now the Maner houſe,] and Burnet woods; of the Queen in capite: Alſo a meſſuage called Chingford-Hatch, holden of the Rectory of Chingford. His three ſiſters, or their iſſue, were his coheirs.

Mary, one of them, married to William Udall, or Wedalle, had this eſtate (a). Their ſon——Henry Udall, ſold it, by licenſe dated 2 Decemb. 1591, to Lancelot Bathurſt, and his ſon——Ralph (b). The latter, at the time of his deceaſe, 13 July 1608, held this maner of Chingford-Comitis, with all the lands, ſervices, court lete, free-warren; together with lands called Harriots; and the Advowſon of this Church; thereto belonging.——Ralph Bathurſt was his brother, and next heir (c). Of him it was purchaſed by Thomas Boothby Eſq; This Family is originally of Staffordſhire, and was ſeated at Marchanton in that county; where lived Richard Boothby in the reign of K. Henry VIII; from whom ſprang a numerous progeny; that got great eſtates by merchandizing; made a conſiderable figure; and produced two Baronets Families: one of which was of this pariſh, and the other of Broadlow-Aſh, in Derbyſhire (d).

Thomas, the purchaſer of this eſtate, was the ſecond ſon of William Boothby, merchant in London. He was himſelf a Merchant, free of the Merchant-Taylors Company, and fined for Sheriff. By his firſt wife, Anne Grafton, who dyed 16 Decemb. 1622, he had two daughters; and three ſons, William, and Richard, that dyed unmarried; and Walter, afterwards ſeated at Tottenham in Middleſex. By his ſecond wife, Elizabeth Wright, he had two ſons, Thomas, a merchant in Spain; Robert: and two daughters, Anne, wife of Matthew Bedell Eſq; and Elizabeth, wife of —— Styles of Weſtram in Kent Eſq;——Robert Boothby Eſq; the ſecond ſon, of Friday-hill, married Mary, daughter and heir of George Hyer of Weſton in the pariſh of Shere in Surrey, by whom he had 5 ſons, and 4 daughters. The ſons were, Thomas; George, who dyed ſingle; Robert; William, of Shere; and Henry.——Thomas, the eldeſt ſon and heir, was created a Baronet 9 Novemb. 1660. He married Elizabeth, daughter of——Styles, of Weſtram in Kent, and had by her Thomas, who dyed 1 Decemb. 1669, aged 24, being a knight, and is buried in this Church; Robert, who deceaſed young; and Elizabeth, wife of Hugh Wood, of London, Turkey-merchant. Dying without iſſue male, he left this eſtate to his next ſurviving brother.——Robert Boothby Eſq; He married Sarah, daughter of Samuel Jackſon of Bicker in Lincolnſhire Eſq; by whom he had——Thomas, his only ſon and heir; and a daughter, Sarah, that dyed unmarried: Thomas Boothby Eſq; dyed 13 May 1735.——Robert Boothby Eſq; is the preſent poſſeſſor [].

In 1670, Dame Elizabeth Boothby claimed, within the Foreſt, the Maner of Chingford Comitis, with all liberties, emoluments, commons, waſtes, fiſheries, court-lete, and court-baron, and other immunities, and privileges thereto belonging; free-warren at Danhurſt-hill, and Dove-houſe field; ſeparate fiſhery in the river Ley, running through Chingford-marſhes; by Charter. Alſo, for herſelf and her tenants, common of paſture in the waſtes, and commonable places of the Foreſt, for all commonable cattle, at all times except in the fence month: And liberty to cut down pollard-trees upon the demeſnes of her maner, as of old accuſtomed: likewiſe hedge-bote: And to appoint a ſworn wood-ward, for her woods of Larks, and Danhurſt-hill.

The Maners of St. Paul, and of Gernon, were originally the only Two Maners in this Pariſh. The former remained undivided: But the latter was divided; For, of Giles de Plaiz, lord of Stanſted Montfichet, who dyed in 1303, Alezander Bayloll held two knights fees, in Chingford in the Hundred of Little Waltham; and in Wendon in the Hundred of Weſthodeleſford (e).

The part of Gernon's Maner which formed that of Chingford-Comitis, hath been accounted for. But this that belonged to Bayloll, is what conſtituted another Maner in this pariſh, called which lies due north from Friday-hill.

GOWERS

GOWERS and BUCKERELS,

It was formerly called Pimps Maner, and there is a field ſtill called Pimps-Hall.

Of this eſtate no mention occurs till the reign of K. Henry VIII. It was in that King's hands in 1544, and was ſtyled late parcel of the lands of George Monox (f). It does not appear by the record how he came by it: But, the ſame year, he granted to Geffrey Lukyn, and his heirs, the Maner and capital meſſuage of Gowers and Buckerells in Chingford; and four cloſes of paſture there, containing 30 acres; Stokeley, 40 acres; Buckerells garden; Manfield, 16 acres; Lorymes, 10 acres; eleven acres and a half in Broad marſh mead; and other ſmaller parcels, in all to the amount of 181 acres (g) [G]. See in the other volume, p. 460.

The 16th of June this ſame year, Lukyn had licenſe to alienate the premiſſes to Roland Rampſton, and his heirs (h)——Robert Rampſton, his ſon, Yeoman of the Chamber, to K. Edward VI. Qu. Mary, and Qu. Elizabeth; and mentioned below among the Benefactors, ſucceeded him, and dyed poſſeſſed of it 3 Auguſt 1585. He had alſo Stone-hall in Little Canfield, &c. [See in the other Volume, p. 464.]——Roland Rampſton, ſon of his brother John, was his heir (i). The latter, by licenſe dated 2 March, ſold this eſtate to

John Hare Eſq; and Lucy his wife, and Nicolas their ſon; by the name of Gowers and Buckerells, alias Pympes maner; one meſſuage, 100 acres of arable, 30 of meadow, 120 of paſture, 40 of wood, 20 of marſh, and 20 s. rent, in Shingleford, alias Chingford (k).——Nicolas Hare, by licenſe dated 2 March, 1597-8, ſold it to

Nicolas Barnſley, and his wife, and William Barnſley (l). In 1630, it belonged to

George Nodes, who put in his claim at the Court of Stratford Langthorn for the privileges of a Maner in this eſtate; which was allowed by the Attorney general, except the article of free-warren. Soon after it was in

Thomas Gundrey Eſq; firſt Secondary in the Treaſurer's Remembrancer's office in the Exchequer; a younger brother of William Gundrey of Wimburn in Dorſetſhire. From him it deſcended to his ſon, grandſon, and great grandſon, all of the name of Thomas. The latter was of Deuliſh near Dorcheſter, and of him it was purchaſed, about the year 1730, by Mr.

Iſrael Hammond: and now belongs to——James Hammond, Eſq;

Chingford-hatch is a capital meſſuage, at the bottom of the road below Friday-hill. It was held by John Branche, mentioned under the laſt maner.

The lordſhip, and maner of Borohouſe, is alſo mentioned, as lying partly in this pariſh, and partly in the adjoyning ones of Tottenham and Edmonton. It was granted by Qu. Elizabeth to William Dodington, 2 Janu. 1559 (m), and is ſuppoſed to be the Farm called Burwoods, belonging to the daughters of Mr. Tanner.

Miles Nightingale Eſq; Mr. George Day; Richard Cowley; John Dell; Thomas Trapps, &c. have alſo ſome lands here.

In this Pariſh is an eſtate of 24 l. per ann. holden of the Rector, lately in poſſeſſion of Daniel Haddon, of Broxted, called Scotts Mayhews, alias Brindwoods. Upon every alienation, the Owner of the eſtate, with his wife, man-ſervant, and maid ſervant, each ſingle on a horſe, come to the Parſonage; where the Owner does his homage, and pays his relief, in manner following. He blows three blaſts with his horn: carries a Hawk on his fiſt: his ſervant has a greyhound in a ſlip; both for the uſe of the Rector that day. He receives a chicken for his hawk, a peck of oats for his horſe, a loaf of bread for his greyhound. They all dine, after which the maſter blows three blaſts of his horn, and they all depart.

Charities.

Robert Rampſton, Eſq; mentioned a little before, having in his life time given 8 l. yearly to 8 pariſhes in this county; he by will ſettled 22 l. a year for ever, to be diſtributed among the Poor of 12 pariſhes; whereof this pariſh receives 3 l. yearly. See in the other Volume, p. 464.

Thomas Boothby Eſq; gave 5 l. 4 s. per ann. to the Poor of this pariſh for ever; and tyed lands for the payment of it: It is diſtributed in bread every Sunday.

The rent of three half acres in the common Marſh here; given to the poor in bread: The donor unknown.

The CHURCH, dedicated to St. Peter and St. Paul, conſiſts of a body and a ſouth aiſle; but the Chancel is of one pace: the whole tyled. The Tower contains 3 Bells.

This Church was not founded on the Maner of St. Pauls, but on that of Chingford-Comitis (n); and therefore hath been all along in the gift of the Lords of this laſt Maner.

Chingford pariſh is rated to the land-tax at 1744 l.

HAVERING,

Liberty, is bounded on the weſt by the Half-Hundred of Becontree; on the north by part of Ongar-Hundred; on the ſouth by the river Thames; and by Chafford Hundred on the eaſt: being ſeparated from this laſt by a rivulet; whoſe ſprings or fountains are about Naveſtoke and South-Weald, and its courſe by Rainham to the Thames at Wennington. The Saxon name for another little ſtream from Brentwood, which joins this below Brook-ſtreet, is Sẏbebuꞃᵹhbꞃoke, and in its farther courſe has been called Inᵹꞃebuꞃne.

This Liberty is nine miles long from north to ſouth; and four miles and a half in its greateſt width from eaſt to weſt; but near the Thames it is not above three quarters of a mile wide. It has been anciently a member of Becontree Hundred, and is ſet down as ſuch in the Conqueror's Survey. In the Saxons time, it was ancient demeſne, of the Crown Imperial of this realm: and, being one of the Royal Palaces, was erected into a Liberty independent of that Hundred, or indeed of any Juriſdiction, either Eccleſiaſtical or Civil, of the County, having in itſelf a tribunal for life and death. The reaſon of this ſeems to be, that the Kings of England having here a hunting-houſe, at which they paſſed much of their time, their officers ſhould take cognizance of crimes within the verge of their Court, and that offenders ſhould receive ſentence under their more immediate inſpection.—Or elſe it was an uſual Privilege belonging to the royal Palaces.

This, probably, was the cauſe of eſteeming Becontree, in modern reckoning, an Half Hundred, becauſe ſo great a branch had been lopt off from it as Havering.

The name of Havering, is plainly derived from the two Saxon words, Hæꝼeꞃ, a goat, and inᵹ, paſture; qu. Goat's paſture.

But there is another derivation, though quite legendary and fabulous, which ſome Readers would think me very deficient if I ſhould not mention. The ſubſtance of it is, That St. John the Evangeliſt, under the diſguiſe of an old beggar, aſking alms of K. Edward the Confeſſor; the King having nothing elſe at hand ready to beſtow upon him, gave him a Ring off his finger. Some years after, St. John ſent him this Ring back by two Engliſh Pilgrims, with notice that he ſhould dye within ſix months. They delivered the meſſage and Ring to him here, at his Bower; whence this place received the appellation of Havering. For a more particular account, see the note below [H].

This Liberty, being ancient Demeſne of the Crown, belonged, as we have ſeen to K. Edward the Confeſſor: and, under him, to Earl Harold, his ſucceſſor in the throne. At the time of the general Survey, it was part of William the Conqueror's Demeſne lands: Under whom ſome parcels were held by Robert ſon of Corbutio, Hugh de Montfort, John ſon of Waleram; holden before by five Freemen, and one Sochman. To this maner belonged twenty acres, lying in Lochetuna, or Loughton [I].

Havering Liberty was divided afterwards into theſe ſeveral Maners.

[H] The ſtory is garniſhed with theſe circumſtances, That as the Church of Clavering in this County was conſecrating, and was to be dedicated to Chriſt and St. John the Evangeliſt, K. Edward the Confeſſor riding that way, alighted, out of devotion, to be preſent at the conſecration. During the proceſſion, a fair old man came to the King, and begged alms of him, in the name of God, and St. John the Evangeliſt. The King having nothing elſe to give, as his almoner was not at hand, took the Ring from his finger and gave it the poor man. Some years after, two Engliſh pilgrims having loſt their way as they were travelling to the Holy Land, they ſaw a company clothed in white, with two lights carried before them; and behind them came a fair ancient Man. The pilgrims joyning them, the old Man enquired who they were, and whence they came. After hearing their ſtory, he brought them into a fine city, where was a room furniſhed with all manner of dainties: when they had well refreſhed themſelves, and reſted there all night, the old man ſet them again in the right way. And at parting, he told them, He was John the Evangeliſt: Adding, as the Legend goes on, 'Say ye unto 'Edwarde your kyng, that I grete hym well by the token 'that he gaaf to me this Ryng wyth his own handes at the 'halowyng of my Chirche, whiche rynge ye ſhall deliver hym 'agayn, And ſay ye to him, that he dyſpoſe his goodes, For 'wythin ſixe monethes he ſhall be in the joye of heven wyth 'me, where he ſhall have his rewarde for his chaſtite and for 'his good lyvinge.'

At their return home, the two Pilgrims waited upon the King, who was then at this Bower, and delivered to him their meſſage, and the Ring, from which circumſtance this place is ſaid to have received the name of Have-ring.

This whole ſtory is wrought in baſſo relievo in the Chapel at Weſtminſter where Edward the Confeſſor lies buried, on the back of the ſkreen that divides it from the altar. The ſtatues of the King and the Pilgrims are alſo over the Courts of the King's-bench and Common-pleas, in Weſtminſter-hall; and over the gate going into Dean's-yard. His picture was alſo on the glaſs of the eaſt window of the ſouth aiſle of Romford Chapel, with two pilgrims, and under it, Johannes per peregrinos miſit Regi Edwardo. A good picture of him is now on the glaſs of the Chancel-window of that Chapel; renewed in 1707. The Ring pretended to have been given by him, as above, to St. John, was depoſited among other reliques in his Abbey at Weſtminſter, and there was granted to this ſuppoſed Ring of St. Edward an Indulgence for 6 years and 360 days. HAVERING-BOWER was an ancient Retiring-place of ſome of our Saxon Kings; particularly of that ſimple Saint Edward the Confeſſor, who took a great delight in it, as being woody and ſolitary, fit for his private devotions. The legend ſays, it abounded ſo with warbling nightingales, that they diſturbing him at his prayers, he earneſtly deſired of God their abſence; ſince which time, as the credulous neighbouring ſwaines believed, never nightingale was heard to ſing in the park, but many without the pales, as in other places (p). It was named Bower, from ſome fine Bower, or ſhady walk, as Roſamond's Bower at Woodſtock.

This is a moſt charming ſpot, having a beautiful extenſive proſpect over a great part of Eſſex, Hertfordſhire, Kent, Middleſex, and Surrey; and alſo a view of the Thames, with ſhips continually ſailing up and down. Here Edward the Confeſſor is reported to have built a Palace, or perhaps improved an old one: It was of free-ſtone, and leaded. Some parts of the Walls are ſtill ſtanding, but not enough to ſhew its original form or extent; it being ruinous and uninhabitable.

The CHAPEL ſtands near it, being only of one pace. It is dedicated to St. John the Evangeliſt.

Beſides this palace, there was another at Pirgo, that belonged to the Queens of England; where they reſided at their own conveniency; or probably during their widow-hood, Havering being uſually part of the Queens Jointure [K].

Elianor Queen of K. Edward I. appears to have enjoyed it; and Henry Wych held of her one virgate of land, by the rent of 30s. a year, and 7s. per ann. under the name of cuſtom; together with ſuit at her court from three weeks to three weeks; and by the ſervice of fencing in ſix perches of the Queen's Park (q); By which it appears, that both Havering Bower, and Pirgo had Parks.

Anne, Queen of K. Richard II. held in dower this maner of Havering, then worth 100l. a year (r).

In the year 1166, William Hurel held land in Havering, by the ſerjeancy of keeping the Park: And John de Ruyme, in 1210 (s). But, in general, The keeping of the PARK at Havering went along with the Foreſterſhip of Eſſex, as appears from Records in the Tower. Richard Montfichet held both through almoſt the whole reign of K. Henry III. (t). Of him Thomas de Clare, ſecond ſon of Richard Earl of Glouceſter purchaſed it; from whom it came in time to the Veres Earls of Oxford. But Thomas de Clare was deprived of it, for a treſpaſs, or miſdemeanor, of a Park-keeper of his (u). And the cuſtody was given to Henry Fitz-Aucher, who was commanded by K. Henry III. in 1223, to ſuffer one John, keeper of the Park of Havering, to have the tops of the timber trees there felled, in like ſort as he and his anceſtors were wont to have the ſame in the time of King John (w).

In 1307, Gilbert, ſon and heir of Thomas de Clare, petitioned the Parliament that he might obtain the cuſtody of the ſaid Maner and Park [L]. What effect this petition had, doth Henry VI. gave it in 1437, to Thomas Skargill, for life; and the next year, the office of Riding Foreſter in Waltham-foreſt; jointly with William Bolton. And in 1437; he granted the office of keeping the ſouth-gate of this park to John Kemp, for life. The ſame he granted, in 1452, to Ralph Boyſe for life; and the cuſtody of the Park, and Houſe of Havering, by patent and by authority of parliament.—K. Edward IV. in 1475, beſtowed upon Sir Thomas Montgomery, [mentioned in the other Volume, p.] the cuſtody and ſtewardſhip of the whole Foreſt of Eſſex, with all emoluments thereto belonging. He kept them till 12 Auguſt 1484, when they were given to Robert Brakenbury, one of K. Richard the Third's Favorites: who had before given to his ſecretary, John Kendal, the cuſtody of Havering Park (x).—The Vere Family, which claimed from Thomas de Clare above-mentioned, having been attainted, and two of them beheaded, for their adherence to the Houſe of Lancaſter; in 1485——John de Vere, Earl of Oxford, was reſtored by act of parliament to his Honors and Eſtates, and to the office of grand Foreſter of Eſſex (y) [N].

Havering-Park contained a thouſand acres. The Lands are ſtill in the Crown, but lett upon leaſe [O]. K. Charles II. leaſed out one part to the Duke of Grafton: The dutcheſs of Grafton, and her ſecond huſband Sir Thomas Hanmer, ſold the leaſe to one Richard Holdich, a South-ſea Director. Upon the Directors forfeiture in 1721, this part coming to the South-ſea Company, they ſold it to Richard Ladbroke Eſq; who gave it to his nephew Richard Ladbroke Eſq; brother to Sir Robert, Alderman of London. Part of this is in the pariſh of Stapleford-Abbots.—The other part of the Park was leaſed out by K. Charles II. to Robert Bertie, Earl of Lindſey, and enjoyed afterwards by his ſon, created Duke of Ancaſter; and by his widow, the Ducheſs.

PIRGO

Stands near the Bower. It is written Pirgore and Purgore; the firſt ſyllable ſeems derived from Park: Perhaps it was Park-gate, as there were ſeveral Gates to the Park. Hereabout may have been one, which gave name to the place before this Houſe was erected, and the little Park taken out of the Foreſt. Or elſe it is moſt probably derived from the two Saxon words, Pyꞃıᵹe, and hou.

This Houſe was built early, though not ſo early as the Bower. It was in being in 11 Henry III. aº. 1226, for we have ſeen already that it was at that time in cuſtody of Phyllippe Forreſter; how long before that reign, nothing ſhews. And it ſeems to have been always the Houſe of a Queen Conſort, and her Jointure.

Here dyed, 9 July 1437, Joane, widow of K. Henry IV (z).

Q. Elizabeth, 24 April 1559, granted to Sir John Grey the ſite and capital Meſſuage of Pirgoe, alias Pirgore; and the Grange, or houſe of huſbandry, called Piggs, thereto annexed: alſo the Park of Pirgoe, with its rights, members, and appertenances: and all the parcels of the demeſne lands belonging to that capital meſſuage: To hold in capite, by the fortieth part of a knight's fee (a) [P].

This Sir John Grey was ſecond ſon of Thomas Grey, Marquis of Dorſet; which Thomas was grandſon of Sir John Grey, and Elizabeth Widvile, afterwards, Queen of K. Edward IV; concerning whom, and his Family, we ſhall beg leave to refer to Sir William Dugdale's Baronage (b). Only, we ſhall obſerve, that his eldeſt brother, Henry Grey, Duke of Suffolk, was father of the Lady Jane Grey, proclaimed Queen of England.

Sir John Grey dyed 19 Novemb. [Q] 1564, poſſeſſed of this eſtate, with the whole Park; and the ſeveral parcels of the Demeſnes belonging to the ſaid capital meſſuage [R]: and lies buried in the Chapel of Pirgo, with his wife, Mary, daughter of Antony Brown, Viſcount Montacute. They had 4 ſons, Thomas, John, Edward, Henry; and 4 daughters, Frances, Elizabeth, Anne, Margaret.——Henry Grey Eſq; the youngeſt ſon, was created 21 July 1603, Baron Grey of Groby. By his wife, Anne, daughter of William Lord Windſor, he had two ſons, John and Ambroſe, and two daughters. He dyed 26 July 1614 (c). Before his deceaſe he ſold this eſtate to Sir Thomas Cheke Kt. grandſon of the learned Sir John Cheke.

The Cheke family was originally of Motſton in the iſle of Wight: where lived Richard Cheke, in the reign of K. Richard II. who married one of the daughters of the Lord Montacute: and had for ſucceſſors, Edward, John, another John, and Robert. This laſt, by a daughter of . . . Bremſhot, or Branchet, had 4 ſons, David, Peter, William, and Thomas. David's line long flouriſhed at Motſton.——Peter, the ſecond ſon, was ſettled in Cambridge, and by Agnes his wife, daughter of——Dufford, or De Ufford, had John, and 5 daughters; Anne, married to George Allington; Alice, to . . . Blithe M. D. Elizabeth, to . . . . Spering; Mary, to Sir William Cecil, the great Lord Burleigh; Magdalen, firſt to Laurence Ereſby, then to John Purefoy.——John Cheke, the ſon, was one of the moſt learned men in his time, Greek Profeſſor at Cambridge, one of the Preceptors to K. Edward VI. knighted in 1551, made Chamberlain of the Exchequer, Secretary of State &c: He dyed 13 Septemb. 1557 [S]. By Mary, his wife, daughter and heir of Richard Hill, Serjeant of the King's wine-cellar, [re-married to Henry Mackwilliam Eſq; and that lived till 30 Novemb. 1616. See in the other Volume, p. 357,] he left three ſons, Henry; John, and Edward, which two laſt dyed without iſſue.——Henry Cheke Eſq; the eldeſt ſon, married Frances, daughter of Sir Humfrey Radcliffe of Elveſtow in Bedfordſhire, ſiſter to Edward Radcliffe, Baron Fitz-Walter, and Earl of Suſſex; which Edward dyed without iſſue in 1643. Whereupon, in right of the ſaid Frances, her ſon,——Sir Thomas Cheke Kt. the purchaſer of this eſtate, had a claim to the Barony of Fitz-Walter: He married, firſt, . . . daughter of Peter Oſborn Eſq; but by her had no iſſue. His ſecond wife was, Eſſex, daughter of Robert Earl of Warwick, by whom he had Robert, born in 1625; Thomas; Charles; Francis: and 5 daughters, Frances, wife of Sir Lancelot Lake, Kt. Eſſex, married firſt to Sir Robert Bevill K. B. afterwards to Edward Earl of Mancheſter; Anne, firſt to Richard Rogers Eſq; and next to Robert Earl of Warwick; Iſabell, to Sir Francis Gerrard, Bart. and Elizabeth, to Sir Richard Franklin Bart. Their father, Sir Thomas Cheke, dyed 25 March 1659.——Robert, the eldeſt ſon, put in his claim to the Barony of Fitz-Walter againſt Henry Mildmay Eſq; in 1660 (d). But dying without iſſue was ſucceeded in this eſtate by his next brother——Col. Thomas Cheke, Lieutenant of the Tower in the reigns of K. Charles II. and James II. who dyed 13 April 1688. He married firſt the Lady Dorothy Sidney, daughter of Philip Earl of Leiceſter, by whom he had no iſſue. He afterwards married Lætitia, daughter, and at length heir, of Edward Ruſſel, ſecond ſon of Francis Earl of Bedford, and ſiſter to Edward Earl of Orford, and by her, who dyed 9 Janu. 1721-2, had Edward, Eſſex, and Anne. —Edward Cheke Eſq; the ſon and heir, married Anne, daughter of Sir William Ellys, of Nocton, in Lincolnſhire, Bart. and had by her ſeveral children; who all dying young, the Eſtate devolved, upon his deceaſe 8 Octob. 1707, to his ſurviving ſiſter

Anne, relict of Sir Thomas Tipping of Wheatfield in Oxfordſhire Bart. She dyed 20 January 1727-8, and leaving only two daughters, this eſtate upon a partition fell to the lot of the youngeſt daughter [T], Catharine, married to Thomas Archer of Umberſlade in the County of Warwick Eſq; On the 14th of July 1747, he was created Baron Archer of Umberſlade: and is the preſent poſſeſſor of Pirgo, and other very conſiderable eſtates. His Lady, Catharine, dyed at Pirgo, 20 July 1754. His great grandfather Sir Simon Archer Kt. was diſtinguiſhed for his ſingular accompliſhments, and his great knowledge in the Hiſtory and Antiquities of this Kingdom. But for a more particular account of this worthy Family, ſee Sir William Dugdale's Antiquit. of Warwickſhire, p. 781. and Ar. Collins's Peerage, Vol. V. p. 496.

This fine Seat has a ſmall Chapell; in which there is a Monument for Sir John Grey, and his wife. Here alſo lye buried Thomas Cheek Eſq; Edward his ſon, Anne his widow, that dyed 11 Febru. 1722, and ſome of their children.

The Maner of DAGENHAMS

Stands ſouth-eaſt from Pirgo, bordering upon South-Weald. The name came probably from an owner who wrote himſelf de Dagenham. The s at the end of Dagenhams, the name of a neighbouring pariſh, intimates as much [U].

Henry Percy, Earl of Northumberland who dyed in 1454, held the maners of Dagenham and Cokerells of the King in capite, as of his maner of Havering att Boure, by fealty and yearly rent of 9 l. 10s. 0.——Henry was his ſon and heir (e).

Sir William Huſee at the time of his deceaſe, 8 Septemb. 1495, held the maner of Potters-Fee, Dagnamis and Cockerells of Elizabeth, Queen of K. Henry VII. as of her maner of Haveringring-att-Bowre [W];——John his ſon and heir, was thirty years old (f).

In 1517, Peter Chriſtmas held the maners of Daggenham and Cockerells of Catharine Queen of England as of her maner of Havering; He dyed 9 October that year, and —— William Turk, his next heir, was twenty four years old (g).

The next poſſeſſor was Thomas Legatt, who had not only theſe two Maners, but alſo ſeveral parcels adjoyning [X]; and departing this life 18 January 1555, was ſucceeded by——Thomas Legatt his ſon and heir, 10 years, and 10 months old (h). Concerning the Legatt family, ſee under Stapleford-Tany, and in the other Volume, p. 123.

About the middle of the laſt century it was in a branch of the Wright Family of Kelvedon-Hatch. John Wright of that pariſh had three ſons, Robert, from whom deſcended the Wrights of Brook-ſtreet; John, from whom the Wrights of South-Weald; and another John, of Wrights-Bridge near Horn-Church, but within the pariſh of S. Weald, and of Grays-Inn, Eſq; who dyed in 1644. By Mary, daughter of John Mole, and Elizabeth ſiſter of Sir Thomas Cheke, he had —— Laurence Wright, M. D. who dyed 3 Octob. 1657. leaving his ſon and heir——Henry, who was created a Baronet 11 June 1660, and dyed 5 February 1663. He married Anne, daughter of John Lord Crew of Stene, which lady dyed 27 Sept. 1708, by whom he had——Sir Henry Wright, who dyed in 1681, under age, and unmarried; and

Anne, that upon her brother's death became a great heireſs. She was married firſt to

Edmund, ſon and heir of Sir Robert Pye of Berkſhire, by whom ſhe had ſome ſons and 5 daughters; Her ſecond huſband was William Rider Eſq; [See in the other Volume, p. 568.] She gave this eſtate to

Edward Carteret Eſq; uncle to the late Earl Granville, and one of the Poſtmaſters General, who had married the Lady Bridget Sudbury, widow firſt of Sir John Sudbury, then of Thomas Clutterbuck Eſq; He dyed 15 April 1739, having had by his ſaid Lady ſeveral children which were all dead before him, except two Daughters; namely, Bridget, who was Maid of Honour to Queen Caroline, and Anne-Iſabella, wife of Admiral Cavendiſh. Theſe jointly ſold this eſtate in 1748 to Henry Muilman Eſq; the preſent poſſeſſor.

Sir Henry Wright built here, and He, or ſome of his deſcendants made a ſmall Park. Mr. Carteret improved the building, and erected a Chapel.

COCKERELLS

is a maner adjoining ſouth-weſt to the Park of Dagenhams. It is now only a Farm, ſtanding without the moat, which once incloſed the Manſion-houſe. It took the preſent name from an owner. John de Wand, who dyed in 1251, held of the King in capite 120 acres of arable, 3 acres and 1 rood of paſture, with 61 s. 6 d. rent of aſſize and the cuſtoms of his tenants.——William Senefeld, ſon of Emma, eldeſt ſiſter, and Julian, wife of Robert Cokerell, another ſiſter of the ſaid John, were his next heirs (i).

In 1454, it went with Dagenhams, and was the Earl of Northumberland's; from him it paſſed to Huſee, and Legat, and Wrights; and came, as Dagenhams, to the daughters of Edward Carteret Eſq;

They ſold it, with the other, to Henry Muilman Eſq;

GOOSHAYS.

This maner joins to thoſe of Dagenhams and Cockerills. The manſion-houſe ſtands about half a mile from the Road on the right hand as you go from Brentwood to Romford. The firſt mention I find of the name is in 1334, when John de Dover held of Philippa Queen of England, as of her maner of Havering att Boure, one meſſuage in Goſaye, with ſixty acres of arable, four of meadow, and 4 l. 6 s. 1 d. ob. yearly rent, by the ſervice of paying yearly 37 s. to the Queen aforeſaid; He was then ſucceeded by his ſon and heir——Philip de Dover, who dyed the next year. They two held of the King, in capite, in Newhall [that is Dovers, ſee a little lower] a capital meſſuage; and other parcels of land. —— Richard de Dover was ſon of Philip (k).

John Chaderton was poſſeſſed of this maner in 1445 (l).

Alured Cornburgh, who dyed 2 February 1486, held this maner of Goſeys, and 6 meſſuages, 20 cottages, 40 tofts, 500 acres of arable, 100 acr. of meadow, 500 of wood, and 10 marks rent, of the King in ſocage, as of his maner of Havering: Alſo the third part of the maner of Dovers.——Agnes Chamber, one of his ſiſters, and John Crafford, ſon of his other ſiſter Alice, were his heirs (m). This Alured, or Avery, Cornborow, founded a Chantry at Romford; ſee below.

Thomas Legatt, mentioned above under Dagenhams, held this maner in 1555 (n).

Thomas Moreton, who dyed 1 April 1591, held the maner of Gooſehayes, with appertenances, and 6 meſſuages, 20 cottages, forty tofts, 500 acres of arable, 100 of meadow, 500 of wood, and 40 s. rent, with their appertenances in Gooſehayes, Havering att Bower, Romford, and Horne Church, of the Queen, as of her her maner of Havering;——George was his ſon and heir (o).

Soon after it belonged to Richard Humble, of Southwark, vintner, and Alderman of London (deſcended from a family of that name in Norfolk,) who dyed 10 April 1616, poſſeſſed of this maner of Gooſehayes, and many other parcels here (p). He married firſt Elizabeth, daughter and ſole heir of John Pierſon of Naſing, by whom he had Peter; John who dyed without iſſue: Elizabeth, wife of Richard Ward, citizen and goldſmith of London; and three others that dyed without iſſue. By his ſecond wife . . . . daughter of . . . Kichingman no children are mentioned.——Peter, his ſon and heir, dying without iſſue, this eſtate came to the ſaid Elizabeth, wife of

Richard Ward (q).——Sir Humble Ward Kt. paid quit-rent for this maner in 1659 [Y]. He was a wealthy goldſmith in London, and jeweller to Henrietta Maria Queen of K. Charles I. and for his kind aſſiſtance to K. Charles I. was knighted 24 June 1643, and advanced to the dignity of a Baron, by the title of Lord Ward of Bermingham, 23 March 1643-4. He dyed 4 Octob. 1670, having had by Frances his wife, niece and heir to Edward Lord Dudley, Edward, and William; and three daughters (r).——Edward Lord Dudley and Ward, his eldeſt ſon and heir, built the Houſe here; now moſtly pulled down; and ſold this eſtate to ——Mead; wherein he was ſucceeded by his ſon——Sir Nathanael Mead, Kt. Serjeant at law. It is now held by William Sheldon Eſq;

The Maner of UP-HAVERING, or GOBIONS.

The name of Up-Havering was uſed as early as the year 1202, and one William Up-Havering, then living, had taken his ſurname from hence (s). As to Gobions it was alſo from an owner's name, found at other parts of Eſſex, and in Bedfordſhire. [See in the other Volume, p. 361.]

To whom this eſtate belonged after that, we have no account till 1479, when we find it recorded, that Thomas Urſwick held of Elizabeth Queen of K. Edward IV. the maner of Up-Havering, and one meſſuage, 200 acres of arable, 20 of meadow, 2 of wood, and 8 s. 1 d. rent in Havering att Bower. Part of which called Pinherſt, and 30 acres, were holden of Alured Corneburgh.——Catharine, wife of Henry Langley: Anne, wife of John Doreward, Elizabeth, Joane, and Mary Urſwyck, were his daughtersand co-heirs (t). [See in the other Volume, p. 507.]

Next, Sir William Roche, who dyed 11 Septemb. 1549 [Z], held the maner, or tenement, called Upp-Haveringe alias Gubbyons, with appertenances, in Colley-Row, alias Collier-Row, and divers other lands, tenements, and hereditaments, parcel of the ſame, of the King, of his maner of Haveringe, as of ancient demeſne, in ſocage, and for the rent of 53 s. 6 d. per ann. He had likewiſe the maner of Nelmes,——John Roche was his ſon and heir (u).

Thomas Legatt alſo, mentioned before under Dagenhams, held this maner of Gubbyns (w).

Sir Richard Minſhew had it in 1636.

One Col. Matthews was the next poſſeſſor of this eſtate upon record [A]. His ſon——Philip Matthews, of Great Gobions in Collyer-Row Ward, Eſq; was created a Baronet 15 June 1662. He married Anne, daughter of Sir Thomas Wolſtonholme, of Forty-hill in Enfeild Bart. by whom he had a ſon, and two daughters: He departed this life in 1685; and his lady not till 20 March 1735, aged 89; having remained 50 years a widow. Their ſon——Sir John Matthews Bart. being a Colonel in the foot guards, was killed at the battle of Oudenard, and left no iſſue. Of the two Daughters, Dorothy dyed unmarried; and Elizabeth was the wife of Thomas Dawſon D. D. once Fellow of St. John's college in Cambridge, who had by her four Daughters, Anne; Diana; Elizabeth; and Margaret.

Sir Philip Matthews, or ſome of his Family, ſold this eſtate to

Mr. William Curwen. And of his ſon——John Curwen Eſq; it was purchaſed by Sir Philip Hall, of Upton, who was Sheriff of this County in 1727, and then knighted. He dyed 9 January 1745-6, aged 67, and was ſucceeded by his ſon——Philip Hall Eſq;

The Maner of REDENE, or REDEN-COURT,

Stands on the left hand ſide of the Road, as you go from Brentwood, to Romford; almoſt oppoſite to Gooſhays.

Court is an old name for a great man's houſe; And whether Reden is not derived from the two Saxon words, Reð, a reed, and ðen, a valley, we ſubmit to the Reader's judgment. Or it might poſſibly have taken its name from an ancient family ſurnamed Reding, mentioned in an old deed.

On, or about the year 1379, Sir Richard de Havering did enfeoff Sir John de Newenton, and Emma his wife, in one meſſuage, two hundred

[A] The account Mr. Symonds, his contemporary, gives of this man, is, That living near Romford, and being a forward lad, waiting for employment at the Court, he got to be under-Clerk to Sir Thomas Mewtys, Clerk of the Privy Council: In which imployment he got to his wife the heireſs of a citizen, worth 4000 l. and that ſet him up in the world. and eighty and nineteen acres and half of arable, and 36 s. rent in Havering att Boure, to have to himſelf and heirs; which were anciently held of the maner of Havering att Bowre, as of the old Demeſne of the King's Crown, by the rod, by ſervices and cuſtoms and not by knight's ſervice; but were then held by Charter, and yearly rent of 19s. 4d. (x).——Joane Swinderton, ſiſter and heir of Thomas Newenton, dyed in 1445, poſſeſſed of the maner of Redene alias Reden-Court. She had, in 1422, paſſed this maner to truſtees, I ſuppoſe for a ſettlement. It contained one meſſuage and 100 acres of arable, formerly William Fleming's, holden of the King by the ſervice of finding litter in the King's chamber as often as he came to Havering: And there were other 66 acres of arable, for which 13 s. 8 d. were paid into the Exchequer: they holding alſo of the King (y).

Very ſoon after, this eſtate was in the Cook Family of Gedy-hall. For Sir Thomas Cook, at the time of his deceaſe, in 1478, held this maner of Reden, alias Reden-Court, and 2 meſſuages, 74 acres of arable, 2 acres of meadow, 4 of wood, and 8 l. rent in Havering att Boure (z).

From him it paſſed to his poſterity, more particularly mentioned under Gedy-hall——John Coke Eſq; held this maner of Ridden-Court, in 1515 (a).——Sir Antony Cook, who dyed 28 December 1604, held this maner of Ridden-Court, of the King, as of his maner of Havering, by fealty only (b).

Some time ago it was purchaſed by John Hopkins Eſq; who dying immenſely rich 25 April 1732, was ſucceeded by his nephew——John Hopkins Eſq; the preſent poſſeſſor.

The Maner of ROMFORD.

Romford took its name from the Ford through that little Stream which paſſes about the middle of this Town, and over which there now is a Bridge.

Whether it is a contraction from Roman ford; or a compound of the Saxon words, Rom, a Ram, or Rum broad, and ꝼoꞃꝺ, I ſubmit to the Reader's judgment. This Town is at preſent the greateſt thoroughfare in Eſſex, from the eaſtern parts of this County, and of Suffolk and Norfolk, to and from London.

Some have fancied, that the Road to Bury and Colcheſter this Way is not of long ſtanding; That Travellers went anciently thither by Ongar; and for thoſe who went toward Ingatſtone, Horn-Church was the way, through the Green-Lanes, as they are called probably from being much over-grown with graſs ſince the chief traffick has been by Romford, after the preſent nearer way was made paſſable [B]. But that eminent Antiquary, Smart Lethieullier Eſq; who had duly conſidered the point, and carefully examined the countrey, has ſhewn, That ‘ the road went from Old Ford through that part of Wanſted, where a Moſaic Pavement and other Roman Antiquities have been diſcovered, and proceeded through or near Ilford to Romford [the Roman Ford.] The courſe of the preſent Road is the only proper line: for ſeveral Hills or deep Valleys muſt have been croſſed, had it gone either to the north or ſouth of Ilford, the only proper ſpot for paſſing the river Rodon.’ See his Diſſertation on the Roads in this County, in the Introduction.

K. Henry III. firſt granted the privilege of a Market to Romford (c). But it has now two Market-days in a week: Tueſday is the Market-day for hogs and calves, which of late have been bought and ſold on Monday afternoon; and Wedneſday is the corn-market. A handſom Market-houſe was erected ſome years ago at the expence of the Crown. Part of the building is a Seſſions-houſe. Here is alſo a Fair, June 24.

The firſt mention I find of the name of Romford, is in the Red Book of the Exchequer (d), where it is ſaid, that in 1166, Roger Bigod Earl of Norfolk, held the wood of Romford by ſerjeancy, and payment of five ſhillings a year.

In 1277, Adam de Cretinge held of the King, in capite, in the pariſh of Romford, in the vill of Havering, 255 acres of land, and 33s. 11d. ob. rent, which he had of the gift of Roger de Rolling; and he owed thence yearly to the King for the farm of Havering 33s. 5d. and ſuit of Court every three weeks: And he was bound to feed all the King's hogs every year, whether there was pannage or no; paying one half penny for every hog worth 5d. He held, in the ſame pariſh in the vill of Havering, of the Earl Mareſhall a wood of 100 acres, for which he paid yearly to the King 5s. for the ferm of Havering, and to the Earl 1d. He held alſo in the ſame vill, of the gift of Roger de Rolling, 5 acres; and 20 acres of the fee of Robert Fitz-William of Up-Havering, &c. (e).

Of this Adam, Henry de Wincheſter, who dyed in 1299, held the maner of Rumford by the ſervice of 1 d. per ann. and ſervice of the fourth part of a knight's fee. He married Maud his wife after the Jewiſh way; they were converted to Chriſtianity, and had a ſon —— Thomas (f).

In 1307, Roger Bigod Earl of Norfolk held of John de Creting, in Rumford, 1 capital meſſuage, 180 acres of arable, 5 of meadow, 100 of paſture called Layes, and 54s. rent, by the ſervice of 1 d. a year (g).

The maner of Rumford belonged next to Thomas de Brotherton, fifth ſon of K. Edward I. Earl of Norfolk, and Lord Marſhall. For Sir Walter de Manny, who had married his daughter and heir Margaret, widow of John Lord Segrave, held, at the time of his deceaſe, in 1372, the maner of Rumford, as of the right and inheritance of Margaret his wiſe, daughter and one of the heirs of Thomas late Earl of Norfolk and Marſhal of England, of the King in capite, as parcel of the Earldom of Norfolk;——Anne, wiſe of John Haſtings, Earl of Pembroke, was their daughter and heir (b). This Sir Walter de Manny, was of the Dioceſe of Cambray, one of K. Edward the Third's warriors, and Founder of the Charter-houſe.

Beſides this maner of Romford, he had alſo thoſe of Gr. Cheſterford, [See in the other Volume, p. 554.] and of Dover-court with Harwich.

The Maner of Romford ſeems after this time to have changed its name to that of Manny's, corruptly Mawneys, or Mancies, from Sir Walter de Manny, its ancient poſſeſſor. And the reaſon may have been, that another Maner or two are found after this, namely thoſe of Bedfords, and Eaſt-houſe, which ſeem to have been taken out of Romford: So the general name might be dropt, and ſo much of Romford maner as continued in the heirs of Manny, be called after his name, by way of diſtinction from the others.

Sir Walter de Manny's daughter Anne Counteſs of Pembroke did not inherit this eſtate; but it went to the daughter of John Lord Segrave,

Elizabeth, wife of John de Mowbray. Their ſon and heir——Thomas de Mowbray, Duke of Norfolk who dyed in 1400, held the maner of Rumford of Adam Karlyl; and left —— Sir Thomas Mowbray, his ſon and heir (i), that had the misfortune of being beheaded in 1405. His mother Elizabeth being remarried to Sir Robert Gouſhill, and afterwards to Sir Gerard Uffiet, they enjoyed this eſtate in her right: which ſhe held as part of her dower till her deceaſe in 1424. [See in the other Volume, p. 554.] (k). ——John Mowbray, the fourth Duke of Norfolk of this family dying in 1477 without iſſue male; this eſtate, among others, fell to the heirs of——Iſabell, one of the two Daughters of Thomas Mowbray, the firſt Earl of Norfolk of this family. And the heir to Iſabell, in this, was James Lord Berkley. His ſon —— William Marquis of Berkley, and Earl Marſhall, at the time of his deceaſe 14 Febru. 1491, held this maner of Mawnye, with appertenances in Rumpford, and 1 meſſuage, 300 acres of arable, 40 of meadow, 200 of paſture, and 20 of wood, of the King in capite.——Maurice was his brother and heir (l). [See in the other Volume, p. 554, 555.] But William is ſaid to have alienated it in 1487 to John Biſhop of Lincoln (m).

George Dacre Eſq; was poſſeſſed of this maner in 1555 (n). He had licenſe, 24 April 1573, to alienate Mawneys maner, and 2 meſſuages, ten tofts, 300 acres of arable, 40 of meadow, 200 of paſture, 40 of wood, and 7 l. rent, to

John Leonard, or Lennard Eſq; and his heirs for ever (o). At the time of his deceaſe, 12 March 1591, he held this maner of the Queeen in capite, by knight's ſervice. His ſon and heir——Sampſon Leonard Eſq; (p) by licenſe dated 1 March 1599, alienated, for the uſe of himſelf for life, remainder &c. this maner, and one meſſuage, one cottage, one garden, 130 acres of arable, ten of meadow, 100 of paſture, 100 of wood, and 72 s. 6 d. rent in Horn-Church and Rumford, to Frances Ewre, and others (q). [See under Alveley.]

Francis Fuller Eſq; held the maner of Mawnes in 1627. Dying 10 March 1636, he was ſucceeded by

Francis Oſbaſton, his couſin and next heir, thirty-four years of age (r). [See under Berking, and Little Ilford.] By marriage of an heireſs of the family of Oſbaſton, it came to it belonged, at the time of the Survey, to the Abbey of St. Peter's at Weſtminſter [C]: How they loſt it, or when they parted with it, doth not appear.

The Maner of EAST-HOUSE is firſt mentioned in the year 1332; when Roger William, of Havering, who was outlawed, is ſaid to have held at the Eſthous 1 meſſuage, 135 acres of arable, 10 of meadow, 20 of paſture, 2 of wood, and 25s. 2d. rent: And at the Field in the vill of Havering, 1 meſſuage, 67 acres of arable, 3 of meadow, 2 of paſture, 2 of wood, and 27s. 2d. rent of aſſiſe: And of John de Dover 49 acres of arable, and 1 grove, by the ſervice of 13 s. 4 d. per ann. (s).

The next owner of it upon record was Sir Thomas Cooke, in the reign of K. Edward IV. (t) whom we ſhall preſently mention more particularly under Geddy-hall.

Theſe two Maners went together many years. They were ſeparate in the laſt century; and Eaſt-houſe then belonged to Francis, and Henry, Oſbaſton. It now belongs to Carew-Hervy Mildmay, of Marks, Eſq;

Bedfords is firſt mentioned in 1478, when it belonged to Sir Thomas Cooke [D]: and paſſed from him to his poſterity (u). It was held of the maner of Havering, by fealty, ſuit at the Court there, and yearly rent of 17s. 2d. (w).

Mrs. Matthews was poſſeſſed of it in 1659. as well as Gobions.

Geddy-Hall, is not mentioned in records till the reign of K. Edward IV. It then belonged to, and was probably purchaſed by, Sir Thomas Cooke.

He was ſon of Robert Cooke of Lavenham in Suffolk: of the Drapers Company; one of the Sheriffs of London, in 1453; and Lord Mayor of that city in 1462. K. Edward IV. making forty-two Knights of the Bath, at the Coronation of his Queen, in 1465, Sir Thomas Cooke was one of them, and knighted by that King in the field (x). He began here a fine Houſe, or Caſtle [E], which was not finiſhed till his great-grandſon Antony's time. For living in thoſe bad times, when Contention was flaming between the Houſes of York and Lancaſter; and many were put to death, or grievouſly fined, upon trifling or faſle accuſations, he ſuffered in the common calamity.

The cauſe was this: One Hawkins having requeſted of him the loan of a ſum of money, he refuſed, when he underſtood it was for the uſe of Margaret, Queen of K. Henry VI. Hawkins being committed to the Tower in 1467, and put to the rack, mentioned this among other things: which one would have thought could not have been then accounted criminal. However, Sir Thomas was committed to the Tower, and by means of Sir John Fogge indicted of high-treaſon. Whereupon his Houſe here was plundered of the furniture, and all that could be carried away; the deer in his Park, rabbits, fiſh, &c. deſtroyed: for which he could not get any recompence. For though, by the integrity of the Chief Juſtice, Sir John Markham, he was acquitted of treaſon, and only found guilty of miſpriſion, yet he was committed firſt to the Compter, and afterwards to the King's Bench priſon; from which he could not be releaſed without paying 8000 l. to the King, and 800 l. to the Queen. The Chief Juſtice was alſo diſplaced.

Sir Thomas dyed in 1478, holding the maners of Bedfords, Gedyhall, and Eſthous, and Reden-Court, of the Queen; and 2 meſſuages, 74 acres of arable, 2 of meadow, 4 of wood, and 8 l. rent; 4 acres in le Sheld; lands, tenements &c. called Petyts and Cokeſtenens lond; Stone-feild; Long mead; a moiety of Herſtgrove; all in Havering. Three crofts in Romford, near the Wind-mill. With other eſtates elſewhere [F]. By his wife, daughter and heir of Philip Malpas of London, he had Philip; William, ſeated at Chigwell; and Thomas.—— Philip, the eldeſt ſon, born in 1454 (y), married Elizabeth, daughter of Sir Henry, and ſiſter and coheir of Edward Belknap; by whom he had John; and Beatrix wife of William Copley. ——John, the ſon and heir, of Gedy-hall, dyed 10 October 1515, poſſeſſed of the maners of Gidding-hall and Eſt-houſe, Bedfords, Riddin-Court &c. leaving by Iſabell, or Alice, his wife, the ſecond and one of the three daughters and coheireſſes of William Sanders of Sanbury in Surrey, Antony; and Catharine wife of Richard Ogle.——Antony, the ſon, born in 1504 (z), was a man of very great Learning; and made one of the Præceptors to K. Edward VI. by whom he was knighted. During Qu. Mary's perſecuting reign, he was an exile in Germany. But, upon Qu. Elizabeth's acceſſion, he returned to England. Beſides the maners of Bedfords, Rydden-court, Gyddyhall and Eſt houſe, and the reſt that had belonged to his great grand-father; he had the revenues of Avery Cornboroughes Chantry here; Higham buſhes, in Walthamſtow; the maners of Chaldwell, Maſcalls-bury in White-Roding, &c. (a). He finiſhed Geddy-hall, that had been begun by his great grandfather, as we have obſerved above [G]. Dying 11 June 1576, aged 70, he was buried in Romford Chapel, with a ſtately Monument. He married Anne, daughter of Sir William Fitz-William, of Milton in Northamptonſhire, and Gains park, in Theydon-Gernon. His children by her were, Richard; William; Edward: Margaret, wife of Sir. . . . Rowlett; Mildred, ſecond wife of the great Sir William Cecil, Lord Burghley; Anne, wife of Sir Nicolas Bacon, Lord Keeper; Elizabeth, wife of Sir Thomas Hobby, and afterwards of John Lord Ruſſel, ſon and heir of Francis Earl of Bedford; Catharine, wife of Sir Henry Killegrew, mother of Henry Nevill [H]. William, the ſecond ſon, married Frances, daughter of Sir John Grey, brother of the

He had this maner of Guydy-hall with the Park, and the other eſtates, as his father (b) [I].——Antony Cooke Eſq; his only ſon and ſucceſſor, was afterwards knighted, and enjoyed this maner of Guidihall, with thoſe of Bedfords, Ridden-Court, and other eſtates. He departed this life 28 Decemb. 1604, having had by Hawiſe his wife, daughter of Sir William Waldegrave Kt. two ſons, Edward, and Francis.——Edward, the eldeſt ſon, was 23 years old at the time of his father's deceaſe, and a knight (c). Anne, and her huſband Sir Edward Sydenham, took this eſtate for their purparty. They had 5 ſons, and 5 daughters: of whom Anne, the eldeſt was married to Sir Thomas Wiſeman, of Rivenhall, Kt.——Charles Sydenham Eſq; the eldeſt ſon and heir, had, among other children, Mary; and Margaret, wife of Thomas Velley of High-Ongar Eſq; This Mr. Sydenham ſold Geddy-hall to

Sir John Eyles, Bart. This Family was long ſeated in Wiltſhire. John Eyles Eſq; was Lord Mayor of London, in 1688, and received the honor of Knighthood from K. James II. He had three daughters, whereof Sarah was married to Joſeph-Haſkin Styles of London Eſq;

Francis Eyles Eſq; brother of Sir John, was an eminent merchant, many years a Director of the Eaſt-India Company, Alderman of Bridge Ward, and created a Baronet 1 Decemb. 1714. He dyed in June 1716. By Elizabeth his wife, daughter of Mr. Ayley of London, which ſurvived him till 6 April 1735, he had ſix ſons, and four daughters. Joſeph, the fourth ſon, was knighted by K. The ſon, Francis, upon being made heir to his uncle Benjamin-Haſkyn Styles Eſq; took the ſurname of Haſkyn Styles (d). Sir John Eyles rebuilt this Houſe in an elegant manner, and with plantations of trees, canals, and other improvements, rendered it one of the moſt compleat Seats in this County.

The Maner of STEWARDS.

From what eſtate this was originally taken; or to whom it belonged by that name, we do not find till Qu. Elizabeth's reign. Then,

Marcellinus Halys Eſq; who dyed 23 November, 1561, held this maner of Stewards, lying within the maner, or lordſhip, of Havering at Bower, and 10 meſſuages, 140 acres of arable, 40 of meadow, 100 of paſture, 30 of wood, and 30 s. 6 d. rent with appertenances, in Stewards, Braybrookes, Edropps, Rookes, Albyns, and Capps; of the Queen in fealty only. He had alſo Lees Gardens, mentioned a little lower.——George Halys, his ſon and heir, was upwards of 36 years old (e).

It was next in a branch of the Quarles Family, deſcended from George Quarles of Ufford in Northamptonſhire Eſq; one of the Auditors in the reigns of K. Henry VII. and K. Henry VIII. His ſon —— Francis Quarles, of Ufford Eſq; by his firſt wife, Cæcilia, daughter of . . . Crunckhorn of the ſaid County, had five ſons, and one daughter. The Maner of MARKS

Is above a mile weſt from Romford, bordering on Becontree Hundred. It hath been an ancient ſeat, named probably from an owner or poſſeſſor, as many other places in this County. [See in the other Volume, p. 202. 396. 423.] We have ſeen the name of Markdich in a grant of K. Edw. III. to Tyle keeper of Havering Park. [See p. 60, note M.]

We hear nothing in particular of the owners of this eſtate till 1479, when Thomas Urſwyck, who dyed in that year, held a maner called Markes, two meſſuages, a windmill, 200 acres of paſture, 100 of meadow, 60 of wood, and 110 s. rent in Havering at Bower;——Five Daughters were his coheirs, whoſe names we have before at Gobions, of which he was alſo poſſeſſed (g).

The next owner upon record, was Sir George Hervey, Lieutenant of the Tower of London, deſcended from a branch of the ancient Family of Hervey of Ickworth, now Earls of Suffolk (h). Sir Nicolas Hervey, ſecond ſon of William Hervey of that place, was of the Privy Chamber to K. Henry VIII. He had two wives: the ſecond was Bridget daughter and ſole heir of Sir John Wiltſhire, once Lady of the Bed-Chamber to Qu. Anne Boleyn; and relict of Sir Richard Wingfield, Knight of the Garter, and Chancellor of the Dutchy of Lancaſter. By her he had ſeveral children; Anne, one of the daughters was married to George Carew, third ſon of Sir Edmund Carew, Baron of Carew.——George Hervey Eſq; the fourth ſon, was afterwards knighted, and Lieutenant of the Tower of London; in which ſtation he dyed 10 Auguſt 1605, poſſeſſed of this maner of Marks, and ſeveral other eſtates (i). [See under Berking.] He married Frances, daughter and co-heir of Sir Leonard Beckwith, by whom he had five ſons, and ſix daughters. Four of the ſons dyed young; as did alſo four of the daughters. Margaret, the firſt of them, was married to William Mildmay Eſq; eldeſt ſon of Sir Thomas Mildmay of Springfeild-Bames; and had by him three ſons, Thomas, Carew, and Henry: and a daughter named Frances.——Sir Gawin Hervey, the fifth, and only ſurviving ſon, of Sir George, ſucceeded his father; having no iſſue, he adopted for heir his ſiſter Margaret's ſecond ſon Carew Mildmay Eſq; who, upon Sir Gawin's deceaſe, 1 Febru. 1627, came and reſided at Marks. By . . . . Garrard, his wife, he had ——Francis; that married a daughter of Robert Honywood of Kent Eſq; and had by her, Carew his ſon and heir; and three daughters, of whom Judith was married to John Searl D. D. Rector of Willingale Dou, and . . . to Arthur Heron, Rector of Moreton. —— Carew-Hervey, alias Mildmay, Eſq; was Sheriff of this County, in 1713, and having married Anne, daughter of Richard-Lennard Barrett Eſq; he had by her two ſons, Carew, and Francis. Upon his deceaſe, 1 May 1743, he was ſucceeded by his eldeſt ſon——Carew, who is married to . . . . daughter of . . . . Eſtwood of Sherborn in Dorſetſhire.

We come now to the Maners in the Southern part of this Liberty.

The Maner of ELMES, vulgarly NELMES,

Lies South-eaſt of Romford, bordering on Chafford Hundred.

Beſides what is juſt mentioned in Note T, I find nothing earlier concerning it than this; Sir William Roche who dyed 11 Septemb. 1549, held the maner of Elmes, alias Nelmes, with the appertenances, and 250 acres of arable, 20 of meadow, 50 of paſture, 20 of wood 53 s. 4 d. rent, in Havering at Bower: of the King as of the maner of Havering in ſocage, by fealty, and yearly rent of 52 s. in lieu of all ſervices. ——John his ſon and heir, was 24 years and upwards (k). Sir William Roche was poſſeſſed at the ſame time of Gobions, but it doth not appear how he came by either, or how his ſon parted with them.

Robert Harvey, who dyed 10 Septemb. 1608, held the ſite of the manſion-houſe, or capital meſſuage, known by the name of the Maner of Elmes, and three parcels of arable and paſture, containing 6 acres, belonging to this maner.——John was his ſon and heir (l).

Robert Naunton Eſq; was lord of this maner in 1627: But it ſeems to have been, ſoon after, diſmembred. For, in 1635, Sir Robert Cocke Kt. held nine ſeveral pieces of land, and nine parcels of wood, near Cheſe-croſs, late belonging to the maner of Nerles, as it is wrongly ſpelt, purchaſed of Anne Cooke, widow, and others (m).

[O] He was born at Stewards in 1592, educated at Chriſt's College Cambridge, afterwards of Lincoln's-inn. He was then made Cup-bearer to Elizabeth, Queen of Bohemia, and Secretary to the learned Archbiſhop Uſher. Departing this life in 1644, he was buried in St. Vedaſt, Foſter-lane. Beſides his emblems, which are an imitation of Herm. Hugonis Pia Deſideria &c. he publiſhed at ſeveral times, The Hiſtories of Jonah, Eſther, Job militant, Sampſon, &c. Pentalogia, or Quinteſſence of meditation; Argalus and Parthenia; Enchiridion of Meditations; The loyal Convert; The Virgin Widow, a Comedy, firſt printed in 1649, &c.

In the Rental for the Maner of Havering in 1659, William Witherings Eſq; appears to have held Nellines, which I preſume means Nelmes [P].

It belonged lately to Sir Thomas Webſter, Bart. of Copped-hall, and of Battle-Abbey, in Suſſex; and now to his younger ſon——Godfrey Webſter Eſq; who hath married Elizabeth, daughter of Gilbert Cooper of Lockear in Derbyſhire Eſq; is ſouth of Nelmes, and about 2 miles eaſt of Romford.

The Maner of LEES-GARDENS

Marcellinus Halys Eſq, mentioned above under Stewards, held this maner de Gardens, with the appertenances, and two meſſuages, 190 acres of arable, 30 of meadow, 110 of paſture, 12 of marſh, and 39*s*. of rent; in Gardens, Moulande, Renolds, Crofts, and Peſtrels, [perhaps Pell-ſtreet] of the Queen, of her maner of Havering at Bower, in fealty only, and by the yearly rent of 21s. 9d.——Thomas Halys was his ſon (n).

Thomas Hone, of Gardens, Gent. dyed 7 September 1604, aged 65 years (o).

It is ſaid to have belonged afterwards to the Lord St. John.

. . . . Fiſher, late owner of it, dyed about 1720.

George Lewis, a limner, had a moiety of it for life: The other moiety was in John Hopkins, alias Probyn, Eſq; Counſellor at law; nephew of Sir Edward Probyn, Chief Baron of the Exchequer. In 1746, Counſellor Probyn ſold it to

Mr. Dawſon, of the Ordnance-office.

The Maner of MAYLERDS

Named probably from an owner, ſtands near Horn-Church, about two miles South of Romford.

A maner called Wybridges hath gone with it for a conſiderable time.

It appears by a Precept ſet down below [Q], that they once belonged to Sir Antony Browne, or at leaſt to his widow, and to John Browne; then to Robert Charnock Gent. and William Fawkener: and contained 2 meſſuages, 3 tofts, 3 cottages, 3 dove houſes, 3 gardens, 3 orchards, 100 acres of arable, 30 of meadow, 300 of paſture, 10 of wood, and 4 l. rent, in Horn-Church, and Havering.

They were divided afterwards: For, the maner of Wybridges was in Sir William Ayloffe Kt. and Bart. who dyed 11 Auguſt 1627, as will appear upon Bretons; and

Mr. Edward Thorowgood paid Quit-rent for it, in the year 1659.

The maner of Maylerds was in James Ruſhout Eſq; who paid quit-rent for it alſo in 1659. being probably the ſame that was of Norcot in Worceſterſhire, and created a Baronet, 17 June 1661. Sir James married a ſiſter of Thomas Vernon of Twickenham-Park in Middleſex Eſq; and at his death, in February 1697-8, left two children minors, James and Elizabeth.——Sir James dying unmarried 21 Septemb. 1711, his ſiſter

Elizabeth became his heir: She was married to Paulet St. John of Dogmersfeld in Hampſhire, Eſq; Burgeſs for Wincheſter. And dying without iſſue, Paulet St. John Eſq; ſold this eſtate to

John Bamber M.D. who dyed poſſeſſed of theſe two Maners of Maylerds and Wybridges. See above under Berking, p. 8. From him they deſcended to

Bamber Gaſcoigne Eſq;

The Maner of BRETONS

Is ſouth of Maylerds, bordering upon the pariſh of Dagenham, and about 2 miles and a half from Romford.

It took the name of Bretons from an ancient family ſurnamed le Breton, or de Breton, which had eſtates in Bockſted in this county in 1260, and 1310 (p). [See in the other Volume, p. 626.] By the name of Bretonneſlond, it was paſſed by releaſe from William Nortoft to William Buckingham, in 1361 (q).

It belonged in the reign of K. Edward IV. to the family of Scargill, or Scargwell [R]: one of whom was appointed Keeper of Havering Park, as above-mentioned.

In the reign of K. Henry VII. it was purchaſed by William Ayloffe Eſq; Of him, and his deſcendents, ſome account is given in the other Volume, p. 138, 139. But we ſhall give a more perfect one, from authentick memoirs communicated to us.

The Family of Ayloffe, which is of Saxon extraction, was antiently ſeated at Bocton—Aloph near Wye in Kent (r), of which town they

This Alulphus was anceſtor of Thomas Aloff a man of great note, and Portreave of London in the reign of K. [T] He reſided at Sheen in Meldreth in Cambridgeſhire; and was twice married. By his firſt wife, Jane daughter of Sir William Herris of Shenfield in Eſſex, he had two ſons; William; and James, who dyed unmarried. The eldeſt ſon, William Ayloffe oi Baſingburne in Cambridgeſhire, having no iſſue by Elizabeth his wife, daughter of William Whalley of Screveton in Nottinghamſhire, he deviſed in his will a conſiderable eſtate, at Gargrave in Craven in Yorkſhire, to Truſtees, for founding a Catechiſtical Lecture in Trinity Hall Cambridge, and for augmenting ſeveral ſmall Livings in the Dioceſe of Ely. William, who married Elizabeth daughter and heir of John Engliſh of Barſtable in the County of Devon, and became the Anceſtor of the Ayloffes of that County——Sir Benjamin, ſecond ſon of Sir William Ayloffe Bart. ſucceeded his father in title and eſtate. He was eminent for his Loyalty to K. Charles I. who appointed him High Sheriff of Eſſex at the Commencement of the Civil Wars, as a perſon in whom he could confide. Sir Benjamin was faithful to the truſts repoſed in him, for which he was, by order of the Parliament, impriſoned in the Tower, had his eſtate ſequeſtred, and was afterwards ſent to Yarmouth with many more to be baniſhed to the Plantations in the Weſt Indies: but that inhuman order being reverſed, he returned to Braxted, and compounded for his eſtate, paying for the ſame 1242 pounds, which great diſtreſſes obliged him to ſell his eſtate at Breton's, as we ſhall ſhew preſently. However, he had the ſatisfaction, after many hardſhips, to ſee the Reſtoration, and ſerved in Parliament as one of the Knights of the Shire for Eſſex, in the firſt Parliament after the King's return. He dyed in the year 1662, and was buried at Braxted, having married two wives: by his 2d. wife, Margaret, daughter of Henry Porter Eſq; he had no iſſue; but by his firſt Lady, Margaret, daughter of Thomas Fanſhaw Eſq; and ſiſter of Sir Henry Fanſhaw, father of Thomas Viſcount Fanſhaw of Ware-Park in the County of Hertford, he had three ſons, and four daughters, Catharine, married to Thomas Hardwick of Leeds in the County of York Eſq; and Alice, Margaret, and Hannah, which three laſt dyed unmarried, and are buried at Braxted; The three ſons were, 1. He married Ann daughter of Peter Orbye of Burton Pedwarden in Lincolnſhire and of Chertſey in Surrey Eſq; and Widow of Frederick de la Tremouille, Count de Laval and Benon, Baron de Moleon and Didon in France, and brother to the Duke de la Tremouille. She bore him two ſons, Benjamin, and William, both of whom dyed unmarried in the life time of their father, who departed this life in the year 1675, and was buried at Braxted. His Lady, Ann Counteſs de la Vall, dyed on the 8th day of November 1683, and was buried with her huſband at Braxted.——Sir Benjamin Ayloffe 3d. ſon of Sir William Ayloffe on the death of his elder brother without iſſue male, ſucceeded in title and eſtate. He was an eminent Merchant of the City of London, and having married Martha daughter of Sir John Tyrell of Heron Hall in Eſſex Bart. had one ſon, John, who dyed unmarried in the life time of his father, and two daughters, Margaret, and Martha. Sir Benjamin departed this life 5th. March 1722 and was ſucceeded by his nephew——Sir John Ayloffe, Rector of Stanford Rivers, in this County, only ſon of his 3d. brother Henry, which Sir John dyed unmarried 10th. December 1730, and was buried at Braxted.

We now return to Joſeph only ſon of Sir William Ayloffe Bart. by his 3d. wife Alice Daughter of James Stokes Eſq; This Joſeph was of Gray's Inn, and ſoon became eminent at the Bar, inſomuch that it was doubtfull whether he, or Mr. Heneage Finch, afterwards Earl of Nottingham and Lord Chancellor, was the moſt riſing man in the profeſſion. But being ſeized by a conſumptive diſorder, owing to his intenſe application to buſineſs, he, by the advice of his Phyſicians, undertook a journey to Montpelier, where he dyed, leaving iſſue by Frances his wife daughter of Henry Ayſcough of Yorkſhire Eſq; two ſons, 1. Joſeph Ayloffe of Grays Inn Eſq; Barriſter at Law 2. William, Lieutenant Colonel of Foot, who dyed in Portugal unmarried 1706: and five Daughters, Alice married to the Reverend Dr. Thomas Dent of Lawford in this County. Barbara, the wife of Robert Watts Eſq; Ann married to John Marſhall of Eaſington in the County of Glouceſter Eſq; Margaret, who dyed unmarried, and Mary the wife of John Carter of London Eſq; This laſt mentioned Joſeph Ayloffe of Grays Inn, married Mary, ſole daughter of Bryan Ayliffe Eſq; an eminent Merchant of the City of London, by whom he had one ſon, Joſeph, and a daughter, Mary, who dyed an Infant. He departed this life in the year 1727, and was buried at Hendon in the County of Middleſex. Mary his widow having ſurvived him till 1747, was buried in the ſame tomb with him. On the death of Sir John Ayloffe of Stanford Rivers Bart. without iſſue, as aboveſaid, on the 10. December 1730,——Sir Joſeph Ayloffe, the preſent Bart. only ſon and heir of the laſt mentioned Joſeph Ayloffe by Mary his wife, ſucceeded to the title and eſtate. He married Margaret, daughter, and ſole heir of Thomas Railton of Carliſle and Croghlin in the County of Cumberland Eſq.

Sir Benjamin Ayloffe being forced to ſell this eſtate, as we have juſt mentioned above, it was purchaſed by John Winniffe Eſq; who paid quit-rent in 1659 for the maner of Brittens and Daniels.

It belonged afterwards to John Auſtin Eſq; Alderman of London; and to

William Blackborn Eſq; now to

John Hopkins Eſq; owner of Reeden-Court; who hath rebuilt the Houſe here, in which he reſides.

The Maner of Suttons,

Joining to Bretons, and lying about three miles ſouth ſouth eaſt from Romford, is a part of the eſtate of New-College, Oxford, which they had with the reſt of the lands of Horn-Church Hoſpital. The name comes from a ſouthern ſituation with reſpect perhaps to Horn-Church-Hall.

This is very juſtly ſuppoſed to be Part of the twenty five pounds land in ſterling; which K. Henry II. gave to the Hoſpital; and was confirmed by K. Richard I. and Henry III. the latter of whom deſcribes it as half a virgate, and three parts of one fourth of a virgate, at a place called Reyns; and the fourth part of a virgate, and the eighth part of another, at a place called Riſebregg: and the eighth part of another virgate: and 66 acres, and 2 days work, and one rood of meadow, near Harolds bridge and Riſebregg; all holden of the maner of Havering, in capite. K. Henry III. confirmed alſo to them, all the lands which they enjoyed within that maner, of the men or tenants of the ſame, viz. 84 acres and a half, two meſſuages with yards, 1 acre of meadow, and 2 acres and a half of wood (d).

The College becoming poſſeſſed of this Maner with the reſt of their eſtates in this pariſh, have enjoyed it ever ſince. They lett it out upon leaſe.

Sutton Gate, a ſeat adjoining, hath belonged many years to the Prujean Family; who have eſtates in Horn-Church to the amount of upwards of 150 l. a year. Sir Francis Prujean Kt. M. D. many years Preſident of the College of Phyſicians, dyed 23 June 1666, and is buried in this Church, with his two wives, Margaret, of the ancient Family of Legat, of Dagenhams in this pariſh; and . . . Gorges: and alſo his only ſon, Thomas Prujean M. D. [U].

Horn Church Hall

was alſo part of the eſtate belonging to the Hoſpital; but is not mentioned in records as a Maner, till 1549 (e).

The Maner of Dovers

Is the moſt ſouthern part of this Liberty, about 4 miles from Romford, joining to the Marſhes. It is ſeparated from Raynham by the Stream that parts Chafford Hundred from Havering.

This eſtate had its Name from an owner: and is ſometimes otherwiſe called Newenhall. In the reign of K. Henry III, Alice, wife of Richard de Dover, had one virgate of land, and one water-mill, in frank marriage, in the vill of Havering, of the gift of Hamon Paſſelewe (f).——John de Dover who dyed in 1298, held a certain meſſuage at la Newenhalle in the vill of Havering, of the King in capite, with lands and tenements adjoyning, by the ſervice of paying yearly into the Exchequer 20 s. and doing fealty to the King at the ſame Exchequer; And there were 80 acres of arable, five free tenants that paid 10 s. 4 d. 16 acres of meadow, one water-mill, 35 acres of Purpreſture;——John was his ſon (g). He held here 120 acres of arable, and other parcels, &c. and departing this life in 1334, was ſucceeded by his ſon——Philip de Dover (h), who dyed the year following. The account given by the Inqueſt, after his deceaſe, was that he held certain lands and tenements in New-Hall, of the King in capite, by the ſervice of paying yearly into the King's Exchequer 20 s. and a yearly rent of eleven ſhillings, to the Maſter and Brothers of Horn-Church, of the King's alms, at Eaſter and Michaelmaſs, viz. a capital meſſuage, 100 acres of gravelly, or ſandy, ſoil, and 20 acres of better ground, 16 acres of meadow, 21 of paſture, a Fiſhery of two fletes, 6 l. 14 s. 11 d. ob. rent, and one water-mill.——Richard was his ſon and heir (i). See above under Gooſhays.

William Babthorp, one of the Barons of the Exchequer, Walter Brecknok, Chaplain, and Ralph Babthorp, Eſq; being ſeized in their demeſne as of fee, of the ſite of the maner of Dovers, 1 water mill, and the ſuit and ſervice of the whole vill of Havering; alſo of 35 acres, and other parcels of land; of two Fletes of water, viz. le Marlediche extending from the Thames as far as the Palace of Havering Park and Haveringhethe, and from the Thames to the end of the bounds of Havering according to the courſe of the Brook; which were held of the King by the payment aforeſaid: And holding alſo of the Maſter of New-College, as of the maner of Suttons, and others, 155 acres of arable, 46 of meadow, 93 of paſture, and 8 l. rent in Havering, Reynham, and Bures Gifford, They granted the premiſſes, by their charter, or deed, to Richard Walderne, and his wife. He dyed 28 April 1454, leaving his four daughters, Elizabeth, Johanna, Alianor, and Margaret, his heirs (k).

Alured Cornburgh, whom we have ſeen before at Gooſhays, held in 1487, a third part of the maner of Dovers, with appertenances in Havering and in the Pariſhes of Horn-Church, Bowers-Gifford, Reynham, and Alvethley; Agnes Chamber, ſiſter of the ſaid Alured, and John Crafford, ſon of the Lady Alice, another ſiſter of the ſaid Alured, were his heirs (l). See under Gooſhays. This maner became now parcelled out. By licenſe dated 31 May 1519.

Richard Fermer, and others alienated a third part of the maner of Dovers, alias Newhall to John Redys, and Margaret his wife.

But it became united again in the poſſeſſion of Thomas Collet Eſq; under whom Arthur Crafford, who dyed 18 May 1606, held one meſſuage

HAVING ſurveyed the ſeveral Maners within the Liberty of Havering, we come now to conſider it as a PARISH; for within thoſe large Bounds it contains only One Pariſh called

HORN-CHURCH:

It is divided into Seven Wards; namely, Havering-Ward; North-End;—Noke-hill;—Collier-row; — Harold's-wood; — Romford-town;—and South-end—Wards.

Other places in it of ſome note, are, Havering-Park; Havering-Plain; Wright's-bridge; Brickhill; Mayland; Great Pondmans; Brakes; Marſhalls; Hare-ſtreet, undoubtedly ſo named by contraction from Harold's Street; North-end, and South-end in Horn-Church; Langton; Hackton [W]; The late Serjeant Baynes's pleaſant Houſe, &c. [X].

On what account the name of Horn-Church was given to this place, we have no certain information [Y]. The origin of many names is undiſcoverable: and why this Place ſhould be called Horn-Church, as well as two neighbouring Pariſhes Horn don, i. e. Horn-hill, is what we are not able to make out.

It was not uſed, as we have juſt obſerved above, till about the reign of K. Henry III. And ſince it owed that name to the Foundation of an HOSPITAL here, it will be proper to give firſt an account of that Hoſpital.

What gave riſe to it was K. Henry the Second's Grant of the Church of Havering, with all its appertenances, to the great Hoſpital of St. Bernard de Monte Jovis, in the dioceſe of Sedun, or Syon, in Savoy, and the Brothers there ſerving God, to make a fire for the Poor, ad faciendum ſibi ignem pro Pauperibus [Z].

This King ſeems to have been the original Founder of the Hoſpital, or Cell here, for a Prior, or Maſter, and poor Brethren, ſubordinate to that foreign Houſe, and dedicated to St. Nicolas, and St. Bernard. For his Son K. Richard I. confirmed to the Poor of Montjoy, [Montis Jovis] in the Church of St. Nicolas and St. Bernard, living at Havering, the Gift of his father, viz. xxv pounds of land in ſterling &c. as above under Suttons. K. Henry III. again confirms their poſſeſſions to them by the name of Magiſter & Fratres de Monaſterio Cornuto, Maſter and Brothers of the Horned Monaſtery; forbidding them to acquire any more in this maner without his ſpecial licence (o).

That it was then founded, and not ſooner, is I think certain. At leaſt the Monaſtery of St. Nicolas and St. Bernard, or of Montjoy, had not a maner here at the Survey, elſe we ſhould have found it mentioned in Domeſday-book. In K. Henry IId's time the Church was called the Church of Havering; and, till his grand-ſon's confirming Charter, we hear nothing of Cornutum Monaſterium, or Cornuta Eccleſia; ſo that this name came up in that Interval, if Henry III. did not give the name at the time of his Confirmation [A].

Peter Earl of Savoy having built the Houſe from him called The Savoy in the Strand, in 1245, gave it to the Brethren of this Hoſpital; of whom Elianor, niece of the ſaid Peter, and wife to K. Henry III, purchaſed the ſame for her ſon Edmund Earl of Lancaſter.

Beſides that, and the demeſnes now conſtituting Horn-Church-hall, and Suttons, as above mentioned; they ſeem to have had very little elſe, except view of Frank-pledge, and gallows, in Havering (p): And a Houſe in Fenn-Church ſtreet London [B].

The Maſter and Brothers here were removable at the will of the Provoſt of the Monaſtery in Savoy; had no College, nor common ſeal; and could neither plead, nor be impleaded (q).

The Revenues of this Cell being ſeized among thoſe of other Priories Alien, [See in the other Volume, p. 407. 416. &c.] they were, with leave of the Pope and K. Richard II, purchaſed by [Y] The main ſtreet in Horn-Church was called, in the time of K. Henry II. Pell-ſtreet, from the number of Peltmongers, or Skinners there. And Romford market was once ſo famous for leathern Breeches, as to occaſion the vulgar Proverb, To go there to be new bottomed.—Another ſtreet in Horn-Church was called Pollard-ſtreet.

[Z] There is a tradition, but a groundleſs one, That Horn-Church was built by a female convert, to expiate her former ſins, and that it was called Her-Church at firſt, till a certain King riding that way, though it is not ſaid who, nick-named it Horn-Church, and cauſed a pair of ox's horns to be fixed at the eaſt end, the figure of which was kept up till lately in lead. . . . Weever, Fun. Monum. p. 646. . . . But it is much more probable, that the Bull's head of lead, affixed to the end of the Chancel, was the coat, or creſt, belonging to the Religious Houſe in Savoy, to which this was a cell. The Arms of Altorf in Swiſſerland, are a Bull's, or Buffler's, head caboſhed. . . . . Some have fancied, that as this was the Church of Havering by way of eminence, therefore from Havering-Church was derived by contraction Harn, or Horn-Church. . . . N. Salmon, p. 243.

[A] We do not find that the Monaſtery in Savoy was ever called Cornutum. The following paſſage in Paradin, points out where it ſtood. . . . 'Les peuples qui ſont deça les 'Monts, en lobeiſſance du Duc de Savoye, . . . S'eſtendent 'du coſté de Septentrion, depuis les Allemaignes, & le Montion, juſques a la mer Liguſtique. . . . [B] Stow ſaith, 'Then have ye on the ſouth ſide of 'Fenne-Church Street over againſt the wall or pump, 'amongſt other fair and large builded Houſes, one that ſome 'time belonged to the Prior of Monte Jovis, or Monaſterie 'Cornute, (a cell to Monte Jovis beyond the ſeas,) in Eſſex. 'It was the Prior's inn when he repaired to London.' Survey of London, Book II. p. 79.

From that time, Horn-Church-hall, and Suttons, with the Church, and the Tithes of the Pariſh, have remained in the poſſeſſion of New-College [C]. Moreover, they are Ordinaries of the place; and the Vicar, as he is ſtyled, holds the Church of them by leaſe for life, without taking Inſtitution from the Biſhop of the Dioceſe, and without paying Procurations, Synodals, Firſt-Fruits, or Tenths.
